THOMPSON-FOLEY. At 4:00 P. M., Easter day, 1949, Edna Mae Thompson and William McCutchan Foley were united in marriage in the Bethlehem Brethren Church, Harrisonburg, Virginia. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The double ring ceremony was used by the pastor of the bride, the undersigned, who officiated. The bride is the youngest daughter of the late, Elder John Thompson and Mrs. Thompson. She has been a faithful member of the Bethlehem Church since childhood. Mr. Foley is an industrious and capable young farmer from near Bridgewater. He is an interested churchman and officer in the Mossy Creek Presbyterian Church.

GOOD-ADAMS. On Good Friday evening, 1949, at 8:00 o'clock, Virginia Maxine Good and Master Sergeant John Adair Adams of the U. S. M. C., were married in the Mt. Olive, Virginia, Brethren Church. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and candles. The bride, a senior at Madison College, was a technician in the W. A. C. during the war. She is the daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. Dennis Good of McGaheysville, Virginia, and the granddaughter of Prof. L. I. Good, well known musician and band leader of this region. The groom is a native of Natchez, Mississippi, and has an impressive record of war service. He had as his best man another member of the marine corps of the same rank, Master Sergeant Gustafson of Denver, Colorado. These young people plan to make their home at Qunatico, Virginia. The double ring ceremony was used by the undersigned.

John F. Locke.

Laid to Rest

CROWE. Mrs. Laura Frances Crowe was born June 5, 1874, and died April 16, 1949, the span of her earthly journey being 74 years, 10 months and 11 days. Mrs. Crowe had been a member of the Mt. Olive, Virginia, Brethren Church for many years. During the winter months she had been making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Kennedy, in Harisonburg, but was planning to return to her home near Good's Mill when death came suddenly. She never regained consciousness after being stricken. In her home-going she was thus spared prolonged pain and suffering. She will be greatly missed by a large company of friends.

After brief services at her late home, the funeral was held at the Mill Creek Church of the Brethren near her home, and the body was laid to rest in the family plot in the church cemetery. The services were in charge of her pastor, the undersigned, and Elder C. E. Long. Many floral tributes attested the deep esteem in which she was held. Our sympathy is extended to her family.

John F. Locke.

WHAT DO YOU PLAN FOR THIS SUMMER?

Scripture: Matthew 25:14-30; Jeremiah 8:20

For The Leader

THE VERSE of our scripture lesson from Jeremiah is one of the saddest wails of all. Read it, and think of the word "procrastination." They mean the same thing. We wail when work is not done, but the work is not done because we have kept putting it off. All this bears out the thought of the evening, in making plans for summer. If we are to avoid Jeremiah's will when fall has come, we must make good plans now, and put them into action. The days pass swiftly, and each day we put off the work we plan to do in the church, the nearer we are to the fall "when the harvest is past, and we are not saved." It is our aim tonight to show ways in which we can make our plans and get them done.

DISCUSSION

1. TOMORROW WILL BE ALL RIGHT. This world operates on dead-lines because human nature constantly commits the sin of putting things off. We must have a dead-line for income tax reports, we are tardy if we miss a certain time when school starts. Even these topics must be written by a certain time each week. Why is it this way? A few minutes earlier gets us to school on time, or gets our income tax paid on time. And say, did you ever notice that no matter when you announce the starting time of a church service, there's always somebody who comes in late. People will always stretch a dead-line. That is why you have 30 days grace on paying insurance policies, because people just will not get the payments sent in on time. We think tomorrow will be all right. But that wreaks havoc with our plans for working for God in the summer. We keep putting off, and first thing we know, summer is gone.

2. EXCUSES TO GET STARTED. Perhaps we have taken it upon ourselves to visit other young people and invite them to our C. E. meetings. Well, today it's too hot; they'd probably be away on a picnic. Next day: I've got to wash my hair and can't go out for hours afterwards, so tomorrow will be better. Next day: Now, I've got a chance to go to the city to shop, so tomorrow will suit better. By the time you run out of excuses, the summer will be gone, and so will the prospect of getting that young person to attend your meetings. DO IT TODAY!

3. TALENTS ARE ACCOUNTABLE. We read in our Scripture from Matthew that a certain lord gave to his servants certain talents, and then departed from their midst. No boss around, no one to prod them nor to spy on them to see if they were getting their work done. Their time was their own to get the work done which their lord expected them to do. What was the result? You guessed it.

Some did do a swell job and reaped a great harvest. But one, and he is typical of all who fail to use their talents for the Lord's glory, went and hid his talent. His days of service were lost on himself. And so, he proved to be a wicked and unprofitable servant for his lord. Do you know, young people, that the abilities, talents and training we have had are of our Lord, and we are accountable unto Him for what we do with them. That is why, in the summer months ahead, we must devote time, talent, and substance to His work. The fall season should find us further along the road of Christian service. We endeavored to outline last week some of the things we should and could do. Restudy them and put them into practice.

4. FACING TEMPTATION. In addition to meeting the temptations of putting things off, you will face temptations which will, if indulged in, tend to weaken or actually destroy your Christian witness. As you profess to be a Christian, your conduct must be according to your profession. How could you invite other young people to come to your Sunday night meetings of C. E., if those young people know you are doing sinful things? It just can't be done. And the thought that everybody else is doing it, is no excuse before God. Christian young people are to be different. The magazines you read, the books you read, will show what you are inside. Be sure they are of the right type. The friends you're seen with, and the places you go, will tell more than your words. So, keep yourself on a high Christian level. Be above the crowd. Many times it will be going alone for you, but with Christ with you, you can't lose.

5. A GOOD CHRISTIAN TESTIMONY IN DRESS, TOO. All Christian young people, but especially the girls, are face to face with "fashion" versus Christian modesty. We are to the place in America where beach and sport fashions are absolute lewd, obscene, and indecent. These all appeal to the sensuous and vulgar and lustful side of life. The question we raise in this connection is whether or not a Christian young person can appear in public in these scant costumes without sacrifice of Christian modesty, testimony and self-respect. The human body was meant to be a temple of the Holy Spirit; not an object of lust. And too true it is, innocently or not, when Christian girls appear in these latest fashions they subject themselves to being objects of lust on the part of men and boys who see them. We are not recommending a return to the 19th century fashions, but merely suggesting that there is a point where Christian modesty ceases and the lustfulness begins. Guard your Christian testimony this summer by Christian decency in your choice of wearing apparel.

6. FILL THE TIME WITH JOYFUL THINGS. God's avenues of life offer so many, many good activities, that we can well afford to search them out and apply ourselves diligently to them. Bear in mind, that what He wants us to do, let's do willingly, prayerfully, and well. Above all, let's do His will, that the end of summer will not find us "guilty," but able to present a just harvest for our time and talents.

QUESTIONS

1. What form, or nature, do talents assume in our lives? List the talents you think you possess. Then have others suggest talents which they think you have. Use them for the Lord this summer.

SCANDAL-MONGER

The story that you spread
Was all too true;
The waspish things you said
Were just her due.

But did you play the game?
And was there need
To blazon forth the shame
Of her misdeed?

We might have saved her soul,
Had yours been higher,
Had you not claimed the role
Of public crier.

Had you but reined your tongue
About the wrong,
We might today have sung
A triumph song.

But through your dastard work
She now has passed
Into the deeper murk
That chokes at last.

The love by which at first
We spanned the breach
Was wrecked by your accurst
Envenomed speech.

God pity you when you
Hereafter find
He asks not, Was it true?
But Was it kind?

Hymns and Prayers

Seed thought provokers:

THE RELIGION OF LOT was a joke to his sons-in-law because of his worldliness and easy consenting unto and tolerating of sin (Gen. 13:11-13; 19:8, 14, 36). To us he has the marks of a wicked and lost man. But in 2 Peter 2:7, 8 (read it) the Lord calls him "just Lot." There must be something the Lord knew that we do not (1 Samuel 16:7). A self-righteous critic, living in Jerusalem at the time of David's sin with Bathsheba, could have easily condemned him as a hypocrite who never knew salvation. The same critic would probably have never known or given credit for the real heart anguish and repentance of David as expressed in the 51st Psalm.

Col. Ingersol used to start reading before an audience some of these sinful accounts recorded in the Bible and would suddenly stop and exclaim, "I am sorry, Ladies and Gentlemen, but I cannot finish this chapter because it is not fit for a mixed audience to hear." Then the audience would hoot with great hilarity. But that was not smart on the part of Ingersol and his audiences. There are portions in medical books not suitable for a mixed audience, and these books would not be condemned for that. They deal with bodily diseases, and the Bible deals with a worse disease—sin—to remind us that we still have the old nature and the temptations that human flesh is heir to until our bodies are changed and glorified at Christ's coming. "Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted" (1 Cor. 10:6). Also Heb. 4:11.

A presumptuous judge, having seen Simon Peter fall into bad company, lying, denying, and blaspheming, would probably have said that Peter had not real love for the Savior as John 12:17 would indicate. Peter tried to kill the servant of the high priest (John 18:10), and Matthew Mark and Luke had the kindness not to mention who did the cutting off of the man's ear. John mentioned Peter's name in his gospel which was written long after the death of Peter.

No one knew what Judas really was but Jesus (Matt. 26:21, 22). Judas is a type of those mentioned in Matthew 7:22. We mention these cases to show that a frail human being is incapable of correct judging. Therefore Jesus would not allow the self-righteous to pluck the "tares" out of the church (Matt. 13:28). This is reserved unto the angels. The wrath of God awaits those who judge others when they themselves are equally guilty. They shall be measured in the same bushel. Many are victims of the temptation to judge others—a haughty sin of drawing unwarranted and ignorant conclusions. "Love thinketh no evil." Human judgment would exalt the Pharisee above the repenting publican!

Lesson for June 12, 1949

THE COST OF THE CROSS

Lesson: Luke 23:33-38; Mark 15:34; Luke 23:46-47; Matt. 27:57-60

WE DEAL WITH Scriptures in this lesson that tell the saddest story of all ages—the story of the death and burial of Jesus. Four words in the first verse of our lesson—"there they crucified him"; five words in Luke 23:46—"he gave up the ghost"; and fourteen words from Matthew 27:60—"And he rolled a stone to the door of the sepulchre and departed"—twenty-three words in all—leaves us with a picture that is heart-rending and never to be forgotten.

It is extremely difficult to count the cost of such sacrifice. To do so would compel us to go back into the eternal ages of the past and to look forward to the endless ages of eternities to come. We can find some of the cost, however, when we turn to the words of St. Paul as recorded in Philippians 2:5-8 (A. S. V.)—"Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, existing in the form of God, counted not the being on an equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross." The big words here are he "emptied himself," that is, gave up all that He had alongside the Father in heaven—equality, riches, power.

Again we turn to Paul as he wrote to the Corinthian Church (2 Cor. 8:9)—"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich." It is the story of "From Riches to Poverty" for your sakes.

When we think deeply about this we begin to realize the tremendous cost of the cross. And we also get somewhat of the idea of what Jesus Himself thought of it when we hear Him pray in His great High Priestly prayer (John 17:4 and 5)—"I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

We, who live on this side of the cross, are far too prone to take the Sacrifice which Jesus voluntarily made, together with its terrible cost, for granted. It is much like we take everything these days—electricity, telephones, radio, airplanes—forgetting at what cost these became a reality. We just take them and use them as a matter-of-course. It is just in this same way we take the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross for granted. He did it—we accept it—so What?

It would do each of us good to sit down right now, and, with bowed head, ponder on the twenty-three words referred to in our first paragraph. Translated into a personal language they say—"He died for ME." We sing

"Jesus paid it all,
All to Him I owe!"

and then proceed to act as if we owed Him nothing at all. We are far too often like the man who stood up in meeting and made this testimony: "I've been a Christian for these forty years, and it has never cost me a cent."

But it cost our Lord! And we owe Him the obedience of a loving service, a service as great as we can give. Why not render it? What excuse can we give for not rendering it?

ATTENTION

All Choir Directors and Members

The following anthems have been selected and submitted to the General Conference Music Committee by Miss Jean Rowsey, who has been chosen to direct the General Conference Choir in August. Choir members, and especially Choir Directors, are requested to note them carefully. The list follows:

"O Lord Most Holy" (Panis Angelicus) by Cesar Frank; Arr. by Charles P. Scott—Carl Fischer, Publisher.

"Praise Ye The Father" by Charles Gounod; Arr by J. P. Weston—Oliver Diston Company, Publisher.

"Hallelujah Chorus" from the "Messiah" by G. F. Handel—Theodore Presser Company, Publisher.

"God So Loved the World" from "The Crucifixion" by J. Stainer—Theodore Presser Company, Publisher.

"Bless the Lord, O My Soul" by Mikail M. Ippolitof-Ivanof—Boston Music Company, Publisher.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" by Sabine Baring-Gould, Sir Arthur S. Sullivan, Fred Waring Mixed Chorus Arrangement—Words and Music, Inc., Publisher.

It has been suggested that the Choir Directors of the various churches in the Brotherhood rehearse these anthems and familiarize the personnel of their choirs with them. Also that each person planning to sing in the Conference Choir bring a copy of each anthem with them.

The committee is very fortunate to have engaged Miss Rowsey for this task of leading the Conference Choir. She is a fine musician and a splendid leader.

Choir Directors take special note: If you have soloists in your choir who will be willing to render special numbers, the Conference Music Committee would appreciate it if you would drop the Chairman of that committee a note, giving name of such soloist, or the names of duos, trios, or quartets, that they may be contacted before conference time for special places on the program. Address the undersigned.

We hope to see you at General Conference and to hear you sing.

In His Service,

Mrs. Melvin A. Stuckey,
Chairman of the Music Committee,
523 Samaritan Avenue,
Ashland, Ohio.

Never shift your mouth into high gear until you are sure all the faculties of your mind are under divine control.

News From Our Churches

REVIVAL AT CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND

It was indeed a privilege to accept the invitation of the Cumberland, Maryland, Brethren Church for a two week meeting in March of this year. Our meeting in Mexico closed on March 13th, and by missing the closing service and riding all night we reached Cumberland in time to start the meeting on the 14th.

We were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Beachley, where we were made to feel at ease from the first day. It was my first trip to the southeast and everything possible was done by these fine Christian folks for my enjoyment.

The Cumberland church had been through a pastorless period, but, as always, there were those who carried their responsibilities and kept the program going. Miss Delma Schriver had a fine new Junior Choir on hand at every service. Mrs. William Baldwin was a very capable pianist throughout the entire two week period, even though she had the responsibility of several school children in her home. A bright spot in this church is the fine group of children who attend regularly.

We were entertained daily in the homes of these Brethren. Much has been said about Southern Hospitality, but since being in the midst of it I am convinced that not nearly enough has been written.

The people worked and prayed. The results were five first time confessions, with four being baptized before I left, and one re-consecration. We also had the privilege of anointing one good Christian lady and seeing her return to health before we came home.

Much of our work was done in company with Brother Bruce Shanholtz, who recently entered our ministry from the Church of the Brethren, and who has assumed the pastorate of the Cumberland Church. He is a fine consecrated preacher of the Gospel—definitely Brethren—and I am sure he will do much good in the work. It was a blessing to meet and fellowship with him and his family.

The church is going forward with a redecoration project which, when completed, will make this church second to none in beauty and usefulness.

It is not possible for me to mention the names of every family, much as I would like to, where Christian fellowship was enjoyed. But to every one of our friends there, I wish to express my thanks for the fine gift extended, and pray that God will bless your every effort in His name.

Robert K. Higgins,
Pastor Loree-Mexico Circuit.

REVIVAL AT MEXICO, INDIANA

Seven days of special services were held at the Mexico, Indiana, Brethren Church from March 6 to 13, with Rev. J. Milton Bowman, pastor of the Nappanee Brethren Church, as our evangelist, and Rev. Loretta Carrithers of Peru, Indiana, as our song leader.

Attendance was very good during the entire week, with a full house on the closing night, at which time the Loree, Indiana, Quartet came over and sang for us. The Jefferson Township Ministerial Group attended in a body on Monday evening. Nearly every evening found visitors from other churches in the audience.

Brother Bowman and the pastor were royally entertained at both dinner and supper throughout the meetings. This community is one blessed with many churches, but the evangelist and pastor were astonished at the number of unsaved found during our calling in the community. More than fifty homes were visited during the week.

Brother Bowman brought good, solid Gospel messages and several special numbers—both vocal and instrumental—which were greatly enjoyed by all. The work of Mrs. Carrithers was fine, as always. Having worked with her before, we knew that the singing would be capably taken care of.

There were no conversions during the meetings, but we feel that much was accomplished for Christ and the Church in other ways. Several signified their intentions of coming soon. For these we continue to work and pray.

Brother Bowman and Mrs. Carrithers are both fine Christian workmen, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. May God bless them both in their ministry.

R. K. Higgins, pastor.

WORD FROM WAYNESBORO, PENNSYLVANIA

Mrs. St. Claire Benshoff of Meyersdale, Pennsylvania, met recently (May 5th) with the Waynesboro Woman's Missionary Society for their Mother and Daughter Meeting. The group met in the beautiful summer home of one of our members. A covered dish supper, together with a fine program and a fine period of fellowship, was enjoyed by all who attended. The Easter Offering, amounting to $40.00, was received.

Mrs. Frank M. Miller,

A Prayer For Vision

*Lift up my eyes, O God. Too much for me
Is sin's dark shadow, and I cannot see
Thy star of hope that ever shineth bright
Across the brow of night.*

*Lift up mine eyes, O Lord, for often sleep Weighs down mine eyelids, and I cannot keep
The vigil that I ought. Till morning break
Keep my poor heart awake.*

*Lift up mine eyes, O Lord. Yet even so
Though hid the winding way through which I go,
Lead me through darkness of enfolding night
With love's unfading light*

*O Thou that slumberest not, remember me;
My going, coming, and whate'er I be;
Till, when my weariness and sin be past,
Thou bringst me home at last.*

INTERESTING ITEMS

Gratis, Ohio. We note that seventy-one attended the communion services on Sunday evening, May 15th, and that the pastor took communion to an additional ten who were unable to attend. One confession of Christ was made on the same Sunday morning, a young man who was baptized the same afternoon and partook of the communion in the evening.

Dayton, Ohio. Brother Whetstone reports that finally, after some delay, that the Whetstones have moved into the new parsonage in Dayton. The address is 308 Sandalwood Drive. Open House was held on Thursday May 26th, both afternoon and evening, in order that the membership might have opportunity to see the property which was recently purchased.

More and more of our churches are providing parsonages for their pastors.

Nappanee, Indiana. The time of the dedication of the pipe organ at the new Nappanee Church has been set as Sunday, June 5th.

We note in Brother Bowman's bulletin of May 22 that the Mother and Daughter Banquet which was held recently was a great success. One hundred and forty women and girls were in attendance. We note that the men donned aprons and served the banquet. We wonder what Brother Bowman means by his little question which was added to the report? It said, "What happened to the dishes?" It might be interesting to know what did happen.

Bryan, Ohio. We note from Brother Black's bulletin of May 22nd that the every Sunday broadcast over radio station WONW is paying off in fine interest and increased attendance at the Bryan church. He reports that the morning worship attendance prior to the broadcasting for thirteen weeks was 199, and for the first thirteen weeks after broadcasting was started the average morning worship attendance was 299. Also that the evening attendance for the corresponding times as above was—before: 102, and after: 150.

A note to the editor from Brother Black says: "Mrs. Black and I have received a call for three years of service here at Bryan, with a very substantial increase in salary."

Waterloo, Iowa. The Vacation Bible School of the Waterloo Church will begin on Monday, June 6th and will close with a program on the evening of June 19th.

We note that the new Junior Mid-week service under the direction of Mrs. Helen Jordan, began on Thursday evening, May 19th, with eight children present. We are sure that it will grow just as others of like nature have grown.

Masontown, Penna. We see by Brother Ankrum's bulletin of May 22nd, that two were received into the church by relation recently.

Lanark, Ills. We note from Brother McCartneysmith's bulletin that the attendants at the services are being greeted at the close of the services by a special "Greeting Committee," which committee seems to be changed each Sunday. This is a very excellent thing and can be easily practiced by any church. It surely will make the members better acquainted with each other, and will give opportunity for the visitors to become better known to the congregation.

We note that the Lanark W. M. S. will be entertained by the Milledgeville W. M. S. at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Bell, on Thursday afternoon, June 9th.

Muncie, Indiana. Brother Chester Zimmerman reports a special concert of Barber Shop Quartets Chorus and that they sang what was, in greater part, a religious program in the church on Sunday evening, May 22nd.

A "Fish Fry" was held for the men of the church on Tuesday evening, May 17th. Following the program, which included a motion picture of Boy Scout activities, the Laymen elected their officers for the coming year.

North Manchester, Indiana. We note that the Junior Sisterhood girls of the North Manchester church had charge of preparing bouquets of flowers for the Memorial Day services.

The North Manchester Church was host to a special Union Service on Sunday evening, May 29th. Colored slide pictures of Germany were presented by the International Club of Manchester College.

Loree, Indiana. Brother Higgins says that a new Sunday School class is in the making at the Loree Sunday School. A "Newly Married Folks" class is to be organized. When it is organized, watch it grow.

The Loree men met on Friday evening, May 27th for a "Program-Refreshment-Fellowship" meeting. A color film was shown.

Huntington, Indiana. Brother C. Y. Gilmer, pastor of the Huntington Church, reports that two young women were baptized at the mid-week prayer service on May 25th.

HEARING GOD'S VOICE

IT IS POSSIBLE for a child to be reared in a most godly home, to be trained by devout and consecrated parents, to be much in the sanctuary and in close companionship with the ministers of Christiantiy, and yet not recognize the voice of the Lord as He calls to service. Pastors and teachers cannot too earnestly nor too frequently impress upon those they teach, the fact that God does speak to men—to boys and girls, too—and that the greatest need of the world at all times and the surest way to true success is to hear and heed the voice of the Lord. What an opportunity there is for teachers to make their pupils acquainted with the Divine voice! That is part of the opportunity that comes to every one of us. Do we realize that this is so? Do we make the most of that opportunity?

This little paragraph caught my eye as I was looking through one of my religious magazines. It was the caption, "Hearing God's Voice," that made me pause to scan its contents. I read it once; I read it twice, for

It had set me to thinking!

It always takes a bit of concentration to hear the voice of God. It also needs a bit of introduction to His personality to make us recognize its tones, and to fit it into our everyday conversation.

There are expressions and tonal qualities of a speaker that make you recognize the individual, even though you may not have met him personally. There are voices that come over the radio which I recognize the instant they begin to speak, even though I have never seen or met them. Years ago, working as a grocery clerk, I became so familiar with the voices of the customers as they came over the telephone, that it was very seldom I had to ask their names when they called up to give their orders. I knew their voices because of our close association and constant contact. But I first had to be "introduced" to them and had to learn to "know" the quality of their voice and their little personal expressions.

In the same way the child comes to know his Heavenly Father. Instinctively the little child turns to both his mother and his father. He comes to know their voices; to recognize their step upon the sidewalk, their cough, their laughter. They call the father, "Dada" because the mother points to him and so teaches the childish lips to frame the word. How else is it possible of the little one to become acquainted with the Heavenly Father, unless the earthly parents points to Him and speaks His name?

It is, therefore, an almost impossible thing for the child to hear and recognize the voice of God calling to him, unless he has had someone to point out the kind words He will be apt to speak, the kind of voice that He will use, and necessity of keeping ever and ever and always, the ears open for the reception of the message that will surely come. For God is always calling to His children, and the only way they can answer is when they are trained to hear His voice.

The task is constantly before us—the task of training the children to hear and recognize the voice of God, and having heard and recognized that voice, to be ready to answer as did Samuel of old, "Lord, speak, for thy servant heareth." That task is yours—it is mine. Are we doing all we should?

Think it over!

About Sunday School Papers

We have received considerable complaint and quite a little correspondence concerning the sudden unannounced change in the type of Sunday School papers printed and distributed by the David C. Cook Publishing Company, of Elgin, Illinois and used by our boys and girls. This sudden change to a paper which follows the type of the modern comic paper is not being received too well by our Sunday Schools. Correspondence with the Cook Company informs us that they will give credit to any school that does not longer desire to use the papers as they now put it out. Consequently, if your school has been receiving this paper and you desire to discontinue its use, your account will be credited by us, if ordered through our Publishing Company, if you so inform the Cook Company of your desires. However, if you are sending papers back to the company, DO NOT SEND THEM TO THE BRETHREN PUBLISHING COMPANY. SEND THEM DIRECT TO THE DAVID C. COOK COMPANY, ELGIN, ILLINOIS. Sending them to us only means that we have extra postage to pay in returning them to the Cook Company.

We would recommend that if you desire to change this paper that you order the Boys' and Girls' papers which are published by the Standard Publishing Company. These papers, "Boy Life" and "Girlhood Days," are fine papers and your boys and girls will thoroughly enjoy them. Many of our Sunday Schools now use them.

Where Religion Falls Short

Ronald Richey

* * * *

LISTEN TO THE APOSTLE James' definition of religion: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

While it is true, as one has said, that "man is incurably religious," yet it is also true that in today's world, religion is not generally the chief interest of the man on the street. Most of us are not seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness. During World War II there was a resurgence in religious interest, which passed, however, as soon as the danger was over and the boys were rescued from the fox holes. That type of religion is scarcely worthy of the name Christianity.

Today the ordinary man's interest in religion is on about the same plane as his interest in music, art, gardening, or some hobby. He is interested in religion chiefly because he is interested in respectability. When he attends church on Sunday morning and drops his offering envelope in the collection plate, he feels he has fulfilled his obligation toward God, toward the church, and toward the world.

There are others who seem to feel that if religion does not particularly appeal to them, they are under no obligation to investigate its demands and possibilities.

I am thoroughly convinced that a great many persons do not think of religion as being of vital importance unless, or until, they get into trouble—the kind of trouble from which only God can deliver them. Such persons are like those who pay no attention to the laws of health until the doctor tells them they have become victims of a dread malady and are going to die.

We have yet, in this particular generation, to convince the majority that religion is really important. A man feels that his home is important; his job is important; his automobile is important; the amount of money he makes is important—but he does not always attach great importance to this matter of his relationship to Almighty God. On the other hand, many persons who are interested in religion, do not see that it has any particular purpose outside their own prayers. And they look upon prayer as being an Aladdin's Lamp which they can rub and thus, in magic fashion, obtain anything they may need at any particular time.

The purpose of religion is to bring about, through Christ, the forgiveness of sin, new life, new liberty, a new happiness, a new control, a new power. But these results are not to be looked upon as an end in themselves. They are rather the means to a further end, which is to bring the Kingdom of God into the hearts of others—to bring about the Christainization of the beloved community and the world.

How many persons there are to whom religion is little more than a completely impractical mysticism. They pray if they get into trouble, or if they need something, or if danger threatens; they go to church on Sunday morning because it is the respectable thing to do. But outside of that they do not give serious thought to religion until they come face to face with death. This is an extremely childish view of religion. Religion, like the tools of a workman, were given for practical use. The church suffers and the world suffers when religion is not put to work and given a practical outlet.

Jesus wanted people to go to heaven, but first of all He wanted them to love one another; to forgive one another; to work together for the betterment of the world. Heaven should not be the first aim of the Christian, but rather his final goal. The alertness of Christians to the prevalent needs of the community has often meant the difference between squalor and beauty; between youthful achievement and youthful delinquency. The church, when it is all it should be, will be looked upon not only as the most powerful force in the community for the molding of religious opinion, but also as a most active agent in bringing judgment upon evil.

Most of us have not been taught to take religion too seriously. We have looked upon the church as we would a social club or a fraternal organization, rather than seeing it as God's instrument for establishing the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men. If we, in the church, hold that attitude, the man on the street will surely sense it also, and will lose interest in its program. A church which does not rightly represent the spirit and central purposes of the Gospel will be by-passed by those who are honestly seeking spiritual help. The program of the church must be thorough-going and genuine. There are those who come to church hungry for spiritual food, but if they receive instead, a watered-down diet which does not rightly represent either Jesus Christ or the true church, they go away disappointed, and often are discouraged from venturing further in their search for truth and satisfaction.

Many have joined the church hoping that merely by doing so, they would satisfy some inner yearning; but have soon turned away in disappointment or disillusionment. Or, perhaps they stayed on to associate with good moral people, thus becoming good moral people themselves, and yet lacking the vital spark which can come only through a living experience of redemption in Christ. They are like a house all wired up for electricity, but which remains dark, simply because it is not hooked up with the power line. We will not lift the world very rapidly, so far as the things of the spirit are concerned, until we Christians have experienced such a spiritual revolution and deepening of our own Christian consciousness, such an enlargement of our vision that we will seek to do the will of God first of all, in spite of all, and regardless of the inconvenience or cost to ourselves.

But there is another place in which much religion falls short. There is a group of people who claim to be Christian, who believe in Jesus, but who turn in horror from anything having to do with the cross. They are very willing to accept Christ as the great teacher, the troublesome political radical, the mighty social reformer, the brave martyr dying heroically in a noble cause, the human revealer of the will of God—but they turn thumbs down on Christ as Savior, and completely reject the cross as being necessary to man's redemption. Characteristically, such persons generally do not think of themselves as being lost, or as being sinners needing salvation. Talk to the man in this classification and he will tell you he is a pretty decent fellow and that he is not conscious of any particularly bad sins. Ask him if he is a Christian and he will say "yes," but if you ask him if he is "saved" the chances are he will not know what you are talking about—for he has no sense of being lost. Cataracts have grown across his spiritual vision. He has failed to use his spiritual powers so long that they have become atrophied. He has grown a callous on his soul. He has his own code of decency, and generally follows it fairly well; but he knows nothing of what we call the transformed, life-changing experience of salvation. Time after time we invite these folk to attend special services at the church, but they seldom come, simply because, to tell the truth, most of them feel no need of attending, and if they do come it is only as a favor to us. They do not know what we mean by the phrase "the communion of the saints," or "fellowship of the church," or "having the mind of Christ."

If it is true that the Christian religion is the purest revelation of God ever given to man—if it is true that to be right with God is the most important thing in the world—if it is true that to be "in Christ" is the only way of being right with God—if Paul was right when he said "for me to live is Christ"—if there is no way for the sinner to win his sinful conflict except to repent and believe in this Christ of the cross—if it be true that unless men tap that source of power all plans for a new life and the building of a brave new world will be foredoomed to failure—if all these things be true: then do you not see that the church is faced squarely with the urgent necessity in being thoroughly Christian in all its activities, of being warmly evangelistic in its entire program, of finding a way to rightly represent, not only the teachings of Christ, but His spirit, in our society, both local and international!

Marco Polo, who died over six hundred years ago, resided for some time in the city of Kanchow. He wrote that the city had more gods than it had people. The people liked to say that the gods and temples actually defied enumeration. Hundreds of festivals were held every year in honor of these heathen deities. One would have expected this to be the happiest of cities, with so many gods; yet Marco Polo wrote that every evening was heard the rhythmic chants of the people, "The world is empty! The world is empty! My soul is empty! My life is empty!" What good are ten thousand gods if they bring no peace? And what good is any religion unless it brings transformation to individual lives, and eventually transformation to the whole of society?

The man on the street is asking this question of Christians regarding their religion: "Will it work for me?" If we cannot give him a positive answer to that question he will inevitably turn to lesser organizations in his search for security, recognition and fellowship.

The Word "Temperance" in the New Testament

RECENTLY a student approached the writer to ask for some assistance in a discussion of temperance. The special problem seemed to be that temperance was being interpreted as permission to use liquor in moderation. That seems to be the modern usage of the word. The Desk Standard Dictionary defines it as follows: "The state or quality of being temperate; habitual moderation, especially in the indulgence of any appetite. Specifically, the principle and practise of total abstinence from intoxicants." Of course we Brethren people have for long years considered the "specific" definition as the proper one.

But in recent years temperance has been used to allow moderate indulgence. Many people say that moderation does not mean drunkenness. Perhaps so, perhaps not. When one drinks a glass of six percent beer, he is drunk in proportion to the amount of intoxicants in the drink. He is on his way to alcoholism.

However, the New Testament use of the word temperance should be the one for our best consideration. The Greek word which is translated temperance in the New Testament, in its verb form, means: "To have a firm hold on; to have the mastery over; to hold oneself in discipline." The word is consistently translated self control in the new Revised Version. The study of its use in the New Testament is very interesting and profitable. Following is a list of all the passages in which it is used.

Acts 24:25—"And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Paul reasons of self-control with such as Felix and Drusilla!

1 Corinthians 7:9—"But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn." Contain is used here for temperance. Paul refers in this verse to complete sexual abstinence.

1 Corinthians 9:25—"And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." Greek athletes, in preparing for the great games, abstained from unwholesome food, wine, and sexual indulgence. They exercised self-discipline in sleep, hours of practise, and the like. They avoided anything that could in any way interfere with their doing their best in the contests. Paul said that that was the way he lived as a Christian. In verses 26 and 27 he says that he brought his body into entire subjection.

Galatians 5:22, 23—"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." The truly spiritual Christian holds all desires and passions in firm control. Now go on and read verses 18 to 24.

Titus 1:7, 8—"For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre; but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate." Ministers are to be entirely self-controlled.

2 Peter 1:5, 6—"And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness." Notice the Christian graces listed along side of temperance which help to understand what this self-control is.

Abstinence was mentioned in the definition of temperance. Consideration of this word in this study will be profitable also. It simply means, in the verb form, to hold oneself away from. Let us refer to two New Testament passages in this connection.

1 Thessalonians 5:22—"Abstain from all appearance of evil." Hold yourselves away from every form of wickedness.

1 Peter 2:11—"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul." Hold yourselves away from the desires which have their seat in fleshly (natural) appetites.

The sum of the whole meaning of New Testament temperance may be found in Titus 2:11-14. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Temperance deals with alcoholic beverages, yes, but much more. It has to do with abstinence from anything and everything which could rise from the world about us and come between us and God and a godly life. It could even refer to a fiery tongue set on fire of hell (James 3:6).

The Danger of Half-cure

IT IS A VERY NOTICEABLE feature in the exhortations of the Hebrew prophets that they laid so much stress upon the necessity of doing thorough work. The false prophets were chided by the true for their superficial work. They "healed the wound of the daughter of my people slightly." There was a mere surface amendment, but the sore burned below the skin.

Is this warning out of date? Too many of the schemes proposed for the curing of the ills of our time savor of quack doctorism. They pay no heed to what is beneath the surface. The social ills from which we suffer need attacking at their foundation, at their source and not on the surface only. It is never superfluous, either, to remind ourselves that in specifically spiritual work, the danger of a half-cure threatens us. In all that concerns the human soul there must be thoroughness if the life is to be what it should. The half-cure is more speedy and showy, but it is much more dangerous.

There is danger of healing the wounds of the soul slightly. It is not a pleasant thing for people to realize that they are sinners. They do not willingly look upon the depth, the exceeding sinfulness, of their sins. They quite willingly shut the eyes of their understanding from the realization of the awful consequences of their sins. Most people are willing to try a good many quack remedies for the hurt of sin before they will apply to the Great Physician who alone can cure the soul. They try reformation. They work at one sin after another, seeking to change their lives. They attempt to convince themselves that simply being sorry for their sins will save them. They start out to do some good works, thinking that thus they can commend themselves to God in spite of their sins. They resort to all sorts of expedients; but not to the One who is "of sin the double cure, cleaning from its guilt and power." They are willing to do almost anything short of making thorough work of their cure. They heal the wound of sin slightly.

There is danger of healing the wounds of the church slightly. "Judgment must begin at the house of God." It is easy to apologize for the sins of the church, and to get into an attitude of willingness to tolerate many things that ought not to be tolerated. There is a tremendous loss from half-cure work in the church. A large proportion of claimed converts do not enter the church as communicants. A very large proportion of the reported cures are half-cures. We doubt not at the meetings many sign cards, express sorrow for their sins, promise to follow Christ. But it is plain that a large proportion of the cures are only half-cures. There is a lack of thorough work on the part of some evangelists and on the part of many of those who hear them and yield, at least for the time, to their persuasions. We believe there is a call for more thorough work in dealing with the sins of the church and with the sins of individuals who listen to the Gospel as proclaimed by the church. Too often we "heal the wound of the daughter of his people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace."

There is danger of healing the wounds of society slightly. The social ills from which we suffer need attacking at their foundation and not upon the surface only. We hear a great deal these days about "saving society," without very much reference to saving the individuals that constitute it. We are told to make the environment good and this will make the people good. Too much emphasis is being laid on the saving virtue of mere education to the exclusion of Christian education. We hear the cry, "Help save civilization," forgetting that some of the most highly civilized people (so-called) are the most dangerous. We surely believe in good environment, in the best of education, and in civilization; but if our work goes no deeper than that, we will surely be healing the wound slightly; we will be satisfying ourselves with half-cure.

In all that concerns the human soul; in all that concerns the Church; in all that concerns society—there must be thoroughness if the life is what it should be. Let us not be satisfied with half-cures. Let us do thorough work.

ALCOHOLISM AND EDUCATION

Lawrence F. Wooley, M.D.

ALCOHOLISM, like other behavior disorders, grows out of insecurities within the individual which arise because he has not learned how to obtain satisfaction from living with people.

Perhaps the most pressing emotional need of all human beings is to love and be loved. This cannot be achieved if one is so insecure that he is unable to present himself freely in social relationships for fear of being hurt; or if he is so sensitive that he cannot stand frustration; or if he so misunderstands other people that he continuously expects from them things which they cannot do; or if he is so inconsiderate of others that he always frustrates and hurts them.

To be sure, the behavior of any individual grows out of the experiences of his historic past, including childhood training and the impact of parental attitudes and, often, maladjustments. Knowledge of these experiences and how they have affected him may be of great importance in understanding how behavior problems are generated, and may enable us to see more clearly what is going wrong. The fact remains, however, that the individual who is sick today, is sick because he is not able to live in such a way as to attain satisfaction. It is the immediate, current fear, worry, anxiety, or frustration, and the inadequate methods of dealing with it that produces symptoms here and now.

A program of prevention in functional nervous and mental disease, including the symptom, alcoholism, does not depend upon the evolution of a new generation of parents, physicians and educators who have grown up in a theoretically ideal society. To assume this is to assume that the learning process stops at some point during the course of development. If we can treat alcoholics who have already been created and teach them to meet their life problems more successfully—and this we can do—then certainly we should be able to teach those whose lives are being lived in precarious ways to live in a more satisfying manner and help them avoid serious difficulty.

Alcoholism, like any other symptomatic behavior, is an indication that something is going wrong; that the impersonal relations of this individual so fail to yield him satisfaction that he is left frustrated and unhappy. Evidently he does not see that world as it is, nor people as they are; or if he does, he feels unable to face and meet the situation or do anything about it.

From the standpoint of prevention, our foremost need is a widely diffused educational program aimed at teaching people how to get along with each other . . .—The Spotlight.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

WHEN THIS APPEARS in print, the commencement season will have closed at Ashland College and the college year will be drawing to a close. A number of examinations are scheduled for next week for the underclassmen. Sixty-two degrees were scheduled to be awarded on June 3. Included were 22 Bachelor of Arts degrees, 23 Bachelor of Science in Education degrees, 15 Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and two degrees of Master of Theology.

A number of young people from Brethren Churches and communities are among the graduates. They include: Francis Berkshire, Masontown, Pa.; Jack Clapper, Canton, Ohio; Nellie Eller Commisso, Milledgeville, Ill.; Alvin Grumbling, Johnstown, Pa.; Doris Hart, Washington, D. C.; Miriam Rohrer Mills, St. James, Md.; Rae Musser, Berlin, Pa. and Betty June Myers, Ashland.

Class Day was on Wednesday, June 1 and Baccalaureate on June 2; at the latter service, The Reverend Robert B. Whyte, D.D., LL.D., delivered the sermon. He is the pastor of the Old Stone Church in Cleveland. He is an outstanding Presbyterian clergyman and author. He has spoken several times previously on the campus.

Dr. Hezzleton E. Simmons, president of the University of Akron was scheduled for the commencement address on Friday. He is immediate past president of the Ohio College Association and is associated with the recent progress of the university which he has headed since 1933.

Scholarships were announced last week. Many of these went to Brethren young people. Included were: Wanda Beal, Mansfield, Ohio; Phyllis Deeter, Dayton, Ohio; Glenn Shank, St. James, Md.; Thomas Shannon, Mulvane, Kans.; Margery Long, Orrville, Ohio; Lyle Lichtenberger, Elkhart, Ind.; Robert Stoffer, Homeworth, Ohio; Barbara Keys, Mexico, Ind.; Lois Coleman, Milledgeville, Ill., and Margaret Neighbors, Oak Hill, W. Va.

Dinners, banquets and final meetings have been the order of business on the campus for the past few weeks. The Alumni Banquet, the Junior Senior Banquet, the Scribes Banquet and the Awards Banquet have all worked together to make the college year more memorable as it draws to a close.

The summer session begins June 13 and continues for eight weeks. It will close two weeks before General Conference. It is not too early to be thinking about attending conference. President Clayton has asked me to invite all Brethren early this year so that the attendance at the annual meeting may be the largest such gathering ever to convene on the campus.

It is not the number of words or physical exertions we put into our prayers, but the quality of faith.

It is one thing to choose the disagreeable, and another thing to go into the disagreeable by God's engineering.

WITH THE LAYMEN

THE NATIONAL LAYMEN'S PRESIDENT TRAVELS

Holy Week Services at Falls City, Nebraska

The storehouse of the Lord is exceedingly rich in blessings and He permits us to fill our small cups from there. Mine was a pleasant and very enjoyable filling with the Brethren at Falls City. Although this meeting was only of one week duration, yet much seed was sown. The pastor, Rev. H. E. Eppley, gave a series of sermons on what the Bible teaches, on the anointing of the sick, footwashing, baptism, love feast and communion, and the laying on of hands. These are great Bible truths on which Brethren still stand. They were greatly enjoyed by all who attended, Brethren and visitors alike. Let it be proclaimed what the Bible teaches.

Our reception in the parsonage home of Brother and Sister Eppley was most pleasant. Having known the Eppleys as Brethren and friends for years and enjoyed his services as evangelist once and a guest in our home on that occasion, yet a stay in his home gave a closeness in the work that comes in no other way. In my humble way all I can say is thanks for your splendid hospitality.

Along with the calling made, we were "invited out" for dinner and supper most every day and they bedecked the table in royal Brethren style. This makes it more difficult to settle back to normal living on our return home. Thanks a lot for your very gracious entertaining.

On this short stay we learned to know so many more Brethren, they were so easy to get acquainted with. A Laymen's Organization also came into existence with Brother Harvey Hinz, President; Lester Peck, Vice-President and John Lichty, Sr., Secretary-Treasurer. I am sure we will hear of the fine work of these men. May the Lord bless you in this work.

Our deepest thanks go to this people for their very generous love gift. May the Lord continue His blessing to you in His promise of Acts 20:35.

A Stopover at Morrill, Kansas

We also enjoyed on this trip two services with our Brethren at Morrill, Kansas, bringing the Easter morning message and on Monday evening showing pictures of our Lost Creek mission and relating our experience there; also presenting the Laymen's work for the men. May the Lord raise up some one to shepherd this flock as they are now without a pastor. Many thanks Mr. and Mrs. Eisenbise for the hospitality of your home.

On to Carleton, Nebraska

The old sage who always kills two birds with one stone had nothing on me for this trip, as I got three on this one. From Morrill I went to Carleton, speaking for the men on Laymen's work on the nineteenth and on the twentieth, again showing the picture and dispensing the information of our Kentucky mission. Here again we found fine Brethren folks, doing a good work under the leadership of Brother H. M. Oberholtzer. The men came through with another fine Laymen's Organization. Thanks a lot for getting the Mid-West District into the picture. Maybe later we will be able to contact more of the district in this work.

To say this was a rich Sojourn is a very mild expression. May we be prepared by His hand to work where He wills.

H. D. "Bud" Hunter.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"The poet's eye in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth from earth to heaven;
And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name."

—Shakespeare.

The poet's gaze is unlimited. He looks everywhere and sees what the average man cannot see. He seems to pull rabbits out of magician's hats. He forms something out of nothing, that is, he gives airy imagination a name and a place to live. That is what is called creative art. Whether we know it or not, we all fall for it.

Out of the fine frenzy of his imagination the poet weaves the colors, lights and shades of reality. In fact he makes reality out of imagination. He places this creature of his brain before the eyes of people and they look, understand and admire. His brain lives among us. Their names might be Alice in Wonderland, Rhet Butler or even Brer Rabbit.

The poet builds a homelike atmosphere, places around his creature every item necessary to make his surroundings natural. If he does this well the world takes this for life itself. It is in reality only a reflectoin of life as from a French-plate mirror. But it is good enough for the world and she adopts it as her own. To her it is life itself.

Thus Becky Sharp, Hetty Sorrel, Hamlet and Scarlet O'Hara are as real as Florence Nightigale or Henry Ford. As real as Washington or Gladstone.

Hetty Sorrel and Hamlet and the rest have affected the current of human thought just as definitely as if they had lived and worked and mingled with men and women of their acquaintance. Shakespeare and George Eliot and Margaret Mitchell gave these characters in fiction and drama a local habitation and a name. Yet they created them out of airy imagination. Their names and memories are secure in the minds and hearts of men.

This fine frenzy of the poet is of incalculable value to the everyday man and woman. They speak the woes of those who would remain in silent grief. They speak his joys and ecstacies in like manner. They act as the mouth-piece for those who are feeble of speech and expression.

The inner side of every cloud is bright and shining;
I, therefore, turn my clouds about,
And always wear them inside out,
To show the lining. (Maltbie Babcock.)

Spiritual Meditations

Rev. Dyoll Belote

THE RIVER OF THE WATER OF LIFE

"And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

"In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life; which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

"And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

"And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

"And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

"And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angels to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

"Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the saying of the prophecy of this book." Rev. 22:1-7.

SOMEWHERE IN MY POSSESSION is a kodak picture of myself and a schoolboy friend, taken while out on a walking trip through the countryside in the vicinity of our high school town. In the picture I am stretched on the ground, drinking from a spring which gushed out from the roadside, seeking to quench a thirst acquired by the walk through the summer sun.

Water always suggests two things: thirst and cleansing. In an hour of intense thirst, the simple mention of water will start a flow of saliva in an otherwise parched mouth. And the coming of rain after a period of drought is always a cause of rejoicing, for it means new life and blessing and prosperity for the afflicted area.

In our text we have the mention of a "River full of water," and this water is the emblem of life: a beautiful symbol of life in its gladness, purity, activity and fullness. Rivers are used in many places in the Bible. The Garden of Eden had its river. Even in the wilderness, Israel had, from the smitten rock, the water which gushed out like a river. The prophets, in their pictures of the ages of blessing, almost invariably introduced a river or broad stream. Joel saw a fountain out of the house of the Lord. Zechariah spoke of living waters from Jerusalem; but Ezekiel had the fullest vision when he beheld the stream which deepened and broadened in its onward progress from under the threshold of the house of God, and carried life in its train; everything lived whither the water came; and so did all the prophets speak of the river of God's pleasure.

The teaching of our Lord threw new light on the prophetic imagery; the pure delights of spiritual joy and communion with God were vouchsafed to men by the presence of the Holy Spirit, the Giver of Life. In the bestowal of that spirit of life did Christ give true satisfaction to the thirsting souls of men. The source of the river is in the throne. Ezekiel's river took rise in the temple; but in our vision (that of the Revelator) there is no temple. We are brought nearer, even to the throne (not "thrones")—one throne of God and the Lamb. And it is the "river of the water of life," "full"—a river of plenty, sufficient to meet the needs of humanity; a river at once blessed, bounteous and beautiful.

In my boyhood days there used to be a song which ran something like this:

"Shall we gather at the river,
Where bright angel feet have trod,
With its crystal tide forever
Flowing from the throne of God?"

This song was a popular evangelistic song in those by-gone days, as well as being used at funeral occasions. In all cases it was meant to suggest the approach for all of us of a time of reunion with loved ones, "loved long since, and lost a while." And always there was coupled with the inferences of the song, the suggestion of the necessity of preparation for the longed-for event. "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

"RESPONSIBILITY"

(To mothers who drink or smoke)

Mrs. Elmer Ebbinghouse

I met the Master at the close of day
And heard Him sadly say,
"I've entrusted your children to your care
To train in life's grim day.
I gave you talents and asked you to choose
The use you could make of them;
But because of the modern way some live,
You forgot what you owe to them.
I'll ask an accounting of how you lived,
When you come to the end of life's way;
And you'll see the fruits of the thing you chose
In spite of all you can say."
Your life touches many a life each day,
And, whether you like it or not,
Your influence counts for good or bad—
You cannot escape that thought.
Your example may cause some others to fall
To a depth you would never choose;
But remember you started them down the road—
So you'll pay for the plan you use.
All make mistakes along life's way,
But to willfully choose a thing
You know is a stumbling block to some,
Is to forget how much sorrow you bring.
I'll watch for an answer to my plea
To live what your mother taught;
For I saw her tears and sorrow—
All because you forgot.

The "Parsonage Dedication Day"—June 19th—which was announced on the Evangelist frontis last week, has been made into a "three-in-one" service, according to a note from Brother Gilmer. It will be known as "Parsonage Dedication Day—Father's Day—and Home Coming Day." The Girls' Trio from Bryan, Ohio, which broadcasts each Sunday morning, will be present as guest talent. Miss Fae Ridenour, also of Bryan, a reader, will likewise be present to have part in the services.

Brother Gilmer reports that the average attendance for April was: Sunday School—81; morning worship—83; evening services—48. This shows a fine increase..

Stockton, Calif. A "Family Night" which was sponsored by the young people of the church, was held at our Stockton church. These same young people had a single week of contest of "invitation for the services of the week." Points were awarded for: 1. A personal call; 2. a phone call; 3. a post card sent, with 3, 2 and 1 point awarded respectively for the above. A suitable prize was awarded for the one winning the contest.

Smithville, Ohio. The play, "Simon the Leper" was presented by the youth of the Smithville church on Sunday, May 15th. Brother Grisso, the pastor of the church, says that the youth just "took over" in both the Sunday School and the church program.

A regular "Cradle Roll" class has been made available in the Sunday School at Smithville. The little ones now have a class of their own, with as Brother Grisso says, Esther Hartzler as teacher and "pacifier."

Brother Grisso also reports a reception into membership of two into the fellowship of the church.

Daily Vacation Bible School is being held in the Grade School Building from May 21 to June 10th. It is sponsored by the five local churches. Mrs. Marjorie Grisso, wife of our Smithville pastor, is acting as Superintendent for the two weeks school.

A memorial Candle Lighting Service was presented by the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, at Smithville, on Sunday evening, May 29th.

Brother Grisso reports the baptism of three and the re-shipping of the church Dr. and Mrs. Lisle Roose, recently taking up residence in Smithville, and Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Whitted, who recently purchased a home in Smithville.

Johnstown, Penna., Second. Brother Leatherman reports that Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College, was the guest speaker at the evening service on May 22nd. The Johnstown churches join in community evening services on May 29 and following through the summer.

Brother Leatherman reports that the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association will hold its first gathering in over fifty years in Johnstown next October 11, 12 and 13.

The Second Church Father and Son banquet is reported as a "very nice affair." The Laymen's Organization sponsored it.

Brother Leatherman will begin a meeting at our Brush Valley Church on Monday evening, June 13th.

St. James, Maryland. A fine time is reported with the students of Ashland College who went to St. James for Sunday, May 22nd. There were ten in the party, which was headed by Brother Charles Munson.

Canton, Ohio. Rev. E. M. Riddle was the guest speaker at the morning services in Canton on Sunday, May 29th. It was the occasion of the mortgage note burning for the church—a very happy occasion indeed. You will hear more of this.

Meyersdale, Penna. The Baccalaureate Services were held in the Church of the Brethren at Meyersdale, with Brother W. S. Benshoff, pastor of our church, bringing the message.

Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College, was the morning speaker at the Meyersdale Church on Sunday, May 22nd.

New Paris, Indiana. We note from Brother Stewart's bulletin that the Mother and Daughter Banquet, which was held on Wednesday, May 11th, was most "graciously" served by the men of the church. The attendance was fine.

Our Church at New Paris is joining in the Community Vacation Bible School which began on May 30th.

Holy communion was observed at New Paris on Sunday evening May 8th.

Milledgeville, Illinois. We note that Brother D. C. White was the speaker at the High School Vesper Services which were held at the Methodist Church in Milledgeville.

Goshen, Indiana. Brother W. E. Ronk says, in his bulletin, "Now that the Main Auditorium and the Chapel have been redecorated, we wish to thank the committee for their planning and all who gave to make this work possible." He promise "More later."

The Men's Brotherhood met recently at Riverside Park for a 6:30 supper and the election of officers.

Berlin, Penna. The morning service of the Berlin Church for May 15th, Youth Sunday, was in charge of the youth of the church. The message was brought by Ronald Richey. This message will be found in this issue of the Evangelist.

Brother Percy Miller, pastor of the Berlin Church, just closed a meeting for the brethren at Jones Mills. We will look for a report of this meeting.

Rededication at Loree

The Loree Brethren had a great day on Sunday, May 22nd, when they spent the day in rejoicing over the fact that the task of remodeling and redecorating had been accomplished. We quote several paragraphs from the Peru, Indiana, "Tribune," which gives the account of the work accomplished.

"The Loree Church recently completed an extensive remodeling and redecorating program. Four new Sunday school rooms were added. The improvement included complete re-wiring of the building; redecoration of the auditorium; new modern rest rooms; new heating system; insulation of the attic; new light fixtures; new carpeting; new outdoor lighted bulletin board; new main entrance steps; new sidewalk; resurfacing of parking area and a new roof over one-half of the building.

"These improvements reached a total of $12,500.00, which amount was to be completed on May 22nd.

"This church was given an Award of Honor in the Indiana Farm Bureau's Rural Church Improvement Project last February 22nd, at Indianapolis. During the State S. & E. convention the pastor, Robert K. Higgins, was given a scholarship in Purdue leadership training school from July 11th to 15th."

This celebration was in the nature of an all-day service, with a basket dinner at the noon hour. So large was the attendance that it was almost impossible for the speaker of the day, Brother E. M. Riddle, to find a place to park his automobile. He said the only reason that he found a place was that one auto drove away just as he drove up.

Special features were scheduled for each service. The Loree Choir, the Junior Choir of the South Bend Brethren Church and the Loree Quartet, were among the special numbers. The "Seven Year Memory Box" was opened during the afternoon service.

The following program was given at the afternoon service:

Whatsoever a Man Soweth

LIFE IS TOO SHORT and time too precious to be spent in trying to obtain wisdom and knowledge by the slow and tedious process of experiment. Each generation has the advantage of the one that went before in that it may begin where the former left off. Every discovery of science, every invention, the literature and learning and development of former generations is handed to each succeeding generation in such a complete and available form that we would be foolish indeed, were we unwilling to profit by the rich experience of the past. From the past we receive a knowledge of tendencies, and this knowledge aids us in ordering our lives aright.

We must not, therefore, wait to learn everything by experience. Experience may teach us some things well, but we must remember that experience keeps a dear school and that only fools will learn in no other.

In the Scriptures there is announced a principle true in both the natural and spiritual world, namely, that like produces like. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." A woman wishing to have a beautiful lily in her garden never makes the mistake of planting an acorn. You never expect to gather figs or grapes from a bramble bush. This law of sowing and reaping applies also in our every-day social life. It was not considered by the wise Solomon as beneath his dignity to announce as a social law that the man who will have friends must show himself friendly. We must love if we wish to reap the seeds of love. The seeds of kindness which we sow will return in a beautiful harvest of the same. This law is equally certain in the spiritual realm. Sin grows. Sin produces sin. "If we plow iniquity and sow wickedness, we shall reap the same." Wickedness produces wickedness and sometimes brings forth an hundredfold.

There is a sowing time and a reaping time. Spring, summer and autumn must revolve. Before any one can reap there must have been seed and soil and the influences of heaven, and a seed time and harvest. The seed is human thoughts and actions. The soil to which the seed is committed is human nature under God's moral government. The influences that affect seed are "from above" and "from beneath." The seed time is the present time. The harvest is eternity. Men try to disconnect time and eternity by statement, by argument, and act accordingly. But one of the great truths set forth in the scriptures is that our experience in eternity is decided by, and shall correspond to, our procedure in time. The seed we sow actually contains the future plant, and husbandmen act accordingly. Moral action has wrapped up in it moral consequences.

We are daily casting seed into the soil. We may rest assured that there shall be a reaping time when the fruits shall be according to the sowing. How careful this should make us as to the kind of seed we scatter! How earnest and industrious it should make us, "working while it is called today, knowing the night cometh when no man can work!"

Not only should we sow the kind of seed we wish to reap, but we should sow liberally, knowing that if we sow sparingly, we shall also reap sparingly.

THIS PROBLEM OF DRINKING

Scripture: Proverbs 23:19-21; 31, 32; 20:1

For The Leader

A YOUNG WOMAN, with her mother, are driving home after a pleasant day on the road. Near home, as they round a curve to the left a speeding car, coming from the opposite direction, fails to make the curve and crashes into their car, killing them both. The drunken driver in the other car escaped with minor bruises, and, because he was drunk, recalls nothing of the accident. Two children come home from grade school on a cold, sleeting winter's day to find the house hold, and their mother dead drunk on the kitchen floor, the father out of town working to make a living for his family. A young man calls at the home of a beautiful young woman (it might have been your daughter, parents). He is reputedly a respectable young man and a nice "prospect" for the young woman. But, on the side, he has learned to drink. After they leave in his car, he produces the bottle and imbibes. As the evening progresses he becomes a fiend, knowing neither caution nor respect. Results, a ruined girl, plus a wrecked car and two young people in a hospital. This is happening everywhere, all the time in our nation. It truly is a problem, but one that is easily solved by the Christian.

DISCUSSION

1. THE GODLESS ATTITUDE OF ADULTS. One of the most screamingly, ruinous attitudes of adults on this problem is that of ignoring it. How often the hearts of preachers and youth leaders are torn to shreds by complacent parents and adults who sit and worship in church as if all was rosy and right in the world. As they sit in an attitude of hypocritical sanctity, smug in their own "saved" condition, their children and grandchildren are going to hell. But it is even worse when some conscientious preacher or leader seeks to warn them of conditions. For these blinkered adults will tell you you're a liar. It's a little like the crazy man sitting in his bed room when his house caught fire. The neighbors came and called to him to get out. He reached his hand and touched the wall of his room and said, "Aw, you're crazy, this wall isn't hot." Until we can awaken adults en masse to the real situation, we can do little about the problem. How adults who sit in complacency can hope to meet a just God in judgment some day and have a good answer for their attitude toward this problem is beyond us.

2. EVERY HOME INFECTED. Young people are drinking, not all of them by any means, praise God, but an alarming number of them. And young bodies, nervous systems, mental powers, and morals, are being ruined by this devilish curse. And alarming as this is, it is even more alarming to realize that every home, Christian or otherwise, is subject to infection. And none of us live unto ourselves, (get that, you sanctimonious, complacent adults). What happens in the lives of others in our land directly affects us. Our homes are infected with the drink curse through radio advertising, magazine advertising, etc. Our young people (get this, you adults) are in conversation day after day in school and play with young people who think it is all right, or smart, to drink. They tell our young people that they ought to take a drink, at least to find out what it tastes like. Moreover, few young people like to be cut off from the others, and to be ridiculed is a humiliating experience for youth. So, often they are chided for not drinking. Yes, we like to think that our young people wouldn't do such things, but it is happening day after day.

3. NOT MY CHILD! To prove our point, we list the incident of the father who was thrilled at the development of his beautiful daughter from childhood into young womanhood. She was his beautiful princess. He practically worshipped her, and built all his hopes in her life. To him, she was sinless and perfect. At least he thought she was. And because he believed that his child would never, never do the evil things of the world, he never warned her against the evils, and he trusted her implicitly. Even when she was out late and came home long after he had gone to sleep, he believed her stories of "being over with a girl friend." Such trust, such living in the clouds on this father's part was rudely and bitterly shattered one morning about 3:00 A. M. when the cops called at the house with the body of a young woman in their arms, and asked him if this was his daughter. It was. And he cried, "Not my child." The whole story came out. She had been a member of a gang of young people, both boys and girls, who spent their evenings drinking, carousing around. On this particular night, in their drunken condition, one of them suggested they rob a lonely, all-night filling station. One of the boys somehow produced a "rod" and the act was on. They drove to the station, ordered gas, and then demanded the money from the cash register. No sale, so the boy with the rod drilled the attendant, just as another motorist drove in. Of course the gang fled. The other motorist phoned the police and in a matter of less than an hour, a prowler car had sighted the gang. Willingly they stopped on signal, and as the cops walked to the car, the "rod" boy drilled again. In the ensuing gun fire, a cop was killed, and so was this girl. Variations of this are taking place all the time in our nation, of which parents seem to be unaware, until it is too late. When will we wake up?

4. THE SOLUTION. The scripture says, "be not among wine bibbers." That is right, the first defense against drinking is not to associate with those who do. The second is to see the results in lives of others. The third is to take concerted action against the forces of drink. Frankly, to the Christian, there should be no problem of drinking. The Bible teaches purity of body and mind, and drink (little or much) defiles that body which for the Christian is a temple of God. It is far better to risk a ridicule than to drink and risk ruin of body and soul. The drink which looks so innocent and pleasing will at the last, bite like an adder and sting like a serpent. Determine to always say "no" to drink. Parents talk frankly with your children on the harmful effects of drink, for in so doing you will both save yourself and your children from ruin and heartache.

GRACIOUS SPIRIT

2 Cor. 1:22

Gracious Spirit, Love Divine!
Let Thy light within me shine;
All my guilty fears remove,
Fill me with Thy heav'nly love.

Speak Thy pard'ning grace to me,
Set the burdened sinner free;
Lead me to the Lamb of God;
Wash me in His precious blood.

Life and peace to me impart,
Seal salvation on my heart;
Breathe Thyself into my breast,
Ernest of immortal rest.

Let me never from Thee stray,
Keep me in the narrow way;
Fill my soul with joy divine,
Keep me, Lord, forever Thine.

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Scripture for Devotion: John 14:26; 16:7-14

Hymns on the Holy Spirit

Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE HOLY SPIRIT was active in material creation (Gen. 1:2). He is the author of the holy Scriptures (1 Peter 1:11; 2 Peter 1:21). He brought about the incarnation of Christ (Luke 1:35). He empowered Christ for His public ministry at His baptism of John in Jordan (Luke 3:21-23). After that Jesus was full of and led by the Spirit (Luke 4:1, 14, 18). By the Spirit He cast out devils (Matt. 12:28). By the Spirit He offered Himself a spotless offering for sin (Heb. 9:14); and by the Spirit He was raised from the dead (Rom. 8:11). Upon His return He will reign in the power of the Spirit (Isa. 11:2, 3).

The Holy Spirit has knowledge (1 Cor. 2:11); will (1 Cor. 12:11); mind (Rom. 8:27); and love (Rom. 15:30). He instructs (Neh. 9:20); may be grieved (Eph. 4:20); may be vexed (Isa. 63:10); resisted (Acts 7:51). Thus He has the attributes of a person. He does the work of a person: teaches (John 14:26); guides (John 16:13); helps our infirmities (Rom. 8:26); searches all things (Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 2:10, 11).

The Holy Spirit is the third person of the Godhead as shown in the Great Commission (Matt. 28:19), and in 1 John 5:7. Jesus and the Father come to us through the Spirit (John 14:16, 23). God anointed Jesus with the Holy Ghost, and thus was with Him (Acts 10:38). God raised up Jesus (Acts 2:32; 10:40) through the Holy Spirit (1 Peter 3:18; Rom. 8:11).

The Holy Spirit convicts the sinner of sin and his need of salvation (John 16:8; Acts 9:5; 16:29, 30; 24:25). Man cannot turn to God without the striving of the Spirit (John 6:44; Gen. 6:3). The new birth is wrought by the Spirit (John 3:3, 5). Upon man's faith, repentance and obedience God gives a new heart and a new nature (2 Cor. 5:17; 2 Peter 1:4; Titus 3:5).

Jesus in His glorified body is at the Father's right hand (Rev. 3:21; Heb. 4:14) interceding for us. But the Holy Spirit Who represents both the Father and the Son makes the bodies of believers His temple (1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 6:19, 20; Rom. 8:9; John 14:16, 17).

The Holy Spirit baptizes believers into the body of Christ, the mystical Church (1 Cor. 12:13). When Jesus comes the Spirit will resurrect the righteous (Rom. 8:11) and will assemble His Church (1 Thess. 4:17; Heb. 12:22, 23). The Holy Spirit is the seal and evidence of our salvation (1 Cor. 1:21, 22) and ultimate redemption (Eph. 4:30; Rom. 8:23).

The Holy Spirit is our Comforter (John 14:16, 17; 16:7); Guide, Teacher and Reminder (John 14:25; 16:12-14). The unsaved cannot understand the things of the Spirit because they have no teacher (1 Cor. 2:14, 10). The Spirit is our Prayer Helper (Rom. 8:26, 27). We are to follow the Spirit's leading in praying (Eph. 6:18; Jude 20). He gives us the assurance of salvation (Rom. 8:15, 16). He grows the Christian graces (Gal. 5:22, 23).

THE TRIUMPH OF THE RESURRECTION

Lesson: Mark 16:2-7; John 21:3-4, 7-12

IT HAS BEEN APTLY SAID that the Resurrection is God's "Amen" to Jesus' cry on the cross, "It is Finished." Peter expresses with definiteness, the entire thought which surrounds the crucifixion and resurrection in his first letter, chapter 1, verses 18 to 21, where he ascribes the resurrection as being accomplished by the power of God, in these words, "... in God, that raised him (Jesus) from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith, and hope might be in God."

When we look at the Resurrection scene we again are brought face to face with all that the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross is made to mean. We see the utter dejection and hopelessness of his followers pictured before us in the account of the women who journeyed to the sepulchre in the early dawn that followed the never-to-be-forgotten Jewish sabbath. Their assurance that Jesus still lay beyond the stone which was rolled before the door of the tomb, is found in that which "they said among themselves" — "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?" We find the same hopelessness expressed in the words of the two disciples who walked to Emmaus way—"But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel."

Yet beneath all this helpless and hopeless exterior, there seemed to be a feeling that something they did not understand hovered over them. It can be faintly seen in the words of those who walked with Jesus on the way to Emmaus—" . . . and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done." They had heard the story of the women at the tomb and their report of its emptiness, yet they had failed to comprehend its full significance.

It is rightly said, "There are none so blind as they that will not see." These followers had been with Jesus for many days; had heard His teaching about Himself; had had the scriptures which prophesied about Him brought to their attention. Yet they still doubted when they faced the realities of the resurrection. No wonder the risen Jesus says, "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" And yet we, on this side of that resurrection reality, might also, at times, be classified as "fools and slow of heart to believe" the things that are found in the Word of God.

But what, to these early followers, seemed the end of all things, was simply the real beginning of the "Triumph of the Resurrection." Paul puts it thus, "Now thanks be to God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place."

We must fully realize all that the Resurrection means before we can grasp the greatness of His continual presence. We must stand in Thomas' place before the Risen Jesus, and say with him, "My Lord, and my God." That we will be fully blessed in this attitude, if we accept Him, is shown by Jesus' words to Thomas—"Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed," for we are in the latter class—those having not "seen."

Love's redeeming work is done,
Fought the fight, the battle won;
Death in vain forbids His rise;
Christ has opened Paradise.

Soar we now, where Christ has led,
Following our exalted Head:
Made like Him, like Him we rise;
Ours the cross, the grave, the skies.
Alleluia!

A man ought to carry himself in the world as an orange tree would if it could walk up and down in the garden, swinging perfume from every little censer it holds up to the air.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The happiness of your life depends upon the quality of your thoughts.—Marcus Aurelius.

Have you noticed how some Brethren go into a deep freeze early Sunday morning and by church time they become ice cubes in the congregational tray?

Have you sold out to hate, or do you still hold a mortgage on love?

SPECIAL NOTICE TO SOUTHERN INDIANA LAYMEN

The Southern Indiana District Laymen are urged not to forget the Joint Meeting of the Northern District Laymen and the Southern District Laymen which will be held at Warsaw, Indiana, on Monday evening, June 6th. Let's make it a great gathering.

Three Gates of Gold

If I am tempted to reveal
A tale some one to me has told
About another, let it pass,
Before I speak, three gates of gold.

Three narrow gates: First, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In my mind
Give truthful answer, and the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"

And if, to reach my lips at last,
It passes through these gateways three,
Then I may tell the tale, nor fear
What the results of speech may be.

—Amos R. Wells.

News From Our Churches

ARDMORE HEIGHTS, SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

Some word should be published as to the activities of the congregation at this place. One of the most visible and outstanding achievements of the congregation is the remodelling of the church auditorium. This work was largely accomplished during the winter. Some of the work was done by contract and much was done by volunteer labor. It is not exaggeration to say that the improvements would cost at least $1,500.

On May 15th a rededication service was held. Along with some very fine musical numbers from local people, the outstanding presentation was a picture description of Warner Sallman's "Christ Knocking at the Door." This beautiful picture was the gift of the William Donat family in memory of William Donat and Clayton Kinney. Mrs. J. M. Bowman gave the beautiful description of the picture and interpretation closing with a very effective story of the influence of a picture in the life of a boy leading to a confession and dedication to Christ. Appropriate ritual was used by the congregation rededicating the improved auditorium and a purpose to carry on for Christ and the church.

We had a very successful evangelistic series ending on Sunday night, April 3. Brother Claud Studebaker was the evangelist and was assisted by Rev. Walter Arrowsmith as song leader. The people greatly appreciated the meetings and the effective ministry of the visiting ministers left a deep impression upon the community. Four people made the step forward for Christ. Two were first time confessions, the others came to us as Christians joining in active work with the local church. Three were baptized and received into the church. Parental objection accounts for the other. Brother Studebaker gave us some of the cream of his ministry and the young minister did well in the song directing. We were all pleased and thankful and tried to make the visiting brethren know we did appreciate them.

Most of the northern Indiana Brethren ministers met at our house on Wednesday, May 18th. We ate dinner together and visited. I mention this to say that it is hopeful for pastors and wives to visit when they are not on strictly official duty—reason, we are less theological and professional.

I need the prayers of the brotherhood and every minister needs the prayers of his brethren because these are times which make us think of Matthew chapter twenty-four. May God prosper and strengthen all His faithful servants to be strong in faith and courageous of heart.

R. F. Porte, Pastor.

BRIGHTON CHURCH, HOWE, INDIANA

Because of the illness of Brother Harry Gilbert, the writer has been preaching at Brighton, Indiana, since the last Sunday in January.

We have enjoyed a steady increase in numbers, reaching a total of one hundred and seventeen for Easter. We held combined services with the Church of the Brethren during Holy Week, Rev. Ziegler preaching in our church and the writer speaking at English Prairie Church. All services were very well attended, and new Christian acquaintances made, for which we praise the Lord.

On Easter Sunday there were three that came forward to unite with us in worship—one by first time confession of Jesus Christ, and the other two from other churches.

Our Easter offering at the Brighton Church for Missions was $72.40, which was quite good. Holy Communion was observed on Sunday night, May 8th, with sixty present. Several participated for the first time.

MEETING AT ARDMORE HEIGHTS, INDIANA

We assisted Dr. R. F. Porte and his congregation in a two weeks' meeting beginning on Sunday evening, March 20th and closing Sunday evening, April 3rd. This church is only about five miles from the First church of South Bend and is really in South Bend now. This section is in the western edge of the city, near the big Bendix plant and is being built up rapidly by home builders. This church has a good field and may safely anticipate the future with an ever increasing field.

We would not have considered a meeting away from our parish at this time of the year, only where we could be at home to our own congregation and in our own pulpit in the morning worship. This worked out very nicely. We spent only one afternoon in visitation on the Ardmore field, so we only gave them our evenings and the time essential in preparation for the sermon. Rev. Arrowsmith, a young man who was associate pastor and youth leader in the Central E. U. B. church of this city, directed the music and the choir of the church and organist, Mrs. Ewers, were faithful, so the devotional preparation for the sermon made it favorable for the preacher.

It was our first time to work with Dr. Porte in a meeting and it was a pleasant experience. They have a lovely, loyal group of worshippers in this church and they were very responsive to the preaching of the word. Though we had very good attendance, the difficulty everywhere is to reach the people who are not members of the church and get them to the church to hear the gospel. The world offers such a interesting program of entertainment that the church is no longer the center of social activity as it was in former years .

The results were encouraging and the church was very generous in their expression of thanks both in their words of praise and their gifts of love. We thank the pastor and his congregation and may the abundant blessings of God be upon them in their labor of love.

Claud Studebaker, South Bend, Indiana.

NORTH GEORGETOWN, OHIO

It has been some time since a report has been in the Evangelist from our church, therefore we feel that we should let you know what is happening in our congregation.

Last summer money was raised in order that the church might be painted on the outside. This painting will be done in the near future. Also, during the winter and spring, funds were received in order that the basement might be completed. This work is now being done, and we hope to have it finished by fall.

The Northeastern Ohio District Brethren Youth Rally was held in our church last November, and it was very successful. The Junior W. M. S. is host of the District W. M. S. Rally which will be held in October. As far as is known, this is the first time that such rallies have been held in the church.

Our average Sunday School attendance for the last two years has been around 75, which is very good for a small country church. Most of these stay for the morning worship service.

On the Sunday before Easter of this year, two young ladies came forward to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. On Easter Sunday, a boy and a girl came forward to accept Christ. On May 15th, seven people were baptized by the undersigned in the Louisville church. May the 22nd was a happy day in our church; seven new members were taken into the membership.

Truly the Lord has been good to us, and we are looking forward to even greater advancement in the coming year.

Spencer Gentle, Ashland, Ohio, pastor.

FALLS CITY, NEBRASKA

The Falls City Brethren Church has been having its share of good things the past few weeks.

One of the recommendations of the Resolutions Committee at our Mid-West District Conference was that each church in the district was to have a series of meetings emphasizing the doctrines taught in the Bible which Christians should practice. Rev. H. E. Eppley, our pastor, used the week preceding Easter to give our church this teaching. Brother "Bud" Hunter, President of the Brethren National Laymen's Organization, was with us as song director. He sang a solo each evening, which was very much appreciated. He also organized a Laymen's Organization here, but since there are only three months left for this conferece year, they are carrying on some local projects for our church which need doing, then they will be ready to cooperate with the National work after General Conference.

On April 4th we celebrated our annual Birthday Party with about one hundred and twenty-five present.

On April 22nd we had a Gospel Team, consisting of Charles Munson, Spencer Gentle, Clarence Stogsdill and Miss Lois Coleman, all of Ashland College, with us. They gave our young people a "big" evening. A Brethren Youth Fellowship Group was organized from these contacts. At present they are following the Christian Endeavor programs as put out by Brother W. S. Benshoff.

Our Advanced Training Class is using "The Bible, Book of Books" as a text. They have just completed Genesis.

We have our Vacation Bible School supplies and are making preparations to start as a two weeks school on May 30th.

Rev. and Mrs. Eppley have fitted into our work very well. He has been giving us some very emphatic Bible teaching. The world needs more of this kind of preaching today.

Mary E. Rieger, Cor. Sec.

Wedding Announcement

ALEXANDER-FLOYD. At two o'clock in the afternoon of May 15th, Margaret Cleo Alexander and Gerald Lucian Floyd were united in marriage at the First Brethren Church in Stockton, California, by the undersigned. The bride is a valued member of the Stockton Church. Both of these young people are employed at the San Joaquin County Hospital.

The entire church and community joins in wishing them all the joys of life. They have the honor of being the first couple to be married from the Stockton Church.

C. E. Johnson.

WYNN-RHODES. Jean Wynn and Charles W. Rhodes were united in marriage at the South Bend, Indiana, parsonage on March 5th. A fine young couple, in rural South Bend. Some of the related families are members of this church.

HAYNES-DAVIS. Mary Kathryn Haynes and Vernon Paul Davis were united in marriage at the South Bend parsonage on April 9th. This lovely couple are members of our Sunday School and residents of this city.

EMMONS-CLARK. Donna Jean Emmons and Jackie G. Clark were united in marriage at the South Bend parsonage on April 29th. They are a fine young couple living in Mishawaka.

Congratulations to these fine young people. May every good blessing of life and the right blessings of grace be theirs as they establish homes and journey through life together.

Claud Studebaker.

Laid to Rest

CRUM. Charles Weldon Crum departed this life to be with the Lord after sixteen years in the hospital as the result of injuries in the first world war, his death coming on March 13th. He was a fine man of faith and the only child of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Crum of South Bend, Indiana. All are members of the South Bend Church and can anticipate the glories of heaven.

MAYS. Mrs. T. O. Mays departed this life to be with the Lord on April 2nd. She had been ill for several years and unable to attend the worship of the church, but she was a fine woman of faith. The family were formerly attendants of our church, from which church the funeral services were conducted.

McDONALD. Joseph McDonald was called to his eternal home on April 20th, after a brief illness. He had been for many years a member of the South Bend Church and was caretaker of the church when we came here as pastor in 1941.

Our sympathy attends those who mourn, but we do find comfort in a faith that conquers death with a glorious victory and triumphs throughout eternity in the joys of heaven, and in the presence of our Savior, and all the redeemed of earth.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Nappanee, Indiana. In the dedication service of the new organ which was held on Sunday evening, June 5th, the following was a part of the program, according to a Nappanee bulletin: Mrs. Marian Brevier Cowling of New York as guest organist; All Girl Choir under the direction of Mrs. Fern Rehner; Violin and Cello duet by Margaret Mutchler and Arline Stouder; Hymn Voluntaries by John Oviatt, who installed the organ; dedicatory service in charge of Rev. and Mrs. J. Milton Bowman, and the Offering in charge of Devon Hossler, Moderator of the Nappanee Church.

Masontown, Penna. We note from Brother Freeman Ankrum's bulletin that the children had charge of the evening service on Sunday, June 5th.

Lanark, Illinois. The Lanark Sunday School picnic was held at White Pines State Park on Wednesday, June 8th. A carry-in dinner was enjoyed, as was the ice cream which was furnished by the Sunday School.

The Children's Day program at the Lanark Church will be held on Sunday, June 12th, at the evening hour. A Teen-age Youth Fellowship will be organized following this service.

Dayton, Ohio. Dayton is very busy preparing for the convening of the Ohio District Conference at the Dayton Church from June 23 to 26. This is a venture for an over week-end conference, with the hope that a greater number of the youth and laymen will be able to take part.

Brother S. M. Whetstone, pastor of the Dayton Church, conducted a service of consecration for little ones in connection with the Children's Day program, which was given on Sunday morning, June 5th.

Waterloo, Iowa. Brother Virgil E. Meyer reports that as of May 29th the Youth Offering in the Waterloo Church was nearing the goal of $250.00.

Vacation Bible School in the above church began on Monday, June 6th.

Oakville, Indiana. Brother Henry Bates, pastor of the Oakville Church, states that the attendance at the mid-week service has been very encouraging during the past several weeks. The young people are taking a fine interest in this service.

He also regretfully announces that the church finds it necessary to cancel their plan for a Daily Vacation Bible School this year, due to the lack of a sufficient teaching staff. Teachers seem to be unavailable.

Brother Bates has established a "Question Box" where-in queries concerning the Bible and its contents may be placed by the congregation. These questions are being answered at both the morning and evening services.

Mexico, Indiana. Brother Robert Higgins, pastor, conducted a consecration service for children on Sunday morning, May 15th. At that time three children were presented for dedication by their parents.

Center Chapel, Indiana. The Southern Indiana District Brethren Youth met at the Center Chapel Brethren Church on Tuesday evening, May 31st. Brother Robert Higgins, pastor of the Loree-Mexico Circuit, was the speaker of the evening.

St. James, Maryland. We quote from the St. James bulletin of May 29th: "The sponsors of the Laymen's Rally (Southeastern District Laymen) can feel gratified by the interest and attendance displayed on Friday night, May 27th. Seventy-four suppers were served. Brethren Laymen attended from our churches at Washington, D. C., Linwood, Cumberland, Hagerstown and St. James, Maryland, and Mt. Olive, Virginia. The message of the speaker, H. D. "Bud" Hunter, National Laymen's Organization President, was enjoyed by all. Plans were made to meet every six months. The next rally will be in October and will be held at the Hagerstown, Maryland, Church."

The St. James Father and Son Banquet was held on Friday evening, June 10th. Their Daily Vacation Bible School will be held from June 20th to July 1st.

Linwood, Maryland. We quote from a letter which we received from Brother William H. Stone, as he renewed his subscription to the Evangelist. Brother Stone says: "Maybe Brother Belote would not mind if I would report that he has received five precious souls into the church since Easter, and that we had a very large attendance on Sunday evening, May 29th, at the Spring Love Feast. The largest in years." Thank you, Brother Stone; we are sure that Brother Belote will not object to your fine report.

Gratis, Ohio. Brother Crick says, "An elegant forty-eight cup capacity electric Aluminum Coffee Urn graces the serving counter of the Gratis church kitchen, thanks to the graciousness of Mrs. Charles Burd, and the fine cooperation of the members of the Woman's Missionary Society and more than twenty-three couples."

Brother Crick states that twenty-eight have been added to the Gratis church membership during the past year;

THE DEDICATION OF A HOME

CHURCHES ARE DEDICATED and why shouldn't homes be thus treated? Some years ago an Akron Ohio, family asked this question when building a new home. Their answer was to arrange a dedication ceremony.

The pastor of the church they attended and to which they "belonged," gave a dedicatory talk in the new home; a special ritual, arranged by the owner, was used, and there were vocal selections and a prayer. The fire-place was lighted, the pictures on the walls unveiled, and then came the dedicatory address. The ceremony was impressive and the people who were to live there certainly had a better appreciation of their home after the dedication.

In the dedicatory talk the pastor said that the home is one of the vital factors in the life of the nation, and that because of its primary position, it should be given recognition similar to that of other institutions dedicated to high ideals of accomplishment and living.

I found the above paragraphs in my clipping file while I was looking for some other material. Some way it had gotten into the wrong envelope and turned up in such a way that

It set me to thinking!

The high divorce rate in our country (even though a judge told me just a few weeks ago that it seemed to be diminishing gradually) surely leads us to draw the conclusion that far too few homes are dedicated as real homes these days. We frequently see in cartoons the picture of a groom clumsily carrying his bride across the threshold, a very old custom. But too often this depiction is one of levity rather than partaking of the serious meaning of the action. In too many homes the seriousness of the marriage vow has become a thing to flaunt, and a contract that may be voided at the least provocation—or, indeed, on no provocation at all: just a desire to change mates.

This condition would not exist if homes were dedicated seriously to the Lord. I have a memory of a couple who moved into a city where I was pastor. The first thing they sought was the church, even before they tried to find a place to live. After locating a home their first desire was to have that "home" dedicated with prayer. Need I say that that family was not only faithful to their church, but to their marriage vows as well?

Too often, also, the neglect of the "giving of thanks" at the table spells the beginning of a home that is drifting away from the ways of the Lord.

Then, too, we have been having a series of "rededication" services throughout our churches. The church is cleaned up, redecorated, made to shine, both inside and out. Wouldn't it be a fine thing to have some of our homes treated this same way? O, maybe the housewife is so serious about her cleaning each day that you could not find a speck of dust if you tried. But how about the orderliness of the home worship? Why not "rededicate" the home to a keener appreciation of God's love and providence? It surely is worth a try!

Think it over!

Our Error!

We have received a list of renewals of Evangelist subscriptions from the Canton Brethren Church by the hand of Mrs. N. E. Clark, who takes care of this task for the Canton Church. Sister Clark writes at the bottom of her list, "I am sorry to say that we are not a 100% church as was printed in a recent Evangelist." We are sorry, too, but we are thankful for the fine list she sent. It may be that some time in the near future we can add this fine congregation to our 100% list.

Other Subscriptions

We are getting many renewals each day for the Evangelist, as well as new ones. Also there are a few, but very few cancellations. We are endeavoring to send out expiration notices each month. If your expiration date does not agree with ours, please let us know. It is always possible for mistakes to be made, you know.

Again may we ask you to give the name of your church when you send in your subscription. It will help us to locate you better. We find that some notices of expiration are going out to people who are on 100% church lists, just because they do not live in the town where the church to which they belong is located and we have no way of knowing what church they are members of unless they tell us. Hence the asking that you name your church when sending in your subscription. You can make our work less if you will do this.

The Press and Equipment Fund

Now that the regular offerings are out of the way for the Conference Year, why not give the Press and Equipment Fund just the right push to put it over the top and get rid of it? How about sending in an extra $1.00 bill? It is so easy. This is the way you do it: put the dollar bill in an envelope, after having pinned a slip on it with the words Press and Equipment fund and signed your name and address; address the envelope to The Brethren Publishing Co., 524 College Avenue, Ashland, Ohio; put a stamp on the envelope; drop it in the mail! Easy, isn't it?

How many dollars can we get in the next few weeks? Who will be the first?

General Conference wants this project finished up this year. We can do it. Remember, we can make this a fine memorial to our late Brother George S. Baer.

Do you have a pledge to this fund that is not paid? We will let you answer this question.

Anyway, let us get this task completed. We can, if we will all do our part.

When Does Rest Become Real Rest?

THERE WAS A LITTLE COUPLET written years ago which expresses the reality of the meaning of "rest." It reads thus:

"Rest is not quitting a busy career;
Rest is but fitting one's self in one's sphere."

When Jesus was tired, He sought to rest, but deemed it not too much beyond the realm of rest to turn to help those in need. He said to His disciples, "Come ye yourselves apart, and rest awhile." But as they went, He was thronged with the people who needed His aid urgently—and He gave of His time and energy to meet the need. Let us look at the idea of rest as set forth by one whose name nor position in life we do not know. This is what he has said.

"Our Lord spake to a laboring, burdened, restless generation. The world has made great improvement since that day, but it has not outgrown unrest. Every age, every country, every city has its multitudes of troubled, weary, restless people. They are burdened with care, with poverty, with affliction and with sin. How few really light-hearted, cheerful men and women we meet. There is plenty of levity, but little sunshine; plenty of idleness, but little rest. How sweet the words of Jesus, 'Come unto me, and I will give you rest.'

"Jesus gives His people rest by taking away their sins. The secret of our trouble is in ourselves. Our own sinful thoughts and deeds and words and our own sinful hearts make us afraid. 'The wicked are like the troubled sea which cannot rest.' We may not be very great sinners according to the world's standard of righteousness. We are not murderers, nor thieves, nor drunkards, nor liars. We do not abuse our families nor neglect them. We do not slander our neighbors nor cheat them. The world would give us a clean bill of health on that record. But what about our selfishness, our unkindness, our pride, our vanity, our want of charity and our neglect of duty? Memory can bring before our minds many things of which we ought to be ashamed. Verily we are guilty. We have all sinned.

"Besides all this there is in the breast of each one a tendency to evil. There is something which hinders us from doing well. Call it what you may, it is still there. Something relentless as the law of gravity draws us down when we strive to rise. Sigh for rest as we may, we shall never get rest until we get right, and we shall never get right until we come to Christ. For there is none other name given under heaven whereby we can be saved. Can He save us? 'The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins.' He can do more. He can set our feet in the right way. More still: He can set us right within.

"Jesus gives rest by His own presence and the fellowship of the holy angels. He dwelt in the same world with us, and He was not afraid. Heaven was all about Him all the time. He was always conscious of the presence of the Father. It is thus that He is always able to give rest to His people.

"How did Daniel find rest? His enemies were not destroyed. They were not prevented from casting the prophet into the den of lions. But Daniel rested as quietly in the lions' den as he would have rested in the palace or on a downy couch, for the Lord had sent His angels and had shut the lion's mouths. Someone has said that 'The singing of the angels drowned out the noise of the roaring of the lions.'

"How did He give rest to the other three young men who got into trouble when they refused to bow to gold or stone—the great idol of the king? Not by smiting the tyrant, nor by quenching the flames, but by walking with His servants in the midst of the fire. They rested as serenely in the burning fiery furnace as they could have rested on a bed of roses.

"Then let the lions roar and gnash their teeth. Let the furnace be heated and the flames kindle upon us. We can hear the Master saying:

'The flame shall not hurt thee, I only design
Thy dross to consume and thy gold to refine.'

"Our Lord gives rest to His people by imparting to them a victorious trust. Worry and fear are children of doubt, and trust is the only remedy. 'Take no thought,' says Jesus. 'Be careful for nothing,' says Paul. 'Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee,' says the prophet.

"Why should we lose the secret of rest? The child rests because it trusts unflinchingly. How sublime, how simple, how powerful the trust of a young wife in the man to whom she has just given her hand, her heart and her life. She does not know much about the new life upon which she has entered. She is without experience, but she trusts implicitly that her husband will support her, care for her, protect her and love her. Her mind is stayed on him and there is peace within her heart. But let her lose confidence in him and her peace is at an end.

"Think of the power of confidence in the business world. So long as business men have confidence in the government, in the banks and financial institutions of the country, they buy and sell without solicitude. But let them lose confidence and there will be unrest, panic and paralysis.

"Men do lose confidence. Sometimes there is no ground for confidence. Men do not trust financial institutions and financial conditions, because they are not trustworthy. Wives do not trust their husbands, because they are not worthy of confidence. But we can have unflinching confidence in our Lord. 'No word He hath spoken was ever yet broken.' We can trust in the truth of the Lord, in the goodness of the Lord, in the mercy of the Lord, in His power, in His love.

"This victorious trust is the secret of a quiet mind. We do not have to wait until the financial, commercial and social conditions of the world shall be perfect before we rest. We can find rest now in the midst of all unfavorable conditions and threatening and dreadful realities. We see through a glass darkly, but we trust. We walk in darkness and danger, but we hold the Hand that rules the universe.

"This rest is not idleness. Those who follow Christ do not cease from toil. They are the most industrious people in the world. But they toil without friction and without strife. As the planets move silently and swiftly about the sun, so the soul that follows Christ moves on and upward without fear, without worry, without strife, without friction, but in perfect peace."

There are five simple rules for a joyous life. They are easy to follow:

1. Stop worrying. Take warning from the old woman who said that her life had been full of troubles, most of which never came to pass. Worry is unphilosophical and unchristian. We are told upon whom to "cast all our care." Let us do it.

2. Be joyful. We are bidden many times to rejoice, to be glad—never to be sad—in the Lord, and to "joy in the God of our salvation." It would make every moment more worth living if we could heartily obey this command.

3. Take time to find pleasure in nature and art. The Beecher children asked their Aunt Esther, who had "told them nineteen rat stories in a string," how she came to know so much about nature. She replied, "The works of the Lord are great, seek out all of them that have pleasure therein.' I happened to have pleasure in them, and so sought them out." Except we take time to observe, we cannot take pleasure in nature or art, nor gain the knowledge that enriches life.

4. "Be careful where thou livest," said George Herbert. "that they may both want and wish God's pleasing presence still! All other joys grow less to the one joy of doing kindness."

5. If you have a happy thought of service or work that needs doing, thank the Divine Spirit that suggests it, and do it yourself, unless you know some one who can and will do it better—but above all, get it done.

Live by these rules, and life will be a joy. And you will find rest unto your souls.

FITTING TRIBUTE TO THE FAITHFUL

Scripture: Acts 11:19-26

WE MIGHT WELL ASK ourselves occasionally what sort of a name we bear? What sort of folks are we? Are we cross, touchy, selfish, mean, hasty, unfriendly, unkind? Or are we pleasant, helpful, kindly, patient, friendly? Do folks think and speak of us as an old "sour-puss," or do they seek to be in our company because we are helpful? What sort of a name have we?

Every Christian bears a name—the name of Christ. Do we honor it? When the great Jamaican Missionary, James Phillipps, was at college, he and James Mursell became great friends. When they parted, one to be a missionary and the other to be a clergyman, each took into his own name the name of his friend. So Mursell was James Phillipps Mursell, and his friend became James Mursell Phillipps. Neither one could write his own name without thinking of the other. Did you ever think that we who are Christians have Christ's name? Isn't that an honor?

Parents exhibit their respect and admiration for great men by bestowing the name of the great one upon their own offspring. It is told of Alexander the Great, that upon one occasion complaint was made to him that a certain soldier in his army, who bore the same name as the General—Alexander—was insubordinate, disrespectful and lazy. The soldier was called into the presence of the general, and stood at attention. "What is your name?" asked the General. "Alexander, sire," was the answer. "Why, you bear the same name as I," said Alexander. "I will have no lazy, insubordinate soldier in my army. Change your ways or change your name."

What is your name? Christian? Then act like one, or change your name!

The story goes of a prominent statesman, who had been a power for good in the land, that he was, upon one occasion, visiting in the little community where he was born and reared. Naturally he received a great welcome and just had to make a speech. He paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of a man who once taught school in that village. "He laid his hand upon me for good and I have never forgotten him," he said.

And here I want to pay tribute to the countless thousands of quiet, faithful, unassuming people in the land, Sunday School teachers, who have been and are doing what that school teacher did for that Christian statesman—laid their hand upon the scholars who have sat under their teaching, and that for good.

Now here rises Barnabas to remind us that though he was just an ordinary layman, yet he was so wholly committed to love for God and his fellowmen, that he became recognized as a power in the church, and when the "Mother Church" at Jerusalem wanted to send some one to encourage the workers at Antioch, they did not pick some brilliant, eloquent minister of the congregation, but Barnabas—patient, faithful, unassuming, loyal.

Lastly may I remind you that after Barnabas had gotten the work on a good footing, he went out and hunted up Saul (Paul) and turned the leadership over to him. He might have continued to be the leader there at Antioch, but he was willing to be forgotten if the work might only grow and the Lord be glorified.

If you cannot preach like Paul, then "Lay your hands for good" upon those scholars whom God has entrusted to your care, and your labor will not be forgotten. No higher encomium can be bestowed upon a man than that spoken of Barnabas—"He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith."

—Linwood, Maryland.

Canton Family Circle Class Celebrates Twenty-fifth Anniversary

On Friday evening, May 27th, the Family Circle Bible Class of the Canton Brethren Sunday School celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its organization. The celebration, which was held at the Canton Church, was in honor of its Teacher, Brother Frank E. Clapper, who has been the teacher of the class since its organization. The special speaker for the occasion was Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College. A short history of the class, taken from an insert in their program of the evening follows:

"The Family Circle Class was organized May 14, 1924 in the First Brethren Church, then located at the corner of East Tuscarawas and Schwalm Avenue, N. E. The class was organized under the name of The Young Married People's Class and continued as such for several years. The class then decided to adopt the present name, which seemed to be more suitable to the class membership.

"The original charter contains thirty-seven names, many of which are still active in the class. F. E. Clapper was elected as the teacher and has continued his faithful service in this capacity for the twenty-five years. During this time, the class has received constant Spiritual guidance, and Mr. Clapper is well known in the city and surrounding communities for his high caliber fundamental teaching of the Word. We as a class owe him a deep expression of gratitude for his efforts in our behalf.

"We are also indebted to the faithful guidance of Rev. Fred Vanator, who served as our pastor at the time of the organization of the class. His sincere spirit and lovable personality contributed much to us all.

"The following men have served as president of the class during this time: Clarence Hammen, Arthur King, Harry Miller, Norman Clark, Lester Bechtel, Ray Flanagan, Frank Smith, Louis Cordier, Arthur Bokhart, Donald Guittar, Harland Clapper, Edgar Heist, and Joe Watkins."

The editor regrets his inability to be present for the celebration and feels that he missed something by not being there. We wish to congratulate this splendid class and their faithful teacher for their splendid service to the entire church, and pray for them a continued ministry in the work unto which they have been called.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

COMMENCEMENT has come and gone at Ashland College and the largest number of degrees ever awarded were conferred by President Glenn L. Clayton. Sixty-one students were given 63 degrees including two Master of Theology degrees by the Seminary, one to Charles Applegath, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Ashland and the other to Norman Somerville, an active pastor from Galion, Ohio.

Beautiful weather from start to finish characterized the commencement season of 1949. The last three days, June 1, 2 and 3, were given over largely to special convocations. On Wednesday, the class orations were given. These received special commendations this year as being a credit to the class. World problems were discussed by virtually all of them.

The class gift was presented and accepted at this session. It is a beautiful bronze plate erected at the corner of College Avenue and King Road replacing the large painted sign which has been on that corner for the past ten or more years. It, along with another iron eagle named Amylene, improve the view of the campus from the highway.

Baccalaureate on Thursday evening was in the First Brethren Church. Dr. Robert Whyte, Pastor of The Old Stone Church in Cleveland delivered the sermon to the graduates. He admonished them to be wise to the signs of the times and to accept their responsibilities. Faculty members who had a part in the service were: Eunice Lea Kettering, Paul H. Saleste, M. A. Stuckey, and Delbert Flora. The Chapel Choir under the direction of Calvin Rogers furnished the special music.

On Friday morning at 10:30, the academic procession moved across the campus to the sound of the chapel bells.

*Work to be completed.

The faculty was particularly colorful in their hoods of varying colors. The address was delivered by Dr. H. E. Simmons, President of the University of Akron. He told of the cooperation necessary in the winning of a war and appealed for the peoples of the earth to put forth the same effort to secure peace. He said that the most universally wanted thing in the world is to live peacefully with your neighbors whether individuals or nations and yet the nations resort to competition and forget world citizenship in the effort to get farther ahead of the other fellow. He predicted that the standards of living will suffer tremendously if nations do not reject this practice.

As this is written, underclassmen are still taking examinations. They will all have completed their work by June 8. Many will be back, however, by June 13 for the eight week summer session.

The moment you have become satisfied with what you have accomplished the concrete has begun to set in your head.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"How many things by season seasoned are
To their right praise and true perfection."

From Merchant of Venice.—Shakespeare.

One of the proverbs of Solomon says that a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. It is the apt thing that counts. That which is done five minutes too soon or too late often turns to no account. A clump of clover blossoms in a potato patch is considered a weed, and potatoes growing in a clover field are likewise weeds. Even dirt is merely matter out of place—out of season.

The perfect picture is harmonious in time, place and condition. It would be a strange disharmony to put snow banks among the blossoms of June. No, the picture must be seasoned by season. Every reed and tree must bend before the wind, none against it, the clouds must move in harmony across the sky, the smoke from every chimney must move in the same direction. It would be strange to see the wind blowing towards the north and some of the clouds and reeds and smoke moving toward the south and west. We associate mud and clouds and wet grass with rain, night with the stars and the morning with the song of the robin and the lark. Nature has never erred here. She makes no slips. They are always in their season for their right praise and true perfection. There are many things that must be seasoned rightly. A great oration, such as Webster's at Bunker Hill, was seasoned by a great theme, a great occasion, a great audience, and a magnificent delivery. These were all blended to make the event memorable and well nigh perfect.

The dawn is seasoned by its rosy cheeks and vanishing stars, the swan by its graceful curves, the lover with his soothing silver voice. The fish is fitted to the water, the bird to the air and the spider to its filmy web. All these are seasoned by season. Shakespeare points out that the crow sings as sweetly as the lark when neither is attended.

There is a beautiful harmony in fitness, and discord without it. The thoughtful person will note the harmony with satisfaction and the discord with pain.

It is harmony that makes the great earth run smoothly and with precision and beauty. Even the universe of stars and planets are most beautifully seasoned by reason.

seven by baptism; seven by letter; one by former baptism, and thirteen by renewal. The church shows a net gain of twenty-five.

Flora, Indiana. Brother J. Edgar Berkshire, pastor of the Flora Church, who acted as Director for the Union Vacation Bible School in Flora, reports that the first week of their school was well attended, with an average attendance of 150. The daily offerings are to be used to buy scriptures to be sent to Japan and Korea.

Ashland, Ohio. The Ashland Church, following its annual custom of presenting New Testaments to the graduates, made such presentation at the morning service on Sunday, June 5th, when Testaments were presented to the two Ashland College Graduates and the six Ashland High School Graduates, who were members of the local congregation. Brother H. H. Rowsey brought a fitting message for the occasion, using for his subject, "True Wisdom."

Brother Rowsey will hold a service of consecration for children in connection with the Children's Day program which will be presented on Sunday morning, June 12th.

Our Ashland church is one of the five churches in the city where sessions of the city-wide Daily Vacation Bible School are being conducted from June 13th to 24th.

New Lebanon, Ohio. We note from Brother W. C. Berkshire's bulletins that the trustees of the New Lebanon Church are planning and supervising many needed improvements in the maintenance of the property and the necessary replacement of equipment.

Chorus books have been made usable for the Sunday School by the Christian CoEds and the Rainbow classes.

The Brethren Youth Offering was something over $100.00 at the first offering date. More is expected to be added.

The Vacation Bible School was conducted in New Lebanon from May 31st to June 10th.

Hagerstown, Maryland. We glean from Brother Ault's Hagerstown bulletin that the Hagerstown Church is planning the addition of an Educational Building. The Committee is already at work on the project. This is a fine project and will be sure to add to the possibilities of the work when completed.

The Hagerstown Sunday School picnic has been scheduled for July 26th. And the Vacation Bible School is being held from June 20 to July 1.

Stockton, Calif. The Bereans of the Stockton Church had a "Pie Social" on June 2nd, with each girl bringing the "pie." The proceeds were to be used to pay their Camp Insurance Policy.

The membership of the church had a "Clean-up Day" recently, at which time rakes, hoes and shovels were brought into play to make the church grounds take on a fine appearance.

The Sunday School picnic was set for June 11th.

When Dr. John R. Mott was preparing his book entitled "The Future Leadership of the Church," he took the trouble to study the biographies of one hundred and twenty-eight of the leading ministers who have lived during the past five hundred years. As a result of this investigation, it was found that one hundred and nineteen of the number came from homes where they had received religious training.

He also tells us that he sent special letters of inquiry to four hundred of the most influential ministers of the United States and Canada, asking the cause that led them into the ministry. As a result of these inquiries, he found that more than four-fifths of the men assigned the reason to Christian parents and religious training in the home.

What is true regarding the lives of ministers is equally true regarding men and women who take up other lines of Christian work. It is apparently from the homes that are pervaded by a religious atmosphere that the majority of Christian leaders are coming.

It is not difficult to imagine what will happen to the world, should such training be neglected in the homes of our people.

It is good to be a great man; it is great to be a good man.

It is not enough to keep the faith; we must keep the fellowship.

The energies of the soul take new life and increased power by spiritual exercise.

Mind your own business and soon you will have a business of your own to mind.

THIS PROBLEM OF PETTING

Scripture: I Corinthians 6:19, 20; 10:31

For The Leader

TONIGHT, we are face to face with one of the most serious, yet one of the easiest answered problems facing youth today. It is a perfectly natural process in life that when boys and girls reach a certain age that they should be attracted to each other. Given the proper teaching on self-respect and restrictions, these friendships can develop into the knitting of two souls into perfect love and happiness at the marriage altar. Or, developed on the sensuous level so common today, can plunge souls into everlasting Hell. Almost always, the difference hinges on our attitude to our problems of petting. By "petting," we mean any degree of physical contact between boys and girls, from holding hands, kissing, on to the godless, soul wrecking, ruining immoral acts. "Whether to pet, or not," "how far to go," etc., are problems which young people face today; which we face tonight.

DISCUSSION

1. CONSIDER WHAT WE ARE. We must first bear in mind that we are speaking of Christian young people. The two standards of conduct between non-Christians, who know not our God of love, and our conduct as Christians must be noted. We, who are Christians, according to the Scriptures, belong to Christ. We are His, bought with a price, and thus all that we do should be in keeping with His desires for us. We are also temples of the Holy Spirit, and thus what defiles the body defiles the temple of the Holy Spirit. Thus, in our solution to our problem, in addition to reckoning with ourselves, we must also reckon with Christ, and His will for our lives.

2. A MORAL OR A SPIRITUAL PROBLEM? Recently we read a magazine article which professed to deal with this subject of petting. It was a very damaging article to the morals of youth, because it gave full permission to "pet," leaving it to the judgment of the individuals to decide just how far one should go before calling a halt. The implication was that if the individuals were agreed that there was to be no limit, then no limit would there be. That, in a nationally read "respectable" (?) magazine. But don't let the devil fool you with stuff like that. God has said that "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." And immorality, "heavy petting," is a sin before God, punishable by eternal death.

3. THE MARKS OF SIN. A true Christian young person will keep himself or herself free from these things. Why? Simply because it is sin, it is done in secret. "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil." "Be sure your sin will find you out." Not too long ago, an observer at a fairly large High School commencement remarked how old looking, tired and drawn, and hardened the faces of the graduates looked. Yes, young people, seventeen and eighteen years of age, wise and old beyond their years. Behind the scenes of their years in High School were the all-night drinking and petting parties with no restraints. Unnatural affection, lust, fear, secrecy had taken their toll.

4. HOW MUCH SELF-RESPECT? Well, young people, your body is your own, with its purity, passions, talents and aims. What happens to it, and what you do with it is your own responsibility. You girls, as Christians, must maintain a high degree of self-decency. Even if your boy friend of the evening "has ideas," don't cheapen yourself by giving yourself over to his lustful selfishness. If he doesn't have enough respect for you to keep "hands-off," he isn't worth another thought. And you boys, if you happen to date a girl who is silly and weak-minded and with "ideas," have enough respect to be a gentleman, even if she isn't a lady. And on this point, it would be better if Christian young people would limit themselves to dating other Christian young people, keeping their dating on the high Christian standards. You'll be thankful for it in the long run.

5. A COW-LICK. Some one has said that few men want a woman for his wife who has been used as a "cow-lick" for every fellow who passed her way. We have heard of young women who could truthfully say that they had saved everything, including their kisses, for the one they hoped some day to marry. Even on "light" petting, we run the chance of gaining a loose reputation that will be hard to live down when you decide to settle down and marry. So live, that there will never be any reflection cast on your life and conduct, and then when your day comes, you'll be able to present yourself a clean, respectable mate, to the one you will plan to marry.

6. THE EASIEST ANSWER. We said at the beginning that this was one of the most serious, yet one of the easiest problems to answer. And it is, if you are willing to go along with it. The easiest answer is to say, "No," and "Hands off." In doing this, you will be avoiding any embarrassing situations with over zealous companions. And as we have already said, if your companion cannot respect your code of ethics, he or she isn't worth a second thought. We need young people today who have enough pride to be decent in their conduct with each other. God will richly bless you in the long run for this policy, and in following this, you will some day be thankful that you did. You may "play with fire" and not get burned too badly, but why risk the chance? You have a greater purpose in life, which purpose is pleasing God. So, as the final answer, ask yourself the question, "Is my conduct on dates pleasing to God? As He looks down on me on date night is he pleased with the thoughts, intentions, and acts of my heart and life?"

7. AVOIDING DIFFICULTIES. We mentioned also it would be better for Christians to seek friends among Christians. Pity the poor girl who dates in a crowd in which she is the only professed Christian. She is either going to sacrifice her Christian purity, or be a bitter disappointment to her "date." She is to blame for any consequences for dating in such a crowd. Again, as Christian young people, we get into difficulties if we aren't too careful about our own morals. As there are often rotten apples in a basket, we do admit that so called "Christian" youth are rotten at the heart, sometimes. Such young people had better check with their Bibles and see the penalty which rests upon the transgressor. Avoid difficulties with your choice of company, and the maintainance of that high standard of conduct which God has given you. You'll be happier for it later.

MAKING NATIONAL HOLIDAYS CHRISTIAN

Scripture: Psalms 33:1-12

For The Leader

AS THESE NOTES are being written, it is just the day after Memorial Day, which is of course a comparable national holiday as is the one we are now celebrating. What we saw on that day is fresh in our memory. And, in many ways, it doesn't add up. Hundreds were killed in traffic, accidental and drunken accidents. Suicides and crime added to the national tragedy in human life. There were scenes in which drunken drivers were weaving back and forth across the highway, endangering your life and mine. Dance halls, movies, taverns, all crowded with merrymakers. Lonely automobiles were parked in secluded spots along the highways and by-roads. Thus America celebrates in honor of those who gave their lives for our country. It will be the same, maybe worse, as we celebrate the event which gave America its great chance to live a life of personal liberty. What we can do to change the situation is well worth trying. It will take work and time, but it can be done.

DISCUSSION

1. LIBERTY IS A CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLE. Let the tall spire of the country church be the symbol of American liberty and independence. That which we call liberty had its birth in the bosom of Christianity, in its principle of love for God and our fellowmen. That which we call freedom has had God's blessings upon it through the years, because our people went to Church and thanked God for it. They endeavored to live Christian lives day by day. Thus democracy grew into big business, nation-wide—railroads, electric lights, power, and radio, automobiles and highways. People maintained law and order because it was the way they were taught. The Bible taught them that in our churches. It did not just happen. It came because we worshipped God.

2. THE CREST OF THE WAVE. Ever and ever upward America rose in the propagating of this Christian principle of freedom, love for God, and man. But then the seeds of sin and destruction came in. Men, riding the crest of liberty, turned to their own lusts and sins. We started taking the benefits of God's favor without going to His church to honor Him. Thus we lost that spiritual flavor of our democratic living. And today we are beginning to see the toppling of our democratic freedom. Only eight out of every one hundred Americans go to church on Sunday morning. Where are the rest? Sick in bed, or working. Maybe! But mostly, sleeping off Saturday night, playing golf, or going off on godless plans for the day. So, we are just riding the crest of the wave of God's favor, which is in danger of breaking, unless we change our national formula.

3. NO LIBERTY WITHOUT GOD'S FAVOR. We can only imagine the infinite patience of God as He looks down on the iniquities of America. Truly we are in a day of grace. It is our express opinion that we are seeing the punishment for our great sin in repealing the 18th amendment of our constitution some years ago. America in its great advancement under God in making America a safe place in which to live, put into her God-blessed constitution the 18th amendment which prohibited the use of alcoholic liquors for drinking purposes. At once we prospered. Savings increased, improvements came in added conveniences, and it was safe to be abroad. At once, too, the wet interests sought to destroy this amendment. At once Christian people went to sleep. So, for some 20 years we had prohibition. In the election of 1928, Hoover defeated wet Al Smith in the greatest landslide ever seen. It was a dry victory. But what happened? Four years later, an even greater landslide threw the wet interests into power in the White House. What a change in four short years. That was the worst blow our democracy ever received, for since, drinking and crime has ever been on the increase.

4. RECOVERY. Certainly the recovery of the nation is not in the making of new laws, subsidies, tax reductions, or increases, etc. The recovery of the nation is the return of the people to a conscious, realistic recognition of the changing favor and disfavor of God upon them for their acts. The Psalmist tells us to fear the Lord, that is to have reverence for His presence, power and laws. He says also that it is a blessed nation whose God is the Lord. So, recovery will come through a real, honest affirmation in word and practice of God as our God. There you have it, there is no other way.

5. MAKING OUR NATIONAL HOLIDAYS CHRISTIAN. No one is so foolish as one who believes that all of a sudden America will become 100% Christian. That will never occur. But, Church members, had they a mind to do so, could make our national holidays Christian! Far too often, though, when services have been planned for holidays, so few of the church people attended, that it discouraged pastors in their efforts. That failure must be borne in the right place. How wonderful, if on each national holiday we Americans would gather in the morning for an hour of worship and praise. It would definitely be a good starter for a right observance of the day. Our veterans' organizations have stolen the show from where it rightly belongs, and have now established programs on these days, which do not have much religious motive. So, it is up to us who are Christians to pray, live and worship on these days, that we might rightfully beseech God's continued favor upon us. We've got too good a proposition in America to lose it because there are those who seek to turn it into a "hell day." It is worth all of our efforts and prayers to make it a Christian national observance. What will you do to make it more Christian in your locality?

QUESTIONS

1. What do you think is the probability ratio in having our National Holidays as Christian days? Remember the opposition of isms, atheists, and others that have already reared their devilish heads, in answering this question.

2. What can we do in our own locality to help Christianize the day?

LIVING FIRE—HEB. 13:7

O for that flame of living fire,
Which shown so bright in saints of old;
Which bade their souls to Heav'n aspire—
Calm in distress, in danger bold.

Where is that Spirit, Lord, which dwelt
In Abraham's breast, and sealed him Thine?
Which made Paul's heart with sorrow melt,
And glow with energy divine?

Remember, Lord, the ancient days:
Renew Thy work; Thy grace restore;
And while to Thee our hearts we raise,
On us Thy Holy Spirit pour.

—J. Henry Showalter.

Vast numbers who profess Christ are lacking in holy passion, a tongue of fire, a holy zeal.

Making a life under the direction of the Life Giver is the essential thing; then making a living is a joy.

PRAYER FOR HOLY SPIRIT POWER

Scripture: II Kings 2:1-15

Hymns: "Fill Me Now"; "Old Time Power"; "Pentecostal Power"; etc.

Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

DO YOU BELIEVE in praying for the Holy Spirit? (Luke 11:13). No one can pray for the revival of the saints and the regeneration of the lost without asking for the fullness of God's power upon believers to the winning of souls and the building up of the saved. We are to pray for revival (2 Chron. 7:14; Hab. 3:2; Psa. 85:6). The only way God can answer these prayers is to fill His people with the Holy Spirit for effective witnessing.

Jesus commanded His disciples to pray for the Holy Spirit's fullness (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:4, 5), and they did (Acts 1:14). The principal thing in the mind of Christ was that His followers have the power for witnessing for Him in carrying the gospel to sinners. Nothing is said in Scripture about a Jewish Feast day called Pentecost being vital to this. The disciples were to tarry, not for Pentecost, but for power. However, it was fitting that they were empowered upon that day.

Bible examples show that people of all ages have been filled with God's Spirit if they honestly prevailed in prayer for it. Luke 1:15-17 teaches that Elijah was filled with the Spirit in the New Testament way. Our Scripture lesson denotes that Elisha was filled as was Elijah. The power at Pentecost came in answer to prayer (Acts 1:14). Compare Acts 2:4 with Acts 4:31 and see that the disciples were "filled" again AFTER Pentecost. In Acts 4:29, 30 they prayed for the same thing that they had prayed for BEFORE Pentecost.

Learn how the converted Saul was filled with the Holy Ghost (Acts 9:11, 17). He had previously been converted (Acts 9:5, 6; 1 Cor. 15:8). Paul and Barnabas "ministered to the Lord, and fasted" as did the eleven at Jerusalem before carrying out the great commission (Acts 13:1-4). On either side of Pentecost God's servants sought the fullness of His power. In the case of Cornelius the fullness of the Spirit came immediately upon his conversion (Acts 10:44-48). This was unusual, but not without much prayer and fasting (Acts 10:2, 30, 31).

THE SOUL WINNER'S PRAYER

By Rev. Eugene M. Harrison

Oh, give me, Lord, Thy love for souls,
For lost and wand'ring sheep,
That I may see the multitudes
And weep as Thou didst weep.

Help me to see the tragic plight
Of souls far off in sin;
Help me to love, to pray, and go
To bring the wand'ring in.

From off the altar of Thy heart
Take Thou some flaming coals,
Then touch my life and give me, Lord,
A heart that's hot for souls.

O Fire of Love, O Flame Divine,
Make Thy abode in me;
Burn in my heart, burn evermore,
Till I burn out for Thee.

Prayers for soul-winning power

Seed Thought Provokers:

FOR FULLNESS of the Holy Spirit one must have a sincere, deep-seated desire, whole-hearted obedience to Christ's soul-winning command (Acts 5:32), and prevailing importunate prayer (Luke 11:8, 13). God will pour out His Holy Spirit on those who are really thirsty (Isa. 44:3). This promise is not for the enjoyment of the saints, but to make the saints as fountains of life to the unsaved (John 7:37, 38, 39). When the fullness comes upon us the blessings will also come upon our offspring (Josh. 24:15). The outpouring of God's Spirit on Christians always results in salvation upon sinners (Joel 2:32; Acts 2:21).

There must be a "thirst" or desire back of all our prayers (Matt. 5:6; Mark 11:24; Jer. 29:12, 13). We must realize how barren and parched are our cold, dry, and hardened hearts. Then we must desire above all other things God's power to enable us to win souls (Acts 1:14; Luke 11:8; 2 Chron. 7:14). If one has no deep burden for soul-winning, he does not have the fullness of the Spirit. A thirst for the Spirit is not a desire for sanctification, speaking in tongues, ecstatic joy, but to be empowered for witnessing (Acts 1:8). Our motives for Holy Spirit power should be Biblical. The promise of the soul-winning power of the Holy Spirit was given in the great commission (Luke 24:46-49). It is POWER to WITNESS (Acts 1:8). "The primary purpose of the Baptism with the Holy Spirit is to equip us and fit us for service." Thus Bezaleel and his helpers on the tabernacle and its furniture were filled with the Spirit of God (Ex. 35:30, 31). John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Ghost to turn Israel to God (Luke 1:13-16). Elizabeth, filled with the Holy Ghost, witnessed for Christ (Luke 1:41-45). Jesus, filled with the Spirit, began His ministry (Luke 3:21, 22; 4:18). The people at Pentecost filled with the Spirit, witnessed and won souls (Acts 2:4, 41). They were empowered after Pentecost for witnessing (Acts 4:8, 31; 6:5-8; 7:55; 9:17-20; 13:2-5, 9-12; 11:24).

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

by The Editor

(PLEASE NOTE: Because of the fact that it will not be too long until one of the two issues of the year that are left out annually will be upon us, namely, the last week in August, we are seeking to get an extra Christian Endeavor, Prayer Meeting and Sunday School Comment material in your hands, in order that you may not have one coming to you late. Therefore this week we are giving space for these three departments for the extra study. This notice, therefore, appears with each of these departments.—Editor)

Lesson for June 26, 1949

JESUS' CONTINUING MINISTRY

Lesson: Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 1:1-14

SOMEONE has described our Lord Jesus Christ as "The always-available Christ." It would seem to be a very fair appraisal of the above topic, "Jesus' Continuing Ministry."

All through the lessons of the past half year we have been studying the coming of the God-man into the world, His activities, His teachings, and His ultimate sacrifice of Himself on the cross for the sins of mankind, arriving, finally, at the crowning glory of the study—His resurrection from among the dead.

All of this would be a useless waste of time if we were to stop there. Its value lies in the "continuing ministry" of our Lord. We find that the "continuing" of that which He began has its impulse in the first verses of our printed text. With "all power" now delivered unto Him, He sends forth His disciples to "teach all nations" and to "baptize them" according to His command and manner—(of course this only to happen when they had accepted Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior)—and, by the plan which He had imparted to them, "continue" to teach them to "observe all things" which He had "commanded them." The "Go ye" implies the spread of the Gospel. Therefore the ministry of Christ must be a continuing one, for He says, "And lo, I am with you ALWAYS, even unto the end of the age."

This ministry of Jesus, shown forth in His acts, His teachings and His commands, can only be a "continuing ministry" here on the earth insofar as His followers make it so. The old story, so often repeated, concerning the talk

Jesus is supposed to have had with the Angel Gabriel following His ascension, so well illustrates the point that we chance repeating it here. As they walked about together, Gabriel asks Jesus what He has been doing. Jesus answers that He has been on earth to give His life as a ransom for the sins of men and that He has left His disciples behind to tell others of this sacrifice. This causes Gabriel to pause and ponder. Finally he says, "But suppose they forget to tell others?" To which Jesus replies, "I have no other plans. I am depending on them."

But regardless of whether His earthly followers are faithful to the trust which He left with them, His continuing ministry abides. He is continually at God's right hand where "He maketh intercession for us." He is our Advocate; He pleads our cause; He still sorrows over the sins of mankind; He is still "crucified afresh" or "anew" at the hands of sinful men when they continually reject Him and His pleadings. He stands ready continually to greet a returned erring child; He listens for our prayers—Yes, we mean that He hears every one of them. That is why He sent the Holy Spirit to take His place. The Spirit takes even the unheard cryings of an anguished heart, that cries out in "words that cannot be uttered," and translates them into the language of God, through Christ, and He understands.

Of course the ministry of Jesus is a "continuing ministry." It is as eternal as He is eternal and it can only cease when it has all been fulfilled.

Lesson for July 3, 1949

THE SONGBOOK OF THE HEBREWS

Lesson: Psalms 1 and 67

WE COME TO an entirely different type of study in this new quarter. The lessons are taken almost entirely from the Psalms, "The Songbook of the Hebrews." Only a few of the choice psalms are presented, but they are selected with the thought of their impact on the lives, not only of the ancient Hebrews, but also as they touch the lives of all of us today.

Psalms 1 begins with the words, "Blessed is the man that . . ." and then proceeds to tell the types of man that are blessed—those who do not do the wrong thing either while walking, standing or sitting, about every posture and attitude of the man who is awake—who has his eyes open.

It brings up the question so often repeated, "What difference does it make to anyone but myself what I do?" And this question brings us squarely up to the results of "unconscious influence." The influence each of us has over some one other than ourselves is unlimited in its scope. We never know when some one is using us as an example, a mirror, we might say—seeking to pattern their lives after ours in every way. That is why it is written that we are "living epistles, known and read of all men," and that "no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself."

It does matter what we do; where we go; how we speak. It makes the difference between a negative and a positive Christianity. It is well summed up in the closing verses of the first Psalm, "the righteous . . . like a tree planted by rivers of water," bearing fruit and prospering.

While the ungodly are like worthless "chaff, which the wind drives away"—nothing left, no fruit, not even the chaff to show what might have been.

The godly man finds his delight in the law of God. Indeed he meditates on it—that is, he learns to "know" it by close association with it. Not by disobedience to it, but by learning (that is—studying) what is right and what is wrong.

We often ask, "Why are there so many 'Thou shalt not's' in the propounding of God's law?" Simply because God knows that He must warn man against doing those things, which he, as a free agent to choose, finds so easy to do. If we go deep enough into the law books of the Bible we will find that God says, "Thou shalt" about as many times as He says "Thou shalt not."

We learn elsewhere that "in keeping the laws of God, there is great reward." But the righteous man finds his delight, not so much in the rewards to come, but in a good life lived and a trouble-free conscience. Rewards for such a life are sure to come, but they should be a secondary matter in our thinking.

Such a life makes it possible to do as is admonished in the other psalm of our lesson text. Especially are the words of verse five applicable—"Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee."

It is because the psalms expressed the innermost feelings of the people, that they were sung with such great fervor. The same attitudes of worship should be ours as were theirs in their day.

Laid to Rest

RICHEY. Emma Richey, wife of Aaron Richey, who resided at Rossville, Indiana, for the past several years, departed this life on March 31, 1949. Her life had come to the age of the early eighties. During her illness, which she endured for a few weeks, she realized her relationship anew with her Lord by reconsecrating the life entrusted to her.

Her passing at the home in Rossville marked the end of her useful life to the Flora Brethren Church of which she was a charter member. Services were conducted by the undersigned, her pastor, at the Methodist Church in Rossville, where she had attended for some time with her husband, who was a member there. Burial was made at Rossville.

News From Our Churches

CALVARY, NEW JERSEY

It has been several months since the readers of the Evangelist have heard from us, hence this report.

When we last wrote we had been without a pastor for seven months. The Lord heard and answered our prayers by sending us Rev. J. J. Margush to shepherd us. He came about the first of January, 1949. He is a live wire for the Lord and has a passion for lost souls.

Six persons have come forward in our Sunday services and given their hearts to the Lord. They have been baptized and have been received into the church by the laying on of hands and received into fellowship. Others are becoming interested. Pray that they will surrender completely to the Lord.

Interest is being shown in all the auxiliaries of our Church: the Sunday School, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Christian Endeavor and especially in our mid-week prayer meetings, when practically everyone present takes part in prayer and testimony. We are studying the Book of Romans in connection with our prayer services. Our pastor is the teacher. All seem to be enjoying this study very much.

Our last Communion service which was held on May 22nd, was well attended in spite of a very hard rain.

Brethren, pray for us that we may continue to grow, not only in numbers, but spiritually and that both pastor and people may work together for the salvation of many precious souls.

In His service,
Miss V. E. Hackett, Secretary.

Wedding Announcement

HAYES-LANDIS. On Sunday, May 22nd, Miss Margaret Landis of Flora, Indiana, became Mrs. Charles Gordon Hayes. The service was read by the undersigned, pastor of the Flora First Brethren Church, at the church.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Indiana University, the bride for one year a teacher of Commerce, and the groom an engineering graduate.

After a tour through Louisiana and to parts of Florida, they plan to make their home in Terra Haute, Indiana, where the groom will share in the insurance firm of his father.

May the blessings of the Master abide with these as they travel life's path together.

J. Edgar Berkshire.

WISE-ALLBAUGH. On Saturday evening, December 18, 1948, at the home of the bride, Carmen Allbaugh, the undersigned read the matrimonial service uniting her in holy union with Ralph Wise.

The bride has been for years a faithful worker in the Flora Brethren Church, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allbaugh.

This new bride and groom have made their home on a farm a short distance northeast of Lafayette, Indiana. We wish for them God's richest rewards as their journey through life progresses.

The Brethren Evangelist

Fellowship With God

Text: 1 John 1:7; 2:6.

There is one thing that evidently means more to God than it does to Christians. It is fellowship with Him and His Son, Jesus Christ.

We go to church to fellowship in worship. We travel great distances to fellowship with relatives and friends. We attend special meetings, conferences, prayer groups, etc., that by worshipping together we may fellowship with our God. Many times we leave such gatherings in a mountain-top experience, wondering if it is possible to keep that jubilant spirit as we go to our next task. Need we fear? Our best days should be before us. The all-sufficient reason is that Jesus is the same, yesterday, today, and forever.

Those who live and have that "Power of the Spirit" are the ones who spend adequate time alone with God. The spiritual tide of the church would be felt around the world, with greater effectiveness, if we, His people, would spend time with the Bible in the presence of the living God day by day. This habit is necessary. Otherwise, the voice of God will not remain vivid, distinct, compelling and appealing. The habit is necessary if our souls would be energized to step between knowing duty and doing duty.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." At least another reason arises for 'fellowship with God.' That is, the preservation of our power of vision.

"If chosen men had never been alone—

*In deep mid-silence, open-door'd to God,
No greater had been dreamed or done."*

Alone with God, his words will find you and move you."

Again, we must have the habit of communion with Him, if we are to have communicative enthusiasm, a communicative passion of helpfulness. A most pathetic sight in foreign fields or among churches is a man active in Christian work but handing out the Bread of Life with emaciated fingers, busy trying to remind people of the love of God, and yet he himself is starving. "Take Time to be Holy."

It takes time for God to draw near and time for us to know that He is there. Remember the practice of our Lord; "rising a great while before day," to find the solitary place to pray, and again, "He went as His custom was to the Mount of Olives."

If our Lord and Master found it necessary to be unhurriedly alone with the Father, how much more is it our need! Can we afford to risk doing without this expanding practice? God forbid.

The

Field Secretary

Travels

The California trip is interesting history. We were well received in the conference and in the churches. The conference was not largely attended except for certain sessions. It was Holy Week and also one of the busiest times of the year for the rural people. It was held in the Manteca Church, where brother Platt has been the pastor for many years. Manteca is a beautiful, rapidly growing town. The church folk did a splendid job of entertaining, providing homes, meals, and even sharing heavily in the program.

The conference carried over Easter Sunday but as per arrangement, I spoke in Stockton at the park for a Union Sunrise Service, then at the church for the morning worship hour. We were rushed back to Manteca for the conference dinner, afternoon and evening services. It was a great joy to meet and fellowship with Brother Virgil Ingraham and Roger Darling, both ministers in our church, as well as all the other Brethren.

The following week, services were conducted in Lathrop and Stockton. Brother Charles Johnson and wife chauffeured us to Lathrop both nights, where we were met by very appreciative audiences. This gave a good opportunity to meet the people and to preach the Word for them. This church is being served by Brother Anderson who drove thirty miles each way both nights to be in the services. The latter part of the week was spent in Stockton, a thriving, growing city of over 125,000. We were taken over the city to view the large building projects.

I was pleased also with the mission group in this city. A number of adults have been added to the membership in recent months. The church is making a fine growth, in fact they are needing more room; as soon as it can be provided. A very loyal group of young people and children are found in this church. The Johnsons shepherd the group and have won a large place in the hearts of the people. Their lovely bungalow was our home for the entire week.

Among the several nice trips was the one to Santa Cruz on the coast, the last Saturday when the Johnsons and Riddles were entertained by Brother Kenneth Ronk. The day included a visit to Redwood Park to see the trees. This trip will not be forgotten.

The churches and the conference are to be commended for assuming the traveling expenses for the secretary.

After the strenuous two weeks, a short vacation was declared and enjoyed in Los Angeles. From the Clark Hotel, we journeyed over one day to Pasadena, where a relative was located; one day to Hollywood, where we enjoyed two broadcasts and luncheon at the late Tom Breneman's restaurant; and part of a day in Long Beach, where we talked with former Ashland folks. The last night we were entertained by a young couple from Ashland, Mr. and Mrs. Foster James.

Enroute home we stopped at Mulvane, Kansas, with Brother Thomas and his family and the church for the morning, and it was morning, for we arrived at 2:45 A. M. In the afternoon we were taken to Fort Scott by the Colemans. It proved to be 174 miles rather than 100, as was our impression. Both churches had good audiences and a fine spirit in the meetings. While here, we assisted the Pastor in the anointing service for Sister L. G. Wood.

To Cheyenne, Wyoming, California, and Kansas! Brethren, we praise you and thank you again for your courtesies, kindness and gifts.

My wife shares with me in this impression. After a month away it was good to be home again, in spite of a young mountain of work waiting to greet us. E. M. R.

GOOD NEWS

The new pastor at Sergeantsville and Calvary charge in New Jersey for the past few months is having an excellent response. This quotation accompanied his bulletin recently, "Dear Brother Riddle, Pray that God will open the way for us to acquire a tent to use in Evangelistic work here in New Jersey. There is a great need here and the possibility of starting another Church. Will write a letter soon, and let you know more about it. God has given us eight new converts and we expect to see many more come to Him.

Trusting this note finds you being richly blessed is my heartfelt prayers.

Announcement of the Missionary Board Secretaryship

by J. Garber Drushal

The Missionary Board of the Brethren Church is pleased to announce that effective June 1, 1949, Rev. E. M. Riddle assumed his duties as full-time Secretary of the Board.

The "new" secretary needs no introduction to the brotherhood for he has served in several long pastorates, and has served more recently in the dual capacity as field representative for Ashland College and Secretary of the Board. The Board offices will continue at 524 College Avenue, Ashland, Ohio, and the Riddles will continue to make their home in Ashland.

Many of you will need no reminder to recall that for a good number of years the Brethren Church was served by two mission secretaries, one for the home field work and another for the foreign work. Later these posts were combined, and still later, in a time of emergency, the College authorities graciously consented to allow Rev. Riddle, who had been employed by them, to devote half of his time to the home and foreign missionary interests of the church. The combined post worked as well as could be expected, and met the emergency needs.

In recent months, however, the demands of both tasks and both interests have grown to the place where one man could do little more than keep up with detail work. Speaking more specifically of the Board interests, foreign missions have expanded with the missionaries to Nigeria and South America. Home mission work has come to demand more attention to churches, building programs in Kentucky and elsewhere, and other forward-looking ventures. Viewing the situation, the Board at its August, 1948 session instructed the President to make preliminary negotiations with the College for the separation of the two half-time tasks. At the March, 1949 meeting the Board called Rev. Riddle to the post, and he subsequently accepted.

E. M. Riddle
Cut courtesy Muncie Church

The church is fortunate in having a minister of Rev. Riddle's wide experience and devotion to the missionary cause as the Secretary. His excellent work during the past few years has familiarized him with the tasks of the Board, and the problems of the church. He covets your prayers for God's strength and guidance as he serves the church.

The return to a full-time secretary marks another step forward in the work of the denomination. It means that the Missionary Board will be able to give better service to those who labor with it. It means that the Board will be able to provide a more effective leadership in the truly missionary activities of the church. Could it be that in the providence of God it is but another symbol of the ever-widening influence of the Brethren Church in Christendom?

When you have suggestions or questions, be sure to forward them to some member of the Board. The entire membership of the Board anxiously covets your continuing prayers for guidance, and particularly for your earnest devotion to God in these forward-moving ventures.

Fellowship In The Family

by Everett Miller

It has been truthfully said that three of the greatest institutions in America today is the home, the school and the church. It is very difficult to place more importance upon one than the other, since any one of the three depends so much upon the other two, but we all fully realize that it is from the home and the family circle that our first association and our first joint interest in a common cause is formed. It is here that we find all of the most simple forms of government including diplomacy, obedience, solving of major and minor problems, etc.

As we think of the American family of today we are forced to think of many units all uniting to form a great nation. I wonder how many of us are contributing to the nation in which we live as a unit or a family that will help make this country a better Christian nation. Are we as heads of these families taking the interest in our church activities that we should? I wonder if we fully realize that the fellowship formed within the first years of our family life makes impressions upon us that are indelibly written into our very life and serve to guide us through the remaining years of our service. In other words may I say that the family is just a small unit which helps to make up this great government. Christian people firmly believe that if it were not for the standards set up by our Christian American families that the very existence of this nation could not be long.

Many organizations are being formed today, some of which place much emphasis upon the spiritual side of life and others upon the commercial and social side. No doubt that many organizations are doing a great service to humanity, but are we oftime forming so many new groups that our Christian fellowship and even our family fellowship is crowded out?

When we speak of fellowship within the family we realize that it is not an easy thing to maintain and without the love of Christ within our very hearts all would come to naught. When we deal with mankind without Christ we are dealing with those who do not understand the love of a Saviour for a lost world and one who suffered and died upon the cross that we might have eternal life. It is here that true spiritual fellowship within the family can add the very part to the individual that will help to solve all major problems.

The cure for the ills of a community lies greatly within the family circle. The writer happens to live within a community where there are six active churches all made up of the finest families that America can produce. Each church has an interest in the other and each family has an interest in the other, but first of all the individual family unit must be right within itself, if the true Christian standards are maintained. The result of such standards are never in doubt. Our community has no liquor stores. The liquor interests are aware of the standards of the community and know that business would be very unprofitable in the New Paris vicinity. We all realize that the better we can make the families the better our churches, schools and community will be. A community is never in doubt when its standards are Christian.

You will please excuse me for again mentioning liquor but when liquor interests promote the idea that your community and your family are helped from the tax off of liquor just please stop and think of the disgrace and ruin that comes to many a family circle and community from the sale of the poisonous fluid. Again I must say that true fellowship within the family must come from the Christian spirit of that family. Even within the ranks of that Christian family today the evil one is watching for a place to make inroads. It is no an easy thing to maintain true fellowship and many times the family cords are strained but with the Christian who can solve these difficulties through prayer there is a way out and the family is held together.

Again I must say that it will be a sad day for America when the Christian fellowship of the home is no longer maintained. Let us pray for more Christian homes!

Fear is man's greatest enemy. Believing his enemies be outside of himself, man builds stronger fortresses, creates larger armies, makes bigger bombs, and now has the atomic bomb with which he would disintegrate into atoms these enemies outside of himself. Let man release the atomic bomb of Divine Love (not sentimental, emotional, personal love) within himself and disintegrate into atoms the last vestige of his fears and no enemy will remain. A long way off perhaps. Impossible? NO.—New Outlook.

Fellowship of Tithers

D. C. White

There are many opportunities in the church for fellowship. Fellowship of prayer, Fellowship of worship, Fellowship of song and many others but we can find one of the most blessed fellowships in tithing.

Obedience to and faithfulness in the tithes makes it possible for us to claim God's promise as recorded in Malachi 3:10. "Bring ye all the tithe into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house (not want) and prove me now herewith (who is speaking? the Lord of hosts) if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it." If no more were said than what God has spoken we would be able to see the blessed fellowship of tithers.

Paul, the great Christian Apostle, gives us three outstanding rules for giving the tithe. Anyone following them will know without a doubt the principles that govern our giving.

FIRST—He calls attention to some words which Jesus spoke, Acts 20:35, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." These words reflect the true character, teaching and purpose of Christ.

What would happen in our churches if the principle were taught by Jesus would register in our conscience when appeals came for help for those in need?

When we have an appeal for the lepers, may we take a look into the mirror at our faces shining with health, then we will realize how much more blessed it is to give to help the leper than it is to be one.

There is the appeal for the local church budget, National and Home Missions. Think of these in foreign lands without hope, without faith and without God. Think of some little home mission church that must have your help if the gospel is to be preached in that community. Ask yourself if it is not more blessed to give generously to missions so that there may be a church serving the needs of the community.

SECOND—Paul appeals to us in the example of Jesus in these words, "Though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that you through His poverty might become rich."

Upon the word MIGHT rests the amount of our riches towards God. Jesus had no money to give, but he gave that which cost Him more, He gave Himself, a living sacrifice for your salvation and mine. He came to give life that we might have it more abundantly.

We, as Christians, lose the fellowship of tithers because we give only the crumbs from our over-loaded tables. The example of Christ demands the giving of self. You will remember that the Corinthian Christians "first gave their own selves to the Lord." That was their supreme sacrifice, after that the giving of the tithe was easy.

It would seem that the widow who put her mite into the Lord's treasury had already given herself to the Lord before she gave all that she had.

Mary had given herself to the Lord before she broke the alabaster box of ointment and poured it on Jesus and wiped it with the hair of her head. Listen to the praise Jesus bestowed on her sacrificial giving, "Wherever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of as a memorial to her." Yes, the praise of our Lord will be bestowed upon all who follow in His steps of sacrificial giving.

THIRD—Paul is appealing to our conscience and prosperity in I Cor. 16:2 when he said, "Upon the first day of the week let everyone of you, (not just a few in the church, but everyone of you) lay by in store as God hath prospered him." We understand II Cor. 9:6-15 to mean that sowing and reaping are proportionate. He who sows sparingly shall reap sparingly, only bountiful sowing will reward us with a bountiful harvest. This reveals to us that Christian giving is an investment. Money we lend to the Lord for the advancement of his work and kingdom produce a harvest of joyful living and produces a Christian character. Our giving is an index of our affection for him and the needy, all the Bible gives witness to the fact that "the Lord loves a cheerful giver."

If we really want to know the fellowship of tithers we will find the means, for in the words of II Cor. 9:8-11 we read, God is able to make all grace abound unto you that ye, having always sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work and multiply your seed for sowing and increase the fruits. Of your righteousness, ye being enriched in everything unto all liberality, which worketh through us thanksgiving to God."

Luke 6:38, "Give and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give unto your bosom, for with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again." This portion of scripture reads somewhat like the phrase in the Lord's Prayer—"Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." We have a warning in Deut. 16:17 which reads, "They shall not appear before the Lord empty, every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee." Thus the fellowship of tithers is bound up with the blessings of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee. God gives the soil—Ps. 24:1, God gives the seed—Gen. 1:11, God gives the rain—Job 5:10, God gives you life—Acts 22:28, God gives your health—Jeremiah 30:17. Then let us ask ourselves the question which is asked in Luke 17:5, "How much owest thou unto my Lord?"

We gather from the third chapter of Malachi that God

Strength Which Comes from a Corporate Worship in the Church

by William S. Crick

Text: "I was glad when they said unto me: 'Let us go unto the House of the Lord!'" Ps. 122:1.

In this subject, we recognize that there is strength which comes through private worship, but we contend that participating in corporate worship tends to augment that strength. We are not primarily considering the proper observance of The Lord's Day. But, we are assured that attendance upon corporate worship is a fitting way to remember "the day which the Lord hath made," and "to rejoice in it and be glad." (Ps. 178:24)

Also, we are aware of the peril invited when we seek to materialize the experience of worship by a what-do-I-get-out-of-it inquiry. To seek to make worship pay, is to rob it of its very meaning. The genius of worship is not in getting, but in giving: "What may I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?" (Psa. 116:12) Let us consider four possible sources of strength from worshipping together.

I. Corporate Worship Follows Jesus' Example.

Jesus sought the synagogue on the Sabbath Day—to worship—"as His custom was." As Brethren, we place great stress upon following Jesus' example in our observance of The Memorial Supper, including both footwashing and a supper with the Loaf and the Cup. If we are blessed because we do these things, we may also receive added strength by sharing it in worship.

II. Greater Enthusiasm

Who has not heard a discouraged church worker seek to soften the hurt due to the small attendance, by quoting: "Where two or three are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst." (Matt. 18:20) Let us not conclude that Jesus sought to condone failure on the part of the Church personnel to make her services helpful and attractive. Did He not mean that since He would be "in the midst" of two or three, how much more will His Presence be felt when there are two or three dozen or a hundred gathered together!

III. Discipline Through Fellowship

Possibly in every local church's membership, there are those members, who are soloing so far as worship and service are concerned. They alibi, it may be discovered, that there are too many insincere folk who go to Church and work just to make a show. And, all too frequently, we fear, some remain aloof because they are above certain ones who do worship and serve!

Corporate worship can strengthen "the Tie that binds," by helping to remove many man-made barriers which have fenced in—and out—God's people. We are to "Endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:3) We are to "Forsake not the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is." (Heb. 10:25) "For, He is our peace, Who hath made both (Jew and Gentile) one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition . . . that He might reconcile both unto God in one body by the Cross (His sacrifice, Death!)" (Eph. 2:14-16) Some of the partitions that are leveled by the Cross are given in Col. 3:11: " . . . there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all and in all."

When the believer can worship congenially with folk of other races, other nationalities, other creeds, he receives strength which such fellowship induces. Yes, he has the proof that he "has passed from death unto life because he loves the brethren!" (1 John 3:14) I like to picture all of God's people being drawn nearer together when they draw to Him in worship.

IV. Many Comrades

Corporate worship generates strength in the worshipper by reassuring him that he is a member of a great host of Christ's followers, and not the only one who is left! The zealous prophet Elijah concluded he was the only living subject of the true God, Jehovah. He was rebuked for his pessimism when the Lord assured him: "Yet I have left Me seven thousand in Israel all the knees of which have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." (1 Kings 19:18) Dare we conclude that Elijah's leadership might have been more effective in the curbing of idol worship in Israel had he stayed on the job and marshalled the thousands of Jehovah's people, instead of fleeing to Mt. Horeb. Many are the Mt. Carmel victories for the Lord which are eventually dissipated because leaders and followers fail to continue steadfastly in prayer. Worshipping together serves to keep Christ's followers united in spirit, purpose and method. In union there is strength.

Strength may come to the individual through corporate worship since he is following his Lord's example. A great spiritual momentum is possible when greater numbers unite in worship as well as in warfare. In worshipping amicably with others, one may become more tolerant, more magnanimous. Then he experiences added strength as the result of more meaningful fellowship. Corporate worship may forestall pessimism, and reassure the individual worshipper that he is part of a devout, unselfish, victorious company.

"We are not divided
All one body, we;
One in hope and doctrine—
One in charity!"

FELLOWSHIP IN THE CHURCH

by John T. Byler

Our State Conference in Ohio, in 1948, had as its theme: "Building the Church." We do a lot of talking about the church; we frequently hear sermons about the church; we all assume that it is a part of our life's program; we are satisfied that it is good and that our society and our way of life needs the church; and we agree that the best people in our society and in every community are those who are regular church-going people.

And yet, all too often we don't really have in our understanding, sufficient knowledge about what the church means to us as individuals that we would be able to talk intelligibly to someone else about what the church means to us as individuals. We answer rather glibly that the Church is the Body of Christ. And we are correct in uttering this—for it is a profound truth. We are, as Christians, members of the Body of Christ. But practically speaking, so that a non-Christian may understand you, what does it mean to you to be a member of the church? In other words, what does the church mean to you?

Briefly, through an outline which is not original with me, and to whose authorship I am unable to give proper credit, I should like to suggest what I feel the church should mean to every true Christian.

I. THE CHURCH IS MY RELIGIOUS HOME.

As I enter the church I am immediately connected with "the household of faith"—a body of believers who think and believe and trust and live much as I do. My relationship with these, ties me into the closest possible fellowship with those who are the "elect of God"—those who have been chosen by God as His own. Some will answer, "But I can be a Christian without having this fellowship with others. I can enjoy my Christian life at home, by my radio, with my family, out in the open spaces of nature." But in ninety-nine cases out of one-hundred, when man puts forth this argument, he can be silenced by simply asking him, "Do you?"

Man is a social being, and without the rounding out influence of the church in his life, he is unbalanced. God saw the need of fellowship in the life of man, and for that reason arranged that he should be born into a family where love, and friendship, and sympathy, and understanding might be found. And again, God saw the need for a continued fellowship in a much greater fashion, so arranged for this fellowship in the church. And it is the home and the church which form the basis, the poles upon which all of life must turn if life is to be successfully lived.

Just recently I received a card from a person with a very brief message. The gist of the message was: "I am homesick." We frequently find those who think that it would be wonderful to live life alone—apart from others—to do just as they pleased. But it is surprising to see how quickly these individuals are ready to return to home and normal life. So I repeat, the home makes up the firm base upon which successful life must center. And the corresponding base which makes the successful life complete is the Church of Jesus Christ. These bases tie us into the human family and into the family of God—the places where God planned that man should have fellowship. And so I find first of all, in my church, a religious home where my fellowship is complete in Christ.

II. THE CHURCH IS A CONSTANT WITNESS TO ME OF THAT WHICH IS IMPORTANT IN LIFE.

First of all, because of its scope and its purpose, I realize that the church was made for me—not I for the church. As an individual seeking God, it brings me into the priceless possession of the things that God has reserved for me in his Spiritual Kingdom. It constantly reminds me of His living Presence. The sanctuary is something that stands out as a particular meeting place between God and me. In that place, I worship Him through song and praise and prayer, and in turn I receive strength for my work, courage for the hard things of life, comfort for my sorrows, light for the dark places in my pathway, hope for days that are discouraging, and victory over temptations and trials which might otherwise cause me to fail.

If I were to be deprived of the church, my spiritual being would suffer greatly. I need the help and the fellowship of the church far more than the church needs what little I am able to offer it.

III. THE CHURCH IS A SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS TRAINING.

Just as men would be poorly prepared to face the competition of life today without any education, so man is not only unfit but unable to cope with life's problems in the spiritual realm without the training that is offered by the church. Through the instruction of the pulpit (as poor as that sometimes might be), through the Sunday School, through the Prayer Meeting and Bible Study periods, as well as through all of the other educative agencies of the church, I receive illumination and help and guidance and lifting up. The church offers me practical guidance in matters of conscience, and offers me a shining light in the dark pathways of doubt.

NOTE BURNING AT CANTON

Two years ago Canton, Ohio Brethren purchased a church, rather than build with high labor and materials. It is a splendid brick church with beautiful baptistry, pipe organ, steam heat, colored windows, etc., and is under the pastoral leadership of E. J. Beekley and competent officials. They have made a number of changes in the building and equipment besides redecorating and converting the boiler to a gas system.

During this period they also reduced their indebtedness month after month until last Sunday, May 26th, when the note burning service was conducted. The Missionary Secretary was present and spoke on the subject "What Mean You by These Stones?" There was a very good audience, a well arranged worship service, and much happiness. This church is bearing a good testimony in the city of Canton.

Expectancy of Fellowship

Message from a radio series

by Chester F. Zimmerman

"And walk in love, as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us, a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God." Eph. 5:2

When the small boy hailed his little playmate next door, and caught up his cap to run out for the usual morning together, an older member of the family said, teasingly: "What! Going to play with him again? I thought you quarreled only last evening and were never to have anything more to do with each other. Funny memory you have!" Jimmy looked a little abashed, dug the toe of his shoe into the carpet, and then flashed a satisfied smile as he hurried away saying, "Ho! Roland and me's good forgetters." All too vivid is my own remembrance of fighting with the boy across the street on the way home from school at noon and then walking back to school arm in arm. There certainly is an advantage in being a good forgetter. Some adults could learn a great deal from children in this respect if they only would think.

We are to be imitators of God. And I am most certain that God does forget about the indiscretions, the faults, the sins and the trespasses of the Christian. These are not reckoned against us. If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. There are some, I believe, who are not willing to be a follower of Christ in this respect. It is indeed a pity for these individuals in their unforgiving spirit are allowing their souls to shrivel.

A Buddhist monk in Ceylon, who was acquainted with both Christianity and Buddhism, was once asked what he thought was the great difference between the two. He replied, "There is much that is good in each of them, and probably in all religions. But what seems to me to be the greatest difference is that you Christians know what is right and have power to do it, while we Buddhists know what is right but have not any such power." Because of this, in this fifth chapter of Ephesians, Paul writes of his expectancy of fellowship for the Christian. We are to walk in love. Since we are walking in love "immorality and impurity or covetousness must not even be named among you, as is fitting among saints" says Paul (vs. 3).

Where there is fellowship between Christians then there is fellowship with the father and the individual walks in love. I used to believe that a few men had a monopoly on the Holy Spirit. Now I know that the Holy Spirit has a monopoly on a few men. He wishes to work through you, but it can only be done when you walk in love. This is one of the greatest measures of success.

Are you one of those who believe so exclusively in the efficiency of Church organizations? It was just such a blind belief that caused some cynic to remark, "If fire does not fall from heaven, some one is ready with a match." How convenient it would be if we could have revivals started that way. But it doesn't work that way. Spiritual conflagrations that warm the heart are not started with a match on earth but by the flame of heavenly love brought to earth by the Holy Spirit.

It can be said that with no fear of contradiction, that we do not expect enough of the Christian today. The early disciples expected great things of one another. The field of service is still wide open for all who wish to walk in love. The old legend says that once three young ladies disputed about their hands, as to which were the most beautiful. One of them dipped her hand in the pure stream, another plucked berries till her fingers were pink, and the third gathered flowers whose fragrance clung to her hands. An old woman passed by and asked for some gift, but all refused her. Another young woman, plain, and with no claim to beauty of hand, satisfied her need. The old woman then said, "It is not the hand that is washed in the brook, nor the hand tinted with red, nor the hand garlanded and perfumed with flowers that is most beautiful, but the hand that gives to the poor." As she spoke, her wrinkles were gone, her staff was thrown away, and she stood there an angel from heaven. This is only a legend; but its judgment is true. The beautiful hands are those that minister, in Christ's name, to others.

The walk of love will continue not only throughout this life but throughout eternity. We often discuss immortality while ignoring the tremendous issue that the future state depends on our fitness for it if it is to be of any service or benefit to us. A farmer's dog near Syracuse chases the Empire State express as it flashes past at high speed. "What makes your dog do that?" inquired a curious bystander. "I don't know," was the reply, "But I often wonder what he would do with the train if he caught it."

"What indeed! And what could men and women who deliberately crucify their soul's aspirations, or are absorbed in fleshly lusts, do with a life of purest spirituality and holiness ever were they admitted to it?"

The supreme example of the way we should walk is of course the way Christ went. He gave himself a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God. It was for us and for all mankind alone—yet the inspired word says that the offering was to God. In the same way we can certainly claim that every work of love that we do for our fellowman is a sacrifice offered to God. Man may not care or appreciate. Man may even shun, or stone, or scoff but God understands and is pleased.

To you who this day are discouraged in your Christian work, I say, take heart. God sees and cares! Our reward is certain when we faint not. Our first obligation is to occupy until he comes, walking in the way of love.

—Muncie, Indiana.

Fellowship Among Christians

by Vernon Grisso

Without asking your opinion of the "Apostles Creed," your acceptance or your rejection, I am asking you to read it with me carefully and thoughtfully.

I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth: and in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord: who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary: suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried: the third day he arose from the dead: he ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty: from thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead. I believe in the Holy Ghost: the Universal Church: the communion of the saints: the forgiveness of sins: the Resurrection of the body: and the life everlasting. Amen.

As far as seeing material proof you can deny every statement in that creed except "the Universal Church: (and) the communion of the Saints." They are here in our midst, in bodily evidence. If you don't trust me with this statement go back and read it for yourself.

No one in the world can deny the communion and the fellowship of the Saints. It is an indestructible fact. All salvation and soul winning is NOT from within the church. BUT THIS IS TRUE, whatever is found outside the church came from within, somewhere, some time! Teaching, training, inspirations and influences somewhere, some time received their sources out of the church. The communion of the Saints IS the source of ALL GOOD, with God through Christ and the aid of the Holy Spirit being fundamental.

IN FRONT OF EVERY CHURCH, symbolically I see the Christ with outstretched arms offering the invitation, "Come unto Me." To Saints and sinners, lost and saved, consecrated and condemned He is appealing and calling. As we enter we must feel assured that the fellowship we will find there is the fellowship we would expect from Him. We are His stewards, ushers, communicants, deacons and preachers. Our reception, to those bid to come, is as hostages for Him.

WITHIN EVERY CHURCH we seek to find Fellowship among Christians, the communion of the saints! Men go to church to find fellowship among Christians. One of the things that pleases me most in pastoral work is to hear strangers who have visited my church report their reactions something like this, "As soon as I crossed the threshold I felt that I was among friends." If we Church members pray more and love more, if we gossip less and find fault less, if we are eager, not to see where others are wrong, but to see and draw out their best, if we go to church determined not only to get good for ourselves but to make it easier for others to find God and to find love and friendship, then even strangers and wayfarers will find something worth coming to seek. I am quite sure that the synagogue at Capernaum was quite different when Jesus was present. I do not mean when he was preaching or reading the Scriptures, but when he was worshipping there. If we go to church in the right spirit to praise and our hearts in prayer and intercession, to ask God to unite us with all others present and give us loving thoughts about them, then the whole service can become a unity of fellowship, so that the downhearted and unhappy, the lonely and the sad, the mentally tortured and the spiritually dead, will be caught up into fellowship and thus into the life of God.

THE "COME" BECOMES THE COMPASSION of kindred souls. What I want to say I can't begin to express better than John Fawcett did when as pastor of a small church at Wainsgate he learned this lesson of kindred hearts. Upon a call to a large church in London he accepted to be their pastor. He preached his farewell sermon at Wainsgate. With his wife they packed furniture, books, and belongings high upon wagons. They had mounted the load and were ready to leave. Parishioners of the small church gathered around and through tears and heartaches pleaded with them to stay. It was too much! They turned, dismounted and unpacked. John went into the house and wrote these words about Fellowship among Christians:

"Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above.
Before our Father's throne we pour our ardent prayers,
Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one, our comforts and our cares.

We share our mutual woes, our mutual burdens bear;
And often for each other flows the sympathizing tear.
When we asunder part, it gives us inward pain;
But we shall still be joined in heart, and hope to meet again."

My dear Brethren, no friendships on this earth can change, shape, and direct our lives as can the Communion of the Saints—IF we love the fellowship of the Lord.

Friends, lodges, and any of the multitude of present day clubs may make their bids, but the "Communion of the Saints" is the Body of Christ, and among them he shall find His friends, and there we shall find our friends.

—Smithville, Ohio.

There is nothing but Christianity to help with the reformation of spirit that must be accomplished. National Shinto shrines are now turning into sectarian shrines, but they have nothing to teach. Shintoism and Buddhism are now using Christian material in what they have to say.

We want America to help Japan through evangelism. Unless Japan bows before the cross, reaction will come. Nothing less than evangelism will win the victory. If Japan had won, Christianity would have been lost. Defeat was good. But, defeated Japan will still be lost unless she is evangelized.

It is in the Church, and there alone, that I am offered answers that satisfy the questions concerning unseen and eternal things which are otherwise constant and perplexing problems that are a burden and a source of trouble throughout all of life, unless answered by the church.

IV. THE CHURCH IS A SOCIAL EQUALIZER AND ADJUSTER.

Wherever religion enters into the social life of mankind—if that religion be Christianity—that life is improved. Taken into the factory, the schoolroom, the business world, and into all walks of life, conditions are made better. As oil on troubled waves at sea causes them to be calmed, so the Church pours out its healing oil upon the troubled waters of the world, and life is made better.

The church attempts to destroy those things which are evil and to save all that is good. And as it works it has a radiating and uplifting influence upon those it touches. The church pictures to me in a very imperfect way, something of what is to come when we shall enjoy the complete and perfect fellowship which has been promised to believers in Christ.

V. THE CHURCH IS CHRIST'S REPRESENTATIVE.

The Church, the Body of Christ, is the means whereby Christ expresses Himself in our present day. The church is the agency through which He carries on His work. It is a witness to the miracle of the incarnation, and at the same time, it speaks with power of His abiding Presence. Under Divine appointment, it carries on the message and the work and the influence that was begun in Christ. And in turn, the church receives its virtue from Christ. And only as it remains in close harmony with Christ, closely united to Him, can the church have life and power. Filled with life and power from on high, it reflects His glory, and fulfills its earthly mission.

VI. THE CHURCH IS A MEANS RATHER THAN AN END.

The church is God's appointed agency to establish the Kingdom of God upon the earth. In the Vatican at Rome, we are told that there is a facade of stonework, on the front of the building, in which the church is represented as a ship in which people who believe enter to be taken over into glory. But this, in itself, is not a complete picture, nor is it entirely true. For the church, while it is divinely established, still is more or less a human agency—far from perfect—but established for the purpose of carrying out a divine purpose.

Every individual needs the Christian church to make his life complete. Life can't be completely fulfilled, according to God's plan, except it be fulfilled in the church. Consequently, if our work is to count for anything of value, it must be done in and through the church, or through the channels established by the church.

It is true that the church is not perfect. It is made up of too many imperfect individuals. But its foundation and its life are perfect for they are Christ, and it is doing more for human betterment and uplift than all other human agencies combined. And when life is ended upon the earth, and we take inventory of the things which we have accomplished of worthwhile nature, I am convinced that we will find that the most important of these will have been done through the church to which we have belonged.

was having, even in that far away time, some trouble in getting his people to support the work of the synagogue. The neglect of the tithe had become so bad that God had sent devouring things upon them so that the crops were being destroyed. God has taken a large part of his precious book to warn us even in this day, that we too had better not make the same mistake. We, as Christians, had better be safe than sorry. We are to be faithful stewards for a steward is brought into a relationship of privilege, trust and responsibility. He is entrusted with things which are essentially his Lord's and ought to do that which is nearest and dearest to the heart of Christ. Then he will have blessed fellowship and his pleasure will not be in any personal, fleshly or worldly ambitions of his own, but in being a faithful steward. The Master has shown that to give the tithe is the sure way to divine approval, blessing and reward. There is a blessed fellowship of tithers for they are a happy people, and God has promised "To open the windows of heaven and pour them out a blessing which they will not have room enough to receive." Our Lord never does anything in halves, all his promises are full and complete. To God be the glory, great things he hath done for us, and will continue to do so if we trust Him.

LIVING BY GIVING

by Ruth Williams

Living by giving—what strange words, these,
To those who strive but themselves to please,
Who think by getting and keeping they'll find Happiness, pleasure and peace of mind!

She could have hidden the ointment sweet
And held back the tears that drenched His feet,
But with lavish abandonment aflame,
Drained the last drop—undying, her fame.

He chose his great possessions to cherish
And tightly held to the things that perish,
And the rich young ruler, life scarce begun,
Was quickly mired in oblivion.

The pitying Christ knew the awful span
From worship of angels to hiss of man,
But chose all heavenly ties to sever,
And died,—but lo, He lives forever.

This road of living by giving you'll find
Is strewn with many who looked behind,
But each will find, as he nears the grave,
That all he possesses is what he gave.

Stewardship Is The Answer To A Greater Missionary Program

by Percy Miller

A new word has emerged in America and seems to have a revolutionary idea behind it. The idea and the word are vital to the future of the world. "Isolationism" is the word. With this word rises a new question: "Can a Christian be an isolationist?" And with this question comes another: "Can America be an isolationist and hold its place in the world, the place that God seems to have designed for America?"

This word has come into being during this present generation. The sad part is that it has taken 19 centuries to bring it to birth. Jesus was the first to ask these questions, not in exactly these words, but nevertheless he asks them. What else could He have meant when he said, "Go ye into all the world?" It seems that his Church and his disciples have been slow to understand.

A missionary told a group of Chinese people one time that Christ came into this world about 19 hundred years ago. Their reply to this statement was, "Why haven't we heard of Him before?" That is the question! WHY? The church as a whole has never understood. To be a Christian is to feel as Paul did: "I have a stewardship entrusted unto me . . . Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." A returned missionary replied when asked why he wanted to go back, "I can't sleep for thinking of them."

Stewardship and missions go hand in hand. Have you ever seen a missionary who hesitated to give of his time, talents, possessions, even a tithe, to God's program? The trouble is that so few people understand what the call of God really is. The story is told of a minister in New York City who preached a very enthusiastic sermon on missions about 20 years ago. At the close of the service a layman asked the questions: "Why do you get so het up over the heathen? Do you think that Christ will send them to hell because they have never heard of Him?" How would you answer these questions? When the preacher got his breath, he replied, "The trouble is that they are in hell now. Don't you realize that what God wants us to do is to help get them out of hell." What lay at the heart of this man's blindness? His religion was nothing more than his own personal security. Our churches are full of such people. Christ came to help these people get out of the hell that they are living in. This is the supreme stewardship of the disciples of Christ.

In Matt. 28:16-20 we have The Great Commission to carry the gospel to all nations. This Great Commission is called by the unfriendly, "The great Absurdity." This can and will be said only by those that show and have no interest in Missions.

In Acts 1:7, 8 the disciples were told to be witnesses unto the uttermost parts of the earth. This would seem by the uninterested an impossible task, but we have the promise, "Lo I am with you always."

In the 8th chapter of The Acts we find Saul consenting unto the death of Stephen, great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem, and Saul committing men and women to prison. Because of the persecution the church was scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria. Was the church to be defeated at the start? We find it not so in verse four. "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." God has a plan for the spreading of His glorious Word. He asks that we be obedient to His plans.

In Matt. 28:19, 20 we find the missionary charter of the church. It grants to the church the authority, states its resources, states the nature of her ministry, and defines the extent and duration of her mission. The method for evangelizing the world, or doing our best toward it, can be plainly given: (1) We have God's message, the Gospel. (2) We have God's method, moving on step by step. (3) We have God's men, those chosen and gifted by Him and led by His Spirit. Our work will be certain to prosper as long as we are obedient to the leading of the Holy Spirit. Souls will be saved; Churches will be established; new workers will be sent to new fields. When the Missionary efforts lag it is not because God has withdrawn his purpose or support; it is because men have failed in their interest and responsibility. When we see the work moving forward it is because we have returned to Divine methods.

Is it true that the missionary movement in America today is supported by a minority of the church members, and that, in the eyes of a certain percentage of the membership, the missionary movement is still to be left to the minority?

Set us afire, Lord,
 Stir us, we pray.
 While the world perishes,
 We go our Way!

Do we or don't we "go our way?" What way is it that a Christian should go in days like these? Are we ready? John Wesley frequently says in his "Journal," "I gave them Christ." Well, what Wesley did for England, we can do for the world—provided we really have Christ, and Christ has us, all there is of us!

"This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith!" Faith in what? Faith, in whatever we are doing, or trying to do. Who succeeds in anything without believing in that thing? Here is the key to many failures. Do we believe in the coming of the Kingdom of God? How much have we given to it, of ourselves, of our sons and daughters, of our money? "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth." That is the missionary goal. Jesus ordered it so. More than half of the church members throughout the centuries have been in doubt. They have known that they needed salvation for themselves, but they never could quite put the "other half" within the circle of God's vast purpose.

A glorious band, the chosen few
 On whom the Spirit came,
 Twelve valiant saints, their hope they knew
 And mocked the cross and flame;
 They climbed the steep ascent of heaven
 Through peril, toil and pain;
 O God, to us may grace be given
 To follow in their train! Amen.

—Reginald Heber.

REDEDICATION SERVICES

The Loree, Indiana Church, under the direction of Reverend Robert Higgins, pastor, and a loyal committee, was practically rebuilt during the past year. Rest rooms, extra class rooms, choir rooms, rewiring, and fixtures, oil furnace with air-conditioning and decorating were the major items completed. Morning and afternoon services May 22nd, with a bountiful dinner in the basement, made it an eventful day. The missionary secretary was the afternoon speaker, with C. C. Grisso and Austin Gable assisting in the service. Also Reed Thompson, music director of the South Bend Brethren Church with their Intermediate choir offered four special numbers on the program.

This has been a strong country church for years but it is now in a position to do more than ever before. A vacation Bible School was opening the very day following these special services.

The Pastor and Loree Brethren deserve commendation for a fine piece of work well done. They recently received a certificate, an award of honor, from Miami County Rural Improvement Organization.

LETTER FROM BYLERS IN SOUTH AMERICA

Robert Byler's letter contains very encouraging news concerning permission for his sister, Miss June Byler, who is ready to go to Argentina. The word is that she may even get to sail during this month.

His letter of June 2nd also states that Mrs. Byler and daughter were with Dr. Yoder and Brother Andenmatten enroute from Villa Constitucion to Cordoba when the car in which they were riding was wrecked. A semi-trailer suddenly turned in front of them to enter a side road. Mrs. Byler received a number of bad bruises and cuts around her head, as well as on other parts of her body. Susan, who was being held by Dr. Yoder only had a few scratches. Brother Byler further says the car was carrying 100 liters of kerosene and the tank was punctured, which caused this inflammable oil to pour over Mrs. Byler and Andenmatten. Brother Andenmatten's presence of mind to turn off the switch may have saved them from being burned to death.

Byler says, "We are extremely thankful that they are all alive and as well as they are."

The hospital examination with X-ray showed that Mrs. Byler had no broken bones. Dr. Yoder received bruises and also cuts on his tongue. Alberto Andenmatten was bruised and cut but we are assured that all will speedily recover.

Brother Byler had left the party at Villa Constitucion and returned to Buenos Aires to confer again about his sister's visa.

Brethren—be in prayer, earnestly, for our Argentine missionaries.

NEWS

From the Christian World

Infant deaths have been cut in half during two years in the community of Nuevo Laredo, on the border between Texas and Mexico. This reduction was brought about by the co-operation of a U. S. children's bureau nurse and Mexican health workers. The nurse, who instructed midwives in better childbirth practices and helped Mexican doctors and nurses to secure training in the States, was given special commendation by the Mexican government.

"Those Who Drink"—The extent of drinking and alcoholism in the U. S. has been variously estimated, but year by year the figures of scientific students do not vary greatly. Dr. E. M. Jellinek of Yale University has recently estimated that:

Sixty million of the population of the U. S. over 15 years of age drink.

Four million are excessive drinkers, of whom; (1) One million men are on the borderline of becoming addicts. (2) Three million are addicts; of these 25%, or 750,000, are addicts with complications, mental or physical, or both; practically helpless.

Not enough nickels and dimes—Argentina has a novel, if not bizarre, device as a substitute for a severe shortage of small change. It has grown out of a tremendous currency inflation that has been fed on paper pesos. In turn that has occasioned an intensive hoarding of guitas, the Argentine equivalent of U. S. dimes and nickels. People have been hoarding the guitas to have "hard money" as an anchor to windward.

The situation is further emphasized by an active speculation in nickel and copper coins, which in turn runs their price up. But the need for change in stores was imperative. The merchants of the city of La Rioja therefore devised a substitute by handing out various sized packages of pepper as a change to carry on their business. In Buenos Aires they have largely adopted the use of postage stamps.

The cause of all this furor can be understood by the twofold fact, that Argentina paper money has increased 50 percent in volume during the last year alone. At the same time the gold and foreign-exchange backing of the currency has fallen to 25 percent of the legal minimum requirement.—The Lutheran.

Missionary Blames Communists for wife's Murder in Korea—Mrs. Horace H. Underwood, wife of the president emeritus of Chosen Christian University in Seoul, Korea, was shot dead by two hooded gunmen who invaded her home in Seoul during a tea party. The killers escaped, though several suspects have since been arrested.

Commenting on his wife's murder, Dr. Underwood stated that he believes the Communists are responsible; that her death represented only another casualty in the world-wide battle between Communism and Christianity, and that the shot which killed her was fired by order of some authority higher than the man who pulled the trigger.

"It was a political assassination," he said, "and from the point of view of the Communists the order for it was intelligently given. Look all around the world and you will see that the chief emotional force at grips with communism comes from the church. It is perfectly natural that a blow here should fall on a leader in American missionary work."

Dr. Underwood, whose father founded Chosen Christian University and who has been adviser to the American Military Government here in the field of education, is recognized generally at Seoul as having as wide an acquaintance among Koreans and such standing in this country as to be almost a personal symbol of continued American aid to the Korean people.

At the time his wife was murdered, he said, her work consisted in part of personally supervising distribution of clothing to the needy, and her record showed 60,000 Koreans of all ages clothed through her efforts since the end of the war in 1945.

Fifty thousand people from other countries came to the United States in 1948, the State Department's office of educational exchange estimates, seeking information on everything from child care to diesel engines. Most of these people paid their own way; many were helped by their own governments or ours. Those not students included technical people, key political and labor union leaders and democrats from Germany or Japan. More than sixteen thousand of our young people are studying abroad also.

Anti-Semitism is declined in the Quebec Province of Canada owing to the efforts of Protestant and Catholic clergymen in fighting prejudice. At the same time, however, anti-Semitism seems to be increasing in the province of Vancouver. Discrimination against Jews is rife in college and professional circles.

A board of clergymen and laymen to advise husbands and wives on how to banish marital discord has been set up by St. Peter's Lutheran church of Joliet. This unique parish service has helped to reconcile eighteen couples on the verge of divorce in the six months of its existence. The board has found that money, sex problems and the housing shortage, in the order given, are the three major sources of discord.

WE ALL PAY FOR GRAFT AND GREED

Scripture: Matthew 13:24-30

For The Leader

IN AMERICA, we have a complex society, part of which thrives on uprightness, and part of which thrives on crookedness. Wherever you have human life, you have this situation. But in our own land, the crookedness is costing us money, lives, and resources. In people whose only goal in life is the accomplishment of selfish aims, this is to be expected. But far too often so called Christian people are also involved in these schemes. The best antidote for such actions is a public exposure of what is going on, through press and pulpit. If our people were aware of what is really going on, and were really concerned about it, conditions would be much improved. We suggest that you take a look around you and make it a point to bring to public attention the corruption in your own community.

DISCUSSION

1. SOME EXAMPLES OF GRAFT AND GREED. The examples are so numerous, but just several are given to give an idea of what goes on. For instance, in a city a certain green goods wholesaler gives a "kick-back" to retail merchants for buying all their green goods from him. Thus getting a monopoly, he can raise prices, which price raise is passed on to us, the consumer, who pay the bill. Result: celery, lettuce, etc., cost far more than they should. Or, go get your glasses changed at an eye doctors. The examination costs a certain reasonable amount. But then, what a rate for the glasses and frames which are made, not by the examiner, but by an optical company. It is said that out of that fee, a portion is returned to many of the examining doctors for throwing business their way. We pay the bill. (This practice has been exposed and is pretty well corrected by now.) Then there is the case of "protection" which must be paid to certain groups of gangsters. In order to operate a truck line through a certain locality, the company must "kick in" to a certain guy, so much money, or he will find his trucks wrecked and cargoes stolen. We pay the bill when we buy the things he hauls.

2. EXCESSIVE TAXES ANOTHER MAJOR FORM. Do you know that one out of every six people employed in the United States is employed by our Federal government. That means that for every six of our fathers who earn a living, somebody is drawing a nice fat check for some job he does for our government. Every six days your dad pays for one day's food, clothing, rent, taxes, amusements, etc., for a government worker. And if you are working too, you are keeping him one day out of six. It all comes about through taxes. But that is only the beginning. When a contract is awarded, for instance, for paper towels for government offices. Manufacturer A works through his congressman to get the contract. So does Manufacturer B, and C, and D. If the respective congressman can "throw" it the way of his respective manufacturer, there could be a nice fat cut for the congressman. Who pays such a bill? We do. We are not belittling the government, by any means, for the principle of our government at heart is good. But it is these little grafts and greeds that stir you up, for it all costs us money.

3. TO SOLVE THE PROBLEM. As a nation, we are fast becoming so deeply in debt that, as one worthy authority put it, it will take us and our children 100 years to pay the bill, not considering the paying of current taxes for expenses during that time. To bring it close home, dividing the national debt into what each of us owe, it is depressing to know that the average family of four owes the government more than what the average family earns in a year. How much of this immense debt was due to padded war contracts in World War II we shall never know. But when millionaires were made at the rate of a dozen a day during the war, you know there was something back of it. There is only one one way to solve the problem. That is by the application of the Christian principle of love. Yes, love and reverence for God, which will put personal honor and respect above greed and graft. And love for our fellowmen which will put forth the phrase, "in honor preferring one another."

4. BUT, CAN THAT HAPPEN? We spoke at the beginning that our society was made up of people who loved law, decency and uprightness, plus people who existed at the expense of the upright. It would be wonderful if we could have everybody law abiding and not given over to graft and greed. But, then on the other hand, we just can't pick up the "grafters" and the "greeders" and throw them in the oceans, our prisons being too full to keep all of them. So, what to do? How do we get rid of moths, vermin, filth, rats, etc.? We drive them out into the open and give them a shot of D. D. T., or something equally fatal. Society can do the same thing. Church people are the ones, provided we can wake them out of their lethargy. We sleep while societies' vermin run all over us. Search your own community for evidences of graft in local governments. Start a campaign to expose it. Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil. And if man's deeds won't stand the light of investigation, they are evil. Gambling and vice dens can be closed if we turn the "heat" on in the right way. There's no excuse for such corruption to continue at our door step.

5. EDUCATION HELPS. Principles of Christian government should constantly be expounded from our pulpits, our class rooms, and our homes. Evidences of it will then be felt in elections, and then in actual practice. If church people would unite, they would be able to pick a man and set him in any office in the land. A recent report stated that only 3 out of every 8 women who voted were members of churches. So, at election time we must stir up church women and men to do their Christian duty by voting. It will take work, but it will pay dividends.

QUESTIONS

1. Cite examples in your own community that show graft and greed.
2. What can you do about it?

FIRST KNOW HIM WELL

If you would help another soul
To find your God, first know Him well
Before you lead the way.
Follow His steps, then pray
That your own faith may so increase
He will give you words to tell
Another of His love.

First send your prayer above—
Within your face then faith will glow,
And friends will walk the path you know.
When you lead your loved ones there
With deep desire your God to share
He sends the winning words to say . . .
First know Him well—then pray.

TO KNOW GOD—DO GOD'S WILL

Scripture: Acts 5:32; John 7:17; Hos. 6:3; Luke 11:13; Isa. 44:3; Acts 2:38

Hymn: "Trust and Obey"

Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

ALL BELIEVERS are commanded to "Be filled with the Spirit (Eph. 5:18). After faith, repentance, acceptance, confession, obedience in baptism and unconditional surrender, we are to thirst, and to ask for the Spirit's power, and then claim the promise of God. Regeneration precedes the fullness of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38). One must be obedient and fully surrendered to the will of God (Acts 5:32), and then he must ask for the Spirit's power (Luke 11:13). One cannot be an obedient Christian without witnessing, personal testimony and soul-winning efforts. Every new convert is to carry out the very command given in the great commission (Matt. 28:19, 20). All are to wait on God for power (Luke 24:46-49). The fullness of the Spirit is commanded of us as an endowment of power for soul-winning work (Acts 1:8). Remember that we represent Him Whose one purpose for coming into the world was "to save sinners." Churches exist for the winning of souls and are to be built up only for that purpose (1 Cor. 14:3, 4). Prophecy is to convict the unbeliever (1 Cor. 14:24, 25). The spiritual gifts of God are the full equipment of a Church (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11-16). The sole reason for building up the Church is to make "increase of the body" (v. 16). No one can really "feed the sheep" and ignore the great commission. Soul winning is a Christian's first duty (John 20:21; Rom. 9:1-3).

Baptism is the first duty of a new convert (Acts 2:38). All who are properly baptized in water should be filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 9:1-6). Christ, "praying," received the Holy Spirit at His own baptism in water (Luke 3:21, 22.) Baptism is a symbol of full obedience! It is a condition of "the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38). It is the heart attitude of absolute committal to Christ and death to self that baptism is designed to teach (Rom. 6:1-5). One is to bury himself as a dead sinner and try to keep him buried. Henceforth he is to count the life that he lives to be Christ's own life. Those who have been baptized and still do as they please have either misunderstood baptism or have lied to God and earthly witnesses.

Obedience is more than morality, Bible Study, the separated life, "the deeper life." Obedience means a complete surrender to Christ (Rom. 12:1), a renunciation of every known sin, prevailing prayer, and definite soul-winning effort.

PILGRIM MARCHING SONGS

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE for us to transplant ourselves back into the days of the Temple worship, we would be surprised at the many things that were attached to it, and we would also find that worshippers of that day were much more faithful to the services of the Temple than the membership of our present day churches are to their respective places of worship. There were certain times when the Israelites, those who were good Israelites, made their pilgrimages to Jerusalem. There were at least three of the feasts that were compulsory as to attendance, and especially the Feast of the Passover. It was to this feast that Jesus and His family went when He was twelve. As the groups traveled on foot, they often sang to make the way seem shorter. Many of the psalms were sung on these trips. Hence the designation, "Pilgrim Marching Songs."

It seems that we have lost the spirit of this close association in pilgrimages for the church. The church used to be the center of social activity. Then came the automobile to take the place of the horse drawn vehicles. A quick trip to church by auto superseded the bob-sled loaded with happy people, who sang as they headed for church. Then came the movie, the radio and now television, each making its added inroad into church attendance. Some way these added worldly attractions have taken some of the spirituality out of our singing. Even hymns are now "jazzed" up. All this adds up to a failure to sing, as Paul says, "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, making melody in your hearts."

It has not been so long ago that a group of young people, returning from a church camp by rail, in a car that was crowded by all sorts of people, began to sing some of their camp choruses and old hymns of the church. Little by little the noise of boisterous conversation ceased till the whole car was quiet except for these youthful voices. Soon other voices joined them and one man was heard to remark, "That takes me back to my boyhood days when we all went to church. How far we have gotten away from those days."

The Lost Creek Program

A committee from the Missionary Board recently met at Lost Creek to consider a number of items of business; one of major importance, being the rebuilding of the Wheeler Home which was destroyed by fire a few months ago. After discussion of location it was decided to rebuild on the same site, with the plan in mind that the road be moved a few feet farther from the front of the building.

These additional gifts have been received since last report which now makes a total of $7,526.84 ready to begin the building.

Mr. Ray Yount at Dayton, Ohio, member of the Board, is completing the original sketch for the building which was presented to the Board by J. W. Hosler of Nappanee. Until the architect has the plans ready, we cannot give the amount yet needed for this building. However, it will require in total approximately $15,000. This building is greatly needed for the coming winter. Churches, classes, societies and individuals—here is a fine opportunity to help. We must complete this building so these boys and teachers can have a home before winter.

Another immediate need is the water supply. Pipes are too small and some are rusted until the water supply the day we were there was almost nil. Students, teachers and helpers, almost a hundred, must have water equipment. This emergency was investigated by a plumber the next day, and work will soon begin, if not already.

Gifts for these projects should be mailed to the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church, Ashland, Ohio. E. M. R.

Several men have asked if there would be an opportunity to help with the work at Lost Creek this summer. Yes, there will be. The committee from the Board, who met at Lost Creek May 20th agreed, as did the Drushals, that the building that shelters the cars and the barn should be moved, so as not to be at the front. (Since the new bridge was installed, the entrance is changed, hence the change in location is much needed.) This will not be skilled labor, consequently a good number of men can be used. The call will be issued when the time is right.

Urgently Needed—A man who can go to Lost Creek to oversee the work and plans for the building program!

Man Wanted—The Missionary Board is calling for a man who could go to Lost Creek for part of the summer and become the foreman, time keeper and overseer of the building project, as well as the moving of the barn and garages. Make application to the Missionary Board and accompany your application with a letter of reference from your pastor. Do Not Delay.

P. S.—A call for volunteer help will be made at proper time. E. M. R.

NEEDED—At Lost Creek, Kentucky—a cement mixer will be needed this summer. Is there one in the church anywhere that could be loaned for a few months? Write to the Missionary Board at Ashland. E. M. R.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Mulvane, Kansas. Word from Brother Wilbur L. Thomas, pastor of the Mulvane Church, says, "We baptized six by Triune Immersion last Sunday (June 5). We are having our Daily Vacation Bible School at the present time. Mrs. Lucille Davis is Superintendent and she reports an enrollment of fifty-two."

Louisville, Ohio. We quote the following from Brother J. T. Byler's May-June "Pastor's Helper."

"The Laymen's Organization had Brother E. J. Beekley, pastor of the Canton Church, as their guest speaker on June 21st.

"June 28th and 29th have been set as 'House Cleaning Days' at the church, with a pot-luck dinner each day.

"The annual Mother-Daughter Banquet was held on Tuesday evening, May 24th, in the church dining rooms. One hundred and ten mothers and daughters shared a delightful meal and the fellowship together. The guest speaker was Mrs. E. J. Beekley of Canton."

Washington, D. C. We learn from the Washington bulletin that five were received into membership of the church by baptism on Sunday morning, May 22nd.

June 5th was Building Fund Day in the Washington Church, at which time the goal for the offering was set at $1,250.00. A note attached to the bulletin, by Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, from whom we received it, says, "It is now $1,302.00."

It seems that these people always go over the top.

Goshen, Indiana. Brother W. E. Ronk, pastor of the Goshen Church, reports that there was one University graduate, and nine High School graduates from the Goshen Church. They were honored at the services on May 29th.

Several of the Sunday School classes in the Goshen school donned painting togs and painted their class rooms. The rooms painted open together into assembly rooms and have been painted alike. Not only that, but the pastor's study has received the same treatment.

What a lot of difference a little paint, plus a little energy, makes.

Akron, Firestone Park, Ohio. The Firestone Park Church, having over-reached the 100 mark in Sunday School, is now striving to attain a 125 average. The growth of this new church, is indeed, phenomenal.

The Children's Day program was held on the evening of June 12th.

The Daily Vacation Bible School has been conducted from June 13 to 22, with a demonstration held on Wednesday evening, June 22nd. The school was conducted on an "All-Bible Basis."

Waterloo, Iowa. The Annual Picnic of the men and boys was held on June 21st, at which time the men entertained the boys and challenged them to a soft ball game. Wonder who won?

The Junior and Senior Sisterhoods will have charge of the morning worship service on Sunday, June 26th.

Sunday, June 19th, was set aside as a day to receive "subscription money" for the Brethren Evangelist. Waterloo is one of our 100% churches, the church taking the responsibility for the entire list, but receiving contributions toward the yearly cost through the annual offering. This same method can be effectively used in other churches to bring them into the 100% column. Why not try it?

A "Family Picnic" was sponsored by the Home Builders Club on Saturday evening, June 10th. It was a pot-luck affair and was held at "Hartman Reserve."

The Bible School Program and display of Bible School work was held on the night of June 19th.

Mt. Olive and Bethlehem, Virginia, Circuits. We quote from two post cards received recently from Brother John Locke, pastor of the two churches:

"The Mt. Olive and Bethlehem churches viewed the sound film, 'The Voice of the Deep,' on Thursday and Friday nights, June 9th and 10th. It is a Moody Bible Institute sermon from science. The St. Luke Church (where Brother Locke recently held a meeting) saw it on Tuesday, June 7th. They also had 'The God of the Atom' there recently. There were three confessions at Mt. Olive recently, and three baptisms. Also one awaiting baptism."

They surely keep Brother Locke busy in his community and surrounding territory. He notes some of his engagements for us: Dayton Ruritan Club, Annual Ladies' Night, Dayton, Virginia; Woodstock, Virginia, Lions Club; Woodstock High School Baccalaureate sermon to the largest class in the history of that High School; Edinburg, Virginia, High School Commencement address; Mt. Jackson, Virginia, Triplett High and Vocational High School Commencement address; Shenandoah Business College Commencement address to 35 graduates; McGageysville High

FLASH FLOODS

DURING THE PAST WEEK-END we have been hearing of the coming of a sudden series of "flash floods" upon widely separated communities—floods that have taken their toll of both life and property. While this has been nothing really new, other flash floods have been reported from time to time in the past, each with its attendant casualties and property destruction, the news of the "flood" just reported, has had a little different effect upon us. The reason for this difference was that we listened with arrested attention when we heard the names, "Harrisonburg, Virginia," and the "Shenandoah Valley." For it is in this territory that several of our Brethren Churches are located, and, when disaster touches those we know—well, it is very different from that which seems so distant from our own personal knowledge.

Often it takes the material disasters to make us think of the spiritual, and it was this

That set me to thinking!

Flash floods come upon the land with practically no warning. Little streams, which an hour before were flowing at a mere trickle, become raging torrents; creeks which wandered peacefully through the meadows suddenly overflow their banks and spread over the surrounding territory; rivers which but moments before could scarcely be seen to move, now become angry floods, sweeping away everything in their path and within their reach, till what but a few short hours before was a peaceful, quiet community, tucked away among the hills, is left but a shambles—wreckage and ruin everywhere.

Having passed through two floods while at Peru, Indiana, I know what it means to pass through such a flood. There is no stopping of the water, once it begins to rise and to overflow its banks. One can only wait, and hope, and pray.

But what has this to do with the spiritual? We build barriers which we hope will keep the flood waters of adversity from sweeping us away from our Christian position and preserve our Christian character. But suddenly there comes the graying of skies, the rumble of the thunderings of threatened trouble, and then—a "flash flood" of disaster seems to overwhelm us, and we begin to question, even the goodness of God. We feel that, indeed, He has forsaken us.

But we have only to recall the words of Jesus, when He said, "He that hearest these sayings of mine, and doeth them, shall be likened unto a man who built his house upon a rock, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not—for it was founded upon a rock." Maybe the reason we are fearful when the winds of adversity blow, is because we have been like the foolish man whose only foundation was "sand" and who found his house unable to withstand the force of the wind and rain.

Isn't it about time that the church began to emphasize the necessity of building on a solid foundation and hedging the building round about with an adequate "flash flood" protection? We seem so sure that "It surely can't happen to us," only to find that it "can happen" when it is too late to build the protection when the "flash flood" comes.

It behooves us, therefore, to build and hedge our building as our Lord has bidden us—and to do it while there is yet time.

Think it over!

THE "DOLLARS" BEGIN TO ARRIVE

Do you remember that little "request" we had in this column a couple of weeks ago? That one about how easy it is to "put a dollar in an envelope, to which you have pinned a note with your name and address and the words 'Press and Equipment Fund' and addressed it to the Brethren Publishing Company!" Well, some people saw it, and the dollars are beginning to arrive.

The first "dollar" arrived on Tuesday, June 14th, from Mrs. N. E. Clark of Canton, Ohio. Close second to Mrs. Clark with their "dollars" are Mahlon W. Werner, Rural Route 1, Meyersdale, Penna., and Mrs. James Kraning, Rural Route 3, Peru, Indiana, whose contributions came in the morning mail of June 15th.

In the morning mail of June 16th, came "five" of those "dollars" from Mrs. A. L. Ankrum of the Glenford Church, who lives at Gratiot, Ohio. The next envelope I opened contained another "dollar" from Miss Estella Blackstone of Logan, Ohio.

Came the afternoon mail. A "dollar" from Mrs. Idella Walters, 1209 Fourth Street, Jackson, Michigan.

The Friday morning mail brought two more of those "dollars," one from Brother S. W. Flickinger of Morrill, Kansas and the other from Sister Frances Walters of Dayton, Ohio.

The Friday afternoon mail increased the "dollar" income by five additional bills: one each from Mrs. C. D. Flickinger of Waterloo, Iowa; Mrs. H. O. Beydler and Mrs. William Keller of Arlington, Virginia, both members of the Maurertown, Virginia, Church; and two from Mrs. Elmer Cook of Warsaw, Indiana.

In the larger brackets we have received as of Friday, two checks: one from Andrew C. Stanley of Detroit, Michigan, for $10.00; and the other from Ira T. Leidy of Mineral Point, Penna., for $15.00.

Now what will the days ahead bring to us? We await with a great deal of interest for the response which we are sure will come. Go back and read the first paragraph and see how easy it is to send these "dollars."

Ten - Nine - One

THE WRITER OF THE FOLLOWING tells how, when she turned on the radio one Sunday, she happened on a Quiz Program and that the question which she heard from the lips of the quiz-master was this, "Some one wants to know the significance of the figures ten-nine-and-one in the Bible—to what incident or story do they refer?"

There were several muffled remarks, but no one could give the answer. Finally the quiz-master had to tell his studio participants, and those listening in, that the figures ten-nine-and-one referred to the ten lepers who were healed by Jesus, nine of whom went on their way down the road unmindful of a feeling of gratitude, if they had such, forgetting to express their gratitude to Jesus; and only one turned back to say "Thanks!" for so great a blessing.

Now it is a little disturbing that none of the young people in the broadcasting studio (for it was a young people's quiz program) should know the answer. After long years of teaching Primaries, I found out that one of the favorite stories in the great series of lessons, was the story of the ten lepers. I had a feeling that any boy or girl who came through a Primary department in the Sunday school should know that story. But it was "muffed" on the Bible Quiz Program.

It was only a short time later that, with a companion, I started on a bus trip. We were going to a Sunday School Convention and we desired to get to our destination early in order to look over the exhibits there. So we managed to get on a very crowded bus after much waiting on a crowded station platform. It was in war time and a major portion of those on the bus were soldiers. It was a serious thinking group, for some of the good-byes were said with finality.

At last the bus pulled out and the driver threaded his way through the streets on a route which would avoid much of the town traffic. As for the bus, it was one of those smaller type which thread their way across the country between smaller cities to make connection with the larger and longer bus lines. It was a hard ride for there were no great heavy springs to keep away the roughness of the ride, and it seemed more like one of those old hay-rides in a two-horse wagon without springs. But the crowd was good natured and the ride was not irksome.

Finally we came to a somewhat better highway where the jolts were—well, they were less. The driver, running late, picked up a little more speed and was probably going the maximum allowed for bus-driving at that time. In a few moments there was some noise, a sudden lurch of the bus to the left; but we stayed on the road and kept on going, though everyone was conscious that something had happened and that we were gradually slackening speed.

Suddenly we were conscious that a tire came off and we could look back and see it rolling down the road. One of the passengers, a negro woman, said, "Why don't he stop the bus? Don't he know he lost a tire?" Another passenger said, "But these busses have double wheels in the back; he can take us in on one tire."

About that time there was a clatter and a clang and a more perceptible lurching of the bus, and when we looked back down the road we could see, in the light of an approaching car, the big rim of the bus wheel. We watched it come to a stop and fall flat, almost in the middle of the road. I looked at the one sitting beside me and said, "But that rim didn't come from a back tire. It bumped into the side of the bus after it left a front wheel." But the passenger said, "It couldn't be a front tire. He couldn't keep this big bus in the road if he lost a front tire and rim."

A girl sitting near the back, thinking the driver didn't know he had lost a wheel, hurried to the front and told him. The driver, still with his eyes facing forward, said in a very calm voice, "I know I lost it, but I'm going to pull into a filling station up the road."

When he finally cut across the road and pulled into the filling station on the left, the bus came to a stop almost into a row of shrubs that spread in a half-moon around the approach to the closed station. The driver got out to investigate and everyone else sat still. Then we saw the driver use his flash light to hail a passing car and he left us. Someone near the front got out to see what had happened, and came back to announce breathlessly, "That was a front tire and you ought to see what we came in on."

After a little the driver returned and announced that he had gone back to phone for another bus and we would be there a little while. Many of us got out then to see what had really happened and to break the monotony of the long wait in a stranded bus. Someone asked the driver why he didn't change the tire and go on, but he said all the lights, except the front headlights, were evidently ripped out and if he changed the tire it would be against the law to drive the bus without warning lights.

When I went around to take a look and saw only the hub mired into the grass, you may be sure some belated goose-bumps made their appearance. Anyone who has ever driven an automobile knows how difficult it is to keep a car from turning over if a front tire blows out, and I couldn't see to save my life how that driver kept that bus, loaded to capacity, from turning over, or at least from getting completely out of control.

I turned to leave and saw some narcissus blooming amid the shrubs. Their white blossoms looked like stars in the glare of the headlight. I picked one long-stemmed flower and went back to join a dozen or more people who had gotten out and were asking the driver questions. I arrived just in time to hear him say, "One of the hardest things I ever did in my life was to keep my foot off the brake when the tire blew out. But if I had even touched that brake, we would all be back yonder in 'Possum Lake' right now, for we were passing it when the tire blew. I knew the best thing to do was to keep going and hold it in the road until we slowed enough to stop."

Everyone was practically stunned when the real danger became clear. I still had the narcissus in my hand, and I said, "Friend, it seems that this bus load of people ought to award you at least one flower in appreciation for your being a driver who can keep his head."

He took the flower, put it to his nose and smelled the dew-wet fragrance. Then he said, very seriously, "Thank you, lady for the flower. But you'd really better be thanking the Lord. If it hadn't been for Him you couldn't be picking flowers now. He's the One to thank."

And I had been disturbed that some people on a radio program that morning hadn't known the significance of ten-nine-and-one.

Isn't that the way of most of us? As a Christian, we are numbered among the ten. Yes, everyone of us are among the ten. The thing that should bother us all is, "Am I among the nine?" Or can we say from the bottom of our hearts, "I am classed with the one, who, seeing the great deed done to him, came back to the feet of Jesus and gave Him thanks?" It is a case of just plain "gratitude to God for what He has done for us."—Adapted and suggested.

Noah - Preacher of Righteousness

Rev. Clarence Stogsdill

(The following is a sermon which was preached by Brother Stogsdill, pastor of the Gretna, Ohio, Brethren Church, in Homiletic Seminar at Ashland College, on February 3, 1949. Brother Stogsdill was recently ordained to the full Gospel Ministry in his home church at Cerro Gordo, Illinois.)

II Peter 2:5 "... spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly"

WE KNOW that the plan of God never changes. But man has tried, and is still trying, to force a detour in that plan by attempting to knock out the "bridges" along the way and set up his own temporary methods of transportation into what he hopes will be the "Glory Land." There is more than one way, says man, even if I have to give the blue prints of God's great plan a new interpretation—one that will satisfy myself and coincide with the "ideals" to which I already hold.

But the foundation of God standeth sure, and there can be no changes made. The way already is prepared, and God is working it out in His own marvelous, mysterious way. Yet there really is nothing marvelous to God. He is all-wise, and knows far in advance of happenings just how things will work out. God does awful things in natural ways. He made use of Noah, the preacher of righteousness, to carry out one of His most wonderful accomplishments. Nowadays the preachers whom He uses are everyday Christian people. The wonderful thing about this is that in spite of all the disagreement, dissension, and even hypocrisy within His Church—the instrument of His plan—the plan still succeeds. Just as He knew long before Noah's time that there would be one on whom He could rely for the transporting of man across the flood, so he knows now and has in the past known that His work would be carried on by Christian people today and tomorrow. That work is "preaching the Gospel."

Now I know that most laymen don't like to think of themselves as "preachers," but as Christians that is their life work for the Lord. Every Christian is a preacher; his life is a sermon—the best type of sermon ever preached. I sometimes think that in the study of homiletics the life of the minister should be taken into consideration as an excellent type of sermon. The trouble with some of these "sermons" is that the sermon material used is not of very desirable nature. The Christian should remember, too, that his life is being read. In fact, to the majority of people, it is the only message preached with any great effect.

Now Noah was not exactly a "preacher," in the modern sense of the word, but he certainly did some powerful preaching with the hammer and nails which he used in building the ark. The world all about him was wicked, having fallen into every kind of lasciviousness and lusts of the flesh; but Noah kept driving nails, the regular strikes of the hammer reverberating upon the eardrums of the skeptics all about him. No doubt many stood about with folded arms and chuckled and gossiped while Noah went about his work.

It did seem foolish to build a large boat on perfectly dry land! Old Noah must have had the determination which was handed down to certain G.I's overseas at the close of the recent war: when the Armed Forces announced that all those men and women having 84 points would be transferred to La Havre for transportation to the United States, these men threatened to build rafts and sail for home two-by-two—they had only 83 points! Foolish? Yes. But now picture Noah building a Queen Mary on dry land, and seemingly no place to go! Well, we as Christians look about as ridiculous to the world: our prayers for forgiveness of sins, when we seemingly live good moral lives; our hope and prayers for the coming of the Lord, when Christians have been waiting for nineteen hundred years for that return.

But sometimes God asks even more "foolish" things than these of us—and how many does He find ready and willing to perform that task? Oh, you say you are. How about that opportunity yesterday to speak to a friend about the Lord? "But," you say, "that would make you look like an odd character to those around you." You may as well carry out your calling, friend, for you already look ridiculous in the eyes of the world anyway. Besides, what are you looking for, praise of men, or the fellowship of God? The self-righteous people of Noah's day only called down upon their heads a greater judgment because they had been warned of the wrath to come by Noah. But Noah "found grace in the eyes of the Lord."

Noah had quite a time trying to convince his neighbors of the coming storm. They would go out and point up into the sky, which was clear and blue, and try to explain that rain had to come from somewhere—and it was not apparent that rain would soon come. It takes a good meteorologist to look as far into the future as Noah did and predict a heavy rain. The modern world has coined phrases about the slow coming of our Lord; it is difficult to keep one's patience and continue on in a spirit of worship with such people as those around. But when the day comes, then we, like Noah, shall be satisfied with our efforts of having warned them.

As they continued to scoff and search for more material out of which they could make puns, our friend Noah was doing "according unto all that the Lord had commanded him." "And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth." Though it was a long time, yet it came. Though there were no clouds in the sky, yet there was plenty of darkness and signs of storm within the hearts of humanity. So is the sign of our day. "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be; for as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." There is no need of a telescope or microscope to bring into view of the naked eye that which our Lord was talking about. God has given His word; that is enough for us. After all these thousands of years it still stands stronger than anything which man has ever written. That in itself should be our "sign."

Every Christian has an "ark" to build according to the instructions of his God. He should build it keeping in mind that he is giving out the warning signal to all those about him, as well as preparing for himself a hiding place in the time of storm. If we follow His instructions we will have a safe place to go when the storms break upon us. There will be no need of fear when the "windows of heaven" are opened; but woe unto the world when the windows of heaven open, allowing the light to shine into the places of utmost secrecy!

After Noah had done all he could, God finished for him: He "shut him in." He protected him from all harm; He spread His wings over him for a shelter. What a comforting thought that is to the individual who is safely sheltered o'er with the salvation of God! Paul speaks of the "Helmet of salvation," indicating that it is a roof, a covering from above. God has "sealed him in."

It is interesting to note that, after all Noah's labor and earnest following of the instructions of God, when the rains came and the waters began to rise, the very force of destruction which fell upon the wicked acted as a means of carrying the righteous away to safety. The account says "and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth." (Gen. 7:17b). Jesus said to "lay up treasures in heaven" as a sort of "old age benefit," a "reserve for a rainy day." Work, not for the temporal things, but for the eternal: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." We as Christians should be busily going about our Father's business, laying up treasures for the rainy days so that we can enjoy those treasures when we no longer are able to take care of ourselves.

The longer an individual serves God the more he leans on Him for even the smaller things in his life. The more he leans on God the more he realizes his own weakness and the more he becomes sensitive to his real needs. So many Christians today like their religion in weak doses. When I see one of these Christians I know immediately that he has not been communing regularly with his Lord, for if he had been he would have learned long ago that there is no stopping-place—no "leveling-off place"—in the growing in grace. The boy Jesus himself "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man." The more the Christian seeks, knocks, and asks, just what much more will he sense his needs and walk closer with Him.

I am convinced that our Church is nurturing "perpetual infants" in the New Life. Noah was a man of grace, and he knew this: after God had shut him in the ark he waited for God to tell him when it was safe to come out. He sent out a raven and a dove to learn when the waters had assuaged, but he remained in the ark until God told him when it was safe to come out. Noah knew whose he was, and whom he served.

The work all done, the danger all passed, the ark having withstood the tossing in the sea, God gave back to Noah his new earth, all purged of sin and guilt—fresh as it was the day of creation. Perhaps this is what Jesus was thinking of when He said, "the meek shall inherit the earth." Noah's long suffering and hard work had not been in vain; he got back what he had had before, only it was fresher, sweeter.

Was Noah happy about it? He "builded an altar unto the Lord" and offered burnt offerings on it. This system of worship was not new and strange to Noah. He had given thanks to God before. He knew how to worship. If some of us would practice a little more in our worship the true spirit of worship, when the time comes that we shall want God with us in a hurry, perhaps we will know how to consult Him without going through a lot of asking for forgiveness for the times when we "meant well," but we just hadn't shown it. Perhaps we won't have time to ask for forgiveness then; we might need God with us just as we are at that time.

(Gen. 9:13, 14). "I DO SET MY BOW IN THE CLOUD, AND IT SHALL BE FOR A TOKEN OF A COVENANT BETWEEN ME AND THE EARTH. AND IT SHALL COME TO PASS, WHEN I BRING A CLOUD OVER THE EARTH, THAT THE BOW SHALL BE SEEN IN THE CLOUD:" These are wonderful words from God Himself. We can look upon the clouds which once brought destruction and death to the world, and see in them now the beauty of God. We can see in them both the record of a wicked world (and a purged world), and a bright shining future for those who take Him at His word. Noah and his God gave us something to think about!

Three Pictures From Elkhart, Indiana

Some time ago Brother L. V. King, pastor of the Elkhart, Indiana, Brethren Church, promised to send us, from time to time, some of the pictures which show us a few of the interesting side-lights in the Elkhart Church. This he has done, in the sending of the three pictures shown below. Brother King has added a brief paragraph with each.

The Organist

The above picture is a portrait of the organist, Mrs. Fern Gilbert. "Fern," as we all call her, is the wife of Rev. Harry Gilbert, who has served the Brighton, Indiana, Brethren Church as pastor for so many years. Due to his health he has been given leave of absence and one of our laymen, Walter Lichtenberger, has been preaching there each Sunday. Fern has been the faithful pianist and organist for somewhat over twenty years. And now, since we have the Maas Cathedral Chimes, she plays these each Sunday morning before the Sunday School hour, and each Sunday evening before the evening worship. She has as her able assistants, Mrs. Ruth Bushong and Marilyn White. They often play combination numbers, especially at the evening service, on the organ and piano, with the chimes.

A Group of New Members

During the two and one-half years of our pastorate, it has been the happy privilege, due largely to faithful work among the Sunday School teachers and personal workers, for the pastor to receive into membership one hundred and ninety-five persons. About half of that number are included in the above picture, which was taken on Sunday morning, April 24th. A picture had been taken previously in which more of the new members were included, but the film proved to be of no value and we had to try it over again with the result that we selected a Sunday in which many were unable to attend.

The picture also gives a good view of the rear of the auditorium. This is the first time we have had a picture from this angle and it gives you some idea of the beauty from the pulpit, as well as the beauty of the pulpit and Choir loft itself, as was shown in the picture which appeared in the Evangelist some months ago.

The Junior Choir

One of the new projects which has proved a real blessing and has helped so greatly in an increase of attendance and interest, has been the newly organized Junior Choir. It is made up of children who sing in the choirs of the different grade schools in the city of Elkhart and surrounding territory. In the picture is also Mrs. Fay Weatherwax, director; Mrs. Fern Gilbert, organist, and Janet King, sponsor of the group. They are all members of the growing Junior Department of the Sunday School. They assisted the adult Choir in presenting the Easter Cantata.

PASTORATE TO BE VACANT

Due to the resignation of Rev. Henry Bates, effective on January 29, 1950, the Oakville Brethren Church of Oakville, Indiana, will be without a pastor as of the first of February.

Any Brethren pastors who would be interested in assuming this charge at that time, are invited to contact the Pulpit Committee of the church through its secretary, the undersigned.

Charlie S. Kern, Oakville, Indiana.

REDEDICATION SERVICE AT TIOSA

The Tiosa Brethren Church, Tiosa, Indiana, has planned a rededication service on Sunday, June 26th. This will be an All-Day meeting, with Prof. M. A. Stuckey, Dean of Ashland Theological Seminary, as Guest Speaker.

Surrounding Brethren and Friends are cordially invited to these services.

Mrs. Frank Lee.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

A Long, Long Trip

THERE WAS A DAY when 800 miles would not have seemed as far as it does now, and reasons and explanations are unnecessary. But lest some folk be inclined to surmise that I am getting old or decrepit, let me warn that I do not admit or allow such incrimination. Mrs. Bame and I are exceptionally well preserved with good health, freedom from limiting diseases and with all our senses (sight, hearing, etc.) such as to make us grateful to our Maker and our Savior as well. I drive further than most preachers in our church every Sunday morning to the services at our College Corner Church, ten miles away and besides, take "800 mile trips when we wish."

"Star Boarders"

In a life-time of service for such affable, forbearing, suffering and hospitable people as Brethren are, we scarce stay at a hotel, or on many trips buy a meal, because of welcomes by letter and invitation verbally and continually. And thus we become "Star Boarders" quite often. In a number of homes, we know where the family key is hidden and are invited to "go in and make ourselves at home," both in spirit and in truth. What a wonderful thing such friendships are, both because they make it possible for us to make trips otherwise impossible, and to meet those of "like precious faith" and thus to bring blessing and gratitude to their hearts and ours.

"Homes For Transients"

On this trip we found a Tourist Home so splendidly restful and clean, and the "maidens" of the house so intelligent, gracious and hospitable, that we gladly remained in one city two nights longer than we had anticipated and for five years I have not had a better night's sleep, anywhere. I presume it was with some pride that we had the unusual experiences of being stopped on the streets in this small city by people inquiring "who were the strangers" among them and why we were there. And, of course, they had some pride too, to know that we had selected their "burg" for a short sojourn we had not planned at all!

General Grant's Tannery

One such city was the former home of the late President Grant. It was altogether outside our plans to spend time there for we did not know—I believe history did not record—that this great American was a resident of Georgetown, Ohio, near where he was born at Point Pleasant, in Clermont County. We were disappointed for what seemed to be small regard and appreciation of a man so great as to have become its great leader in war and in the presidency for two terms, with many urging him to try at that early date for a third term. A small brick schoolhouse where he went to school, now more than one hundred years old, still stands, with its desks, simple boards pinned to the wall; and the benches without backs for the pupils, while the teacher, it seemed, was made very prominent with the bigness of his desk and chair.

One thing prominent in his day and time was the bunches of "beech switches" the teacher carried each morning and, in his "Memoirs," says Gen. Grant, "used up most of them each day." That together with the Tannery, made up a great factor in the life of the future great warrior.

Discipline

General McClellan, perhaps a better trained man, had failed in the conflict because of his lack of initiative. He was superseded by a number of leaders who all signally failed to follow victory with speed, until this man of destiny, drilled with hard work and "switches," decided that there was but one thing to do, despite the loss of blood and life of soldiers, to win for the North: that was to "fight it out along this line if it takes all summer." His determination and the discipline of hard work, poverty and training, secured for him undying fame and honor. And is the almost entire loss in modern ways and methods, that deprives the modern child of the needed discipline to escape the things that made great character in all past times. It is written in the thinking of men that to "spare the rod is to spoil the child," and the greater wonder of all is that even Jesus had "learned obedience by the things which he suffered," Heb. 5:8; and even the wisest of men summed up "the whole duty of man" to be "fear God and keep His commandments." Eccles. 12:13. In either of the three cases, it is discipline. The man, woman or child that does not submit to higher authority than self, will end in miseries, chagrin, disappointment and even despair. "If ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently; this is acceptable with God." I Peter 2:20.

"Friends for Forty Years"

Enroute, we stopped with friends of many years. I was about to say forty; but it is but thirty-four; not to say that we have none of the forty-year vintage. We do. And that is something to account for. Forty years of friendship, sometimes threatened by human limitations and disagreements—"for none of us liveth to himself, and none dieth to himself." "One star differeth from another star in glory" and so shall it be with humans in the Eternities of endless ages. "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." Even that would make each different from the other. But there are friends and friends. Some love for a time and then forget; some love until differences come and they try even to get vengeance. but such are not models; they are not the kind to "copy" or imitate. We stopped with the kind that endure. Differences, separations, divisions—but friends, nonetheless. Sure! "A friend sticketh closer than a brother." Prov. 18:24. We had a good time, a good rest and went happily on.

Now on to the Southeastern District Conference."

Say, Brother John, when do you sleep?

Dayton, Ohio. We note from Brother Whetstone's bulletin of June 12th that four were baptized on Friday, June 10th and received into full fellowship on the 12th.

A "Wedding Remembrance" party was recently tendered the Whetstones. (Brother Whetstone does not say how many years of "wedded bliss" this marked.) Also there was a "remembrance" for Sister Whetstone's birthday.

A Family Night, with covered dish supper, was held on Wednesday evening, June 8th, at which time Miss Hudson showed pictures and told of her trip through Europe on a bicycle.

Loree, Indiana. Brother Robert Higgins reports that there were 59 enrolled in Loree's first Daily Vacation Bible School, and an average attendance of 54. A fine relation of attendance to enrollment.

Loree combined their Children's Day and Vacation Bible School programs on Sunday evening, June 5th.

Johnstown, Penna., Second. We note that the Johnstown that a dedication service was held on Sunday morning, Second Church has received their new song books and that a dedication service was held on Sunday morning, June 5th.

Brother Leatherman, the pastor, will complete a two-week meeting at Brush Valley, Penna., on Sunday, June 26th. In his absence Brother George H. Jones, former pastor, is filling the Second Church pulpit. We are truly glad that Brother Jones has recovered from his accident which he suffered some weeks ago in Florida.

The Second Church observed Children's Day on Sunday morning, June 12th.

Johnstown, Penna., Third. Brother D. R. Wolfe, pastor of the Third Church, reports baptismal services at the church on June 5th, but does not report the number.

The Children's Day program was held on the evening of June 12th.

Masontown, Penna. Brother Freeman Ankrum reports that the Laymen had 17 present at their June meeting. They will have charge of two public services, one on the morning of July 3rd, and the other on July 10th.

A new Senior Sisterhood was recently organized at Masontown, under the direction of Mrs. Mabel Chepes, patroness, and Mrs. Dorothy Berkshire, Assistant.

Berlin, Penna. The Berlin Church recently honored their three College graduates and eight High School graduates.

The Pennsylvania Ashland College Alumni Banquet which was held at Berlin on Friday evening, May 20th, had an attendance of 95. Dr. Glenn L. Clayton was the guest speaker. There were also special numbers by Mrs. Glenn Clayton, Miss Miriam Bird and Mrs. Charles Cober. The group has a project of placing new lights in the Chapel on the Ashland College Campus.

Brother D. C. White, pastor of the Milledgeville, Illinois, Church, was recent guest preacher at Berlin.

Brother Percy C. Miller, Berlin pastor, reports that there were 52 in attendance at the mid-week prayer service on May 25th, and that the Vacation Bible School enrollment for the first week was 57.

We note also that the new carpet, costing approximately $5,000.00, will soon be laid in the Berlin Church.

Oakville, Indiana. We note that the local Junior W. M. S. has recently contributed $100.00 toward the re-wiring of the Oakville Church.

A special offering was lifted on Sunday, June 12th, which will be applied toward church improvement.

Peru, Indiana. Brother Elmer Carrithers, Peru pastor, writes: "We had a fine Children's Day program last Sunday (June 12). The attendance was an increase over last year. Rev. M. G. Buchanan, a retired Methodist minister, of Indianapolis, spoke for the Indiana Anti-Saloon League."

St. James, Maryland. A new pitcher pump has been installed in the kitchen. It was the gift and was installed by Mr. Earl D. Long of Downsville.

Valley Brethren, Jones Mills, Penna. Brother Percy C. Miller, Berlin pastor, who recently held a week of meetings at the Valley Church, reports as follows: "The interest was very good. The average attendance at all services was 50—just about the membership of the church."

Nappanee, Indiana. John Litwiller from Argentina, was the guest speaker at the Father's Day Services on Sunday, June 19th.

Brother Bowman reports the enrollment of 303 at the Union Vacation Bible School in Nappanee.

Gratis, Ohio. The Gratis W. M. S. added the sum of $100.00 to the carpet fund recently.

Canton, Ohio. Canton honored their two High School Graduates on Sunday, June 12th. Children's Day was also observed.

Elkhart, Indiana. One hundred and seventy-five women and girls were in attendance at the Mother-Daughter banquet recently.

At the last business meeting of the Elkhart Church the following actions were taken:

1. To remodel the present parsonage as a permanent home for the pastor and family.
2. To select committee to secure an architect and to get estimates for a new wing to the rear of the church.

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff reports the enrollment of around 300 in the Community Daily Vacation Bible School. Brother and Sister Benshoff had charge of the music of the school.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST'S LEADERSHIP

IT IS VERY NATURAL for man to follow a leader. The person who doesn't like to be around people is an unusual person. And as people get together, somehow or other, it becomes customary to look up to one of the group as the leader of that group. This is true in politics; it is true in religion; it is true in school, and it is true in the social life.

Nowhere do we find leadership more necessary than in the religious life. Men have tried to map their own courses of life, religiously speaking, but somehow, no man has ever succeeded in making a "go" of life when his religious leadership has been entirely dependent upon himself. There is too much aimless wandering—there are too many uncharted places—there are too many periods of stress and strain—for a person to go without expert guidance and leadership. That is the reason why it is so necessary for a person—particularly a young person—to make a wise choice in setting up his program of life. He may have a splendid goal for himself; his ideals that he has chosen for himself may be of the highest type; his friends and associates may be of the finest character; his tools, his equipment, and his education may be second to none; and yet, unless that young man, with all his best equipment, is not aware of his need of leadership, his life is doomed to failure. On the other hand—with the necessary training and equipment, and proper choice of leadership, the possibilities of that life are boundless. So an early, but extremely important decision for any young person to make, is to "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

When we consider the field of leadership, we are faced with a consideration of leaders that are available to all. Some young people pin all their hopes on someone who has apparently made a success in a particular profession. As they study the successful individual, they become more and more certain that what he has done, they can do. Sometimes, we base our trust for leadership in a person who has become wealthy, or popular, or famous, and fail to see that setting such individuals before us as a pattern is never a sufficient step to assure us of our success in our chosen field.

But there is One who offers Himself as our Leader right as we stand upon the threshold of life, and He says, "Follow Me." Furthermore, as He suggests that we follow Him, He assures us not only of His guidance and example, but of His constant Presence and His reassuring encouragement. He tells us that He will "break-trail" for us in the hard places; He undertakes to work out all future problems and difficulties; and as He does these things for us, we have the satisfaction of His joy and His peace—a satisfaction that cannot be obtained anywhere else in all the world.

There is one thing that we must keep in mind, though, if Christ is to be our Leader. He refuses to take second place in our hearts. It either means that we must yield to Him completely, or expect to get along without His leadership in our lives. An old proverb says, "Christ demands a complete surrender; the Devil settles for a compromise." And that is quite true. The Devil is happy if he can get you to yield just partially to his demands to do evil. "Don't gamble! But matching pennies won't hurt anybody!" "Of course, stealing is wrong! But if you can sneak an apple off the store counter, or snatch a piece of silverware out of a restaurant, that won't hurt anybody!" That is the Devil's method of reasoning, for he knows that if you can be made to give in to little things, he will soon have you giving in to the bigger things, too.

But Christ demands a complete surrender. Gambling is sin—it must be left alone. Stealing—even petty pilfering of apples at the corner fruit stand, is sin and can have no share in the follower of Christ.

Someone tells the story of a pilgrim who was ordered to do penance for his wrongdoings by walking a number of miles to a shrine, with peas in his boots. But the pilgrim, interested in making it as easy for himself as possible, first of all boiled the peas! Sometimes, people have been guilty of trying to do the same thing in following Jesus Christ. Christ makes His demands for those who would follow His leadership, and we try to ease those demands down to the extent that they are not hard or unpleasant to follow. But we sadly discover, when we do this, and oftentimes too late, that when we make those demands easier, we lose the leadership of Christ.

ATTENTION

ALL PENNSYLVANIA BROTHERHOODS

To All Brotherhoods in the Penna. District:
Greetings:

As your District Chairman, I urge all Brotherhoods to have delegates at our Pennsylvania District Conference, which convenes at Masontown July 18 to 21. Of course we take it for granted that all Advisors and Brotherhood Officers will be there. We should plan for our Annual Thanksgiving Brotherhood and Brethren Youth Conference at this conference.

Fred W. Brant, Chairman
Penna. District Brotherhood Board.

Cease to live in the atmosphere of your sin, by which I mean that you must see to it that your mind is occupied by thoughts as far removed as possible from those in which your temptation can take root. It is a great mistake to loiter around a sin to which one's nature is prone. Your moral strength will depend upon your spiritual tone.

CRIME—THE POOREST PAID PROFESSION

Scripture: Romans 1:16-25, 28; Galatians 6:7-10

For The Leader

EVERYBODY PAYS when a crime is committed. Nobody wins when a person sets out to gain by crooked ways. As we have said before, this country is made up of people who desire to live respectable, law-abiding lives, plus those whose idea is to get along by fair means or foul. So, tonight, we are confronted with the problem of the criminal, the petty criminal, the chiseler, the cheat. Their very attitude is to get what someone else has, even if they have to steal, lie, deceive or murder. The blossoming out of this philosophy has resulted in the greatest crime wave that this country has ever seen. To point out the fallacy of such a life, and to show corrective measures, is our purpose now.

DISCUSSION

1. WHO PAYS THE BILL? Crime is one of the most expensive leeches we have in the country. It costs everyone of us far more than we'd like to admit. It is almost impossible to know where to begin in enumerating the crimes for which we pay the bill. A man is brought into police court because he was molesting a woman going along the street. She was minding her own business, he was in a half-drunken condition. As the patrol officer sought to arrest him, the man put up a struggle. He was thus booked for drunken and disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. He was later fined and sentenced for a period of time in the local jail. Just one of thousands and thousands of daily occurrences. It rated a few lines in the daily paper. That was all! Or was it? Of course we need policemen and judges and jails. But in this case there had been an increase in such occurrences and an extra policeman had been hired for the area. Count the cost of his salary, plus cost of prosecution, plus the food of the man while in jail. Who paid that bill? You did! Then multiply this by the thousands, and you will understand why our crime bill is so high. And it is a safe bet to say that 90% or more of our crime is committed directly as the results of drinking and the smoking of marijuana cigarettes!

2. WHY IT IS THIS WAY. Some of us are pretty much alarmed over the rapid increase of disobedience on the part of children of grade school age. It is amazing the amount of lack of respect which is seen. Ask any public school teacher, as we have done, and almost invariably you will get the same answer—that every year they grow worse. We are seeing the results, even in young adulthood, of a philosophy which many of us feared even years ago when it was first started. That is the philosophy of self-expression on the part of boys and girls. "Do not restrain them, but let them grow and choose for themselves." Thus, a generation is reaching maturity which has known little restraint or teaching of respect, good citizenship, and moral and property values.

3. WHY IT IS THIS WAY, FURTHER. We would like to lay the blame directly where it belongs. Two things are responsible. The movies and parental neglect. Just to show you what we mean: Recently in Bible School, fourth graders were using hammers in construction of some handwork. One boy picks up his hammer and bops a girl over the head saying, "Here's the way I saw it in the movies." It is true that in the movie, the person hit did not receive the impact of the blow, but the poor girl in Bible School sure did. And countless juvenile crimes are enacted just as they were glamorously portrayed on the screen. A young girl who had fallen into immorality and was using her evil influence over the boys of her neighborhood, was finally questioned on where she became so "wise" so early in life. She said she had learned her "ways" from watching the actresses on the screen. The movies are destroying everything that is respectable and law-abiding in our boys and girls and young people!

4. MORE, WHY IT IS THIS WAY. Then in the next place, parents are neglecting their responsibilities in training their youth. Yes, that is true. And far too many of these homes which neglect their children are homes where one or both parents "belong" to church, but rarely attend. Children should be taught the great scriptural truths, RIGHT IN THE HOME. They should be taught that sin is sin, and punishable by God. They should be taught that there is no escape from penalty of sin except through an acceptance and obedience of Christ. And then by example, parents should gather their flock together and attend church services in a body. Lastly, it says in the scriptures that when people did not like to retain a knowledge of God in their lives, that He gave them over to a sinful mind.

5. SO YOU THINK YOU CAN WIN. A cheat or a chiseler never does. For instance, you may get an A grade on a test because you cheated, but you lost your self-respect, and there's a hollow feeling inside of you because you didn't get it honestly. Always there is the fear of getting caught in a crime. The criminal never wins. But who's to tell him that unless it comes from God's word? That's why, young people, we urge you to keep yourself faithful to Church and His Word, that you might be forewarned of the evils of the "crime" life. Study the lives of prisoners, and you will shortly see the folly of their ways. America needs Christian young people who will spend their time working for the Lord, living true, honest lives. What a wonderful thing to be able to live day by day, and sleep night by night without fear. Yes, without fear of having disobeyed the laws of the land, but more so, without fear of having disobeyed the laws of God. Crime pays with guilty lives, dissipation, and fear. Christian living pays in a beautiful, contented, and happy life. Choose the better way.

QUESTIONS

1. Estimate what you think the annual crime bill is for America. Divide the total by the number of people in America, and see what it is costing you and your parents.

2. Enumerate as many different types of crime you can. Try to find the motive back of each one. That is, try to analyze the reason a person would do that particular crime.

BLESSED HOPE

This is the hope that sustains us,
This is our lamp in the night,
This is the beacon we follow,
Waiting till faith becomes sight.

This is our pillow at night time,
The promise in each golden dawn,
This is the spur for the laggard,
"Occupy while I am gone."

This is our heart's choicest treasure,
Balm for our sorrow and pain,
Words that are priceless as rubies,
"Christ Jesus is coming again!"

OUR LORD'S COMING AS A FACT, HOPE, AND MOTIVE

Scripture: Rev. 1:7

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE LORD'S COMING will be personal for He said, "I will come again and receive you unto Myself." His coming will be visible for "every eye shall see Him." It will be audible "for the Lord Himself shall descend with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God." We Christians carry on in the strength of this "blessed hope." We look for His coming and also for "new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of Heaven, but My Father only," said Jesus. The multitudes who ignore the doctrine of the second coming are described in 2 Peter 3:3, 4. It would be tragic not to let this doctrine shine in a world of darkness because some have misused the doctrine.

Adam and Eve looked forward to the Lord's second coming as the time when the seed of the woman would finally and fatally bruise the serpent's head. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied His second coming (Jude 14, 15). Abraham looked for it (Heb. 11:10). David anticipated it (Psa. 17:15). All the prophets proclaimed it as the ultimate hope. Read Zech. 14:4-6. It was attested by the apostles and advanced by angels (Acts 1:9-11). Jesus discussed it at length in parables and discourses (Matt. 24:42-44; 25:31; Luke 21:25-28; John 14:1-3).

The second coming of Christ is the Christian's hope (Titus 2:12, 13; 1 Thes. 4:16-18). We do not discredit the efforts of those who seek to right the wrongs of this present world. Let scientists, statesmen, educators, sociologists, and churches do their best to discover remedies for diseases, maintain peace, create better understanding, eliminate slums and poverty, advance better morals and ethical standards. Just as none expect to get a permanent remedy for the wasting human body, so our world order cannot escape destruction. Judgment is coming, and our only abiding hope is in Christ and new heavens and a new earth (2 Peter 3:10-14).

There are three incentives to Christian service, sacrifice, and transformed living: the mercy of God (Rom. 12:1), God's love for us ("For the love of Christ constraineth us"), and the second coming. The second coming incites watchfulness (Luke 12:35-37; Rev. 16:15; Mark 13:32-37); sobriety (1 Thes. 5:2-6; 1 Peter 1:13; 4:7; 5:8); repentance (Acts 3:19-21); patience (James 5:7, 8); mortification of sin (Col. 3:4, 5); brotherly love (1 Thes. 3:12, 13); personal holiness and self-discipline (1 John 3:2, 3); abiding life in Christ (1 John 2:28). Let us be alert (Rom. 13:11)!

SONGS OF THE TEMPLE

Lesson: Psalms 84:1-4; 95:1-7a

THE CHURCH is a place of Prayer, Praise and Preaching. Prayer is communion with God, for in prayer we should listen for God's voice, as well as continue speaking to Him. Preaching is teaching and admonishing the people; Praise finds its expression in singing. And all these go to make up a service of worship and consecration.

We are to think of the "Songs of the Temple" today. Can you imagine a great concourse of people standing in the Temple court, joining their voices together in the great songs that made up a part of the Temple worship? It must have been an imposing sight and one that tended to make the worship much more meaningful. We listen to great choruses of voices and we are lifted by the melody they bring forth. Personally we have had this experience as we listened to our own Ashland College A Cappella Choir. What must it have been in the ears of those in the days of the Temple splendor!

Very little personal value is found in the study of a Sunday school lesson unless we apply it to our own lives. Just how do we, ourselves, sing in church? or do we sing? Singing is not merely carrying the melody or adding the harmony, no matter how trained the voice or how beautiful it sounds. Far too often hymns are sung with no thought of their meaning. So much time and effort is given to the perfecting of the harmony that little thought is given to the words. I know a fine Christian character who could not, as we so often hear, "carry a tune if you would put it in a basket." Yet that person sings with meaning and a sense of love for the Lord.

We are not decrying our beautiful choir music, by any means—far from it. But we are trying to point out that there should be a life behind the singing. In singing we should express thankfulness and joy. The psalmist says, "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all the earth: make a loud noise, and rejoice and sing praise." (98:4) He also says, (or sings) "O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation. Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms." (95:1, 2) What means this word, "noise?" Did you ever hear a Chinese orchestra and singing? I have. To me it was just plain "noise," but to them it was melody. That is why all "real" hymn singing from the heart, whether it be on or off pitch, is melody in God's ears. He hears from whence it comes.

Solo singing is beautiful, but nothing brings an audience into closer harmony than good congregational singing. And now a word about paid singers. We have no objection to paid singers—IF! Far too often paid singers sing to be paid and to be heard. There is a story that illustrates this very thing. It goes like this:

In a certain large church in these United States (not Brethren, however) an Italian singer of some note was employed to sing just before and just after the message of the preacher. On one particular Sunday, the preacher had prepared a message which was a little more lengthy than usual. The singer had sung his first song and retired behind the choir railing which practically hid him when he was seated. As the message proceeded and the usual time for dismissal draw near, the singer became more and more perturbed, so it seemed, and as the time passed he half arose from his seat several times. Finally he could endure it no longer and, arising, cried out to the preacher, "Stop! da preach; me sing now!" That is the attitude which we do not condone in the paid singer.

Real singing leads to self-examination and often to repentance. How often and how effectively have the old hymns, "Just As I Am," and "Jesus is Tenderly Calling Today," together with others, brought sinners to the feet of the Loving Savior. Truly music has its place in God's Holy Temple.

SECOND NOTICE

TO CHOIR DIRECTORS AND CHOIRS

Did you read the notice to all Brethren Choirs and Choir Directors that was printed recently in the Evangelist? If you did not, or if you have not yet acted on the suggestion of the General Conference Music Committee, turn to the issue of May 22nd and read the announcement concerning the General Conference music. The Music Committee is very desirous of having a large Conference Choir again this year. Also, if you have soloists, or other types of music, either vocal or instrumental, please notify the undersigned in the very near future, so the committee may formulate the program for the week. Address all communications to:

Mrs. M. A. Stuckey,
Chairman Music Committee,
5273 Samaritan Avenue,
Ashland, Ohio.

Laid to Rest

KELS. It was my sad duty to officiate at the funeral of Jonathan Kels, on Wednesday, June 1st.

Mr. Kels was born in Cambria County, Pennsylvania, on June 21, 1867, the son of Fredrick and Mary Catherine (Vickory) Kels. Brother Kels was a charter member of the Third Brethren Church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. He was a trustee of the Church, a former Sunday School teacher, and a regular attendant of the church. At our recent Father and Son Banquet, Mr. Kels received the prize for being the oldest father present with his son or sons. He was ill only a few weeks before his death.

Services were conducted from the Henderson Funeral Parlors and burial was made at Grandview Cemetery, overlooking the City of Johnstown.

D. Richard Wolfe.

WAKENIGHT. Mrs. Hattie Wakenight was born in 1880, and died very suddenly while visiting her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hammod, Sharpsburg Pike, on the evening of May 23, 1949. She was sixty-nine years of age.

She was a member of the St. James, Maryland, Brethren Church for fifty-four years and was, for many years, a Sunday School teacher. She was a mother of very deep spiritual convictions and was always faithful in her Sunday School and Church attendance.

Funeral services were conducted on Thursday afternoon, May 26th, from the Manor Church of the Brethren, by Rev. James Ault. Burial was in the Manor Cemetery.

May she enjoy a Mansion and fellowship with her Lord throughout all eternity.

Roy H. Lowery.

*We are sorry to announce the death of Dr. G. W. Rench, on Monday, June 20th
Funeral was held in the Goshen, Indiana Church on Wednesday, June 22*

News From Our Churches

MILFORD, INDIANA

It has often been said that "no news is good news." If this is true, then there has been good news from the Milford First Brethren Church for a long time.

After an inquiry relative to our "life and prosperity" we hasten to inform our friends and Brethren that we are going along nicely and desire to send greetings to the Brotherhood at large. We really have been enjoying a pronounced degree of activity, such as desired by a local church, and while we have no desire to give a recital of all the local activities, we may indicate a few to really let the Brotherhood know that we are "on the map."

We have recently remodeled and redecorated the basement of the church at an expense of some four thousand dollars. We have been receiving a number of additions by letter and recently we were happy in being privileged to baptize a class of nine applicants: three mothers and nine young ladies. Our recent Easter service was one of the largest in attendance since we have been serving this church as pastor. A fine service of consecration for our young children was one of the very pleasing features of this service.

The church has been saddened during the last year by the passing of a number of our older members, It would seem that the loss was a bit unusual in number. After a period of some seventeen years as pastor, the loss of members by death becomes more difficult, due to the very close relationship which is formed in a smaller congregation.

If this report or communication were a report of actual work done since our last report, I am sure it could be long and certainly not too interesting to all of the Brotherhood. However, we desire only to send greetings to one and all and to suggest that when measured by all set standards, we may not astound our friends by our excellence. But when we consider how we are working together and in our own way, "serving the Lord," we feel that we are making progress and we desire to send our very best to one and all.

W. I. Duker, pastor.

SERGEANTSVILLE, NEW JERSEY

It has been almost six months since Brother J. J. Margush became our pastor. We find that Brother Margush is very energetic and zealous in the Lord's work and true to the Bible in his preaching.

Recently at our Sunday morning services we have been enjoying a series of sermons on The Holy Spirit.

A Sunday evening service is being maintained with increased interest. Recently the Christian Endeavorers held a candle light and consecration service. Our Spring Communion was observed on May 29th.

Family night will be observed on June 23rd, with a fellowship supper and a program.

We are happy that several have been baptized and received into the Calvary membership and that one young lady has been received into the membership of our church.

We have recently lost by death, Mrs. Anna L. Wilson, wife of Joseph D. Wilson of Trenton, New Jersey. Both were active members of our church before moving to Trenton some years ago. Mrs. Wilson was a charter member of the Sergeantsville Church and the mother of Brother E. R. Wilson.

For a week during the latter part of June, Brother and Sister Margush and Mrs. L. Wallace expect to be at Lost Creek, Kentucky, assisting Rev. G. E. Drushal in the work of their summer camp. Ida S. Leigh, Secretary.

THE SHERWOOD, MICHIGAN, MISSION

About eight months ago Brother and Sister Fred Pippen saw the great need of a work for Christ in Matteson, Michigan and started a Sunday School among the children of that section of Southern Michigan. Here is a large stretch of this state without a church. They had everything else, but no Christian training up until the time when Brother and Sister Pippen tried to start a Sunday School there.

The work there was slow and a great deal uphill, and many of the folks in that community did not want Christian training, for this would spoil their dancing, gambling, and drinking and break up their immoral practices. May I say that several of the folks in that district banded together and were united for the purpose of breaking up the Sunday School which was started. However, the Pippens do not give up when the enemy has landed one blow, but they faithfully work and watch to prevent the opposing group from landing their next stroke. I think that the Pippens deserve a great deal of credit for sticking to this work that has had so many adversities.

My wife and I came to Matteson to canvass or to take a religious census. We started this canvass on May fourth and met several friendly people who invited us in, and we had Scripture reading and prayer in some of the homes. However in other homes, after we had told the people about our services in the Matteson Community Hall and extending them a welcome to the place of service, we asked if we might have a word of prayer with them. Some said, "Yes, we will be glad to have you do so." Others looked at us as though we were strangers in the land. Others, still, did not invite us to enter and were frank to tell us that "We can be as good a Christian as any of those going to church by tending to our own work at home and listening to the radio." While others had no use at all for the Church or Sunday School.

Our services began on May 8th. The morning service that day was held by Brother Charles Munson and the Ashland Male Quartet, from Ashland, Ohio. They all did very well and had a good hearing. Our evening service was my first and the audience was small. Our next service was on the 10th, with no other service till the 15th, at which time we had both a morning and an evening service. The attendance was fair at both services.

Our next services were on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and then on the following Sunday morning and evening. We had a few visitors, for whom we were glad. These came to several of our services and seemed to be devoted church folks. The last week we had services on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. This was the fullest week of services we had while there. Our last Sunday morning service was well attended.

The last three Sunday services found visitors with us: on May 15th we had two auto loads from Brighton, Indiana. Sister Bessie Groves brought her father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. I. D. Bowman. They were there with us three Sundays. Bessie's son, Earl Diethriks drove them up to Sherwood the last Sunday. There were a few more from Brighton, but I do not remember their names. One of the laymen from South Bend, Indiana, brought his wife over and spent a part of the day with us. It was a pleasure to have these friends come and spend the time with us. We are thankful for these coming and helping us with their presence.

During our stay in Matteson we visited more than one hundred homes and found out from our solicitation that, of about five hundred people, about sixty-five of them went to church at times, while nearly one-half of the children went somewhere to Sunday School. Many of the children would go to Sunday School if they had a conveyance. Several of these families are so situated that both the father and mother work somewhere, even on Sunday. Some of the farmers in Matteson work on Sunday as well as week days.

As we visited we contacted a family of ability and influence in that community. Both husband and wife of this family told me, after reasoning with them concerning the Word of God, "We agree with you that the teaching you gave from the Bible concerning repentance, baptism, the laying on of hands and the communion as described in the Bible, is like what you have told us." These two told me that they had decided to rededicate their lives unto the Lord and to be baptized and have hands laid on them for the reception of the Holy Spirit. This same confession was made also to Brother Bowman, Bessie Groves and the Pippens. One other gave the same consent, but none of them acted as they promised to do. These told me the last Sunday night, that two of these were waiting on the one person, and he had to see his sister before he would be baptized. So I had to leave these who so faithfully promised to settle the matter of their soul with the Lord, before six persons, and yet not doing what they had promised to do. However these are left in the hands of the Lord and in the care of the Brethren Bowman and Pippen.

I wish to ask you believing Brethren to pray much for the work in Matteson. The field is great and the people there much in need of the Lord Jesus Christ.

What is the real need in Matteson? A man with a hunger for lost souls, who will give his life in visitation, in preparation to live in union with Christ before those people. These people need no entertainment, nor socials, but a man who will be a tool in the hands of the Lord, to be used of Him and for Him among the people in Sherwood.

May the Lord bless Brother and Sister Pippen and Brother I. D. Bowman in their work here.

CAMBRIA, INDIANA

The Cambria Brethren Church and the Pleasant Hill Presbyterian Church held a Union Daily Vacation Bible School from May 31 to June 10. The closing exercises were held in the Pleasant Hill Church on Sunday night, June 12th.

The school averaged forty in attendance. We feel that our efforts were well worth while.

The attendance at Cambria has been better, except for the past three weeks, when we seem to have suffered a slight slump.

We have just returned home from the Indiana Conference, which was a splendid one.

When Poets fail - H. A. Gossard

*When seasons end and fruitless is the earth,
When Visions fail and hearts grow cold and numb,
When Language dies, and there is no rebirth,
When youthful voices, as in death succumb,—
And all that made them glad forever's gone,
When everything is old, and nothing new,
When the Creator says, "Man's Day is done,"
And there's no beauty, sun, stars, rain or dew;
When He who breathed life into human flesh,
And gave instinct to all that's animate,
Calls from the earth all things that now refresh,
And Time no more is reckoned soon or late;
When God withdraws his will to live with Man,
When angels cease their vigil, and each morn
Begins a day which God had in His plan
That it be given devils to adorn,
When Man can look God in the Face and say
I doubt that you made all things, and made Me,
A being quite your equal, out of clay;
Nor that you will exist eternally . . .
When Man can prove by anything He sees:
By stars above, by all God made complete,
That he is self-existent; then, to please
Himself, declare "Man never takes defeat!"
When Man believes there is no God but Man;
That he created Self and all things well;
A home secure for those within the Clan,
A home for those without,—that home a hell;
When heaven's void, and hell is over-cramm'd
With Saints, and what was Truth is now a lie,
And that which once was blest is surely damn'd,
When God goes blind, when angels weep and die—*

*Then will the "Spirit Of All Good" take flight;
Then Poets seek in vain the urge to write.*

INTERESTING ITEMS

Masontown, Penna. Brother Freeman Ankrum's bulletin of June 26th, says that the decorating of the interior of the Church auditorium was to be begun on Monday, June 27th. The Sunday School Annex was also scheduled to receive a new coat of paint. "It is hoped," says Brother Ankrum, "that the entire job will be completed before the Pennsylvania District Conference convenes in Masontown on July 18th."

Repair work will also be done on the baptistry. There are several candidates awaiting baptism at this time.

Uniontown, Penna. We learn that Brother Ralph Mills, together with his good wife, has accepted a call to the pastorate at the Second Brethren Church of Uniontown. He is serving the church out of Ashland, Ohio, until the first of August, at which time they will move to the field. We bespeak for Brother and Sister Mills a fine pastorate at Uniontown.

Dayton, Ohio. The Dayton Hillcrest Brethren Church did a very fine job of entertaining the Ohio District Conference the past week. The greeting the Ohio delegates received was as warm as the weather—and when we tell you it hovered above the 90 mark, most of the time you know the greeting was really warm. They were host to 124 delegates and a great number of others who were not regular delegates. The conference was well attended, during the entire four-day session—Thursday afternoon through Sunday noon. Brother Whetstone and his congregation are to be congratulated. We will have more about the conference next week.

Meyersdale, Penna. In looking over Brother W. S. Ben-shoff's bulletin relating to their Community Vacation

Bible School, we note that they have been conducting this school just a little differently from the average manner of conducting community schools, for we see that each of the churches was used throughout the entire two weeks, with but one department of the school meeting in each church. While this separates the departments as to place of meeting, it appeals to us that a more satisfactory type of work can be done in this manner, and each church shares the responsibility, both as to teachers and to meeting place.

Akron, Ohio (Firestone Park). Our new work at Akron grows and grows. While they have not entirely completed their work around the church, they are making progress rapidly. We note that they were recently putting in the cement steps at the front of the church, at a cost of $114.00.

Father's Day was appropriately observed in the Akron church both morning and evening, the Laymen having charge of the evening service. Two messages were brought at the evening hour by laymen—Elbert Wallace speaking on the subject: "Laymen—Purpose and Plan," and Royce Gates speaking on "The Boys' Brotherhood." Talks were also given by Fred Pennington and Howard Joy. The pastor, Brother J. G. Dodds, gave the closing message of the evening.

The Akron Firestone Park Vacation Bible School had an enrollment of forty-eight with a faculty of eleven. Brother Dodds acted as Director of the school. They are already making plans for their next year's school.

Lanark, Illinois. We quote from Brother McCartney-smith's bulletin of June 26th: "The Modern Youth Class, consisting of 24 High School Youth, has recently been honored by the Sunday School Cabinet with a subscription to the "Brethren Youth" Magazine for each class member. The class officers are: Teacher—Mrs. Willard Rahn; President—Bill Tallman; Vice-President—Ivon Miller; Secretary—Richard Deets; Assistant Secretary—Jodeane Van Slyke. We are much interested in the progress this class is making."

Now that giving of a subscription to "Brethren Youth" to each member of the class is a fine thing, and Brother Munson, without doubt, would welcome the same thing being done for other youth classes. Not so, Charles?

St. James, Maryland. The following was received from Brother Roy H. Lowery under the date of June 24th: "The St. James Brethren Church completes the first week of the Daily Vacation Bible School with an enrollment of 102, with Miss Thelma Baker as director, assisted by Mrs. Margaret Litton, Lois Hutzel, Urla Jamison, Wanda Jamison, Joyce Bloom, Phoebe Lowery and Roberta Moats.

The Sisterhood Girls held their Public Program on Sunday evening, June 19th, with Miss Margaret Lowery, Southeastern District Patroness as the guest speaker. Miss Bertha Maugans, president, was in charge. Mrs. Roy Lowery is the local patroness.

The Young Married People's Class had charge of the opening exercises of the Sunday School on Father's Day. The youngest and the oldest father were recognized.

A "Festival" was held by the Brotherhood Boys on Friday evening, July first.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN "SENT" AND "BROUGHT"

WE GO TO CONFERENCES to learn; we return to sit down and think. We think to make plans; we arise to put our plans into execution.

At least that is the way it should be! But far too often we do not get beyond the "thinking stage."

In our recent Ohio District Conference, from which we returned just yesterday, the laymen of the district had a prominent part in the addresses given us. Only on the opening afternoon and evening, when the messages were brought by Vice Moderator Crick and Moderator Byler respectively, and on the closing Sunday morning when the message was brought by Rev. E. J. Black, were ministers of the district in evidence as main conference speakers. All other conference addresses were delivered by laymen and one lay-woman—Mrs. E. J. Beekley of Canton, Ohio, being that woman.

Somehow as I sat and listened to these messages, which of necessity, as Conference secretary, I had to note carefully, I was impressed by the fact that, in all probability, the topic assigned and handled so wonderfully well by Sister Beekley, was the most important, for she spoke on the subject, "The Faithful Family."

As always, one or two sentences in each address strikes a responsive chord in the mind of the hearer. Not that the others are not worth while, but somehow these certain sentences "ring the bell" in our thinking. One such sentence, even though it was not in any way startlingly new, for we have all heard like expressions before, "rung the bell" for me, and, as usual

It set me to thinking!

Here is that sentence from Sister Beekley's message. She said, "Don't send your children to Sunday School . . ." and then she paused that we might be startled into thinking about what she had just said. But after sufficient time had elapsed to cause us to awaken to the full significance of such a statement, she added just two words, but words that changed the entire meaning of the thought we had been mulling about in our minds—for she said, "Bring them!"

She had been talking of parental responsibility. How the parent owed something to the child, as well as the child owing something to the parent, and had noted the vital worth of religious training in the home. (We hope to be able to bring the full text of Sister Beekley's message to the readers of the Evangelist in the not too distant future). Since religion, (or it may be we had better use the term Christianity) is caught as well as taught, there is a vital need that parents, as well as children, be brought under the influence of the Sunday School and Church.

But going back to our own "thinking"—I was reminded that each Sunday we see scores of little children wending their way "alone" to Sunday School. Where are the parents? Why is there seemingly no longer that "family" trek to the doors of the church? Why are these little hands which are clasped together as little brother and sister go down the street toward the church, not clasped in the big loving hands of the father and the tender hands of the mother? If we can get the answer to that question and get it solved by the "clasped hands" of parents and children, we have gone a long way toward solving the problems of Sunday School and Church attendance and interest.

Each Sunday as I go the short distance I have to travel to our Ashland Church from my home, I see parents "sending" their small children to Sunday School, while they rake the lawn, mow the grass, or read the Sunday paper, and admonish the children to "hurry home right after Sunday School, so we can get an early start on our picnic," or elsewhere.

It is here in such attitudes and, alas, too often among church "members," that the problem of Christian training lies—the indifferent attitude of parents toward the evident "need" of their children for Christian training and attitudes. What is the church doing to solve this problem? What are you, personally, doing?

Think it over!

Office Gleanings

By The Editor

"Please! PLEASE! PLEASE!"

We are in trouble again! Seems that we have a propensity for that in the subscription department of the Evangelist. But we have a reason for it each time. Sometimes it is our fault; but other times it is not: it's just our misfortune.

Now here is why we say "please" as at the top of this column. We have recently received renewals under signatures other than the one whose name is on the stencil and in our card file. This is due, largely, to the fact that the paper has been sent in the husband's name and the wife sends in the subscription, or in the wife's name and the husband sends in the subscription. As, for example, The paper has been coming to Mr. John Doe, 250 Blank Street, Someplace, Indiana. We receive a check or money order under the name of Mrs. Sarah Doe, Someplace, Indiana. She, of course has taken it for granted that we knew she was John Doe's wife. But we didn't. Consequently we hardly know what to do. So we take a chance. Sometimes we are right; but also we can be wrong.

Now this will help us greatly if you will give both the husband's name and the wife's name when you send in the subscription. Or better, just take the Evangelist and tear off the address on it, or make a copy of it just as it appears, and send it with your subscription. We want to help you and we are sure you want to help us. So, again we say, "Please, Please, Please." Thank you!

The Church's Great Enemy

THE CHURCH'S GREATEST ENEMY is its members who never come near enough to the church to learn anything about its program. Why is it that so many members of the church do not attend more faithfully? Is it because of the preacher? Would better preaching bring them out? It would help, but not to the degree that you might think. Catholics go to mass, which is conducted in a language they do not understand. Would variety help? It might, and yet the mass is the same Sunday after Sunday. After you have explored all the reasons for the failure of Protestants to go to church, you can sum our findings in these three sentences:

1. They do not think attending worship is important.
2. They do not believe they have committed a serious sin when they miss.
3. They just don't want to go.

Attending Church is Important

The first thing we must do if we are to have another Protestant Reformation is to stress the importance of going to church. Church attendance ought not to be regarded as a rite which, if faithfully performed, guarantees a man's salvation. But on the other hand, it ought to be viewed as a necessary element in the religious life of a man who is attempting to live the Christian life. If the spiritual life of a man must be nurtured toward maturity just as the physical life of a man develops and grows, then it seems to me that it is just as urgent for a man to feed his soul by regular church attendance as it is to eat three good meals a day. And if the soul of a man is more valuable than his body, then church attendance takes on more importance than diet.

How some people expect to grow spiritually by attending only an occasional church service for the worship of God and spiritual enlightenment is a complete mystery to me. These same people see to it that their children are fed three wholesome meals each day, that their dogs, cats, birds and gold-fish are properly fed each day, but as for their eternal souls, they expect to grow by some automatic, mysterious, unfailing method which they can't explain.

America was settled by people seeking religious freedom—the freedom to worship as they pleased. They never would have come to wilderness America in order to be free to stay away from church. Recently in a conversation with a woman I asked which church she attended. That embarrassed her; so I asked her which church she stayed away from—and it turned out to be one of our major denominations.

It is a sin to stay away from church

It is just as important for Protestants to attend church as it is for Catholics. No matter what else they would like to do on Sunday, they first attend mass—and in the cities, they get up for 4:00 mass if they want to take a trip. Perhaps their reasons for going to church are not as good as ours but the fact remains that they go—and put us to shame by their example. And while we Protestants go limping along with two thirds of our people absent, the Catholics are growing stronger every day. Except on Christmas and Easter or when something spectacular is taking place, the majority of our people never come near the church except to ask a favor of the minister. But when there is trouble, how quickly they phone the parsonage and how demanding they are for the services of the church.

Every Protestant denomination, when it receives people into church membership exacts a pledge much like ours.

1. Do you believe that Jesus is God's Son and do you receive him and trust him as your Savior?
2. Do you turn away from all sin and will you endeavor by God's grace to live according to the example and teachings of Jesus?
3. Will you be loyal to the church, upholding her by your prayers and your presence, your substance and your service?

The least that can be said about the indifferent church member is that he is not as good as his word for he has promised before God and his fellow man to be loyal to the church, to uphold the church by his prayers and his presence, his substance and his service.

The Roman Church uses the threat of excommunication, discipline and damnation to keep Catholics going to confession and mass. I do not propose that Protestants use these methods to teach that it is sinful to miss church when it is physically possible to attend. We sin against Christ, his church, and ourselves when we stay away.

We must make worship beautiful and meaningful.

It does absolutely no good just to criticize people who stay from church—they do not hear the criticism and the ones who do hear it are, as a general rule, the faithful and dependable members. We must be positive in our approach. We must do all we can to make our services beautiful, meaningful, helpful and inspiring. Part of this is my job, part belongs to the organist and choir, the ushers, the janitor and to you. If you sing with fervor, if you are reverent and attentive, if you are friendly and make the stranger and visitor welcome, if you go out of your way to invite and encourage people, if your life reveals a vital Christian faith—then you will make a positive contribution to the revitalization of Protestantism in America.

It was the dagger of his friend Brutus that killed Caesar; it was Judas, one of the twelve, who betrayed Jesus; the greatest enemy of the church is the indifferent member.—John Middlekauff in the "Gospel Messenger."

Ohio District Conference Moderator's Address

Delivered by Moderator John T. Byler at Dayton on June 23rd

"The Responsibility of Privilege"

IT IS NOT MY PURPOSE in this conference, to strike a pessimistic note in regards to our church. I am "sold" on the Brethren Church; I am convinced that her teachings are sound and Biblical; her purpose is good; her people are of the finest; her ministry is consecrated to a noble task; the interests of the church are ever reaching out into new fields of service; and the future outlook for the Brethren Church is bright and hopeful.

Yet a fact that is known to each one of us remains. We are not attaining the heights—we are not reaching our goals—we are not reaping the harvest that might be and should be ours. Everyone of us is aware of the serious condition of the church, universal today. Numerical increases in many denominations have been so slight as to be practically negligible. Many Sunday Schools are losing, rather than gaining ground. In fact, many denominations over a decade have been reporting losses instead of gains.

And we recognize, too, that not only the church is in serious condition today, for we are well aware of the fact that the world and its organizations are all in precarious circumstances. Various outbreaks and threats—politically, internationally, internally, in labor circles, through unemployment, through the housing situation, through crime—all go to remind us that we are sitting on a powder keg in our world today. And the saddest part of the whole picture is that the world and the countries of the world have no solution to offer in settlement of the problem. We have observed the united efforts of nations in Atlantic Charters and Treaties, in Four Power Agreements, in United Nations Sessions, in various conferences and efforts to bring about harmony and peace; we have tried as a nation, to underwrite the other nations of the world, economically, through the Marshall Plan and other devices; through threats and cold wars, through advice and suggestions and entreaties, we have attempted to relieve the pent up emotion and unrest of the world. And the total result of all this effort has been anything but satisfactory.

The only possible solution is in the hands of the Church of Jesus Christ, and sad to say, the Church, too often has been found sound asleep. In the book of the Revelation, we find the Word coming to the Church at Sardis, "Thou livest and art dead." This word could just as aptly be applied to some of our churches today. It most certainly applies to some of our church members in almost every church throughout our continent.

The greatest name by which man can be called is the name "Christian." Those who belong to the Church of Christ bear that name; the name implies Life, and Life Eternal. But too many only bear the name and for them the implication is untrue. They are dead!

A story is related concerning a certain minister who was asked to conduct the funeral service for a certain godless church member. The family wanted a public church funeral. The minister, a bit more daring and certainly more blunt than most of his colleagues would be, in a few brief words preached a powerful and pointed sermon as he referred to the corpse lying in the casket before him. He said of the departed member: "This corpse has been a member of my church for twenty-five years." It is sad, indeed, to have to admit that most of our churches have entirely too many walking corpses holding membership in our churches today—none of whom live up to the name, that Christianity should rightfully imply.

We are too prone to forget our privileges as Christians. We forget that we possess the greatest Leader that the world has ever known. On his way to Greece in his campaign against Pompey, Caesar tried to calm the troubled fears of his sailors during a storm on the Mediterranean with these words: "Remember, you carry Caesar and his fortunes." While we are aware of the fact that only an egotist could speak in such a fashion, we are aware, also, that One did have the right to so speak. We know that Christ did have the right and still has the right to speak in this fashion. He could speak truly today, substituting the name Christ for Caesar, as His Church in this day of trouble and turmoil, saying, "Remember, you carry Christ and His fortunes." His fortunes are the redeeming fortunes of the world. These assure the world of safety—for we know that the Church can never be overwhelmed so long as the Church carries Jesus Christ.

The whole Church of Christ was present in a boat on the sea one night when a storm arose. The church was made up of Peter, and James and John and the other disciples. If the boat had gone down, the whole Church would have perished, for in the boat were those whom Christ had selected to carry on His work. But the boat did not go down! It carried Jesus Christ!

So, as I said in my opening statement, I am not pessimistic about the Church in the world today, as long as the Church has Jesus Christ in it. But we dare not make a substitution, nor dare we be found asleep, for at just such a time, will the enemy come to sow tares among the wheat.

I. The Church—Asleep—and Without Power

The most tragic thing that could possibly happen to the world would not be to have the sudden unleashing of atomic energy upon our cities. It would not be to have nations align themselves up against other nations in another "all-out" warfare with the most deadly weapons that man's scientific mind has been able to conceive. Instead, the most tragic thing that could possibly happen to the world would be to have the church fall asleep at its work. The Church is Spiritual—it must never sleep! Yet, there are indications on every hand that the Church is asleep. It is without power. It is failing to accomplish its mission to the extent that it ought. The church has a privilege that is denied to the world—but with that privilege goes a terrific responsibility.

We hear the arguments on every hand—"We are moving forward—we are holding our own—our services are fairly well attended—our financial program is adequate to care for our needs. Yes, we are holding our own." But the Church was never intended to simply hold its own! Where would we be, today, if the early Christians would have been content to hold their own? In holding their own, some churches are like some people. They may carry on some waking activities in their sleep. They may talk in their sleep, they may walk in their sleep—yes, they may even hold services in their sleep. But the Church of Christ can not be about the business of the Lord when it is asleep. The Church of America has a wonderful power in its control when it stays awake on the job. And it has a tremendous responsibility to use this power in the right way. It was the Church that got rid of the evil of slavery; it was the Church that brought about educational advance; it was the Church that brought women from the level of chattel to the level of humanity; the Church has been responsible for the erection of hospitals and orphanages; the Church made Prohibition possible some years ago, but while it congratulated itself and fell asleep again, Prohibition was put out of business and the Evil of Alcohol came back as it had never been here before. And if the Church continues to sleep there will be some of these other gains turned once more into losses, simply because of the fact that while the church sleeps, the enemy sows tares.

Some one has made the remark that the prayer of the American Church is "Now I lay me down to sleep." That is an awful indictment against the Church of Jesus Christ, and while I can't agree with this sentiment, there are times when it is all too true. We think of ourselves as a Christian nation—yet much of our population is non-Christian, and of the remainder who claim to be, only about 25% of them are regular in their church attendance. And while this is only one indication of the fact that we are no longer Christian as a nation, we can find many others. I cite just one: Examine the legislation of our country for the past number of years. The largest bulk of our efforts has been exerted in the direction of war—manufacturing instruments to take life rather than to save it. We have been more interested, as a nation, in soaking our fellowmen in their own human blood than in teaching them that the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse them from all sin. This would never have been our shameful record if the Church of Christ had remained awake.

We have all gone through the experience of riding through our countryside or walking through the streets of our cities and villages and seeing service stars, in many of the homes of our land. Many of these stars, blue when first hung, were replaced by gold ones later. If the young men in the homes of the past generations had been dedicated to the Lord's service as Christian ministers, or Christian business men, or Christian teachers, there would have been no necessity for a call to the colors in our country's service. We need to think of a new slogan on December 7 (and every other day of the year): Remember Calvary" instead of "Remember Pearl Harbor."

II. The Church—Called to Arise

The prophet, Isaiah, called a sinning Israel to arise and awake when she fell asleep to the tasks God had given her. He cried out to this people: "Awake, Awake, put on thy strength; shake thyself from the dust; arise." That call went out to the Children of Israel in bondage and in despair, and it comes just as definitely to us in Christ's Church today.

A sense of defeat has settled upon the church. In our own denomination we frequently argue that we are so small that we can't undertake big things. But God is not limited, and as long as we work with Him and according to His will, we need not be limited, either. But because we are discouraged, we limit ourselves. We receive not because we ask not. We hear, frequently, that the day of great revivals is past; it is commonly believed that man can't be interested in the church today like he was a generation or two ago—there are too many other attractions. Consequently, we are practically ready to say that we are wasting our time in trying to enlist young people in church any longer. I know that many of us as pastors are delighted if we can be certain that our young people will be in a church service at least once each week. But I am not as much concerned, right at the moment, about the young people and their faithfulness as I am about the problem of the middle aged. The people from 25 to 50 years are a greater source of worry to the average pastor (or at least they are to me) than those of younger years. Our problem is not so much a problem of getting the young people into the church as it is of keeping the older people interested. Why aren't our young people interested in the church? Why are they more interested in going to the movies on Sunday evening than in attending religious services? Why is it that the mid-week prayer service is considered by the average young person today, a meeting for the older people of the church—and then, only for those older people who are just a little bit "peculiar" in their enthusiasm toward religion? The fault lies not with our younger people, but with those of an older generation. Middle aged people have failed to develop a desire for the church in their children. They have failed to set an example of faithful church-going for them. Too frequently, the parents of our young people have been willing to take the line of least resistance, and the church has had to get along as best it could. No, the greatest problem of the church is not to get people to decide for Christ. It is, rather, to get those who have decided for Him, to abide in Him. Getting converted is often only a moment's work for the Holy Spirit. But remaining converted, at least, remaining faithful, is a full, life-time job.

The Christian who grows weary in following Christ attempts to make his religion just as easy for himself as possible without casting it aside entirely. An occasional check to the church treasurer, church attendance when convenient, participation in the communion services—these and a few other ties keep one half-heartedly interested in the church. But they are not enough! And when an individual attempts to get by with these, it is only another step to every possibly flimsy excuse to neglect prayer, Bible study, and finally public worship. This individual wants no responsibility in the church—he resigns from every office or refuses to take any, and instead of asking "How much can I do for my church?" he asks, "How little can I do and still get by?" When such circumstances come to pass, we can't expect our children to grow enthusiastic over things of the church. And certainly it can't surprise us too much if we find our lives suddenly without power, and our churches growing cold and without attraction to those without Christ.

Many churches have tried to combat this lack of power—this cold indifference, by questionable methods of bringing people out. It is often thought that if we can just keep people coming to church, everything will eventually be all right. There is consequently a lot of lost motion—rushing to and fro—oiling ecclesiastical machinery—unusual advertising (we have a revival going on this week in Canton where crowds are coming out to see Ranger, the Gospel Horse)—even giving of door prizes and gifts. A certain church not far from one I served some years ago, with its big illuminated cross on the roof, had a sign outside its doors in big glaring letters: "The way to meet depression is to come to our dance next Wednesday night." I am not narrow minded. I am not saying that you can't be a Christian if you dance. But I am saying that the Church of Jesus Christ was not established for the purpose of becoming a dance hall, nor a bingo parlor, nor a restaurant, nor a recreational society. And if we substitute these for the original purpose of the church—if these are allowed to take the place of the message of the Church—the Church will be defeated and beaten, for it will be trying to do something for which it was never created.

The true Church of Christ possesses something that can not be found in no other place. When it opens its doors to the things of the world and places itself on a competitive basis with the world in these things, the people of the world who are looking for the Message of the Church will be unable to find it. The work of the Church is to lift up the Christ of the Cross and as we do this the world will find a way of being lifted from the woeful mess in which it finds itself. Every person who is seriously trying to lift up the Lord as He commanded needs the whole-hearted support of the church. And this support is an individual responsibility—an individual responsibility which comes with the individual privilege that came to you when you became a member of the Body of Christ. How long has it been since you have remembered your missionary in his difficult work in your prayers and in your offerings? How long has it been since you prayed for your preacher and his message? How long has it been since you have lain awake at night and thought and prayed about the problems of your church, or about a neighbor or friend whose soul is still bound for the destruction of Hell? How much are you really concerned that your church be a real soul-saving station for the glory of God?

I am serious, friends, about these things. Our Conference Theme is: "Being Found Faithful." God is faithful; He has never gone back on His Word. Neither has He relieved you of your responsibility when he extended to you the privilege of salvation. We have not, as a Church, been faithful to the extent that God asks. That is why our young people are unconcerned. That is why our missionary activities have been hindered. That is why our churches are cold. That is why in our own spiritual lives we have been unhappy and discontented. We need to come to the foot of the cross and shake off the dust that has gotten into our eyes and ears. We need to arise and put on His power and His strength. We must shake off the dust that has clouded our vision and fogged our understanding, so that we can awaken to our responsibilities.

III. The Church—Assuming Leadership

is going to the dogs." I can't accept this philosophy for people who are given the right start in life, nor for those who receive the proper guidance along life's way. For some time I served a city church as pastor, and during that period it was my privilege on numerous occasions to meet with enthusiastic groups of young people—sometimes five or six hundred of them. They were all eager to serve their Church and their Lord, but they all needed leadership. The leadership should be assumed by—in fact the leadership must be undertaken by the church. In our own denomination we have many young people just as enthusiastic about their Christian lives as young people can be. But they too, need leadership,—not just a National Youth Director—not simply a National Youth Board, but an enthusiastic body of Laymen and Laywomen in every church going "all out" for Christ in order that His program may go forward. The church can never lead unless it is awake—fully awake to the responsibility that goes with privilege. To provide that necessary leadership, the Church must seek constant fellowship with Christ and practice an unceasing devotion to Him and His cause. Once a week religion is not enough. Christianity without cost and sacrifice is not possible. Unless the church is willing to pay the full and complete price of leadership, she must give up her right to lead.

In the book of the Acts, Luke reports that the blessings that followed Pentecost came about as a result of one fact. He says: "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and in the fellowship and breaking of bread and prayers." No church or denomination will function successfully unless its members take seriously this rule for success. We must, as Christians, each personally see to it that we are continuing steadfastly in the apostles' teaching; we must see to it that our fellowship is unbroken; and we must be zealous in the fulfilling of the ordinances of the church and in our own personal devotional lives. The promises of God are only for those who continue in the faith. It is required of man that a fresh yielding to God take place daily. Even in every small detail of life must we commit our ways to Him if we are to acquire holiness in His sight.

I Kings Chapter 17 speaks of Elijah's being sent to hide by the brook Cherith where God promised to have the ravens feed him. The exact wording is "I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there." There was a definite requirement before Elijah could expect to be fed—he had to be at the appointed place. It might not have been the most comfortable place in the world. I am sure that Elijah had no innerspring mattress to sleep on; and to get to Cherith he likely had to walk a hot dusty road; certainly, the place was not of Elijah's choosing. But one thing is certain—for the privilege of God's protection and blessing, Elijah was responsible to God to fulfill His commandment.

If this was true concerning Elijah, certainly it is true of us as individuals, and it is true of the Church of Christ. If we want the blessing of God, we must fulfill what He demands of us. Is it any wonder that we are so often left without power as individuals, and as congregations when we examine ourselves in the light of the Cross of Christ? Look at Christ and His Cross for a moment. Let us be honest with ourselves. Haven't we been niggardly in our discipleship? Haven't we been miserly with our talents and possessions? Haven't our loyalty and devotion often grown cold? God has commanded that we go to Cherith. We have felt that we could do all that was necessary from Louisville, or Ashland, or Dayton. And then we wonder why God's blessing has not rested upon us!

A certain Chaplain said to some soldiers returning from the war, "Never mind boys, you are making a new world." "No Chaplain," was the answer that came back to him, "we are not doing that. That is your business. We are smashing the old world." And this is a pretty representative picture of the world and the most of its agencies today. The efforts of the world are pretty much in vain—a process of smashing the old world, if you please. But the Church of Jesus Christ must engage in the creation of the new. Men need to be re-made—in Christ. They need to become new creatures through His transforming power.

Only as the Church fulfills its task shall relationships ever be what they ought to be between man and God. And this relationship will never be arrived at by Christians whose religion is simply a once a week religion. It is only possible through the members of the Brethren Church accepting the work of Christianity as a full time responsibility

Usually we think of the Moderator's address as concluding with any recommendations that his best thinking might offer. The needs of our denomination are many. The fields in which we are working and the areas into which we might go are varied and their work covers a vast scope. But no greater need exists in the church, as I see it, than that of a closer walk with God on the part of the membership of our denomination. If the Church is to have power, it will be because we refuse to faint and grow weary. If we go forward, it will be because of the fact that we keep our eyes constantly on Christ and refuse to be side-tracked in reaching the goal that He has set for us.

The Men's Gospel Team Record For 1948-1949

by Glenn Shank

Again the call for curtain has come upon another year of Gospel Team activity. The team began the year with an earnest desire to be of service to Christ on and off the campus. With such a desire, and under the capable leadership of the officers, headed by Robert Hoffman, president, and club advisor Professor Flora, the team set out to perform those things which would show the club's devotion to Christ and those things which would remind others of their responsibility to and their need of Christ and His great program. Yes, the club felt in a very definite way that they had an important task ahead, not only in doing but also in living.

This is a club consisting mainly of those young men who are enrolled in Pre-Sem and Sem division of the college, plus all other young men who desire to be active in such service as the club renders. The membership of the club was the largest of any recent year. The club numbered 37 with 6 denominations represented. An unity of faith and devotion was expressed even in these particulars.

The meetings, which were held on alternate Tuesday evenings, were well attended and fine programs and discussions were brought forth. To be sure, much good came from these meetings. The club assumes its rightful place among the other clubs of the campus, and the members can feel justly proud of their accomplishments on the campus.

Needless to say, the team feels that they have rendered profitable service to many. Truly much seed has been sown, the future will bring forth its harvest.

The reports coming back from the churches visited were ones of commendation. The Offerings given by the various churches in appreciation of services rendered were bountiful and well received.

The club is glad that they could serve in these various capacities. Their only sorrow is—the year had ended all too soon. Hats off and praises to the advisor, officers, and club members for a job well done, and may all pledge support and interest to the incoming officers and members.

Ashland College can feel proud of the type of work which the Men's Gospel Team has done and the way in which they have represented the college.

USING ATOMIC ENERGY CONSTRUCTIVELY

Scripture: I Chron. 29:10-13; Zech. 4:6

For The Leader

SINCE THAT FATEFUL AUGUST date a few years ago, when the first atomic bomb was dropped on Japan, we have been living in a different age. For in that one act, the curtain was raised on an era in which people are atom conscious. There have been other great weapons of warfare created throughout the space of man's sojourn upon the earth, but none which have left the nations so fearful, so distrustful, so frustrated. This new weapon has been played up until we now live in a state of fear, hysteria, and uncertainty. Some tell us it is nothing to worry about. Others continue to make us conscious of the dangers facing us from this terrible weapon. Regardless of whether or not there is justification for our fears, we should give the problem our very grave attention. The atomic danger is nothing to sneer at. There have been some advances in the use of atomic energy for constructive and commercial purposes, the full development of which, we believe, will be far more wonderful than anything the development of electricity has produced.

DISCUSSION

1. IS THERE REASON FOR "ATOMIC" FEAR? If you have read the article, "No Time To Waste" in the Christian Life Magazine for February, 1949, you are convinced that there is some basis for an "Atomic" fear. But not all will agree that there is this danger. It is frightful enough, though, and should the nations of the earth get into another war, the civilian life and property loss would be great. But remember, according to our scripture tonight, all power is in the hands of God. He will permit and hold back as He wills. Just to show you what we mean: The Revelation pictures the terrible things of destruction which God will permit to come upon sinful and disobedient men during the tribulation. In this age, God protects His own, and so we must rest secure in the promises of His Holy Word, for we shall be removed from this earth before the great curses shall come. The best insurance that the "atomic" fear can be minimized is to pray daily for God's blessing and protection.

2. HOW GREAT IS ATOMIC POWER? To answer the question, let's go for a moment over into the field of electricity. We have great and powerful machines to generate electricity, and we call it power. As great as it is, and as wonderful as it is, it pales into a weakling when the great lightning flashes across the heavens. Thus with atomic power. Man in all these years has succeeded in splitting the atom and releasing its power. But God's power in the storm, the earthquake, etc., is far greater. Before the great and matchless power of God, the biggest atomic bomb is as a child's small firecracker. Someone has said that atomic bombs can be made which would blow the earth apart, through chain reaction. What do you think? God predicts that the earth and the heavens shall melt with a fervent heat, but in that day, God will light the fuse, not man. Atomic power is great, but God is greater.

3. USING IT PROPERLY. Man, in his satanic urge has always used every invention to bring about the destruction of his fellowmen. They say that many of the great improvements we have today, (puncture proof tire tubes, wire recorders, longer wearing synthetic tires, etc.,) have come as the result of the last war. But the "destructive" improvements have been greater. It is a sad paradox on life that when man invents something to improve society and ease of life, he uses it to destroy himself. And the Devil dances with glee when he sees such things going on. When one man invents something, he sees how he can destroy his fellowman, and thus have more of the world, and its wealth for himself. Still, we can have constructive blessings from atomic power. Men are working today to harness its energy to run dynamos, produce heat, etc. A new era and attainment of civilization is dawning upon us. Are we ready for it spiritually?

4. MAN WINS; MAN LOSES. With the thousands and millions of dollars being spent on the development of atomic power, sooner or later the problem of harnessing it will be solved, as have all other great problems confronting man's mechanical progress. Atomic power will heat our houses, drive our automobiles, planes and trains. It will free us from all drudgery. And then what will we do? One of the great curses in our land today is the free time we have. The Devil finds things for idle hands to do. So, with more and more free time, we turn more and more to the sensuous things which seem to satisfy the sinful nature within us. Thus man wins the battle of atomic power, but he loses the battle of his morals. Only as man will parallel his advancement with the advance of atomic energy, with a deepening of his responsibility to God—to obey and respect His laws—can man hope to win out.

5. EVERY BLESSING, A GREATER RESPONSIBILITY. God opens doors that we might enter in. If God has at this time opened the door of atomic energy, it must be that He has some special opportunity for us to spread the gospel in a faster way. Let us look for that opening, for it will surely come. Already the airplane and radio have speeded the work of the missionary. Perhaps the day will come when a missionary can take an atomic generator to his isolated mission station, set it up and obtain power to run his little hospital, church and home. On the spot he can print leaflets, play music, show pictures . . . all with a thousand miles of trackless jungle all around him. Let us be sure that when the day opens up that we are prepared spiritually to handle and control this power which God has allowed to be opened for us.

QUESTIONS

1. Do you agree that there is an "atomic fear," as many would have us believe?
2. Is there danger that "atomic" experiments might get out of control and destroy us all?
3. What is the best guarantee that we shall not all be destroyed by an atomic bomb?
4. Discuss some fields in which you think atomic power could be used constructively.

HIS WAY AND MINE

I carefully laid every plan;
The future seemed so bright;
My hopes and dreams they towered high—
I saw no trace of night.

And then at closing of the day
I knelt in usual prayer,
And prayed: "Dear Lord, bless every plan—
All that I hope and dare."

But day by day my plans all failed,
My hopes came tumbling down;
All my ambitions disappeared,
And failure was my crown.

Perplexed—I could not understand;
Had I not knelt in prayer?
And asked that every plan and hope
Would find a blessing rare?

Then in the stillness of the night,
Out of the shadows dim,
I heard a sweet persuading voice
That called me close to Him.

"Why don't you let Me make your plans?
I've trod the path before.
Just leave the future in My hands,
I'll lead thee o'er and o'er."

In shame I bowed my haughty head;
My spirit low was brought,
For I had caught a strange new light,
By His own Spirit taught.

No longer do I pray as once,
"Dear Lord, bless all my plans."
But now I pray: "Lord, plan for me,
The future's in Thy hands."

THE CLEAR LEADING OF GOD'S SPIRIT

Scripture: Exodus 40:34-38.

Hymns on the day by day and definite leading of the Spirit

Volunteer prayers

Seed thought provokers:

SAVED PEOPLE should know the leading of the Spirit, and know the will of God (Gal. 5:16; Eph. 4:20; 1 Thess. 5:19; Eph. 5:18). Philip had the leading of the Lord to leave a revival in Samaria and go to Gaza for a work that would be shown to him (Acts 8:26, 29, 39, 40). Paul, Luke and Timothy were forbidden by the Holy Spirit "to preach the word in Asia" (Acts 16:6,7). And thus the gospel was preached in Europe (vs. 9, 10). To be always in the leading of the Spirit and guided by the Spirit is not a matter of superstition.

By the pillar of fire and cloud God led the children of Israel out of Egypt, a type of this world, and through the wilderness journey, a type of our life in this world, and over Jordan into the Promised Land, a type of going to Heaven (Ex. 13:21, 22). During the plague of darkness on Egypt the Israelites had light in their dwellings (Ex. 10:23). The Christian need never walk in darkness. The Shekinah glory in Solomon's temple, and above the mercy seat of the ark of the covenant is a type for us of the presence of God's Spirit. The pillar of fire led, covered, and was a wall of protection to Israel crossing the Red Sea (Ex. 14:19, 20). But sin in the camp (Ex. 32:6) ended the conscious nearness of the Spirit, and the tabernacle was put out to one side of the camp because God no longer dwelt in the midst of His people (Ex. 33:5, 7). This lack of God's presence was a great calamity, yet we are contented today to have churches with no power! It is the presence of God and the power of the Holy Spirit that marks the Christian. Israel could not go forward until the manifest presence of God was restored by the intercession of Moses (Ex. 33:13, 14).

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

by The Editor

Lesson for July 24, 1949

PRAYERS OF CONFESSION

Lesson: Psalm 32:1-5; 5:1-2, 7-13

PRAYER CANNOT be properly made without confession. Jesus' illustration of the Pharisee and the Publican, as recorded in Luke 18:9-14, brings this to light most vividly. It is the publican's confession of sin, found in his words, "God be merciful to me, a sinner!" that brings the practical statement from the lips of Jesus, "I tell you, this man went down to his house justified . . ."

Our attention is called to the Psalms that tell of the contrition in the heart of David after he had committed the great sin of having Uriah, Bathsheba's husband, murdered (for that is what it really amounted to) and we find that, while the confession of his sin made him right in the sight of a loving God, yet he had to suffer the consequences of his sin and to bear the scars throughout the remainder of his life. To keep back from confession is merely to build up a greater barrier between God and man, and to run the risk of committing still more and greater sins.

Paul writes in Romans 10:10. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Of course God can read the very thoughts of the heart; and sometimes our mouths do not speak the words the heart desires—but all in all, the main thing is to remember that, as the author of Hebrews writes in Hebrews 4:12, "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, . . . and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" He (God) knows what we really mean.

How easy it is to see the sins of others, and to wonder why they do not confess them and cease their sinning. But how different when the spotlight is turned on self. We do not seem to be able to see our own sins. David was seemingly not aware of the grossness of his sin until it was pointed out to him by Nathan the prophet. He thought no one knew about it. But he could not escape God. We talk about the "All-seeing Eye of God," but too often forget that it sees us too. Does not the Word say, "Thou, O God, seest ME!"

When we turn to the third verse in our lesson, Psalms 32:3, we see the perfect picture of a man under conviction—conscious of sin, yet unwilling to confess it. I have seen men under conviction during a revival meeting, grasp the back of the pew in front of them till their hands turned white from the pressure that literally drove the blood from them. Their bodies were tense; their mouths tightly closed; their eyes downcast—they were truly in great agony. And then came the pull of the Spirit, the walk down the aisle of the church, the confession. How different their looks; how happy their smile. They had confessed their sins to the Father and the Father had forgiven them.

Far too many people feel that sin is not present when they can get away with what they are doing. To them, the sin is getting caught at it. Or, they may try to bargain with God and say, "I'll do thus and so, God, if you will do what I want you to for me." How foolish! That is not God's way, and no one can feel the assurance of forgiveness if he tries to thus bargain.

The second Psalm of our lesson (Psalm 51) gives us a fine illustration of a great confession. It should be read carefully and brought to bear on our own lives and attitudes.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

In "Old Kentuck"

We were enroute to Lost Creek to give the Commencement Address to five graduates of the Riverside Institute, the sixth having been killed in the accident of which most of our readers know. We found Adah improving and all the people of the village and school believe that but for the Lord's intervention, she would not have lived. But Lost Creek believes in Divine Healing according to James 5.

Home

We were homed in the Drushal home despite the seriousness of Adah and I do not conceive how they could have made us more welcome, nor brought us closer to the Lord and our task among them than they did. Brother George said that the audience that heard me was the largest they ever had and they did not forget to express their appreciation in attendance at three other meetings. Once I spoke to an attentive audience in a most difficult field at what was "Stacy" but now, is better named, maybe, Rowdy.

Here only a few months ago, be it remembered, a church sprang into existence in a bit more than a week and it is the most substantial building of all in the community. A full house listened attentively, and in only a few days, one of the hearers, near the kingdom but refusing to yield, was in an accident where it was reported that four were killed—the result, according to this same lad, of the "too-much-liquor" celebration of Decoration Day. What a way to celebrate!

Sacrifice Some More

Of course I had known of Riverside with its sacrifices and troubles and had often met the Drushals and heard them tell of their work; but no one will ever know until they see with their own eyes, what sacrifices they have really made. No one spends a long time there until they are impressed with the great needs and opportunities to "do unto others as one would have others do unto them."

I have been an "honorary Citizen of Father Flanagan's Boys Town" at Omaha, Nebraska, for some years; but hereafter I'll be more devoted to Drushal's Boys Town, where this year thirty-nine of the forty boys were from broken homes, we are told. A place where one saw no smoking by anyone; no loud talking and carousing; no idleness; no profanity; no movies; but devotion, prayer and clean living all around. Pretty girls who would have no home but for this; graduating from an accredited High School which, but for sacrifices, they would perhaps have not known at all; taught by college graduates and accredited by state authority when by many arguments, it could have been denied, save for the product of the school now more than forty years of age.

Children of graduates were among the graduates this year and unless I miss my guess, that will continue for decades if the Lord delays His appearance.

What Do They Need?

I'd put it another way: What do they not need? Let more Brethren do what many have done recently—go and see. A former parishioner and his family happened there on this Sunday (not knowing we were there) and his daughter's first expression was, I am told, "Oh, I wish I had brought along some paint!" They had it in their store at home and wished it there. I cannot speak for the Drushals, but if I were to tell what a church can do, even as some have already done, I'd say: 1. Let some of three or four churches take enough men and paint to paint a large building and do it in a week. Four buildings. 2. Let another church take that many men and several trucks and stone the driveway of one-fourth-mile in another between-Sundays. Let the Drushals tell when they are ready to start the new Dormitory and Gym, so that Brethren from all over could assure them that, so far as labor is concerned, it will be finished by time for school to start in September. Blankets, sheets, some good mattresses, pillows, chairs, rockers—not needed to be too new—all would help to make and keep Riverside an accredited school, despite the fact that the state offices might need to overlook some furnishings and even scholarship because of the character, morality, and discipline of the future citizens they produce.

Riverside needs much more and another might stress much that I have not. Devotion, sacrifice, dependence on God, prayer, Bible study—all are so much better than small shacks on the hillside with the mule and the hoe, what just common comforts are so much better and the varied diet so much better than the corn pone and hominy, which to most was their diet, that it is small investments that can produce much here. It is easy for me to say; and let me say it again, let more of our people this summer take a trip over the hills and mountains with hairpin curves and shady glens, hillsides and hilltops, to see for themselves if they are really making any near reach to the Golden Rule. I'm loath to stop, but I'll have more to say another time, if the Lord wills.

Lost Creek and the Brotherhoods

It may well be that the Brotherhood has not well understood the work of these devoted people, some of whom have gone to their reward and some yet to be chastened for their base effort to stop the work and nullify the orthodoxy of the Drushals. Let none accuse until they have spent some time here—if only a few diligent hours. Some would not be like the Drushals if they could; but more could not if they would. Most of us would not make the sacrifices; but more would not "leave it to the Lord" as they have been compelled to do and live to see the reality and validity of that dependence. To open school without windows in a crude, green, lumber building, chased out of the school by contemptible opponents whose administration soon proved the folly of their conduct; to start in school in October without doors or heating plant for the new building, only to have a stranger who never was there before or since, give them, and others to install them; to have devoted helpers like the Kecks who have been there this year and lost all their household possessions, and Carrie Stoffer and others whose names I do not have, to give their time without other compensation than that "the Lord sends," is simply beyond the devotion and sacrifice of most of us. May their kind "increase mightily and speedily."

PLEASE NOTE

ALL BRETHREN CHURCHES

Credential blanks are being sent out as of July 1st, for the Sixty-first Annual Conference of Brethren Churches which is to be held at Ashland, Ohio, August 22nd to 28th, 1949. If additional blanks are needed, or if anyone is overlooked, the Conference Secretary should be notified within the course of the next two weeks. Also the various Boards which desire Co-operative delegate credentials should write to the Secretary, stating the number needed. Do not delay doing this, but do it now.

Last year we had 337 officially seated delegates. we should reach 350 this year. Address the Secretary as follows:

Rev. E. J. Beekley,
General Conference Secretary,
604 Paar Place, N. E.,
Canton, Ohio.

Mt. Olive and Bethlehem, Virginia. We quote from a letter just received from Brother John Locke, pastor of these churches:

"Our churches and people were not in the flooded areas where severe damage occurred over last week-end. One of my valued members lives on a hill overlooking the scene of the tragedy, but being 'set on a hill' he was safe.

"Mt. Olive Church is being treated to interior decoration. Bethlehem and Mt. Olive will see 'Daybreak' a new sound film dealing with the actual experiences of a prisoner of war. Good delegations from both churches attended the District conference at Linwood, Maryland.

"The song of the reaper is now heard in the land, as the wheat harvest is being cut in our valley. Crop losses run to millions in the recent flood area, the papers tell us. Here we only had mild rains."

Stockton, Calif. We note that Brother Spencer Gentle, representing the National Sunday School Association, recently conducted a Sunday School Institute in our Stockton Church.

Brother Johnson says, "Did you notice the C. E. Banner hanging on our wall?" Proud of it? Well, they should be. He also says that three of the officers of the County C. E. organization are from our Stockton Church: Virgil Ingraham, President; Harry Ernst, Tenth Legion; and Don Walters, Evangelism.

Loree, Indiana. Brother Higgins reports that there were thirty-three men from the Loree congregation who attended the Laymen's meeting at Warsaw at the recent joint Northern and Southern District Laymen's Rally.

Laid to Rest

HOWARD. Gerald Duane Howard, son of Lee and Lilith Howard of Mulvane, Kansas, was born November 5, 1940, and departed this life to be with his Lord on May 24, 1949, at the age of 8 years, 6 months and 19 days.

Gerald had always taken an active interest in Sunday School, Daily Vacation Bible School, Signal Lights and other church activities and just recently in revival services had gone forward to accept the Lord as his personal Savior. He and his brother were returning home with their father's tractor when they ran off the road and overturned into a steam of water. Gerald died, immediately, but his soul went to be with the Lord.

He leaves to mourn his passing, besides his parents: one brother, Garry Howard and one sister, Sandra Howard, both at home; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Orson Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Howard; many other relatives, and a host of friends. Rev. Albert Whitted is a great uncle.

The funeral services were conducted from the Brethren Church and burial was made in the Mulvane Cemetery. The undersigned was in charge.

News From Our Churches

NEW LEBANON, OHIO

It was our good pleasure to have four Brethren Youth Crusaders with us from June 5 to 11. Our Church was the first on their summer schedule and they began their summer work in a most excellent manner.

Besides the services each evening, we solicited their assistance with our Vacation Bible School which was in the closing week. Here too, the boys helped ably, in filling some important parts of the Bible School program.

The program of Bible Study, Inspiration and Fellowship conducted by the boys, is a most acceptable program. It is Bible-centered. That is as it should be. It is inspirational and profitable for both old and young alike. It is conducted in a very pleasing fashion. The boys themselves are devoted to the Cause of Christ, zealous and consecrated. They have a good testimony for the Lord and their influence in the lives of the youth, especially, cannot be measured. The Church ought to receive them well because they are the servants of the Lord, called, we believe, to do this special work much needed today.

Those who are not privileged to have them in their local Churches ought to aid in supporting their work by attending the services when they are nearby. All of us can follow this work with our prayers.

The quartet of Crusaders was composed of Bob Holsinger of Oakville, Indiana, Kenny Solomon of Uniontown, Pennsylvania, Lyle Lichtenberger of Elkhart, Indiana, and Bob Keplinger of Dayton, Ohio.

W. Clayton Berkshire, pastor.

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

One year ago, the roof mostly on, walls up, no floor, no windows in yet, etc. Today services two times a week, with good attendances, good behavior, and the Lord pleased and glorified, we believe.

This tells you something of what it meant for a group of consecrated men from Indiana to give a week of their time in good, hard, Christain work. Rowdy is now going fine. Ceiling on, painted, and last Sunday afternoon we held the services there, with ninety-one out, and for the Thursday night service there were from fifty to seventy-five. A recent revival there of one week, led by Evangelist J. Basil Long, resulted in some sixteen confessions, and to date six baptisms, and more to follow.

We are happy to tell you that Ada is improving right along. She has had a long way to go, but the Lord has heard and answered your prayers, and now she can read a bit, tell time by the clock (before she could not see well enough to do that) and is now coming to the table for her meals. To know how she was before, and to see this condition now, just makes us "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." Certainly the days of miracles are not over. We praise His Holy Name for it all. It now seems that her recovery will be complete and normal, that is, restored to normal conditions, though her eyes are not yet complete, but we believe will be. We praise the Lord for every prayer that went up to the Throne in her behalf.

G. E. Drushal.

Wedding Announcement

KINSINGER-FRY. On Sunday afternoon, June 12, in a lovely double-ring ceremony in the Brethren Church in Canton, Miss Doris E. Kinsinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kinsinger of Canton, became the bride of Mr. John R. Fry of North Industry, Ohio. Mrs. Fry, who is an active member of the young people's group in the Canton Church, was attended by her two sisters, Misses Helen and Irene Kinsinger, and was given in marriage by her brother, Claude. The young couple will reside with the groom's parents until their new home is completed near North Industry. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, the undersigned.

Attention - Ministers

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF THE BRETHERN NATIONAL MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Ashland, Ohio

June 22, 1949

The National Brethren Ministerial Association,
Dear Brethren:

Just last night a message arrived with the information that Elder G. W. Rensch, New Paris, Indiana, has gone home to be with the Lord. We rejoice in the fact that our dear brother in Christ is now at home. We sorrow over the earthly separation.

The Association check for two hundred dollars is at this writing being mailed to Mrs. Rensch. It is now necessary to issue Assessment No. 96 to the beneficiary members of our Association. However, the Secretary is just now packing and ready to leave for summer studies. The call letter will not likely be sent before August. This is an appeal for all beneficiary members to send their usual amount of assessment upon the reading of this letter in The Evangelist. This will make the work of the Secretary easier. Do not send cash.

Thank you

We note that the Father and Son Banquet of the Gratis Laymen which was previously announced for June 20th, has been postponed until fall.

The Gratis Union Vacation Bible School has been conducted from Monday, June 27th to July 8th, with a "commencement" program on Sunday evening, July 10th.

Huntington, Indiana. The Men's Chorus of the Huntington Church is scheduled to give a Sacred Concert at the church on Sunday evening, July 17th. A feature of the program will be the dedication of the new outside illuminated Bulletin Board. This Bulletin Board was recently installed by the Laymen's Organization of the church.

Brother C. Y. Gihmer, pastor of the church, says, "Mr. Oliver Smith (aged 81) made the good confession; was baptized and received into the membership of the church on Thursday evening, June 9th."

He also reports for their Daily Vacation Bible School as follows: Enrollment—38; Average attendance—30; Perfect attendance—16; Missed only one day—3."

Cameron, West Virginia. Brother A. R. Baer, pastor of the Cameron- Quiet Dell Circuit, says, referring to the Cameron Church, "The Rauland Tower Sound system has been installed and many favorable comments are being received. A Vesper Hymn will be played each evening, and the accustomed call to the regular services. We have eight recordings and will add to these as money is available."

Pleasant Hill, Ohio. Brother Floyd Sibert, pastor, has the following to say about their Vacation Bible School: "Our Vacation Bible School was a decided success. We had a total enrollment of 150, with a faculty of four in supervisory positions and sixteen teachers—all from our own Sunday School. During the first week the attendance and enrollment grew from ninety to one hundred and thirteen. The second week it reached the total of one hundred and fifty. With the present building facilities and the fine work of the Transportation Committee, together with the response of these who were asked to help and their willingness and readiness, to which was added the self-sacrificing spirit of the drivers, without whose assistance many of the children could not have come, and the men and boys who helped to prepare the meeting place—we have every reason to thank God for all that was accomplished." The closing exercises of the school were held on Friday evening, June 18th, for the benefit of the "mothers and dads" and the friends of the school.

Waterloo, Iowa. We note that the Sisterhood Girls are expecting to hold their Public Service on Sunday morning, July 17th, with Mrs. V. E. Meyer, wife of the Waterloo pastor, as the speaker.

The Men's Ashland College Crusader Team, which is making the cross-country trip, is scheduled for Sunday morning and evening, and evenings through Wednesday, July 10 to 13, in the Waterloo Church. The Youth Committee of the church is sponsoring these services.

Nappanee, Indiana. We note that Brother W. E. Ronk, pastor of our Goshen Church, was guest speaker at the first of the Twelve Nappanee Union evening services at the Nappanee Park, on Sunday, July 3rd.

Goshen, Indiana. We note from Brother W. E. Ronk's bulletin that the Ashland College Crusader Team, composed of Brethren Holsinger, Lichtenberger, Keplinger and Solomon, appeared in the Goshen church on Wednesday, evening, July 6th.

Elkhart, Indiana. The Elkhart bulletin announces that the "New Basement Unit Building Committee" for the addition to the Elkhart Church has been selected as follows: Charles Smith, Roscoe Lockwood, Glenn Wood, Louis Berger, and Louis Ehert. Also that $250.00 was voted by the Elkhart Official Board to be paid to the Brethren Youth Offering.

Brother L. V. King, pastor, who has also been Secretary of the Indiana District Conference for the past several years, makes comparison of the delegated body of the conference for the past three years as follows: 1947—151; 1948—168; 1949—197. This shows a fine increase in attendance and interest in this conference.

St. James, Maryland. Brother Roy Lowery, St. James Church Treasurer, reports the gift of $50.00 by Mrs. W. S. Baker, to help defray the cost of repairing the parsonage. They are getting the parsonage ready for their new pastor, Rev. Freeman Ankrum and family, who will move to St. James from Masontown, Pennsylvania, about August 1st.

Gratis, Ohio. The Gratis Brethren Young People were privileged to be recent hosts to the youth from fifteen surrounding churches of various denominations. This youth session took the place of the Gratis Union Services on Sunday evening, June 19th.

Dr. George W. Rench -- 1864-1949

"Honor To Whom Honor"

By The Editor

FAR TOO OFTEN we neglect to say the things we meant to say to our friends in appreciation for what they have meant to our lives. Then comes the death angel and they are taken from our sight and from the possibility of expressing to them the many things we have had in our hearts. Then we have to content ourselves with telling to those who remain what should have been expressed long times ago to the one who has now departed.

We do not believe that the above would refer to those who have had, for years, that close and intimate contact with Dr. Rench, for he has been a "Father in the spirit" to so many of us, and we have had the opportunity to express, if not in so many words, by what he would far rather have expressed, a life of following by example this man of God—for he was surely one of God's Noblemen.

It is befitting, therefore, that we turn this page to a short review of his life, and a few words concerning his "eternal crowning."

To know him was to love him. Always calm; ever alert; his soft-spoken utterances always brought conviction to the hearer that he was sure of his ground and that he did not speak without thinking the matter through. Therefore his advice was eagerly sought by ministers and laity alike. He knew when to sympathize and when to upbraid, but the latter was always done in a spirit of love and deep consideration for the one who needed chastisement. If he felt, after due deliberation, that his position was wrong, he did not hesitate to say so. What his life has meant to hundreds and hundreds of people, both within and without the Brethren Church, will only be known in eternity.

He, along with the late Arthur T. Wirick, was instrumental in establishing the Brethren Retreat at Shipshewana Lake, a place which has now become so well known and of such great value in our Young People's Camp work. His vision was long and he never lost his "youth" viewpoint, realizing that as the youth of today are "grounded in the faith" so the church of tomorrow will be.

The loss to the Brethren Church in his passing is well nigh irreparable. For he knew the church and its doctrines as very few men do today.

We are grateful that he did not have to suffer long days of pain, but that the Father permitted him to be active almost to the end of his life. He had a rare sense of humor, being able to use it with telling effect, but never to the hurt of the feelings of others. Truly a great man of God has gone to his reward.

As to his life story, which we are sure will be brought to the attention of our readers by others better qualified by closer association than the writer, we will only quote from the newspaper clipping which was sent to us from

Brother W. E. Ronk, pastor of the Goshen church where his funeral was held. The newspaper account, in substance, is as follows:

"The Rev. George W. Rench, D.D., eighty-five, retired minister of the Brethren Church, and former president of the National Brethren Ministerial Association, died at his home in New Paris, Indiana, on Monday, June 20, 1949, at 8:30 A. M. He retired from the active ministry in 1945, due to failing health, but became bedfast only on the Friday before his death, which was caused by complications of age.

"He was born in Eaton, Indiana, on May 27, 1864, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Rench. He was united in marriage to Ida Barrett in 1889 who passed to her reward in 1895. In 1898 he was united in marriage to Grace Kline who survives.

"After attending Valparaiso University, Dr. Rench taught school for several years in Delaware County, Indiana. He retired from the school teaching profession in 1902. He united with the Brethren Church, by baptism, in 1885, and was ordained as a minister in the Brethren Church in 1886 by the Reverend David Teeter at Oakville, Indiana.

"Dr. Rench was called for his first pastorate, to Milford, Indiana, where he served from 1892 until 1900. He then served the Goshen Church as pastor from 1900 to 1911. The following six years he served a Brethren pastorate in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and in 1917 he answered a call to become pastor of the South Bend, Indiana church. In 1926 he took a leave of absence because of his health and made his home for the following five years at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana. In 1931 he returned to the active work by accepting the pastorate of the New Paris, Indiana, church, from which charge he retired four years ago.

"He twice served as moderator of the General Conference of the Brethren Church; two years as President of the National Ministerial Association; and was the first president of the National Missionary Board of the church. He at one time was president of the Brethren Publishing Company.

"Surviving, in addition to Mrs. Rench, are two half-sisters, Mrs. Curtis Cruea of Muncie, Indiana, and Mrs. Lena Richardson of Eaton, Indiana. Three children preceded him in death.

"The funeral was held in the Goshen Church on Wednesday, June 22nd, the body lying in state in the church from 10:00 A. M. till the time of the funeral at 2:00 P. M.

"The services were in charge of Rev. C. A. Stewart, pastor of the New Paris Church, with Rev. S. M. Whetstone, pastor of the Dayton, Ohio, Hillcrest Brethren Church, bringing the message of consolation. Rev. Claud Studebaker, pastor of the South Bend Church, assisted in the service. Burial was made in the Oak Ridge Cemetery.

The 1949 General Conference

By Rev. J. G. Dodds, Executive Secretary

WHAT KIND OF A CONFERENCE shall we have? What kind of a Conference do you desire to have? You can have the kind of Conference that the Brethren Church ought to have if you want it hard enough to do something about it.

While searching the pages of The Brethren Evangelist issues since 1939, I have found a revelation of the General Conference at its best. For instance, note the following quotations:

In the issue of August 17, 1940, Dr. C. F. Yoder, in writing on the topic "Conference Problems," said, "The greatest problem of the church is to keep up the standard of consecration . . . The church provides, or should provide the new environment which is charged with the transforming power of Christ. In it the conversation, the songs, the prayers, the sermons—all should help to hold one's thoughts and desires on the higher and better things of the kingdom of God. If any church is not providing such an environment, then it is time for an investigation and revival."

On page 12 of the same issue, Dr. Martin Shively said, "We often returned from the sessions of our General Conference with hearts aglow because of the sweet spirit of Christian love which found constant expression in the deliberations. It seems to me that at least one of the chief goals of the coming sessions should be the receiving of that spirit which characterizes Brethren in the Lord."

On the same page, W. S. Benshoff wrote, "At National Conference there should be a definition of our National purpose. What are we as a denomination planning on doing? Toward what goals and objectives are we working? Church history proves that the Church grows best when following a definite program of advancement. History can repeat itself in the Brethren Church if we have such a program and all the ministers and laymen get back of the movement in 100% cooperation."

I am constrained to believe that General Conference should emphasize that the Church is the Spiritual Monitor of all human life. To the Church belongs the duty of keeping the public conscience alive. The Church bears aloft the white banner of the pure Son of God and challenges men to enlist under it. May the General Conference of 1949 challenge the membership of the Brethren Church to know and to earnestly proclaim the faith, practices, doctrines and Scriptural teachings on the moral issues—to the end that the Brethren shall go forward with increased zeal and Spiritual power.

In the issue of January 11, 1941, Dr. E. G. Mason said, "The way is open and the harvest is ripe; now let us go into the work with the will to make it succeed. The Brethren Church now faces a bright future; let us make the outcome as bright as we can possibly make it."

Dr. W. D. Furry, in the same issue, said, "I am pleading for a revival of apostolic power in our apostate and God-forgetting age. I appeal for renewed consecration and steadfast obedience to the one and only Gospel that has power still, as in its beginning days, to redeem sinful and sinning men and women."

In the issue of March 28, 1942, Rev. Willis E. Ronk said, "If we would have a great Church tomorrow, we must build for a great Church today."

On page 7 of the issue of May 2, 1942, "The Mentor" said, "The Church needs to experience deeper conviction of the truth it holds and to preach it with greater boldness."

On page 12 of the Evangelist of November 21, 1942, Rev. W. E. Ronk said, "The Church must go forward to bigger and better things, and I know it is possible, and I know that it will, because I have assurance that you are going to look to the Lord for leadership and that we will follow wheresoever He leads."

We are the Brethren Church; we have a unique message and mission; let us launch a stupendous program of achievement and advance toward the goal of attainment.

In the Evangelist of August 26, 1944, Dr. E. G. Mason said, "The National Conference of the Brethren Church is policy forming, authoritative, and constitutes the legal basis of the Brethren fraternity. It is empowered to create commissions and boards in order to facilitate the general work of the Church."

In the issue of October 7, 1944 Rev. Freeman Ankrum said, "The way to get nowhere fast is to not know where you are going and loaf to that end . . . The Lord's business requires haste. Who knows how soon the workers may be called home to give an account of the work, not of the work done, but as to why some was left unfinished. The time is NOW!"

In the issue of November 6, 1948, Rev. Dyoll Belote, in his tribute to George Stanley Baer, states that on the letterheads which he used in many of his churches, Dr. Baer had this motto: "A bigger and better Brethren Church—we can have it if we want it hard enough."

May every session of the 1949 General Conference be so filled with challenges that all delegates will return to their respective churches and district with such zeal and spirit that every member of the Brethren Church will be set on fire of God to have a "bigger" and better Brethren Church."

I am closing with a poem by Dr. C. F. Yoder:

"Forward, Brethren!"

Onward Christian workers, marching as to peace;
Let our faith not waver, nor our labors cease.

Though the task be mighty, greater is our power;
Tears may go with sowing; joy with harvest dower.

Onward Christian workers; we are not alone,
Christ our Lord is with us; strength and love we own.
Light the yoke and easy, with Him at our side,
Sure will be the reaping, as we there abide.

Onward Christian workers; work while it is day;
Even now the shadows loom above our way.
Let us be united; cover wrongs with love—
All one body working, until called above.

Practical Church Methods

Rev. Henry Bates

"Who Are The Active Members?"

SOME TIME AGO there appeared in this column an article dealing with church-roll revision in which the writer endeavored to set forth a few of the problems which usually confront the revision committee and suggested a few possible solutions to those problems. In that column it was suggested that an intensive study be made in an effort to determine how many of the folks whose names appear on the church books are dead; how many of them have united with other congregations without notifying the home church of the change; and how many have moved out of the community and have no more interest in the church. The average congregation will discover that after these three groups have been taken care of that the revision problem is not nearly as great as it appeared to be in the beginning. But now the "bugaboo" question arises—When we begin classifying men and women as active and inactive members? WHO ARE THE ACTIVE MEMBERS?

Before going further into this matter let me reiterate and reemphasize what was said in the previous column, above referred to: "Who, after all, makes a man an active or an inactive member? Not a committee of three or five; not the Official Board of the church; not the pastor. A man makes himself an active or an inactive member of the church by the interest or lack of interest that he manifests in the church and her program. And if a man is not satisfied to be considered an inactive brother, he is the one to make the change."

Certainly before any revision is attempted all of the apparently uninterested brethren should be visited both by the pastor and by groups of laymen and women in an effort to win them back into the church's fold—and without a doubt such a program will "reactivate" some of the negligent folks.

But what of those who are still not inclined to manifest any real interest in the work of the church—must the church continue to carry them along as active members since they have not asked for letters of transfer or dismissal? This writer has always been disposed to feel that it is both unfair and inaccurate for a church to be asked to pay various apportionments for members who are unknown to the majority of the present constituency of the church, or for a church to be granted delegates to conferences, etc., for similarly unknown and uninterested men and women. Why not put the names of such folks in a separate book—the inactive members' book—not dropping them from the church rolls altogether, but not including them in the statistics or in the full benefits of a voice in business matters of the church, etc., until they have proved their desire to become active members.

But how is this differentiation to be made? WHO ARE THE ACTIVE MEMBERS? Each congregation must decide for themselves what will constitute active membership within their particular body—and it might be well, after reaching some decisions, to include such decisions in the constitution of the church under the articles dealing with Membership. The following suggestions are offered for consideration in answer to the questions as to who the active members are.

1. In every congregation there is the loyal band of C. E. Christians—those who wouldn't think of missing church on Christmas and Easter, but who apparently have no interest in the church or her program during the other fifty weeks of the year. Likewise there are in every church those who, as Dr. Grover Swayer recently stated it, go to church three times in their lives—"When they're hatched; When they're matched; and when they're dispatched." How far would the church's program go if she had to depend upon such men and women? Are these the men and women our Lord had in mind when He said that the gates of Hell shall not prevail against His Church? Is it asking too much of men and women to expect them to be regular in their attendance to the various services of the Lord's House, when we remember that Christ Himself said that "If any man cometh unto me and hateth not his own father and mother, and wife and children, and brethren and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. Whosoever doth not bear his own cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." (Luke 14:26-27) Would it be setting the requirements of active church membership and all of the blessings that go with it too high to say that men and women should be present for at least fifty percent of the regular services of the church? Of course there must be exceptions—those who are sick, shut-in, away to school, in the service, etc.; but for all those who are able this certainly does not seem too exacting.

2. We, as Brethren, are a Bible-centered church. We seek to show our love for the Lord, our love for one another, and our faith in Him and in His coming again through the keeping of the Love Feast. Most of our congregations meet for this glorious experience together semi-annually. When we call to mind that Christ instructed us to do this "in remembrance" of Him, and to do it 'till He comes again, would it be expecting too much of Brethren people to suggest that an active church member attend at least one communion service during each year? Not that the attendance at just one service be sufficient to keep a man's or a woman's name on the active list, but that along with his or her regular attendance at the worship services of the church, the Love Feast also have a place.

3. Then, too, an active church member should be anxious to see the work of the church move forward. He should be desirous of seeing the church's program expand in such a way that the unsaved might be more effectively reached; that the young people of the community might have a better opportunity of studying and being taught God's Word; and that the benevolent work of the church both locally and generally be increased. This all requires money—money that should come freely from all who are interested in the Lord's work. If a person feels that active church membership is something worthwhile he should be willing and ready to contribute to her program. Not that church membership can be bought with silver or with gold, but when a person consecrates his life to the Lord his pocket-book should likewise be consecrated to His work. A man's gifts to the church might not be great, but they should be regular and should be given cheerfully and willingly.

4. One other standard of active membership in the church which should be considered, and which will be merely mentioned here, is that of testifying to the Lord in word and deed. Though a man or a woman attends all of the regular services of the church, is present at the Love Feast, and gives generously to the financial program of the church, unless he or she lives a life of Christian testimony three hundred and sixty-five days each year, they are but "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal."

"Let all things be done decently, and in order."

Excerpts From The Sixty-second Indiana District Conference

THE SIXTY-SECOND INDIANA District Conference has come to an end, BUT not the good and the results that were realized. We are giving a summary of the Conference for the benefit of our readers.

The Conference was held at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana, from Monday evening, June 13th through Thursday evening, June 16th. Although it rained a great deal it did give the farmers an opportunity to attend. The auxiliary organizations were all well attended, especially the W. M. S. and the S. M. M. The Laymen met with the ministers on one occasion when the message was brought by one of the laymen, Walter Lichtenberger.

Reports were given during the afternoon business sessions by the Trustees, the Sunday School Board and the District Mission Board. All revealed progress during the year. The Laymen were given a half-hour on Tuesday evening, at which time Walter Lichtenberger gave his splendid address.

In addition to caring for the regular business of the Conference in a fine Christian spirit, a new Constitution was adopted and ordered printed.

The following Conference officers were elected for the new year:

Moderator	W. E. Ronk
Vice Moderator	Wayne Swihart
Secretary-Treasurer	C. Y. Gilmer
Statistician	Galen Roose

Also the following Committee and Board members were elected: Board of Trustees: H. D. Hunter, Mrs. U. J. Shively; District Mission Board: Glenn Cripe; Ministerial Examining Board: W. E. Ronk, Claud Studebaker, W. I. Duker; General Conference Executive Committee: C. A. Stewart, C. Y. Gilmer; Committee on naming Delegates-at-Large: George Pontius, E. D. Burnworth; College Trustee

Nominees: W. I. Duker, R. F. Porte; District Sunday School Board: Wayne Swihart, Woodrow Immel, Robert Higgins; Pastoral Relations Committee: J. M. Bowman, G. L. Maus, Charles A. Bame; Boys' Work: C. Y. Gilmer, Woodrow Brant, Chester F. Zimmerman; Auditing Committee: Kenneth Stout, Demain Warner, Wright Hendrix; Resolutions Committee: Austin Gable, Henry Bates, Mrs. D. A. C. Teeter.

It was voted to return Conference to Shipshewana again next year.

The sermons of the Conference were brought by "Bud" Hunter, as Vice-Moderator; Willis E. Ronk and Robert Higgins. These were challenging and helpful. The Moderator's address was given by C. A. Stewart, stressing the importance of deepening the spiritual life, a continuous spirit of evangelism and missionary activity, proper organization of our work, and the preaching of the cardinal doctrines.

The Bible Lectures were given in the morning sessions following the simultaneous sessions. The lecturer from our own denomination was Prof. M. A. Stuckey, who spoke on the themes: "He Called His Own Sheep by Name," and "Our Lord Jesus Christ as Pictured in Hebrews 1:1 and 2." Again Prof. Stuckey was at his best and his messages were greatly enjoyed by the delegates. He also spoke at one of the sessions of the ministers.

The Lecturer from outside our own denomination was Dr. Grover Swoyer, Pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. His themes were: "Service and Sacrifice," "The Head of a Horse," and "The Work of the Holy Spirit." He thrilled the audience by his wit, and fine Christian disposition and messages. He also spoke to the ministers at one of the sessions.

"Bud" Hunter was in charge of the music. The Gearhart sisters, accompanied by other young ladies, brought us a varied talent in music. Others also rendered special numbers in music. A new Christian flag and staff was presented to the Conference by Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ulrey.

Ample time was given for the devotional life of the delegates. Various ministers had a devotional period before each session or program. We tried the method of our Camps by having a "Morning Watch" and an "Evening Vesper." These services were planned for the lake front, but because of the rain, only one evening vesper service was held by the lake. Woodrow Brant had charge of the Morning Watch. The evening vesper speakers were: J. Edgar Berkshire, Henry Bates and Chester F. Zimmerman.

The delegates seemed to enjoy the conference in spite of the rain. There were 197 delegates, as against 162 last year.

Summarizing The Ohio District Conference

THE OHIO DISTRICT departed from the usual mid-week District Conference to try to find out the merits of a week-end conference. This was done this year and the Conference, which was held at Dayton, beginning Thursday noon, June 23rd, and closing on Sunday noon, June 26th, gave proof that there was indeed merit in such a procedure. Instead of the conference just sliding into oblivion in the closing session, as a mid-week conference so often does, this conference closed on the high tide of a Sunday morning worship service. Also there was a marked attendance of both laymen and young people. So enthusiastic was the feeling that it was voted almost unanimously to hold next conference in the same manner. Therefore, the conference of 1950 is scheduled to meet at Smithville from Thursday noon, June 22nd to Sunday noon, June 25th.

Another departure was in evidence as the conference proceeded. Only three of the main addresses of the entire conference were given by ministers. The Vice Moderator's message, which was delivered by W. S. Crick; the Moderator's Address, delivered by Moderator John T. Byler; and the Sunday morning sermon, which was brought by E. J. Black, were ministerial presentations. The remainder of the addresses were delivered by laymen, each chosen because it was felt that he or she was particularly fitted to bring that message. The lone lay-woman in this field was Mrs. E. J. Beekley. The laymen were, Dr. Glenn Clayton, James Ross, F. E. Clapper, each of these, together with Mrs. Beekley, speaking on some phase of "Faithfulness," which was the "key-word" of the conference. The messages of these laymen, and the lay-woman were of the highest type and caused the delegates to go from the conference with a deeper determination to be "more faithful" to their individual tasks.

Three banquets brought the four groups, W. M. S., Ministers, Laymen and Youth, (the ministers and laymen shared the one banquet table) into a fine period of fellowship which will not soon be forgotten.

While the heat during the entire conference period had a rather "wilting" influence and effect on the delegates, nevertheless they were very faithful to all of the services and considered the Lord's business worthy of a little "sweat" if not "blood and tears." No note of discord marred the entire time, and the delegates and those who came to enjoy the conference went away with a feeling that it had been good to be "in the House of the Lord."

The business sessions were distributed throughout the entire conference. Business was dispatched in order. The reports of the various boards and committees were very encouraging, there being advance shown in every field of activity. Particularly was this true in our District mission points. A note of optimism was injected into the conference by the fine showing of the churches in the field of Evangelism. Renewed emphasis is to be placed during the coming year upon this field, which is deemed of utmost importance in the spread of the Gospel.

The conference was delighted to have a message come to our General Mission Board that finally the visa of Miss June Byler, missionary-elect to Argentine, had at last been granted and that the sailing for Miss Byler had been set as of July 15th. This was great cause for rejoicing.

The following officers were elected for the new conference year:

Moderator	H. H. Rowsey
Vice Moderator	E. J. Beekley
Secretary-Treasurer	F. C. Vanator
Assistant Secretary	James Ross
Statistician	Paul Clapper
Committee on Committees:	John C. Eck, S. M. Whetstone, J. G. Dodds

There was a total of 124 delegates reported by the credential committee. Most of the delegates stayed through the Saturday sessions, but not over the Sunday service. It is requested by the conference Executive Committee, and backed up by the attitude of the assembled delegates, that next year each church release their pastor from the Sunday service in the local church, in order that he might complete the entire conference and thus enjoy it to the very end, and that all delegates come with the purpose of remaining throughout the entire conference.

"THE BRETHREN CHURCH IS ON THE MOVE FOR CHRIST"

THE ABOVE STATEMENT can be proved by reading the following words: The young people of our church have, for the past few years, been working at the job of making our church strong in its witness for Christ. This is another year when we can say the same is true. Let us take a look

One Crusader Team, composed of four boys: Lyle Lichtenberger, Robert Holsinger, Robert Keplinger and Kenneth Solomon, (see above cut) will be in seventeen churches in our denomination this summer. Here they are: New Lebanon, Glenford, and Louisville, Ohio; Masontown, Penna.; Elkhart, Goshen, Warsaw, Nappanee and Loree, Indiana; Waterloo and Udell, Iowa; Carleton and Falls City, Nebraska; Morrill and Mulvane, Kansas; Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Stockton, California.

During their stay in these churches they will conduct a program of teaching and fellowship. Their teaching is concerned with the great doctrines of the Bible. In addition they have a large canvas picture of the tabernacle, which they explain to the people. Also they have pictures of Christ which are shown on the screen and explained. Most times they stay a week in a church and conduct these services, using also a religious movie. Where they stay only one night they use the tabernacle scene, some pictures of Christ and conduct a period of fellowship.

We believe that it is with such work our churches will be strengthened, and so also will these young men. These boys represent Ashland College and Seminary and we are proud of them in every way. We cannot measure the value of such work to our church and to our people. We can know, however, that their work will not be in vain.

The original idea came from Lyle Lichtenberger, who is a member of the team. After the idea was presented and discussed, Brethren Youth sponsored the plan, and it is now under the direction of Brethren Youth.

For their work these young men receive $15.00 per week, which is applied to their Ashland College tuition, this coming in addition to their expenses for the summer. The obligation to the church in which they work is the care of the boys during their stay and also an offering for Brethren Youth to help cover the expense of the work.

Now you see Brethren Youth is on the move with the Brethren Church. We can say this because in every church thus far where the boys have been, good reports have returned to us.

But wait! We are not through yet!

In addition to this team we have other Crusader teams working in other churches—read on brother, read on!

These are teams composed of the following: Carol Snyder, Delores Thomas, Jeanne Lindower, Betty Martin, Martha Baker, Arleta Miller, Mara Lee Eiker, Vivian Campbell, Phyllis Deeter, Mary Sloan, Elizabeth Levering, Nina

Royer, and Harold Barnett. Miss Levering, Miss Baker and Miss Eiker are not Brethren girls, but they are fine Christians and a credit to our work.

The purpose of these teams is to conduct Bible Schools in the various churches of our denomination. They will have worked in Teegarden, Dutchtown, County Line and Shipshewana, Indiana; Maurertown, Virginia, and Sherwood, Michigan, e'er the summer is finished. Quite a number of these people will also receive $15.00 per week toward their Ashland College tuition. This will be determined by the number of weeks of service rendered.

Truly the Brethren Church is on the move for Christ, and it is going to continue to be that way, as you support its efforts to forge ahead.

These Crusader Teams will all be reporting at General Conference at Ashland—August 22 to 28—so why don't you come to hear them?

Incidentally we have another good Conference program, designed to meet the needs of the youth of our churches. If you have any influence, urge your young people to attend. Get them to come for the whole week, for there are programs and recreational periods each day to interest them. Organized Chapels, discussions, and play periods are a part of the program. If your young people can't come for the whole week, then urge them to come for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. We have special song leaders from Cleveland, Ohio; a returned missionary from Siam; our own chapel speaker, and a special speaker from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to conclude our part of the conference. We plan to dismiss the last session of conference not later than 6:00 o'clock on Sunday night to allow time for the journey home.

Come to conference and help to strengthen it and build it for the future, so that we shall continue to be on the move for Christ.

THE NEED OF CHRISTIAN IMAGINATION

I Peter 3:1-10

THE EPITOME of all the teachings of this passage of Scripture is to be found in verse eight, "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous . . ." "Be kind." And there is no better rule for insuring the exercise of of kindness than the Golden Rule, which reads something like this: "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even also likewise unto them." To carry out this teaching means to put yourself into the other fellow's place in all your relationships with men. Before we speak to our fellows we should think how our words would sound if it was the other fellow addressing them to us. Before we execute some act we have planned for another we need to take thought how we should feel if the same plan were put into action against us.

Hannah Moore, a poetess of other years, wrote poetry that today would by some be labeled as old-fashioned, but not all old-fashioned things are obsolete, and we do well to weigh old-fashioned thought and writings well before we cast them into the discard. The following are words taken from one of Hannah Moore's poems:

"Since trifles make the sum of human things,
And half our misery from our foibles springs;
Since life's best joys consist in peace and ease,
And few can save or serve, but all may please—
Oh! let the ungentle spirit learn from hence
A small unkindness is a great offence.
Large bounties to restore we wish in vain,
But all may shun the guilt of giving pain."

These lines fit into any and every life, and they will accomplish the same thing for all who practice their precepts. I know not if the one who penned them had the words of our text in mind, but she might well have done so. Tenderness, Christian kindness, thoughtful consideration for others; these are all presaged in our Scripture passage. Nothing is finer than the exercise of the grace of a Christian imagination—putting ourselves in the other fellow's place.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

The Ashland College buildings will, of necessity, undergo major changes this summer. For the first time since 1927, when the present gymnasium was built, a major building program has been set in operation on the hilltop. An inspection by the State Industrial Commission this spring, following the disastrous fire at Kenyon College, revealed that the Founder Hall and Allen Hall no longer met the requirements of minimum fire protection. With the greatly increased student body and the building code changes, the inspector found that if we were to open college this fall, it would be necessary to make major changes in both buildings. He would not allow time to construct new buildings to replace those already here. He demanded the changes now.

President Clayton and Business Manager Carpenter have in their hands rough drawings which will meet the state requirements. Lawrence Russell, local architect and former Ashland College student, has drawn them and is now making detailed drawings. The Chemistry laboratory, now above the chapel will be put on the first floor of the Library Building, opposite the Biology Laboratories. This will help greatly in the chapel and its services. The wiring in both Founders and Allen Halls will be completely replaced. The demands of the times have made it archaic and useless. So many more lights, motors and other "gadgets" have made the drain too great for the size of wires provided. This will be a tremendous job in itself.

Modern rest rooms will be provided in Founders and a lounge for girls is planned on the second floor. Classrooms will be moved and more offices provided. Founders will be much more useful than ever before.

The greatest change and the one most closely tied in with the sentiments of friends and former students will be the removal of the venerable stairs in both buildings. The circular staircase in Founders, unique in itself in that no other like it is known to exist in American colleges, will be removed this summer. In its place will be a fire-proof stairwell in the east hall of the building, going from basement to the top. This necessitates great changes in the arrangement of rooms and offices. The wood staircases in Allen Hall will be replaced. Plastering and plumbing changes will also be in order.

President Clayton has urged me to inform you that General Conference will go on just as before in spite of the changes. In fact, this would be a good year for the Brethren to come in greater numbers to see what the college is doing to keep up with the times. Housing and meals will be provided, even though not as conveniently as last year. Much of the work may be done by conference time and the conference may see the beginning of a "New Ashland."

The remodeling is not a substitute for the new chapel and several other buildings being considered in a master plan. It will only be a help or supplement in the "greater Ashland College." The construction will be costly, but it must, of necessity, be done at once. There is the redeeming feature that this will bring the physical plant already on the campus up to date, something long overdue.

May I again urge you to attend conference and see the great changes taking place here.

Some Enlightening Information About The Brethren Home

We are in receipt of a letter from Brother L. V. King, Treasurer of the Brethren's Home and Benevolent Board, in which he sets forth some very interesting and enlightening facts as to the expenditures at the Home that have been made during the past year. We want to pass this information on to the membership of the church, in order that you may have a picture of the work that is being done and the amount of money that is necessary to keep our Home going.

It is costing the Board (using the term to include the entire denomination, for the Board is simply the representative of the Brethren Church) much more in the past few years to conduct the financial affairs of the Home, than in former years, due in most part to the fact that we have many more as residents of the Home than in past time, and to the increased cost of repairs and new installations which are demanded by the State of Indiana. Operating, as we are, under the laws of the State, we are subject to the rigid inspections of the Fire and Health departments of the state and when they say, "it must be done" we have no other recourse than to "do it." Just recently we were told that we would have to practically rewire the entire building to meet the code of the state. This we will have to do. Expense? Well time alone will tell what that will amount to. The septic tank, which had not been cleaned for so many years that the writer has no recollection of when it was ever done before—if ever—had to be done at a cost of $415.40. The driveway has to be resurfaced which will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000.00. Then it has been necessary this year to reimburse the Home Treasury almost $2,000.00 more than last year. So it goes.

Here is the stated list of improvements that came to us from Brother King:

Three beds, springs and Mattresses	$ 205.80
Closet bowls, Lavatories, labor on same	304.61
Two Freezer Lockers	450.00
Garage roof material and labor	69.60
Paint and painting	350.00
Towels, clothes, sheets, cases	56.88
More circuits on electric installations	73.10
Clothes dryer, twin washer, tubs, etc.	494.95
Linoleum,—bath room, bedrooms, table; labor ..	81.05

Total$2,265.99

In addition to this a new dishwasher was purchased through the efforts of Brother Edgar Berkshire, pastor of the Flora Church, which was paid for through donations he received, the cost of which was $383.25. Of course we have in mind that some of the above cost of improvements was borne by the fine gift of the National W. M. S., a thing which the Board greatly appreciates. Nevertheless, the cost of maintaining the Home has materially increased these past years. So far we, as a Board, have had no difficulty in maintaining a balanced budget, but it is beginning to eat into the surplus more rapidly than we had hoped. If any church has neglected to send in their offering which was taken in February (and Brother King tells us there are a few) won't you please do so at once?

That the Home is appreciated can be seen by the following taken from a letter which Brother King received from Brother Roland Obenchain, whose mother is one of the beloved residents of the Home. This letter was written after Mrs. Obenchain had spent a happy two weeks' vacation with her children in South Bend. Brother Obenchain says, "I am very happy to report a most agreeable vacation for Mother. She had a very active program, attending church and a Sunday School class meeting, and seeing many relatives and friends. She seemed in very good health; in fact, in very much better health than a year ago, when she was here . . . On the evening of June 14th we celebrated Mother's 84th birthday by a dinner party attended by all of my children, spouses, and my grandchildren . . . Again expressing my sincere appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Scott, and to you, I am, Fraternally, Roland Obenchain."

We felt that since our Home at Flora is, in truth, Our Home (the property of the Brethren Church) and its obligations fall, not on the Board, but on the Denomination, that you ought to know these things. Hence this article.

THIS PRODIGAL AMERICA

Scripture: Deuteronomy 8:1-20

For The Leader

WE SEE AMERICA tonight as the most blessed nation,, and yet the most wasteful. Because there has been an abundance of natural resources, we have used them at a wicked rate, until today there is grave concern in some quarters about the future. Our great woodlands were cut down or burned off, until now, lumber is at a premium. The same with our oil supplies. Our lands have been plowed and replowed until the top soil has either washed or blown away. It can truly be said that we have dissipated our wealth which God placed here for us. But a far greater waste is that of our spiritual and moral beings. Throughout the scriptures we read admonitions concerning self-control and of keeping the body and soul under God's control. Such conduct is essential to life. But, we are fast wasting our lives in drinking, cheap literature, laziness, all-night carousing, and general godlessness. God has set up certain standards: obey them, and live; disobey them, and die.

DISCUSSION

1. GOD AND THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL. The 8th chapter of Deuteronomy is known as the "remember" chapter. For in it God calls the attention of Israel, through Moses, to this very thing which is the object of our meeting tonight. They are to remember that when they get over in the promised land that it was the Lord God of heaven that brought them safely through. He warned them that if they ever forgot the fact, they would be destroyed. They were going into a land that "flowed with milk and honey," plus many natural resources for which they had done nothing. God would destroy the peoples of the land and turn it all over to the Israelites. But they were to remember that it was God that had given them that place. But we see how soon they forgot their God when prosperity and ease became their lot. Cannot we draw a parallel with America today?

2. THAT FOR WHICH WE DID NOT WORK. For some reason or other, America has had an over abundance of natural resources; more so than many other parts of the earth's surface. Its geography locates it as ideal for the growth and expanse of a great people. The great growth of our economy, transportation and ability to live together has made it possible for one section of the nation to share and receive from all other parts its special blessings. These resources are those things for which we did not work. God placed the coal, the iron ore, the oil, the trees, the rich soil, the varied climates. Should not we, as we use them, remember Him? There is grave danger in taking all of this wealth which is our inheritance, and going into the far country of dissipation and sin, and wasting it in riotous living.

3. A SOLUTION. Israel could enjoy the wealth of Palestine forever if they would do one thing? That is, remember God. All they had to do was to honor Him, praise Him, assemble in the house of the Lord, give tithes of all they possess, help their fellows, etc., and God would bring them peace and prosperity like they had never seen. But did they do that? No, as soon as they felt the ease of Zion, they sat back and considered how great they were, and "what their own hands had accomplished. Such is the consequence of forgetting God, that they were destroyed. America take warning. We would do well as a nation to give God the proper credit for protecting us and giving us every need.

4. DISSIPATION IN OTHER WAYS. Virtue, youth, desire to work, and self-control are all things which build up the body and soul. The moral structure of the nation rests upon these things in its people. But today we find a tendency against these things. There is little virtue, and certainly very little desire to work on the part of people today. Government grants, subsidies, payments for not growing crops, price supports, unemployment fees, etc., have all helped. But in helping, it has destroyed one thing. That is, self-reliance. No more is it necessary to go out and work hard to get that which we need. Shorter hours, higher pay has resulted in many free hours with lots of money. This has produced the sluggard. Go into any community, your community, and see the number of young men carousing around, drinking, raising a general nuisance at all hours of the night. Yes, at hours when if a fellow were a hard working, industrious young man, seeking to get ahead in life, he would need to be at home in bed getting his sleep.

5. IF THEY'D ONLY REMEMBER GOD. We are well aware of the fact that in America are countless thousands of Christian young people and adults. And we are thankful they are here, for they are the salt of the earth. There is much to encourage young people of our churches to live the true Christian life, for that is the life which God blesses and rewards. Stick to it, young people. But we cannot help but note the condition of those who are dissipating their bodies and souls through drink, immorality, and other sins. They are truly the prodigal Americans. They take comforts, inventions, peace and security of America which God has given, to do the things for which God must punish them. If they'd only remember God, and praise Him in life and word, how much happier they'd be. But of course, in order to do that, they must surely have a change of heart. That change can come only through their acceptance and following of Jesus as their Lord and their Saviour from sin. To this end, Christian young people, we must be diligent in service, inviting, warning, seeking to help others, find Christ. The prodigal can come back, yes, the prodigal must come back, or be lost. The best thing we can do is live an exemplary life before them, showing them something of the real joy that comes from living and serving God.

QUESTIONS

1. How account for the fact that the American Indian lived here for many generations and yet made no use of the great resources which we, since coming, have made use of?

2. When the Israelites repented of their sin before God, did God restore them in their land?

NEVER ALONE

I'm never alone in the morning,
As I rise at the break of day,
For Jesus Who watched through the darkness
Says, "Lo, I am with you always."

I'm never alone through the daylight,
Though nothing but trials I see;
Though the furnace be seven times heated,
The "form of the fourth" walks with me.

I'm never alone at the twilight
When darkness around me doth creep;
And spectres press hard round my pillow,
He watches and cares while I sleep.

I'm walking and talking with Jesus,
Each day as I journey along;
I'm never alone, Hallelujah!
The joy of the Lord is my song.

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE CHRISTIAN need never be in need nor afraid. David Livingstone proved this in introducing the gospel into the dark continent. Christ is with all who carry out the great commission. In fact, He has made His helpful presence known to the undeserving and wayward (Gen. 28:16). He has been present to chastise His sinful, rebellious servants such as Jonah, Samson, David and Lot. How wonderful it was of God not to forsake Elijah in the midst of his discouragement and bitterness (1 Kings 19:4-18)!

God is not with us in an abstract or figurative sense. His Holy Spirit, the third person of the Trinity, indwells every believer (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). Christ enters the heart through the Person of the Holy Spirit (Romans 8:9). Christ taught that the Holy Spirit was WITH the disciples prior to His resurrection, and IN them after His glorification (John 14:7; 7:39; 20:22). The presence of the Spirit in our hearts is the guarantee of our bodily resurrection (Rom. 8:11). Therefore we need not worry about the bodies of our beloved dead. God keeps watch over the bodies of the saints, and in the resurrection of the righteous, will lift their bodies from the grave to be united to the spirit in His presence (1 Thess. 4:13-18).

A Christian is taught to be filled with the Spirit (Eph. 5:18); walk in the Spirit (Gal. 5:16); grieve not the Spirit (Eph. 4:30); quench not the Spirit (1 Thess 5:19).

The body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, and it must not be defiled (1 Cor. 3:16, 17). The Holy Spirit accuses our guilty conscience and reminds us of sin (Matt. 5:23). The Holy Spirit rebukes the wayward and seeks to woo them back (Jer. 31:3). But one can resist the Spirit too often (Gen. 6:3). It is the following sheep, the obedient ones, who can never be plucked out of the Father's hand (John 10:27-29; Rom. 8:31-39). Nothing can happen to such but by God's permission, and that is a blessing, perhaps in disguise (Rom. 8:28).

We are not alone in that Christ "ever liveth to make intercession" for us (Heb. 7:24, 25; 1 John 2:1). Christ did not forsake Peter in his weakness (Luke 22:31, 32; Mark 16:7; John 21:15-22). We have the promise of the Spirit's abiding presence forever (John 14:16, 17). Read Romans 8:31.

PSALMS OF TRUST

Lesson: Psalms 34:3-8; 37:3-6; 46:1-3

WHEN WE CONSIDER the word "Trust," we find it carries the meaning of "placing confidence in; relying on; giving credence to, and believing in." These are all terms applied to the word by the dictionary. But we can, as we apply the term to Christian life, add to its meaning by giving a little deeper thought concerning it.

Trust is, of course, "confidence" in a person or thing. We say "We trust our friends, our financial institutions, the tires of our automobiles, the electric wiring in our homes." That is material trust—it means simply that we have confidence in them. When we carry it over into the realm of "trusting God" it goes somewhat deeper. It is not alone a "confidence" in Him, but it is a "perfect yielding" to Him in every phase of our lives; for in so doing we are sure that He will play fair with us in His dealings with us. We might crudely illustrate this thought by the example of the expert swimmer who becomes an expert simply because he has learned to fully "yield" himself to the water.

But it is even more than that. It is, after we have yielded, the act of holding on to God with assurance, never doubting the ability of the heavenly Father to guide us and protect us under every circumstance. It is the "nothing doubting" expressed to Peter in Acts 10:20.

Faith and trust have much in common. Indeed the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews well expresses it when he says (Hebrews 11:1)—"Now faith is the substance (or ground, or confidence—margin) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." A failure to trust in God and His Son Jesus Christ, can only bring fear and failure to the Christian. Throughout Christ's earthly ministry we find a continuous stream of miracles performed because of "trust" in His ability. Go back to the scene before the tomb of Lazarus. Note the words of Jesus to the grief-stricken sisters—"Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldest believe (trust) thou shouldest see the glory of God?" Cannot we tie this thought back to Psalm 37:3-5, and feel that He will also give us "the desires of our hearts" IF we really trust Him?

Trust delivers us from fear. We wish we might say that trust also delivers us from all trials, but of course that will never happen, for trials will come to each and every one of us. But He does take away "fear" from our hearts and we are able to meet these trials in His strength and not in our own strength.

Now trust does not mean the sitting down and doing nothing to help ourselves. Neither does it mean that we can do rash things and expect God to protect us. Note the words that stand out in our Psalms for today: "Magnify the Lord"; "Trust in the Lord"; "Delight thyself in the Lord"; "Commit thy ways unto the Lord"—in other words, let our relationship with the Lord be one of commitment to the tasks which He assigns—"and He shall bring it to pass."

There is something wonderful in the words, "Therefore will not we fear . . ." in Psalm 46:2. Having committed ourselves to the Lord, and laid hold on Him with "assurance," we have made it possible to step out of the "bondage of fear" into the everlasting light of the gospel of Christ.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

Leaving Home

DURING THE PAST several weeks, we have been going back and forth from our Wabash home to our Winona Lake home, neither of which is home to us in entire reality. Moreover, we do have a lovely home on U. S. 30, in Warsaw, just two squares from the Brethren Church there, and it is this that has caused these Travel Trips, painting and repairing some. Warned by friendly doctors against doing such hazardous work, I have escaped the slightest injury, while my dear, husky friend, Rev. W. E. Overholtser, took dangerously ill during his work with me and is still unable to work. How come? Who knows? The Lord is good to all those who seek to serve him. See 2 Kings 20:3; Isa. 38:3; Ezra 3:11; Psalm 110:5; 106:1; 107:1, 118:1; 135:3, and Nahum 1:7, to name but a few, and in the language of many a Psalm, "Praise his Holy Name" for it.

"How Do You Afford It?"

The answer to this repeated question is that "the Lord is good" and "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Psalm 84:11. Our ability to do as much as we do on so small income is due to the fact that God is so good to us as I indicated in a recent "Flash."

Unexpected, But Very Real

The fact that we have found a very generous friend at Winona Lake who makes it possible for us to stay there (in her rooming house) at such easy rates that we live almost as cheaply as at our Wabash home. For many years we have been going to her home, first for meals yonder in the days at Dayton, and later, when they both boarded and roomed people. Now she has gained such a fine reputation that her rooms are almost always engaged ahead for weeks and months, yet she always has her "friendship room" for these travelers, made available by her sacrifice of her own room for our sakes. What a friend is that—and not even a Brethren! But "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" 1 John 4:20. There are some ties that are deeper than baptismal waters for some have been washed but not sanctified. 2 Peter 2:17-22. I recommend the reading of that last reference for a good understanding of the inferences here.

We Travel To Conference

We travel to conference, vacating our pressing task of completing the painting of our rather high and large house. Brother Overholtser also vacates for a sick bed. He misses his place on the program while he suffers. I'm glad to add that he was anointed in the full faith of God's ability to make "all things work together for good" and the resignation to His will; and also, that he is recovering nicely from his affliction.

"Friend Cripe"

I put that name in there because Dr. Swoyer, who also stayed in her hospitable and restful home made a play on her name when he said in the introducing of his Bible Lectures, he was so glad that it was not "GRipe," and who wouldn't be? It was her late husband who never allowed us to pass his home in Dunlap, Indiana, without a welcome and a "chicken dinner," if it were available; who first started one of these lasting, unbreakable friendships which I so much cherish. Our little journey shortens 24 hours each day for each of us, old or young. The "Christian Ties" that have bound us in Christ here will but be tightened and sanctified when we reach our "heavenly Home;" toward which we travel and of which perhaps, we do not "sing" by far, as much as we (and they) did, even 10 to 20 years ago. The sweet, melodious voice of one who "set the tune" in the old "Eagle Creek Church" on Route U. S. 30, near New Stark, Ohio, still rings in my ears:

"My heavenly home is bright and fair,
And saints and angels gather there."

Our Lord's last words were about that Heavenly Home (John 14:1-3) and the last two chapters of our Bible are efforts to describe its beauty and luxury, its pleasures and palaces. May it be a fact that we so love our "modernized homes" here that we think too seldom of the one "over there?" I still have to add that I well and pleasantly remember several of my father's younger brothers and a sister singing to the rude accompaniment of the organ on which I learned much of what I know in music, the song:

"Over there. Over there.
Oh! think of the home over there.
Over there, over there.
Oh! think of the home over there."

And then, another verse rehearsed: "Oh Think of the friends over there." Maybe this will sober some careless sinner to do more sober thinking of the "home" and the "friends over there."

Annual Seminary Banquet

By Margaret Neighbors

The annual Seminary banquet was held at the Park Street Brethren Church at 6:30, P. M., May 20, with nearly seventy students, faculty, families, and friends attending. A very delicious meal was served by Junior Missionary Society, after which the program got under way. Dean M. A. Stuckey gave us some very challenging remarks, concerning the progress the seminary student body has made during the past several years, especially since the close of the war. It was at this time that he announced to us that he and Dr. Lindower will be taking leaves of absence next year, the first and second semesters respectively, being replaced by Rev. Edwin Boardman of Philadelphia, Pa., and Rev. Henry Bates of Oakville, Indiana. Then Lois Coleman played a piano solo.

The main part of the program was a skit, "This Ain't Your Life," adapted from the famous radio program, "This is Your Life"; and presented in the form of a radio performance. Clarence Stogsdill portrayed the life of Joseph Hamel, re-enacting scenes from early childhood to the present day. Some of the scenes of his past life were of his grade school days, army life, experiences at Ashland College showing some of his conflicts with the professors and difficulties with grammar and Greek classes, and a few of his experiences as a watch repairman. His future life was then presented as his engagement and approaching marriage to Jean Rowsey, and his recent election as president of the seminary student body for the year 1949-50 school year. Then the other new officers were introduced to the group and asked to say a few words; they are: Robert Bischof, vice-president; Margaret Neighbors, secretary-treasurer; and Clarence Stogsdill, Sem News editor. Spencer Gentle, the retiring president, gave a few remarks concerning this year's work, and closed the program with prayer.

This banquet, marking the biggest event of the year for the seminary, was enjoyed by everyone. The committee for the program was: Spencer Gentle, William Powers, Margaret Neighbors, Charles Munson, Grant Carothers, and Clarence Stogsdill, assisted by Robert Holsinger and David Rose.

We feel that our seminary is richly blessed in having such a co-operative group of students as we have had this year. We shall look back on this year with many pleasant memories and we shall look forward to coming years with much anticipation of happiness and success. May God ever be our Guide as we strive to spread His Gospel and to further His Kingdom on earth.

—From "Sem-News."

Opened With Prayer

"... the iron gate . . . opened to them of its own accord." Acts 12:10.

PETER had been cast into prison. Herod had already slain James and now it seemed inevitable that Peter's turn had come. Sixteen soldiers were set to guard him.

He was bound by two chains and what sleep he got was "between two soldiers." Herod meant business this time.

While Peter was thus locked in the prison, certain of the followers of the Way were hidden in the houses of the various disciples, waiting and watching, and of course praying. One of the first things that early Christians learned was the necessity of "Much prayer." Therefore it is not strange that we read the words, "But prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him."

We often wonder if Peter realized that prayer was going up for him. He surely must have had such a feeling. He was not too much surprised to feel the chains that bound him to the sleeping soldiers slip noiselessly from him, nor was he surprised to hear the command to follow the messenger.

The thing that must have interested him greatly was when the iron gate to the prison opened "of its own accord" and he walked out a free man. Iron gates do not usually open so easily. One must have a key that fits the lock, and muscles to bring into play to push the massive gate open. It was prayer that made the difference in this case.

We wonder if Christianity, which was represented by Peter in that day, and by our churches in our own day, is not again being shut in by a different kind of iron gate? We call it the "Iron Curtain," and it seems to be shutting much of the world out from the advance of the Church. Russia, China, certain countries of Europe—have locked behind that "Iron Curtain" much of what Peter stood for in his day.

Do we have the key that will unlock even this massive structure that has been swung across the country? Yes, we have the same key that those early Christians had—PRAYER. Prayer was the key that unlocked the iron gates for the early church. It is still available to the church today. How much are we using it?

We see very few wrinkles in clothing brought about by kneeling in prayer. We do not find the carpets in our churches worn in front of the pews by knees that have knelt there in supplication. Our prayers have not cost us much. But if we will seek to restore the early way that disciples met with the Lord, it is not impossible that we too, may find the "iron gate . . . opening of its own accord."—Adapted.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore ye soft pipes, play on;
Not to the sensual ear, but, more endeared,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone."

From Ode to a Grecian Urn—John Keats.

The unsung song is sweetest. It is perfect, it has no sour notes. There it stands in its perfection untouched by a single human frailty. It is unstained by earthly hands or undesecrated by unsure vocal cords.

There are ten thousand shades of tone. Out of all these the skilled musician attempts to pick the right one. But

"A Good Conference"

It was good as above quoted. It was larger, the Bible Addresses were at a high order: those of brother Stuckey well organized and splendidly delivered; those of Dr. Swoyer, the Lutheran, full of wit, wisdom and humor. Each stayed close to the Word, gave irresistible arguments for the orthodox position in each of his messages and left a warm place in the hearts of the hearers, more numerous than recent conferences.

A Sad Trip

One of our College Corner boys is in the hospital with severe head injuries as a result of a "horseback ride." Great sorrow and ballooning expenses are involved as he hovers between life and death, unconscious but with some good signs that it will end in recovery. Thus, we are again, as we are almost every day in the news, being brought face to face with the responsibility of using better caution in our driving, play and work. Modern machinery that does about all but talk also brings its dangers and takes its toll of human life and health. I call upon us all to be more careful of our dangers and more busy with the tasks of the Lord of Glory for whom many of us have less time than we contemplate. Better that we get that done if all else goes wrong.

"Give every flying moment,
Something to keep in store,
Work for the night is coming
When man works no more."

Canton, Ohio. Brother E. J. Beekley reports the baptism and reception into fellowship, of a mother and daughter at the Canton Church on Wednesday evening, June 22nd.

Brother Beekley has promised our readers on account of some special inter-congregation activities, which includes a series of "Tea Time" visitations. We feel that the entire brotherhood will be benefitted by these practical ideas which are being used by the Canton congregation.

Milledgeville, Illinois. The annual Sunday School Picnic of the Milledgeville congregation was held on Wednesday, June 29th, at the Pines. Dinner was served at the noon hour with the Junior and Senior W. M. S. in charge of the meal. The Sunday School furnished the ice cream. We hope that it wasn't as hot there as it was here in Ashland.

The condition of Mrs. George Hagenbuck. As we go to press we have no further information concerning the condition of Mrs. George Hagenbuck, wife of our pastor at Fremont, who has been seriously ill in the Fremont Hospital. We trust that no news is good news and that she is improving. Her father, Brother S. E. Christiansen, asks the brotherhood to continue in prayer for her complete recovery. Her sister Esther, a registered nurse, and her mother are with her.

"PAY GOD AND PAY TAXES"

Thomas M. Bard

"Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?— Mark 12:13-17

One thing in life be never forgetting,
Another, near like it, must not be forgot,
Or, by not watching you will later be getting
All that is due you, and deserve your lot;
Serve God in spirit and give Him good measure,
Have love for neighbors, each has his own part,
Pay God and pay taxes, and do both with pleasure?
And keep angry thoughts from entering the heart.

Tribute and taxes and all kinds of assessments
Stir up one's dander, and this is a true fact,
For so often our leaders in making amendments
Do not, in our thinking, use the best of tact;
We then by not paying bring to ourselves trouble
And oft times a collector will make us a call,
If we were much wiser and not dumb like a rebel
We'd pay what we owe and say nothing at all.

And be never forgetting that somewhere beyond us
There is a place made ready for each one to dwell;
A place with a Friend, our Savior King Jesus,
Or, more plainly speaking, a place in dark hell;
Then keep this before you, 'One must be preparing
To meet each condition as it enters one's life;
Through repentance and faith, we showing we're caring,
There comes to us victory and the end of all strife.

Pay state your taxes, and all they're demanding.
And give to your God that which He lays claim:
In giving your service you will keep in good standing
And nothing will darken or dampen your aim;
You then will be meeting earth's two great problems.
A peace for mankind and a home for all time;
These two, if we obey them, are the two great items
Which hold us in obedience, and perfect in rhyme.

All Christians pay taxes regardless of liking,
They also serve God from their fullness of heart;
They also look forward, never thinking of striking,
To where nothing at all can mar any part.
Give God what he is asking, and count it a pleasure,
And pay all your taxes, and count it your part;
For everything good will bring its own measure.
A satisfied soul, and a contented heart.

The difference between a politician and a statesman is that the former expects the country to do all it can for him, while the latter consecrates his life to do all he can for his country.

Moralities, like arctic flowers, grow upon a frozen sub-soil.

But the sun of the gospel reaches the heart and quickens virtues.

his lack of physical capacity to do so will cause him to fail to some degree. Perfection cannot quite be his.

The musician looks at the piper pictured on the urn playing perfect music without a flaw. These "ditties of no tone" become perfect tones in the musician's imagination because there is no imperfect physical instrumentality to mar them.

In his mental processes the painter does the same. He blends and blends the thousands of shades until he knows he has what is exactly right. But when the brush intervenes when he touches paint to canvas he develops faults and flaws. The physical has entered and it spoils the perfection he saw only in his dream.

The painter and musician both know the hue is mistaken and the tone flat. Then once more the imagination takes up the task and restores the perfection lost through the medium of the physical. Here the soft pipes play on.

There is very little, if any, perfection in the physical world. People have hands and feet of clay. The clay mars and stains the heavenly light. Only the purely ideal thing may be perfect. Man recognizes that perfection and attempts to trap and snare it in a poem, a song, a picture. And some notable achievements have been accomplished.

The poet may be filled with noble emotion, the song may waft us on its light wings to new beauty, and the picture may carry its message to the heart. But the very fact that the creator of each of these, good as they may be, had to use physical means to snare this beauty, presupposes, imperfections. The soft pipes of that silent player under the trees are still sweeter.

Keats has given us here an abiding truth to ponder.

Brethren Youth

MIAMI VALLEY YOUTH RALLY

Everyone had a grand time at the Miami Valley, Ohio, Youth Rally on Saturday afternoon and night, June 11. The Rally was held at the Gretna Brethren Church, Bellefontaine, Ohio. We were not too disappointed in the number present, considering the "vacation blood" surging through the veins of the young folk at this time of the year. We had a number in the eighties present at the evening service.

The afternoon started off with singing, led by Joe Schultz, pastor of the Williamstown church. Devotions were in charge of Kenneth Solomon of Uniontown, Pa., a member of the Crusaders team. After devotions Mr. Malcolm Thatcher, Gretna Sunday School Superintendent, took charge of the group in some recreational activities until time for the business meeting. At the close of the business meeting each church except the New Lebanon group presented a special number—I don't have all the names at this time, I'm sorry to say. The crusaders team, Robert Holsinger, Robert Keplinger, Lyle Lichtenberger, and Kenneth Solomon, led discussions then on "The Church," and "Last Things." We got into some deep water there. Next came the main event (at least physically) of the day—the feed, sponsored by the Sunday School and prepared by the ladies of the church. (How many hams, —ten?) More recreation in the form of softball followed until 7:30, when the film, "And Now I See," was shown (a very good film).

To conclude the program we all gathered around a campfire (without the church, that is) and Clayton Berkshire led us in some chorus singing. The New Lebanon quartet then sang a fine number, preparing us for the Grand Finale—Brother Charles Munson's short talk on "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork."

The Gretna people enjoyed the meeting tremendously, and I think they are hoping to have the young people back with them some day.

Clarence Stogsdill, Gretna Pastor.

Laid to Rest

WAMPLER. Brother William C. Wampler departed this life in his seventy-eighth year. He was a retired educator and farmer. His health had been very frail for the last three years. Baptized in boyhood by Trine Immersion in the icy waters of a stream in winter, he diligently and devoutly led a Christian life, worthy of praise and emulation.

After graduation from George Peabody College in Nashville, he taught in West Central Academy in Rockingham County, Virginia. Later he engaged in farming and dairying. But his real interest was always in the Kingdom of God. He was a Sunday School worker and teacher; a good husband and father; a lover of good causes and good men.

He asked the undersigned to conduct his funeral and had chosen a text most fitting to his life. Assisting in the services was Rev. Lynn C. Dickerson, pastor of the Harrisonburg Baptist Church. The body was laid to rest in the cemetery of the Antioch Christian Church. Mrs. Wampler and six children survive.

John F. Locke.

COAKLEY. Lonnie Wilton Coakley died quite suddenly while talking to several friends on June 12, 1949. He was born August 15, 1885. The days of his earthly journey were 63 years, 9 months and 27 days.

For a number of years the deceased operated a filling station just across the cemetery from the Mt. Olive Brethren Church. He was a man of friendly disposition and counted his friends by the hundreds. A great concourse of people and many floral tributes witnessed to his esteem and popularity.

Brief services were held at the house before going to the Mt. Horeb E. U. B. Church for the funeral in which the pastor, Rev. Cameron Miller, assisted the undersigned. Interment of the body was made in the well-kept cemetery of this church of which he had become a member in his youth. His son and two daughters are members of the Mt. Olive, Virginia, Church. They, with Mrs. Coakley, survive. The quartet of the Mill Creek Church and Mrs. James Moyers assisted with music.

John F. Locke.

The Brethren Evangelist

"WHEREIN SHALL WE RETURN?"—our bruised and battered age asks. Lecturers, preachers, reformers are calling us back to God. Daily papers and magazines repeatedly warn of our crime records, asking, "Why this shocking upsurge of juvenile crime?" Listen my friend! We have a parental problem first. To Return! America must return to God. In our family life, in purity, decency and clean living. Sin loving, self-seeking, pleasure chasing have dropped to a new low level. "Keep thy self pure"—is now laughed away, where once it was honored. Parenthood is avoided and apartment houses mostly carry the warning—"No children or dogs." Divorce—easy and inexpensive and hardly frowned upon.

Too many instructors, in high schools, colleges, and universities today oppose our Bible, our Christ, and His Church, and the Christian way of life.

TO RETURN! Many churches must come back to God, the Bible, the Christ, the Gospel. Some of the oldest, wealthiest and most popular churches have departed from the Holy Word. Clergymen have often sought the applause of men rather than the souls of the weary. Is it any wonder that one war follows another?

If there is to be a penitent return to the Almighty, it must start where every hope of improvement commences, with you and with me. Individual repentance must come before national repentance. Our homes, our schools, our churches must return to God with a sincere faith in Jesus Christ. It will not be enough to return to Him with education, culture, and refinement unless we have a contrite, grief-crushed heart, because of Sin. The vital, essential truth is; we must have the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and Savior of the World.

Thousands of backsliders! You may have a blessing this very moment if you will "Repent and Return to Your God. You may refuse and consign your soul to hell!

Travels

What a difference! Our readers perhaps know by this time that the writer of this column gives all of his time to the missionary interests of the church since June 1, 1949. Choosing between serving the College or the Missionary Board was no easy decision. Our fellowship with the college faculty and students was a truly happy experience! On the other hand, the missionary activity of the church being so interesting, I was directed after much prayerful consideration to hear the call to become the full-time secretary for this board.

To Fremont—On the date of June 7th, I went to visit and pray with the Hagenbuchs at Fremont. Since the birth of the little twins in this pastor's home, his wife has been very ill and most of the time in the hospital, with pneumonia and other complications.

Their church work has made very good progress. The Sunday School attendance has doubled in the last year. The church attendance has an average of 60. During the same time 19 have been baptized and 4 have been received by letter. The pastor also says, "The church has been renovated from top to bottom." He spoke of their morning services being broadcast during the month of May.

To Linwood, Maryland—The Maryland-Virginia conference was held in the church which was my first pastorate. It was a joy to be present. The trip was not without thrills and fun, since I travelled with youth director, Munson and Glenn (Doc) Shank from the Seminary. Dr. Lindower was unable to be present for the Bible lectures and your secretary was summoned by the conference secretary, to come prepared to give two Bible lectures, besides the missionary message.

Brother Belote and his church handled the conference very acceptably.

To Huntington, Indiana—After less than a day at home, I travelled via Erie to this appointment where I spoke three times in connection with the parsonage dedicatory services. (See report in another column.)

Conference in Wooster—The President, J. Garber Drushal and the writer have met different times like this lately to arrange and plan for the erection of the new Wheeler Building at Lost Creek. This project should start within a few days.

To Dayton Conference—My arrival was late due to the wedding of our daughter, Joan Elizabeth. The Ohio conference was very well attended and good things were done. It was a truly inspiring conference, with due emphasis upon every department of the church. The Ohio missionary report was very encouraging. No church was delinquent in its apportionment. Canton, Akron and Fremont each have unusual reports for the year. Columbus, being a co-operative group, even thought having done very good work, still presents a problem to the church leaders, as to the best move for the future.

Finally, after many months, we were able this week to ship the seven boxes of supplies and equipment for June Byler and the other workers in Argentina. She plans to sail from New York July 15, 1949.

CABLEGRAM

Received June's visa. Sending it immediately to Philadelphia.

Robert O. Byler.

She will sail July 15th Moore-McCormick Lines — on the "Argentina."

Report On Kentucky Policy

It is the policy of the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church to keep pastors and members advised of the plans, projects, and programs proposed by it so that all may know the direction of these policies, and share in prayers for the furtherance of the work of the church.

A great many Brethren have been inquiring about the status of the church work at Lost Creek, Kentucky. It is hoped that this article may clarify the relationships between the church, the Board, and the work in that place.

A brief historical note should be inserted here. The work now known as Riverside Christian Training School grew out of Riverside Institute, which in turn grew out of the early missionary work of Rev. and Mrs. G. E. Drushal, beginning in Lost Creek in 1905. Once established as Riverside Institute, the work operated under the direction of the Home Missionary Board on property (about 115 acres and five buildings) owned by the Board, with a staff varying in size, paid entirely by the Board. Such an arrangement continued until the controversies of the late twenties began, the details of which need not be enumerated here. Suffice it to say that at the General Conference of 1931, acting upon the recommendation of a committee appointed for that purpose, the conference recommended, and the Home Mission Board agreed to completely close the work at Lost Creek known as Riverside Institute.

Subsequent to this action the group of workers at Riverside acquired property (about three acres) adjacent to and contiguous to the then vacated property owned by the Home Mission Board. There the church and school were carried on under the name of Riverside Christian Training School, doctrinally true to Brethren faith and practice. The new work was owned, operated and managed by a non-profit corporation, this corporation made necessary to hold property under the laws of the state of Kentucky, known as the Riverside Christian Training School, Inc. Rev. Drushal has been the president of that corporation since its inception. The membership of the Board of Directors is approximately one-third local members of the Brethren Church, one-third workers in the school, and one-third interested Christians outside the state of Kentucky.

When the local Brethren church moved from the buildings owned by the Home Mission Board to the new property, recognition as a local autonomous Brethren church was continued by the Southeastern District of the Brethren Church, in whose conference and affairs they have enjoyed uninterrupted fellowship.

In the ensuing years the corporation grew, acquiring other properties in communities nearby, starting other mission efforts, etc. The work was entirely a faith mission, receiving support from such people as the Lord led to give.

Some time after the Home Mission Board property was vacated, a minister and his wife moved into the parsonage, conducting church work. Other parts of the farm and buildings were rented for a variety of commercial purposes.

After a group of dissenters left our denomination, the present Missionary Board of the Brethren Church directed both home and foreign missionary efforts, and held properties of the Brethren church in both fields of work, including the property at Lost Creek.

In 1938, the Missionary Board authorized its secretary, to make overtures to the staff of Riverside Christian Training School looking to their return to the property owned by the Board. After some consideration and deliberation, an agreement was reached between the Board of Directors of the Riverside Christian Training School and the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church. In September, 1939, a contract was signed under the terms of which the work would continue for a ten year period.

Although there were a number of detailed points, the essence of the ten-year agreement was three-fold:

1. The Missionary Board of the Brethren Church was to maintain the buildings and property, retaining ownership.
2. The Board of Directors of the Riverside Christian School was to operate whatever school and church activities they deemed wise and proper, having complete charge of the selection and pay of personnel and the complete determination of local policy.
3. The Missionary Board of the Brethren Church was to forward such moneys and gifts when so requested by the donors.

As the above agreement was about to expire, the Missionary Board at its spring meeting this year authorized the executive committee to renew the agreement with the Board of Directors of the Riverside Christian Training School. The above agreement was renewed with only two changes. Instead of for a ten-year period, the agreement is now in effect indefinitely, for an indeterminate period, with the agreement to subject to termination by either party after due notice. A period of five years must elapse between notice and termination of the agreement. Secondly, the Board of Directors of RCTS agreed to operate both properties as one unit and cause.

In the upsurge of interest among Brethren in missionary programs there has been an increased interest in the work in Kentucky. The Board plans to improve the property from time to time. It is our continuing prayer that the work of the church in all places may prosper in the years to come.

Following Jesus

C. F. Yoder

Do you want to work with Jesus? If you do, study Luke 9:57-62 and set yourself to measure up to the requirements. The three young men mentioned all failed in their examination. If you do not wish to fail also, prepare yourself for a rigid test.

The first man failed because he was too fast. He offered himself before Jesus called him. And he offered to go everywhere with Jesus, not knowing that he was going to Calvary. He was like the young man who once came forward before I had finished my sermon, but also went backward when he met his first great temptation. Jesus calls us "to follow him," but he wants us to understand first what it means. "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." Can you share a life like that? It is not only missionaries who must look forward to hardships; they come to everyone who would like righteously or serve their fellowmen. Olive Schreiner imagines a poor artist whose paintings possessed a wonderful red glow which other artists tried in vain to imitate. At last the poor artist died in his little attic room, and in his body over his heart they found an old but unhealed wound. It revealed the secret of the glow. True Christian workers must be like that poor artist.

The second young man in the story showed such promising interest that Jesus invited him to follow with him. It was the opportunity of a life time. It was the highest honor in this world, but he was too slow. He failed to realize that his opportunity was like the manna of the morning that had to be gathered at once and used the same day. Jesus was touring all the cities of Israel and would not be passing again that way. Yet he wanted to wait until his father should die and be buried, although there were others of the family who could do that. Today there are plenty of people to take care of the ordinary affairs of life, but there is a tremendous dearth of prepared preachers and teachers of the Gospel, both at home and abroad. Therefore, Jesus is saying today, "Let the dead bury their dead but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." When an old preacher said to a young aspirant to the ministry, "If you can do anything else, do not be a preacher," he was not putting the ministry last in point of importance, but immeasurably first. He might have said, "If you do not feel with Paul, 'Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel'—then to your knees until you do feel that way." For the greatest work in the world requires the greatest devotion in the world. Teachers and preachers of the Gospel, to be sure, experience many thrills, but the greatest thrill of all is that of feeling the call of the Lord to be a worker with Him.

But there was a third young man in this series of three, given for our admonition. He, like the first, offered himself but with a condition. He wanted a goodbye party. The answer of Jesus indicates that his heart was in his home rather than in the work of the Gospel; therefore, he said, "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looking back, is not fit for the kingdom of God." Good plowmen keep their eyes on the furrow and not on the things behind them. The Israelites who talked much of the melons and onions of Egypt did not reach the promised land. Paul quit witnessing for Christ only when they cut off his head. Even so, he had gone on preaching to millions instead of to hundreds.

Christianity today is facing one of the gravest crises of its history. Materialistic teaching in the schools, in the books of many lesser scientists, and in the pulpits of modernistic churches, is destroying first the faith and then the morals of the people. The next step must be judgment. The crises cannot be met by happy-go-easy churches. There must be a revival of the old time fire, the apostolic fervor and singleness of purpose. A small group fervent and constant in prayer, can transform a church. Prayer bands and gospel teams and real missionary candidates can keep the church's candle burning. A James Gribble will pioneer a world by faith when other resources fail. Young people of the Brethren Church, is not the Lord calling you? Whatever your call do not delay nor offer excuses. Trust and obey for there is no other way.

The Fellowship Of Missions

by Robert O. Byler

Some of the richest blessings of life are apt to be taken as a matter of course until we stop long enough in a busy day to think upon our blessings. Then we are lifted into the realization that the Lord has not been slack in offering manifold mercies to His people everywhere, and perhaps in special ways to us. Had not the invitation been extended by Brother Riddle to write this article, I might have lost sight of the unusual blessings we have enjoyed thus far through the fellowship of other Christian missionaries here in South America. After several days of constant thinking upon the subject, I confess that this particular line of thought had not seriously entered my mind before.

Somewhat like Goliath of old, who stood boldly upon the brow of a hill to challenge all comers—and was met by the young shepherd lad with just a handful of pebbles as his only visible means of offense; he, Goliath, was suddenly struck down by one small but mighty shot from the sling—a thing that had never entered his head before! I am now struck with the joy and worth of the contacts we have made with many missionaries here, and also realize that there are various types of fellowship in our meetings.

One of the early New Testament missionaries, Paul, wrote in the 12th chapter of Romans words which at once challenge and charge every missionary with his unusual position. He first gives a call to consecration and wholehearted service to the perfect will of God. He suggests that each one has his own particular work to fulfill and urges that we all strive together in great love to build one another up in the Christian walk. Then follow verses of how we must treat those who know not the love of Christ.

I believe all missionaries have a special need to observe carefully the admonitions given in verses 9-16. We have seen them enacted many times, and wish to share with you the blessings that such experiences bring.

1. "Be kindly affectioned in brotherly love; in honor preferring one another." V. 10. There is fellowship in every meeting—joy in every visit with other missionaries. On board ship we were not many days at sea before the missionaries sought out one another. Then followed the pleasant visits with some who had served many years in Brazil and with new recruits who were going for the first time to their posts. Meeting "home folks" always has a special thrill connected with it. And this was no exception, for we were otherwise perfect strangers.

Upon arrival in Buenos Aires, we gazed into a sea of thousands of faces who had come to meet the ship, and to our great joy, found that two of our own pastors and two missionary friends were on hand to receive us and care for us.

2. "Distributing to the necessity of saints, given to hospitality." V. 13. Practically every missionary home offers a standing invitation of fellowship and hospitality. We have the pleasant assurance that in any necessity there are numberless homes which we can call our own, where we shall be received in love. The scripture is most true which promises, "... every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life." A missionary doesn't need other credentials save the fact that he is a servant of the Lord. We have enjoyed the gracious hospitality of each of our own pastor's families, save one where we have not yet visited. In our recent trip to Buenos Aires, the days were made pleasant by our association with Mennonite, Baptist, and Alliance missionaries. Whether it is the offer of a room, a fine meal, or a cup of tea—it somehow always has the same effect. Such visits seem to bring us nearer "home" and raise our spirits tremendously. Some weeks ago our day was cheered when a missionary from the Baptist Church here offered to take us in his car (a real treat in itself) up into the Cordoba Hills to visit their camp site. Upon our return he took us to his home where a large turkey dinner awaited us! Another day we were greatly surprised when three Mennonite missionaries found our house and stopped for a brief visit. Mr. Bender, treasurer of their home board, on a tour of the Uruguayan and Argentine work of his church, accompanied the group. Imagine our pleasure when we found in him a friend from Elkhart, Indiana. He put a wire spool in his pocket and gave it directly to our parents that they might hear a recording from us.

3. "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." V. 11. Workers' meetings among our own group have been established, and these are proving to provide a real Fellowship in Planning. It is here that problems and needs are discussed; changes are instituted; the difficulties of the field are met. The practical working of our whole field is laid open and we can see the tremendous task before us. It is in these meetings that the plans for the new buildings in Villa Constitucion and Gerli are being carefully laid. Paramount in the minds of all, is the hope that our work will go forward and that the Holy Spirit will direct our steps here.

4. "Rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulations." V. 12. The encouragement and Good Advice received in Fellowship with our fellow workers is a real source of learning. Several months ago we entertained three Baptist missionaries in our home during their National Conference in Cordoba. The few moments that they had free to visit with us were quickly snatched up by our questions and our listening to their experiences. To our surprise and relief, they had all come through the same sort of adjustment period that we were realizing: they had made some of the same "stupid" mistakes with the language, too; they longed for certain North American delicacies the same as we. But above all, they had learned to constantly look forward in hope; they had learned patience. The one young man said, "When we were under appointment, our mission secretary wrote us that three practical qualifications for service in South America are (1) patience (2) patience (3) more patience. After having been here for about seven months, we wrote him that we would like to add a fourth point: another dose of patience. We are not alone in waiting for the permit for the car, for others have spent anxious months in waiting too. Others have wanted longingly for visas to be granted to new workers who are so badly needed. So the experiences of these adds to our knowledge and understanding of situations which otherwise might be extremely puzzling. And slowly as some of their needs are being supplied, we too can again take heart.

5. "Continuing instant in prayer." V. 12. The Fellowship in Prayer is probably the most binding and helpful of all—for who understands a Missionary's difficulties, misgivings, discouragements and needs better than another missionary who has experienced the same feelings? Or on the other hand, who could experience the joys and the thanksgiving that wells up in the heart of one who has experienced new souls won, than he who knows first-hand the value of each one? The very first day of our arrival, prayers of thanksgiving were given for our safe voyage and for the fact that the Lord had seen fit to bring more workers into this portion of His vineyard. Later, in a street meeting not far from Cordoba, the old pastor in charge—when he learned we were new on the field—stopped in the middle of the street to place his hands on our heads and pray for the Lord's blessing upon us and our work. He, almost ready to lay down his work, rejoiced to know that others had come. In our home, as elsewhere, prayer is a constant help and when our own devices fail, prayer is the ready source for renewed strength. Let us remind you too, that we often feel conscious of the continuing and constant prayers of the faithful at home who pray in the best way they can for the work here.

6. "Distributing to the necessity of saints." V. 13. There is probably no one as willing to help one missionary as another. It is a Fellowship of Helpfulness that can be counted upon. In my trips to Buenos Aires to work on requirements for a permanent visa, and to try to get the permit for the car, my staunch allies were several men from the Mennonite church who accompanied me from place to place using their knowledge of the language and customs in my stead. When we were looking desperately for a house, we finally found the one we now occupy. But the owner was determined to sell. Immediately a fine Christian gentleman from the Free Brethren congregation offered to talk for us, and he was successful in persuading the owner to rent to us. Brother Andenmatten and also the Yoders have helped us over and over again here in Cordoba.

7. "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." V. 15. There, is Fellowship in Joys and Sorrows among missionaries. When we view the disappointments that often come, our hearts go out in sympathy for their sorrows and difficulties. Among our own pastors and workers, there is this intimate sharing of experiences. But in a larger sense, among all the Evangelicals in the Argentine, is a joyful sense of unity. We are bound by a desire to see souls won and each individual gain is a thing of joy for us all. Recently we visited the seminaries or training schools of three Evangelical groups in Buenos Aires. Each one is taking a share in the task of training young people for the future. All are in need of more room, more teachers.

In Villa Constitucion with our earnest worker, Miss Kugler, I rejoiced in the unusual program of activity that her young people carry out. They distribute tracts, they visit from door to door, they hold meetings in annexes. A week ago Sunday there were 63 in Sunday School there, mostly children and a larger group for worship service, mostly adults. (The new building is badly needed.) Our services here in Cordoba continue to be our chief source of spiritual aid. We rejoice in the baptism of five young people in March and two other young men who have recently made public confession. There is a constant Fellowship in Worship and Work. And though our part is still small, there is a real joy in sharing with other missionaries this great and unusual task. The fellowship of these is indeed the oasis in the desert, as well as one of the greatest rewards we can enjoy.

HUNTINGTON PARSONAGE

June 19th was another red-letter day at Huntington, Indiana. The newly purchased property was dedicated as a parsonage. It is located on E. State Street (506) directly across from the front of the church. It is well arranged and makes a very acceptable home for the pastor and his wife. Their financial arrangement is very good. Surely with the fine record of this church for the past few months, no one need fear the outcome of this adventure.

The secretary spoke three times during the day. The morning and afternoon sessions were very well attended. There were visitors from a half dozen Brethren Churches.

After the address in the afternoon, the audience assembled on the lawn and porch of the new manse for the special dedication service. Brethren Burnworth and Henderson assisted the moderator and Pastor Gilmer in the service. The Bryan Girls' Trio and a reader were presented to offer several numbers on the morning and afternoon program.

In spite of the very hot day, there was wonderful fellowship over the noon hour and the finest of spirit throughout the day.

This church is showing a remarkable growth, in many ways. E. M. R.

The Necessary Intellectual Equipment For Missionary Work

by John Funk Locke

The subject that appears at the head of this article was assigned to the writer. One would hardly choose such a topic of his own volition for the simple reason that it appears to be too difficult. Yet some thinking on it should be helpful to all.

First of all there are some serious misconceptions current on the subject. A sketchy familiarity with some missionary biographies has made us feel sometimes that few people can really meet the necessary qualifications for missionary service. The splendid achievements for Christ of these great missionary figures cause us to think that they must have had almost superhuman intellectual endowments. We say "I'm no genius therefore I couldn't be a missionary." That is not true! If this article can show you that missionaries are people like you, and that people like you can, and should be missionaries, it will be of value.

Missionaries are needed today with a wide variety of skills and professions. Here is a young man who likes electrical equipment. He seems to find pleasure in working with all sorts of electrical equipment. He is a good Christian. He feels that never could he master Greek and Hebrew and win a Theological degree. He never thinks about being a missionary because he supposes that all missionaries must be persons who are preachers and teachers of theology. Yet certain mission stations which have hospitals and considerable electrical equipment to install and keep in operation could use him.

A man who can farm, build fences, repair buildings, run a tractor can be a missionary as well as a person who is a medical Doctor or nurse or a teacher. For the doctor to stop ministering to the sick bodies and souls to go build fence or repair a roof or superintend the cultivation of vegetables is not good business for the Lord's cause. Let persons work at the tasks they can do best and enjoy the most. Missions today can use a great variety of skills and trades. Because you cannot master a Greek verb or even preach a sermon of theological profundity, doesn't mean that the Lord cannot use your life as a missionary. Fortunately for the heathen in their darkness and misery not everybody has to be as gifted as Dr. Albert Schweitzer who is a great philosopher and theologian, the foremost European interpreter of the music of Bach, and surgeon-physician-missionary to the Black men of Africa's Primeval Forests. Schweitzer is a remarkable man. Any one of his three careers would rank him as a genius. But men with lesser abilities are doing the same work for the Lord in Africa and all over the world wherever missionaries are located.

I have heard Wilfred Grenfell speak, telling of his long ministry among the Labrador Fishermen. He was a man of grace and charm. In his young manhood he was a physician in London with a good practice which he left for a half century of missionary work among these forgotten people. Many persons lacking his culture and start in life have been as faithful in following the Lord's desire that we should evangelize and make disciples.

Not everybody needs to be a St. Paul. The church only had one. But multitudes of people who couldn't have written I Corinthians 13 loved the Lord and humanity even as he did, and so advanced the progress of the Gospel.

We are decidedly wrong if we make being a missionary seem an impossible thing with intellectual requirements too difficult and seemingly too unattainable for people of average abilities. In the White Harvest Fields of the world there is room for all kinds of reapers. For every great intellectual missionary there are hundreds of men and women, less known to fame, whose deeds and devotion are just as great, in the sight of God. In fact a review of Missionary history in the last century would suggest that some of the brightest names in the record were emblazoned there not by reason of great intellectual feats but by dogged faithfulness and determination to do Christ's will. Have you read of William Carey the cobbler and the famous printing establishment he and two associates started and ran in India? A cobbler, a school teacher and a printer did more by the grace of God to bring light into the darkness of the Orient than the combined learning of the world was doing at that time. Carey the Cobbler had a motto, Expect great things from God, Attempt great things for God. He did just that and God rewarded him.

When Morrison had gotten in sight of the shores of China a cynical ship captain asked him "Do you really expect to make an impression on the idolatry of the great Chinese Empire?" "No," said Morrison "But I expect God will." Faith and patience were required before results appeared. The difficulties were great and the heathen hearts were tight-locked against the truth. It was seven years before Morrison saw his first convert, seven years before Judson saw his in Burma, seven years before Carey saw his in India, eleven before Moffat saw his and twenty years before Gilmour saw his. When Moffat's wife was asked by friends at home if she needed anything she asked for a communion service though nine years had produced no convert. Two years later it arrived just in time for the ingathering had begun.

Robert Moffat declared that if he had a thousand lives they should all be devoted to preaching Christ to those who had never heard the joyful sound. In a little girl's autograph album he wrote:

"My album is the savage breast,
Where darkness broods and tempests rest,
Without one ray of light;
To write the name of Jesus there,
To point to worlds all bright and fair,
And see the savage bow in prayer
Is my supreme delight."

Faith, patience, and supreme delight in the task are the necessary intellectual equipment of the successful missionary anywhere. When you love the Lord Jesus enough to want to do His will in loving humanity into His kingdom you have passed the first big test of what it requires to be a missionary. How much specialized training and formal education shall be pursued are always secondary to these greater matters. If you are of normal health and intelligence you can be a missionary. The New Testament goes farther than that . . . it says you should! I read in a missionary paper recently of the fewness of boys as compared to girls volunteering for this great First Work of the Church. (Missionary service is the highest order of service there is). Someone said men and boys were acting as though the scripture should read, "Here am I Lord, send my sister." If you want a happy life whose influence will be multiplied in other lives, if you want to hear the King's approving welcome at the end of the road, don't send your sister or your brother but plan to GO in person. There are plenty of places that need your skill and personality.

The Present Demand For Thorough Training of Missionaries

by Bert Hodge

"Go ye into all the world . . ." has caused many a heart to beat faster in happy anticipation of doing "something" to follow the command of these words. Many a group has set out to sponsor activities to try to accomplish the things which are implied in the command. Great programs of great and small churches have been set up and contributions have poured in by the millions of dollars. All this is good. No one will ever deny that the efforts to follow Christ's command are laden with intent to do good and that great good is accomplished.

We do have the responsibility as Christians, however, to know what we are doing and why. We need to have more than a zeal to do good. Many a pastor can testify sadly enough to the fact that many a well-meant effort within the congregation has exploded with uncontrollable fury. Many a missionary can look back upon the fateful choice of approach to a new work to find that some little misunderstanding of the time, the people, the habits, the language, etc., prevented fruitful labor just when all else seemed about right to move ahead. Second guessing is belittled every day by the average citizen when he observes what he thinks are the errors of his public leaders. Many a parent has stood with bowed head over a grave of a soldier-son whose life was spent because of some error in planning by the "brass." It seems highly justifiable upon scrutiny of these situations to ask sincerely: is there any way to plead God's mercy for errors in our carrying out of His great command?

World conditions are not what they were just a few years ago. Many of the people whom we shall need to contact have already had numerous contacts with our civilization. Time was when a missionary could approach a people who were untouched by the world and give to them the story of Christ in a background of nothing more serious than the heritage of the natives to whom they went. Now the great powers of the earth claim almost every foot of inhabitable land. "Arrangements" have to be satisfactorily made (an example is the station wagon episode in S. A.) if one is to take equipment or any plan of service, and receive permission to really use it to carry out the great command. Whereas some few years ago the natives had not great store of knowledge or experience which might interfere with missionary efforts, many areas have been very well propagandized against Christianity. Workers in foreign fields need skills in almost all the arts known to man to effectively perform their tasks.

Again the writer fears that some may misunderstand the view that one needs something more than zeal to do good. This is no implication that the Holy Spirit will not lead a mission worker aright. The thought is rather that the Holy Spirit will most certainly abide with one who has not only the zeal but the training in language, history, Bible, sociology, psychology, the art of teaching.

Our college and seminary have been devoted to the task of preparing those who wish to enter into Christian service. Beyond doubt these institutions cannot supply the specific training needed in every case and for every field. They can help. They can supply a great background from which workers may draw much.

Then, too, we must not overlook the fields of work. Home mission work is not as frequently mentioned by the lay members of a church as is Foreign mission work. Again we draw attention to the particular people, the community, the backgrounds of the people and the community, the economic status of the people, and many other factors, which are present where we try to serve. No man or woman can do as good a job in such work without training as with it. For NEVER does training or education need to detract from the leadership of the Holy Spirit. Rather such preparation is rich in inducement for the coming of the Spirit into the fertile soul of a consecrated person.

Preparation is essential. This is a great world, and it is filled with an amazing assortment of peoples, conditions, heritages, beliefs and non-beliefs, prejudices, attitudes. Can we do less than give the finest possible training to those who go out into this great complex world when the task to which they go is beyond any doubt the greatest task of the ages?

Excerpts From Letters From Veda Liskey In Nigeria

Within a few days it will be one year since Veda Liskey, Harrisonburg, Virginia, sailed for Nigeria, Africa. The information carried in this report is gleaned from letters written to her parents and passed to the secretary by the secretary of the Women's Missionary Society of the Southeastern District.

Her letter speaks of the very fine fellowship which she enjoyed with the other five missionaries aboard ship. Some going to Nigeria, others to the Sudan Interior Mission. They read missionary books and sang hymns a lot of the time, accompanied by one who played an accordion. Miss Liskey speaks of the attendance at church services three times on her first Sunday in Garkida, besides being at three different places for meals. She has her own house and garden. She speaks also of the boy who works for her about the house doing her shopping and many other details. Being a trained nurse, she must surely find many interesting experiences as she helps to care for the many who are afflicted with physical ailments who come to the hospital. In this connection she tells of twenty boxes of relief goods arriving from the New Windsor depot. In this lot there were bandages and sheets with supplies for babies and the hospital from three different Sisterhood Societies in Pennsylvania.

In her January letter she told of Christmas time in Africa; how the mission family enjoyed a progressive dinner on Christmas eve with different courses at different houses ending with a gift exchange and the singing of carols, with devotions. A program was held on Christmas in the leper colony also, the Christmas story being dramatized in detail. The audience at the Garkida program on Sunday following Christmas numbered 979. She says it was a wonderful day and I was greatly surprised. From another letter she says, One day "Bubwa" (her helper) and I went to an out village saluting (that is visiting and speaking to people). It was about 5 miles and awfully hot. He asked me if I were tired and I answered "no." He said something in "Bura" which meant that I had much power. The natives think that we are a bit soft, sometimes.

You would not believe I'm in Africa if you could see me now. This is far from "bush," for I am actually writing by electric lights. I have them in my house and my kitchen. It seems to good to be true, and as a background, I'm listening to Beethoven's 6th Symphony on the victrola. Doesn't sound much like Africa, does it? I am so happy.

April 24th, she writes: "Had a lot to do today and was almost too late for church to get a seat. I usually sit with the Africans but not today, for there was no room. There were 680 in attendance for church. After church there was a double wedding today (my first one here). Both boys work in the hospital and they are both very smart boys. One is a graduate of the Bible Training School.

The week before Easter we had special services for 3 nights, and then a lovely Easter service. At 7:00 A. M. we had our Baptism down in the river—which was most impressive—40 were baptized and my Bubwa was one of them. He has been in a class of preparation for some months now and I have done a bit of teaching myself and I felt he was ready for it."

She speaks in different places about studying. The language where she is working is called "Bura." Later she says this language is no "snap," but I enjoy it. She has mastered it sufficiently to lead congregational singing in this language. She also speaks of having been put on a committee to be an assistant with the African pastors and says, "I know I will enjoy that."

The following is a letter from her helper "Bubwa" written in Bura and sent to Veda's father and mother.

What About The Jews And Russia?

"Behind the iron curtain" has become a phrase familiar to us in these days since Russia has ceased to be a friend of the west and has withdrawn behind her closely guarded frontiers. Not only has the Catholic Church in Soviet controlled countries been suppressed, but Protestantism has received severe blows as well. And we seem powerless to help.

We have read in recent months so many conflicting reports of Russia's change of face and attitude regarding the Palestine program. It goes without question that Russian arms and ammunition helped to win the war for the Jews; and the Kremlin was one of the first to recognize the new State of Israel. Yet Russia has maintained friendly relations with the Arab countries as well.

What about the Jews who live in the USSR? In the last few weeks there has come to light some interesting information compiled in a documented pamphlet and published by the American-Jewish League Against Communism.

A young student of Soviet life reveals that the Soviet Union has ruthlessly suppressed Zionism for the last 30 years. Since the days of the Bolshevik Revolution, thousands of Russian Zionists have been exiled to Siberia, never to be heard from again. Hebrew, the religious language of the Jews as well as the tongue of the nascent Palestine, is banned. Jewish religious schools for children are outlawed. Indeed the USSR's success in wiping out Zionism is matched only by the extermination of all things Jewish by Hitler's Germany.

And today, the land of the hammer and sickle is the sole power on earth which makes the movement for a Jewish homeland illegal.

Since the early '20's, no record of Zionist activities has come out of Russia. The last open meeting of Zionists took place in Moscow in 1920. Its backers were arrested, imprisoned and denounced by the new regime as "counter-revolutionaries" and "enemies of the people," charges akin to treason under Communist ideology.

This long-standing hostility to Jewish nationalism now has found a logical outlet in the current wave of intimidation and abuse turned on Russian Jews. Meanwhile, for outside consumption, the USSR has been supporting Israel in the United Nations and the Kremlin and its agents throughout the world make political capital of it.

Yet, emigration of Russian Jews to Palestine was always strictly forbidden. Finally, a few weeks ago, the Soviet Union granted its first visa to Israel—to a one-legged war veteran who won the Order of Stalin. It took two years and the intercession of Israel's Minister to Moscow. Thousands of other Soviet Jews have not been so lucky.

With the onset of the Bolshevik Revolution the Jews were the first to suffer. In a short time it had liquidated the Jewish community organization, forbidden Jewish religious schools and seminaries, communized or closed all Jewish societies. In the 1930's, it became impossible to publish any books, even purely scientific works in Yiddish. All but the official Communist publications were banned. And with the 1934 purges all Jews participating in Jewish communal life were removed from official posts and exiled or liquidated. The list was "very impressive," including "the first Jewish Commissar, a Bolshevik, who for 20 years had been considered 'Stalin's eye' in the Jewish group."

By 1940 Stalin had closed the local offices of all Jewish philanthropic agencies. And even Palestine newspapers were barred from Russia. Nor could Hebrew literature, including the Bible, be mailed direct to Soviet citizens. The Kremlin had extended its wholesale destruction of Jewish life inside Russia to include its entire realm.

Russia in Prophecy

If we have our Bibles in hand and are mindful of the words of the prophets we know what Russia is moving toward. At this time no other nation but Russia so fits the picture given us by Ezekiel, chapters 38 and 39. We have advanced far on the road toward this inevitable struggle.

We have witnessed in Europe's great travail the switching of leadership from Hitler to Stalin. Russia has risen to be the great force in Europe and will have to be reckoned with in the near future. And she is preparing herself as we well know by literally stripping all occupied countries of their industrial plants, machinery, manufactured products, herds of stock and granary stores!

Events as they pass and which we read in our daily papers make it more certain that the United States and Great Britain are not willing to grant Russia the hold she desires in Europe and other parts of the world; and the final explosion which will bring on the greatest of all conflicts is inevitable.

Russia has Iran under her control. Just what went on behind the scenes to bring Iran (Persia) into accord with Russia is a secret between the two peoples. The censorship has been so fool-proof that our diplomats have not been able to find the cause for this change of attitude on the part of Iran.

According to Biblical prophecy Turkey must also come into Alliance with Moscow. The Eastern countries of Europe came into the Russian camp by conquest, Iran by diplomatic maneuvers—how shall Turkey accede? The entire Moslem world bears malice against England and America for agreeing to all plans and claims of the State of Israel. And the doors of the near-East are standing wide open for infiltration of Russian ideas and agents.

When Russian influence shall have spread as far as Ethiopia then the alliance spoken of in the 38th Chapter of Ezekiel will be complete.

Watch the Jew—watch Russia—and pray that we may be willing and Spirit-led servants in His Hands to spread abroad His glorious message of salvation while there is yet time.—Palestine News.

Greetings to you today,

I will write to you this letter with the peace of God because I know you, even though I have not seen you; it is only through the love of God.

Also, I have much joy in my heart now because God gave to me and I received baptism, that I may become a servant of Jesus, the Saviour of us all. It was made pleasing to me when I received baptism. Also I pray that I may know Jesus, and that my wife will come to know him also. Miss Veda Liskey gives to me, through teaching, many things from parts of the Bible. Thanks to her also.

Now I want to thank you because you helped me in the building of my compound. I want to thank you very much. May God give to you health. How all my brothers salute you. They are all well.

Mshina, my wife, salutes you also. Also, she wants to receive the covenant but not now. Will you ask God that she may come to know him and the power that He gives to us all? I will speak no more at this time. May God our Lord give to you all things. I am your son.

Teacher to India Delayed

Miss Joanna Saylor, Winona Lake, Indiana, who is graduating from the University of Illinois in the field of art, has been accepted by the Methodist Missionary Board to teach in or near Singapore, India. The Secretary of the Brethren Mission Board has been told only a few days ago by the mother of this talented young lady that she will be delayed in going to this position due to the political situation in India.

Joanna is well known in our camp program, since she has helped in different camps.

Note: The Methodist Missionary Board, with offices in New York City, wrote your secretary nearly a year ago to know whether or not we might have a mission school in which we could use this talented artist. We assured them that at present we had no field in which to use her. Our personal recommendations followed. This missionary Evangelist will be glad to have news from her, when she is permitted to begin her work.

HIGHLIGHTS IN MULVANE

It has been some time since we have written to the Brotherhood of the church activities in Mulvane, Kansas. So we thought it best to write a few lines and let you know that we are still marching forward under the blood-stained banner of the Lord Jesus Christ.

At Christmas time we had a lovely program presented by the children which was well attended. During January and February some of our services were cancelled due to the bad weather here in the Mid-West. With the coming of spring, everyone began to take a more active interest in the church work. At Easter time the Builders Class and the Willing Workers Class with the assistance of a couple from the Intermediate group presented two lovely Easter plays. The plays were entitled "The Breaking of the Bread" and "The Challenge of the Cross." The church was filled with people for these plays and the Easter mission offering was received at this time.

On the first Sunday in May we were privileged to have Brother E. M. Riddle and his wife for the morning service. The Sunday before this twelve of our young people traveled to Fort Scott, a distance of 178 miles, for the services conducted by the Ashland College Gospel Team. They all reported a fine time. On the date of May 8th, our spring evangelistic services opened with Reverend William E. Thomas, Cresaptown, Maryland, my brother, as the evangelist. We had advertised these meetings. Then when he arrived we used the loud speaker system that he has to further advertise the services. It was the last two weeks of school with all of its activities besides many other appointments to interfere. However, the Lord was with us and all who attended were blessed by being present. "Brother Bill" brought us some very good messages leading his own song service. He and his wife also gave good special numbers of music. There were other folks who also offered special music and the church was grateful for all this help.

All the Christian people were drawn closer to the Lord and better yet six came forward to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. On the following Sunday evening a mother accepted the Lord. Another woman has promised to bring her letter from another church and come with us. June 5th we baptized six and at least two others may be baptized soon.

We are looking forward to the last week in July when a group of Brethren Crusaders will be here for a week of services.

It was just three years ago that I came to Mulvane as district evangelist for two weeks to help these people with their new church. We recognized their Sunday School at that time with twenty-two present. They felt then that only a very few more might be secured for the Sunday School but the Lord has blessed them beyond measure, for last Sunday without any special effort there were ninety-one at Sunday School and eighty-two at the worship service. The previous Sunday there were eighty-two at Sunday school. The evening services run about forty-five present.

At the present time we are having our vacation Bible school with fifty-two enrolled with an average attendance of forty-eight. This is about all we can care for in our church but we are hoping to build an addition as soon as possible. We desire the prayers of all God's people that we might earnestly contend for the Faith at all times. May the Lord bless you all.

Yours in His service.

Wilbur Thomas.

NEWS

From the Christian World

Christian churches in Alaska are uniting their forces to combat the spread of liquor consumption and gambling. The city of Ketchikan, with a population of 6,000 spends nearly $5,000,000 a year for liquor and only $135,000 for the education of its children and youth.

With more than twenty-six thousand foreign students in the United States this year the Institute of International Education reports that an all-time record has been set. These students are more representative of world co-operation than is the United Nations, for 151 countries and territories are represented. Twenty per cent are studying engineering, fourteen per cent are pursuing liberal arts training ten per cent each are in medicine and in the social sciences.

Seventh-Day Adventists will build a school, a hospital and a mission station upon the ruins caused by the atom bomb in Hiroshima. Through these means the Adventists hope to minister to the physical, the mental and the spiritual needs of the people of this city.

Your Family Altar: Forty years ago fifty percent of Christians had family altars. Today, it is estimated that only about 5 per cent of professing Christians have regular family worship. This forty-five per cent drop has done terrible things to the life and morals of Christians in particular and to the world in general. For example: The divorce rate forty years ago was one in every thirty-three marriages. Now it is one in every three. This fact alone indicates the terrible breakdown of the modern home.

An unusual and moving dedication service took place at the Dayton Municipal Airport on Monday afternoon, May 23. The occasion was the leading and flight of the first plane load of heifers to the refugee center and refugee families in Venezuela. More than 500 people from Southern Ohio and surrounding states gathered to participate and speed their heifers on this mission of goodwill to South America. The local radio station carried a 15-minute re-broadcast of this event. The hearts of all were gladened to see this long awaited development take place. Four additional plane loads are planned to follow this first flight. Heifer Project Committee.

Modern Apostasy—"There are unbelieving, unfaithful churches in many communities, with the best-located, the most attractive buildings, often the highest-paid preachers, but always marked by the most pronounced failure in bringing men the blood-bought pledge of salvation.

Modernists have so multiplied in our generation that they have been able to coax entire sectors of their denominations away from the Son of God. They have usurped control of mission boards, colleges and especially theological schools.

They have torn down American religious life and reduced their creed to a series of moral generalities, which have no word for the sin that sends souls to hell, no thought for the Saviour who died to grant us heaven.

With all our hearts pray for a twentieth-century reformation to bring these Modernites on their knees in recognition of their Redeemer as the only Hope men have for this life and the next. —Dr. Walter Maier.

Suicides—Every thirty minutes someone in the U. S. commits suicide.—Criminologist.

Deadliest Cruiser—The Navy's biggest, fastest, and most powerful cruiser was commissioned January 29 in the city whose name she bears. Captain Roland N. Smoot, skipper of the 17,000 ton Newport News, promptly pledged her to the role of "a country policeman" on guard . . . so that our children may play in our streets, so that we may come home from daily tasks and always spend our evenings in peace and security.

Right Direction—On the end of the cement walk that leads to a church in Corwin, Kansas, one will notice the imprint of two baby feet with the toes pointed toward the church. Some fourteen years ago when the walk was being laid, a mother set her barefoot baby boy on the smooth surface of the walk. And now the tracks may be seen as plainly as if made yesterday. She started her boy right. And now that she is dead and gone, the boy's heart has taken a set just like the cement walk. Mother, see that your boy is headed in the right direction.—S. S. Times.

How does God speak to us? In many ways. "The heavens declare the glory of God." He speaks to us through the beautiful order of the world, through the laws of nature. All natural law is an expression of his will in time and space. Long before the Bible was written God wrote his laws in the constitution of the universe and in the moral nature of man.

God speaks to us through that sense of duty which is strong in every good man. "O duty, stern daughter of the voice of God!" The call of duty is the call of God.

God speaks to us through conscience. Conscience never tells us what is right, but it always tells us to do the right. Our moral training gives us our conceptions of right and wrong. A Christian conscience is one that has been informed by the moral standards of Christ. When conscience has been turned by the principles of Christ, it becomes for us the voice of God, calling us to paths of righteousness.

God speaks to us through Christ. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."

BETWEEN THE COVERS OF OUR HYMNAL

Scripture: Psalms 9:1, 2; 98:1-9

For The Leaders

WHAT WOULD our church services be like without singing? In fact, how much enjoyment and inspiration would there be in our religion if it were not for the music of our hymns? When our hymns play such an important part in our worship and faith, is it not true that we should give careful consideration to them? Yet how familiar are we with our hymns? There are several types of hymns: the gospel song, the old-time favorite, the new releases, and the staid, ritualistic, unfamiliar hymn. All of these have their place. It is to be hoped that the young people of our churches will appraise our church hymns, choose their favorites and learn them well. The average Christian should be able to recognize the melodies of around 200 hymns, and the first verses of at least 100. It is to our spiritual advantage to know the messages of our hymns.

DISCUSSION

1. THE PLACE OF HYMN SINGING IN WORSHIP.

Ask the average, wide-awake pastor what place he feels the hymn singing plays in his worship service. Some may consider the music as a means to an end—the sermon and the benediction. But the conscientious pastor will plan his music in keeping with the sermon, the day, and his people. The singing of a hymn will be to him as important as the sermon. He will use the hymns to build up a worship consciousness in his congregation, in order that they will be spiritually prepared for the message from his heart. The congregation that is made aware of this purpose of hymn singing, will be cooperative, achieving a degree of spiritual worship not attainable where hymns are sung just as a means to an end. This is also true in our C. E. meetings.

2. EXPRESSING PRAISE. All who have experienced a deep relationship with God, who have experienced manifestations of His love and care, have yearned for some means of giving vent to the praise and adoration which wells up in their hearts. Such are literally bursting with pent-up joy and praise. Thus, David wrote the Psalms of praise; Moses wrote the song of deliverance; our hymn writers today have set their thoughts in verse and then to music. So, we sing them with joy, and in a measure find release for our joy. Who of us have not thrilled beyond measure at the singing of the great gospel hymns of praise? Some of our happiest memories result from these hours of hymn singing in church, in family groups, etc. When sung from the heart, a hymn is not just a means to an end, it is worship in itself. When Christ enters into our heart, and we with joy receive Him, then our hearts will burst forth in song and praise for Him.

3. MECHANICAL, OR WITH "FEELING." This is perhaps a direct shot at church accompanists, but can also include choir leaders, choir members, and also members of the congregation. There are two ways of producing music in a church service. First, by playing or singing in a mechanical, or note-perfect way. The notes and words are there. So many verses sung or played, and done. No feeling, no burst of praise, only a job to be done, and done. We have heard much in our life of note-perfection and precise breath control, with perfect execution, which did not have the soul or the heart in it. As music, it was perfect; as touching the heart, it was a failure. The second way to play or sing in a church service is from the soul. This is possible only through people who have truly been born-again, and who truly walk and live daily with Christ. This writer can tell in a moment whether or not a player or singer is "doing a job" or is producing from the heart, a heart that knows communion with God. So, organists, pianists, choir leaders and singers, you wouldn't want a preacher who got up and poured out so many words just as a means to an end of a thing called a "sermon." No, you want life and spirit in his words, with a living message for your life. Then you do the same with your music. Seek a closer walk with Christ, yield yourself completely to Him, and your music will take on a spiritual depth and feeling it never knew before.

4. LEARNING HYMNS. How many hymns, if you heard them played, would you recognize? How many of them could you sing along with? Are the old favorites new to you? We can't sing them often enough in our churches for you to learn them just from that. So, in your youth groups, gatherings, get out the hymnals and "go to town." Buy records of gospel songs, listen to programs on which they are featured, and learn our hymns by heart. What, you say there are so many, and so hard to learn! Don't you ever say that out loud. Some of this modern trash (rightly defined) melodies you pick up overnight. A few times on the radio, the purchase of a record, and you can sing it word for word. So, you can do the same things with the hymns of the Church; and then, you will have something that will be of lasting value for you.

5. COMFORT. It is the testimony of the writer in his ministry among the sick and the aged that people of this nature often fall back on their gospel songs for comfort and assurance. We have found value in taking recordings of hymns around to these people, and do they enjoy them? As we play them for them they comment on what the words and music mean to them. As the scriptures should be a source of eternal comfort for us, so the hymns of our hymnal can accentuate the verities of our faith. So, learn the hymns in your youth, and countless thousands of times their message of faith and triumph will return to bless your life and inspire you on your pilgrim journey of life.

QUESTIONS

1. Which do you think are of more value; gospel hymns; old favorites; new hymns?

2. List what you think are the most common faults of congregational singing, and be sure you have a solution to each problem. Can you put them into practice?

Love is most costly because it is most precious.

THE YIELDED LIFE

What is the yielded life?

'Tis one at God's command,
For Him to mold, to form, to use
Or do with as He may choose,
Resistless in His hand.

What is a yielded life?

A life whose only will,
When into blest subjection brought—
In every deed and name and thought,
Seeks just to do His will.

What is a yielded life?

A life which love has won,
And in surrender full, complete,
Lays all with gladness at the feet
Of God's most Holy Son.

Seed Thought Provokers:

"Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple." Do we consider this a "hard saying" as did the multitudes whom Christ refused to feed the next day after the miracle of the loaves and fishes (John 6:53)? Many went back and walked no more with Him (vs. 66-69). This means that the Lord will not accept divided affection and allegiance. The divided heart is the curse of present-day Christianity. Our Creator and Redeemer rightfully demands first place in our lives (2 Cor. 5:14, 15). Paul went "all out" for Jesus, body, mind, and soul (Gal. 2:20). Scripture teaches clearly that we are to lay our all on the altar (Rom. 12:1).

Anything short of our all and best is not worthy of our blood-bought salvation (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). The Lord can use only those who give Him their dead-level best. It matters not how common it is—just so it is our best (Judges 6:15, 16, 34; John 6:9-11; 1 Cor. 1:26-29). The tragedy of lost souls demands our best to the rescue (Ezek. 3:20; Acts 20:19, 20; 2 Tim. 4:1, 2). When the Lord comes to reward His servants anything less than our best will put us to shame (1 John 2:28; John 15:8). Beware of leaves without fruit. The two-talent servant was just as faithful as the five-talented servant and received the same reward (Matt. 25:20-23). Serve the Lord with abandonment and then enjoy an abundant entrance into our Lord's everlasting kingdom (2 Peter 1:11; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

SONGS OF THANKSGIVING

FAR TOO OFTEN "Songs of Thanksgiving" are only sung on the day which is set apart in November, and which has been designated as "Thanksgiving Day," a day which, if we are to judge its meaning by the activities of the great majority of Americans, has come to be expressed in "feasting" and "revelry." We shall have more to say about this in the next lesson comments, when we talk about "Festival Songs."

We may get the key to the lesson in the very first words of our printed text: Psalm 92:1—"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord." How poverty-stricken is a thankless heart, and how careless we are in expressing our thanks to God. Thanksgiving may be defined as the expression of our gratitude to our Heavenly Father for that which we have received from His bountiful hand, and for life itself with its manifold opportunities and obligations. We are usually thankful for our opportunities, but how many of us think of our obligations as something for which to be thankful? We take obligations to be disagreeable; but if taken with a thankful heart and a song on our lips, they become tasks of thankfulness.

Thanksgiving is expressing our gratitude. But gratitude is not merely saying "Thank you"—it is living our thanks. Thanksgiving can only be truly expressed by thanks-living. God wants our lives; not merely our words. It is the song in the heart, accompanied by living near to God, that brings out the most beautiful melody.

We cannot even pray without giving thanks to God; and is not prayer a melody to Him? If an earthly father delights in the sound of his child's voice, which is music in his ears; how much more must it mean to the Heavenly Father to hear His children's voices?

Dare we say we have no song of thankfulness? Note a few things as shown us in Psalm 103. He forgiveth our iniquities; He heals our diseases; He redeems our lives from destruction; He crowns with loving kindness and tender mercies . . . ; (read the rest of it.)

But it is verse 11 that should bring forth the melody of thanksgiving. Read it and look at the heavens: God's mercy is greater than this. Does it bring a song of thanksgiving into your heart? It should!

To be simply "A Big Meeting Christian," is to testify better to my selfish preference than to my devotion to God and the work of His kingdom.

Plenty of folks have a good aim in life, but lot of them never pull the trigger:

Lost Creek, Kentucky News

An emergency recently developed in the water system at Lost Creek Mission. There was not sufficient water for the buildings. The pipes that had been in use for years were corroded and rusted. The troubles are at some expense to be sure.

Wheeler Home For Boys will soon take shape again. The plans will be ready before this paper is read. Frankly-our appeal last month for additional funds to complete this building only brought a small amount.

The Location Will Be The Same Place. It is extremely urgent that this building for the boys be ready for school this very fall term.

Mr. Bud Hunter-North Manchester accepts call to superintend building of the Wheeler Home in Lost Creek. He will arrive on the Mission Station Mon. July 11th

*I see Him in the sky above—
A sky created by His love—
In all the planets, great and small;
In flowers; in trees that grow so tall;
I see Him in the golden grain,
In sunshine and in falling rain;
In transformation of man's heart,
With a new beginning, a noble start,
That proves God's power and His might,
And leads us on with great delight.*

*He separated land and sea:
He did it all for you and me.
Great miracles wrought in times of old—
In God's blessed Word we're told—
Weak men made strong by His great power;
His matchless beauty we see each hour.
A great reward is waiting you
If you love and serve Him, and be true.
There's a mansion far up in the sky
That awaits the faithful by and by.*

INTERESTING ITEMS

The Ohio District Junior-Intermediate Camp. As we write these items the youngsters that attended the Ohio Junior-Intermediate Camp have just returned home. They report a fine camp, with 107 campers enrolled, besides a faculty and their helpers of some twenty. The camp this year was held at Camp Indianola, which is situated about ten miles south of Lancaster, Ohio. The camp is on a hill top, sufficiently above the surrounding territory that it commands a beautiful view of the country for miles around. This is the second camp site that the district Sunday School Board has "tried out" in an effort to find a suitable place for the holding of the Ohio camp sessions. It is hoped that at some future date Ohio may have its own Camp Site, as several other districts now have. But until that time, established camps of other organizations are being used.

Akron, Indiana, Cooperative Brethren Church. The editor received the following from Brother Arthur H. Tinkel, pastor of the Akron Cooperative Church: "Work is coming along encouragingly here. Four adults were received into membership at our business meeting on Wednesday evening, June 29th. We expect to have baptismal services in the immediate future. Plans are made to begin laying a new roof and making extensive repairs, including interior decorating and the lowering of the ceiling—this work being started immediately. The writer was dean and teacher in a two weeks community Bible school recently. This school had a better attendance than last year."

Washington, D. C. The Washington Sunday School held their annual picnic at Landon Park on Saturday, July 9th. The picnic, which was scheduled for both afternoon and evening, closed with an evening vesper service.

Brother Fairbanks says that a beautiful picture of the Lord's Supper, was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Tamkin, and that it graces a place above the pulpit.

St. James, Maryland. We note from the St. James bulletin that the Public Program of the Vacation Bible School was held at the church on Sunday evening, July 3rd. They had an enrollment of 111, with an average attendance of 91. That's a fine average attendance when we consider that the children who attended are from a widely scattered territory.

The St. James folks are not letting their pastor, Brother Ankrum and his family get upon the field without being ready to give them a real welcome. The committee for their reception has already been appointed.

Well-digging seems to be an important part of the "parsonage repair" program at St. James. We quote from their bulletin: "Brother Ike Litton and Brother Gardner Moats will be glad to sell you 'as many feet' of that well as you wish to buy."

Loree, Indiana. Some time ago we noted that Brother Robert Higgins, pastor of the Loree Church, has been awarded a Scholarship at the Twenty-first Annual Rural Leadership School at Purdue University from the S. and E. Department of the Farm Bureau. Brother Higgins was in attendance at this school from July 11 to 15.

The Brethren Youth Men's Gospel Team (The Crusaders) held a service at the Loree Church on Saturday evening, July 9th.

Brother Higgins reports that the average attendance of the Loree Sunday School for April, May and June was 149, as compared to 121 for the same period one year ago. The attendance on July 3rd was 154.

Meyersdale, Penna. We note that in the absence of Brother W. S. Benshoff that his good wife is stepping into the breach and conducting the mid-week prayer meeting and Bible study period. Blessed is the pastor whose wife makes a good substitute for him.

Gratis, Ohio. We learn from Brother Crick's bulletin of July 3rd that their community Vacation Bible School had rapid growth during the first week. They began with an enrollment of 52 on Monday and by the end of the week the enrollment had arisen to 100. Twenty adults helped with the school.

Brother Crick reports that one hundred and thirteen young people, representing nine surrounding churches, were entertained by the Gratis Brethren Youth recently. Plans were made for an afternoon and evening program to be held on the last Sunday in September at Camp Miami, with a "carry-in" supper.

Milledgeville, Illinois. Brother D. C. White has this to say about their recent picnic: "The Sunday School Picnic was a big success. The attendance was splendid; the day hot; the dinner sumptuous, and a lovely time of fellowship was enjoyed by all."

An even dozen children of the Milledgeville Sunday School recently received their pins for nine months of perfect attendance.

Nappanee, Indiana. We note that a "Farewell Cooperative Supper" for Brother J. Milton Bowman and family,

IS YOUR CHURCH TOO COLD?

SOMETIMES it is good to let someone else think for you. That will be the case in this column this week. I might have introduced the first paragraph of the following which I found in my clipping box, and set myself to "thinking" in the usual manner. But I am hoping that which follows will Set you to thinking!

Here is what David E. Molyneaux, a minister in Flint, Michigan, has to say about the above statement—"Is your church too cold?"

"Somewhere we have read this story: A man sat through the entire service in a church one Sunday with his hat on his head. When the service was over, an usher approached him and asked: 'What is the idea of sitting through the church service wearing your hat?' The man replied, 'I have been a member of the church for ten years, and I told my wife this morning that I was going to make someone in the church speak to me if I died in the attempt.'

"That man is not the first one who ever felt lonely or neglected in the House of God. The Scottish poet, Robert Burns, was feeling depressed one day and turned into a church. From the time he entered until he left, no one spoke to him, smiled at him, or shook his hand. But before he left the church, Burns opened a hymn book and wrote this poem on the fly-leaf:

'As could a wind as ever blew,
As could a kirk, and in't but few,
As could a minister as ever spak;
You'll be hot before I'll be back.'

"One wishes he could reason with all those dear souls who go home hurt because of the neglect they feel they experienced. We would like to point out that the members may have thought you were one who has been a member of the church for twenty years but comes only twice a year and thus is never known to the rest of the church. Perhaps the person who sat next to you was a stranger too, and wistfully looked at you, hoping you would speak a kind word. Perhaps your neighbor wanted to speak to you, but you kept your eyes straight ahead in forbidding coldness. Perhaps those around you were convinced that the church service is for the purpose of worshipping God and not for social purposes. The reasons they did not speak to you may be numberless.

"However, we cannot excuse ourselves for a lack of neighborliness before the bar of our own souls. Who knows how many weary, hungry, lonely souls have come into our church in response to the invitation we so freely give? They have come to find spiritual food, but also to find the warmth of Christian fellowship. Timidity grips their souls and they find they cannot speak to anyone, and yet wistfully long for someone to speak to them.

"You can help others to draw near to the heart of our faith. You can do it by cultivating a spirit of friendliness and genuine warm human interest in your fellow worshipper. If every member of a modern church would try to express the comradeship that marked the early church, it would rock the community and would make the church a power for winning men and women. Don't be hesitant in greeting your neighbor at church. You will be blessed as he if you make the first move toward saying, 'I'm glad to see you here.' Don't leave it for someone else—take the responsibility of winning others to the church yourself."

Thus speaks this minister. And what he says is all too true in far too many cases. And we still feel like saying, as we usually do,

Think it over!

A VERY IMPORTANT NOTICE

We are going over our Evangelist subscription lists at the present time in an effort to get them right up to date. Therefore it is important that you should note the expiration date on your paper—especially is this true of those papers which show a delinquent date. If your paper shows an expiration date previous to May 1949, (5-49) we are asking that renewal be made at once. If, however, your paper shows such a date, and you know that this expiration date has not been changed from a year ago, (we are finding some of these) just drop us a card telling us about it and we will make such necessary change as is thus shown. BUT BE SURE TO DO SO AT ONCE. The reason? We are removing from the mailing list all delinquencies up to May 1949. We are not permitted to continue subscriptions that have expired by postal rules. We are finding some few expiration dates back as far as 1947 among our stencils. This ought not to be, and we want to know if we are in error about your subscription expiration, or if you just plain forgot to renew? Many are writing, "I just overlooked this." Did you? But the main thing is TO DO IT NOW.

The Faithful Family

By Peggy Gill Beekley

(Delivered at the recent Ohio District Conference.)

IT IS CERTAINLY with a deep humbleness and great sense of inadequacy that I approach this subject of attempting to give you some fundamentals that make up the faithful family. Though not having had actual experience as a teacher in the public schools, nor training as a psychologist, I believe that in our mutual interest of rearing our families in a Christian atmosphere, we have a common ground on which to approach this very worthwhile project.

If I were to preach a sermon my text would be Proverbs 22:6, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." However, I shall not attempt to "preach" to you, but rather to share with you some thoughts concerning the Christian family. I feel led to address my remarks primarily to those who are now in the process of rearing families, because our children today will be the parents of future families, and surely the best place to emphasize training is from the very beginning. However, I hope that you older parents will listen, too, and add your "Amen" to those things which strike a responsive chord, and that you younger people will store away in your minds some of those things which might help you to be better Christian parents, for certainly it takes more than instinct and good intentions to build a happy and enduring Christian home.

If the question, "Are you teaching religion in your home?" were put to you on a questionnaire where it was unnecessary to sign your name, perhaps some would feel obliged to answer, "No, not really," or at least "Not as much as I would like to do." Then I would have cause to argue with you and bring forth my contention that you are all teaching a religion of some sort. No, I didn't say that you were teaching your child the good religious principles of Christianity, but good, bad or indifferent, you are teaching a religion of some sort.

Everything you "don't" say about God, Creation and Life, as related to God, helps to form an adverse religious philosophy in his mind. Someone has said that the hardest thing a child has to do is to learn good manners without seeing any, and yet that same child will learn some type of manners or starve. Also he will learn some kind of religion.

If, then, we are teaching our children a good religion, involving the principles of Christianity, we must first make ourselves capable of that task. Certainly the parent who has no sense of sureness as to his own relationship to God, cannot pass it on to his child.

A few years ago my husband had a hobby of collecting slogans which might be used on church bulletin boards. My favorite among them was this: "Don't send your children to our Sunday School . . . Bring them." So I would urge you first to take part in your church activities; talk up your church; learn to know your pastor and your Sunday school teachers. Even though we want our children to have the training of the Sunday School and Church, we cannot depend on them entirely for this task. One Sunday school teacher of some twenty years experience, made this statement: "I have come to the conclusion that it is desperately hard for the Sunday school teacher to do more than interpret and make meaningful, the religious training which the home gives the child." And this is certainly easy to understand when one considers the fact that the Sunday school teacher has the child only one hour a week in comparison with the approximately twenty-five hours which the public school teacher is in contact with the child.

One mother said that she would give her children no religious training, for she wanted it to be "natural." Yet that same mother had certain hours for bathing the child, giving him orange juice, meals, etc., and I'm sure you'll agree that none of these things will be "un-natural." This type of parent prolongs religious training until it is impossible for the child to absorb any Christian principle through the veneer of worldly-wise cynicism and self-complacency which has developed. But Christian parents begin at the earliest opportunity, not knowing the moment perception first takes place. They start in faith, continuing in faith until that rewarding moment when proof of understanding comes.

This was proven recently by a little two-year-old boy who was being given lunch by his father. The father had placed the food in front of the child and proceeding to read while the child was eating. Finally he noticed that the child was not eating, but, bowing his head, he was trying to pray. That child had learned the habit of prayer at a very early age, and he had evidently learned it much better than his father.

Parents teach, not only the things they say with their lips, but always the things they say in their living, and this applies to Christianity as well as other phases of learning. The child who hears either parent criticize the minister, superintendent or Sunday School teacher will often have planted in his mind the root of dislike, if not actual antagonism. Good parents back the opinions and ideas of paid teachers in the public schools; let's do as much for our volunteer Sunday school workers.

The parent who lies about the age of the child cannot expect the quality of truthfulness from him; the father who knowingly keeps too much change cannot expect the child to be honest; the mother who tells "little white lies" cannot expect her child to tell the truth; the parents who refuse to pray cannot hope for prayerful children; and the mother and father who continually absent themselves from the services of the church cannot look forward to their children to love and properly evaluate the church.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "How can I hear what you say, when what you are is thundering in my heart," and this applies particularly to our Christian living before our children.

As we develop within our children a love for our own

Brethren heritage and doctrines, let us also help to develop within them a respect for other religions and creeds. Walter Winchell recently told the story of a Jewish Rabbi in Texas. The Rabbi, when explaining his compasison and help for all peoples, regardless of race, color or creed, stated that there is "no such thing as Jewish mumps, Catholic measles or Protestant pneumonia." We can't tell our children in one breath to respect other religions and then with the next, speak disparingly of some trait of that particular race or religion. Our oldest boy, though now only four, is taking great delight in sending to a neighboring Jewish family, a greeting card for their Hanukkah holiday. Although he is not aware of what the difference is in our religions, I feel sure that when he does know, it will be with a kindly and an open mind.

Since the child also learns to know God through his reaction to nature, let us help him to see the Divine Creator in the thunder and lightning, the moon and stars and the birds and flowers. It is natural for the child to experience fear, curiosity, wonder and even gratitude at the sight of these impressive natural wonders. Let us help him to also find reverence.

Let us also make available for our children in our homes, those good things which will help to enrich their conception of Christ. There are many good books available, and the children will love the Bible stories just as much as nursery rhymes, Mother Goose, and other standard childhood literature, if presented to them from the beginning. Pictures which have a definite religious emphasis should have a prominent place in the home. A small plaque of Sallman's "Head of Christ" has a place on the bedroom wall in our boys' room, and is as much loved as any of the nursery or cowboy pictures.

We try to apply the simple principles of some of the well-known and loved Bible stories to their seemingly huge problems they face every day, admonishing them to "love one another" and "be ye kind" in their everyday living, as well as in that brief hour in Sunday school. We are trying to stress that the Bible is God's rule-book for our lives, which we should love and gradually grow to understand. Try telling the story of Joseph's forgiveness toward his brothers, when a child feels he has been wronged by a playmate. If the child is afraid, give him the easily understood, yet comforting help of the Sermon on the Mount. Perhaps the story of Peter denying Christ and the anguish it caused him, will help your child to better keep his word.

Answering questions presents perhaps one of the best opportunities for religious teaching, because then we know that our efforts certainly do not fall on deaf ears but rather into receptive ground where they will bear fruit. But in order to answer those questions we must constantly be learning ourselves, or else pass up baby's or junior's request for information. Any mother of children has gone through a stage with each child, where it seems that the only two words the child knows are "Why Mommy?" and too often we are inclined to pass up the inquiry rather than take the time to be bothered with it.

"Who discovered God?" "Why did God let my dog get killed?" "Why does God let the little girl across the street have better clothes than I do?" These are a few of the questions our children will be asking us. And, incidentally, I'd like to call your attention to that last question which definitely shows an adult factor—that of clothes worry, for there is not a child who resents God, unless he has caught from an adult the feeling that God is unfair.

In our answers to our children's questions, we must, above all, be sincere. If you believe that the world was created in six days in a literal sense, tell him so. If in later years, the child has cause to believe differently, he will still respect the parent because of the fact that he was sincere. Not "all-knowing" is far better than not "basically honest."

One little child said, "I like to ask my father questions. He doesn't discuss things, he explains them." No, it isn't always easy to take the time and the effort necessary to answer those questions, but if we develop the confidence of the child by answering those trivial questions, he will return later with the assurance that we have given him in early life.

Developing the child's prayer life is a phase we consider most important in training our children. And here, especially, we must first be an example. If the children become accustomed to hearing grace before every meal, it will soon become a habit impossible to neglect. And incidentally, after your child has learned to say grace, please don't always shift that responsibility to him. I have been in many homes where it appeared that the child was the only one capable of returning thanks for a meal.

It is most difficult for the parent who has never prayed with his child to begin doing so in the teen-ages, but if it is started in baby days, then it can be continued through those difficult years, where prayer is of the utmost importance.

"Can I ask God to help me in the daytime?" is a frequent question of many children. Let us help them to understand that God is always near, wanting to help, if we will but ask Him. Here again, let us also teach our children to thank God for His answers to prayer, as well as to petition Him.

The Catholic family starts the training of the child as soon as he can talk, teaching him to make the Sign of the Cross, their version of the Lord's prayer and the Hail Mary. The Jewish family, too, begins their very definite ritual in earliest childhood. Can we do less?

Special church days present a wonderful opportunity for bringing Christian training into our homes, and do let us stress the fact that they are "holy days" and not just "holidays." From the very beginning, let us teach them that the Sabbath is primarily a day of rest and worship, and if we must have those "funny papers," let us also see that there are good religious papers and books to be read in our hours of relaxation.

This year we were faced with the problem of what we should tell our oldest boy about Santa Claus, since he was then at an age where Santa needed an explanation of some sort. After discussing the problem together we came to the conclusion that it didn't matter so much what he thought about Santa as long as the true importance and meaning of Christmas formed the core of our celebration. Christmas morning, before we even thought of the tree, or the wonderful things that might be there, we took a simple breakfast to the nursery and ate around the little play table. Together we sang "Happy Birthday to Jesus," and my husband told the boys in simple language the story of Christ's birth. I am sure that even the two-year-old was impressed. We hope to teach them, too, that Easter is an event for something besides colored eggs and bunnies, and that Thanksgiving is an "extra-special" day of giving thanks to God for His many goodnesses to us.

God has planned for families to work together, to play together, to grow together and, more important, to worship together. Someone has said that home is the place of "shared enthusiasms," and fortunate is the child who finds in his home, understanding, companionship, friendly interest in his achievements, as well as wisdom and sympathy in dealing with his failures, and unswerving loyalty to principles of Christ—a home where Christ is on the throne and not the footstool.

If you try family worship every day for at least a month, you will surely find a peace and well-being never before experienced in your home. One little child, whose family had started family worship, said that after reading Bible stories and praying, she couldn't get angry with her brother. And when she couldn't be angry with him, her mother wasn't angry with her. When her mother didn't get angry, then her Daddy wasn't angry either. This fundamental truth, discovered by a ten-year-old, contains the secret of the difference in human relationships when time is set aside for family devotions. And please notice that I said "set aside," for time must be "taken" for family worship; it can never be "found."

There are a number of reasons why we should observe family worship. A few of them are: it unites the family in a common observance; it is a source of Inner Strength so vitally needed in our topsy-turvy world today; it creates an atmosphere which helps to solve many problems arising in the close personal relationships in the home. But more important—what happens when the children are young becomes a normal family procedure and is more important to our religious life all our life long—than anything else.

There are a number of ways, too, in which we might observe family worship. One family I heard of recently, followed Bible reading by a prayer circle at the breakfast table. They all joined hands around the table and then each gave a short prayer. Perhaps you would like to introduce religious music into your family devotions by singing hymns, or having them played on a piano or phonograph. One Quaker family starts the day with a period of silent meditations. They sit in bowed silence, unless one should feel "moved" to pray or give a thought for the day. There are also many good devotional books available. Among them are the "Upper Room," the "Quiet Hour," and one that we have just recently discovered, "Thoughts of God for Boys and Girls." (This latter is published by Harper & Brothers, and is priced at $2.00.)

The places where a family altar might be held are almost innumerable. The dining table, a piano, perhaps around an indoor or outdoor fireplace, present places where we might worship together. Worshipping together in God's out-of-doors at a picnic, or on vacation, truly presents a wonderful occasion for teaching that "The Heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." Someone has said, and rightly so, that if there were more family altars, there would be less altered families.

We have tried to express a few of the ways in which Christian families might be found faithful and also various ways in which we might work toward that goal.

This one thought I wish to leave with you. For good or ill, your child absorbs your conception of God, your attitudes, your purposes, your joy or indifference in the great spiritual adventure. Because of these things, which become a part of him, your child, (or any other member of your family) finds it easier, or harder, to trust God.

Your child and God, or your family and God. Between the two stands you—a separating wall or a connecting link. I hope that all Brethren, especially, will be able to say with Joshua in days of old, "As for Me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

—Canton, Ohio.

Some Facts About Brethren Beginnings

By the late Geo. S. Baer

WE NEED to become better acquainted with ourselves. A lot of us don't know who we are, where we came from, or how we got here. Brethren people have an interesting and creditable history extending over more than two hundred years. A better knowledge of it would make church membership mean more to us and we would be challenged thereby to greater loyalty and devotion. This space permits of only a few facts about Brethren beginnings.

Began as German Dissenters

We were Germans at the outset. For a long time we were called the "German Baptist Brethren Church," because of our German origin and language. It was during the latter part of the seventeenth century that there developed a great movement for the discovery of a more vital pity than was afforded by the coldness and formalism of the state churches. Out of this struggle the Brethren church had its birth. Multitudes of pious souls were seeking the way, but they sought it according to some man's opinion. Eight of these earnest seekers protested against every humanly devised religious program and were willing only to follow the way pointed out by Scripture, to do all that it said and no more. These eight, five men and three women, gathered themselves together on the banks of the river Eder in Schwarzenau, in the Province of Wittgenstein, and there, they were baptized by triune immersion, a thing they had not seen done before, but to which practice they were led by their study of the Scriptures. None of them having been baptized, one was chosen by lot to baptize their leader, Alexander Mack, who in turn baptized the rest. They refused all creeds but the Bible, insisted on complete faith in it and obedience to all its teachings in form and in life.

And as a Missionary Church

It was no mere formal obedience that these pious souls had given, but a mighty spiritual experience they had shared in and a burning spiritual fire they had caught. They were a missionary body from the start. Alexander Mack records: "And after all had come up out of the water, and had changed their garments, they were also made at the same time to rejoice with great inward joyfulness, and by grace they were deeply impressed with these significant words, "Be ye fruitful and multiply." After this the said eight persons were more and more powerfully strengthened in their obedience to the faith they had adopted, and were enabled to testify publicly in their meetings to the truth; and the Lord granted them special grace, so that still more became obedient to the faith, and thus, within seven years' time, namely to the year 1715, there was not only in Schwarzenau a large church, but here and there in the Palatinate, there were lovers of the truth, and especially was this the case in Marienborn, where a church was gathered; for the church in the Palatinate was persecuted and its members came to Marienborn." The late Dr. T. T. Myers of Juniata College, also bears witness to this fact, saying "The Schwarzenau church was a missionary church. Its members were dedicated not to worldly pursuits, but to the cause of the Lord. When they moved they moved not to make money, but to extend the kingdom. By their holy zeal the cause spread to Marienborn, Crefeld, Epstein, into Switzerland, into Holland, and across the waters into the new world. We are safe to say that the original in twenty years, from 1708 to 1728, grew to one thousand . . . Removed as we are nearly two hundred and fifty years from the earnest, brave little Schwarzenau church, she still has relations with us. We do well if we duplicate her love, her faith, her devotion to the Holy Scriptures, and her loyalty to Christ."

Moves to America

It was in 1719 that the first Brethren people came to the United States, about twenty families in all this time. Dr. E. S. Moyer in Missions in the Church of the Brethren, say: "In coming to America the whole church was transplanted, into new and fertile soil. As with the tree that is transplanted, so it was with this church. It took some time for it to take root and to grow. However, after four years, the ill feeling that had lingered among the members largely disappeared, and on Christmas Day, 1723, they came together at Germantown and organized themselves into a congregation, chose Peter Becker as leader and minister, baptized six people, and concluded the day with a communion service. Twenty-three members participated in this service, the first of its kind conducted by the Brethren in America." After this coming together, we find them going forth with new evangelistic fervor and preaching the Gospel from place to place, holding communion services and establishing new churches. As Brethren migrated westward they went in groups and every new settlement became a new center of Brethren culture and religion. Thus thy grew and multiplied.

One of the most subtle spiritual dangers is religious formalism. Martin Luther broke with the cold ecclesiasticism that had crushed the life out of the church, and within two hundred years ecclesiasticism was back in the Christian body. Alexander Mack heard the voice of God, as did Abraham in Ur of the Chaldees, and separated himself from the traditions of the fathers and their ecclesiasticism and set going a new movement that looked to the Bible alone for its standard of faith and conduct. Thus religious life became freed from the shackles of formalism, and was destined to continue free and vital so long as faith continued to be centered only in the Word of God and not in man-made creeds and forms.

-- Odds and Ends --

By Charles L. Anspach, Ph.D., LL.D.

President Central Michigan College of Education and Former President of Ashland College

(A part of President Anspach's address on Senior Swing-out and Class Night at Mt. Pleasant, Michigan.)

AS A CHILD, I enjoyed visiting my grandfather, because he had an Odds and Ends room. That room offered adventure, interest, knowledge and inspiration. I always seemed to find objects of interest which encouraged me to lose myself to such extent that the immediate was forgotten in the dreams of the remote. Possessions were stored there that held the interest of all who were looking for the unusual. There were items in corner and on shelf that kindled sparks of imagination and inspired spurts of creativeness. Many of you have visited like rooms, and without doubt you, too, are thankful to your grandfather for providing you with so many happy and profitable hours.

Grandfather's Odds and Ends room is no longer in the attic; in fact the house is no longer in the family, but the memory of the old room is still mine, as the memory of the old room of unique interest is ours. During the years to come, you will set aside an Odds and Ends room. You, like your grandparents and your parents will store items of interest and future utility in that room. I remind you tonight, that you will establish two such rooms: one in the basement or the attic of your house; the second, an unseen room, not visible to those who know you, but real to you, from which you will draw those items which will furnish you inspiration, wisdom and a desire to create. It is important that all may lay up reserves in that inner room against the day when each shall face his Gethsemane from which there is no escape.

Dr. Grove Patterson, Editor of the Toledo Blade, says, "Have a little room and into that room bring all the best thoughts you have ever had, and all the best in music and books. And above all, bring into the little room two words. When the going is hard you may retire for a little while into the little room and be calm against the onslaughts of the world. And the two words which I would give you and leave with you are these: Dignity and Nobility."

I, too, commend these words as worthy of a place in the inner room. Dignity—not that type of display recognized as a futile attempt to act important, or to try to seem magnificent, but rather that kind of behavior which is based on established worth and honor. The nature of one's work may add to his dignity, but a man must add dignity to his work.

I met a man in New York City, a taxi-cab driver. In the conversation that took place between us, I soon discovered I was talking to a man of worth and honor. He was well read, and was an educated man, even though he had little formal education. He added to my day and I dare say to the days of all with whom he came in contact. He elevated other members of his occupation. He added stature to all men. To learn to serve well adds to one's dignity.

Nobility—that expression of one's personality which marks one as being more than a man. We are forever struggling with the base, the mean, the selfish, the low; but if one belongs to the nobility, he assumes the rank and dignity of a knight, pledged to help others to assume the complete status of men and women. To the college graduate of this country is given the opportunity of becoming men and women of worth, charged with the responsibilities of knighthood. I recall that the statement, "He who would be great among you, let him become the servant of all"—was made many hundreds of years ago. That statement has great significance today, and has meaning at this moment, for it is the pledge each must take if he would assume the role of the noble knight. Dr. Arthur Compton says exactly that in this statement:

"The atomic age de-emphasizes the importance of working for one's self and increases the importance of working for the other fellow. The person who thrives is he who serves the community. This nation can no longer live in the world society unless it serves the world."

A story is told about General George Washington and his acceptance of his role as a man as well as a general. A company of soldiers under the direction of a corporal, were trying to move a heavy timber. The timber moved upward very slowly. An officer, not in uniform, stopped and asked the corporal why he did not get under the timber and help lift. The corporal answered, "I am a corporal." The inquiring officer dismounted, and said, "I didn't know that." He then lifted until the sweat formed on his forehead. After the timber was put in place, the officer said, "Corporal, when you have another job to do and you lack men, call on your commanding officer and I will come and help you." The corporal then recognized the stranger, General George Washington. General Washington achieved dignity and nobility. Somewhere in the Odds and Ends room may you store and always find dignity and nobility.

Having recommended a way of life described in two words . . . I again revisit the room that grandfather built. Tonight you are the envy of many people, for you possess youth and physical vigor. Some persons as they grow older look with reverence on the past and view the future with considerable concern. Physical vigor one may lose, but youth can be retained. Some time, I know not when, I filed away the thoughts of an unknown. My unknown friend speaks to you tonight. Here are his thoughts on "Youth":

"Youth is not a time of life—it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips and supple knees, it is a temple of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions; it is a freshness of the deep springs of life.

"Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite of adventure over love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty.

"Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years; people grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the head and turn the growing spirit back to dust.

"Whether seventy or sixteen, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and the starlike things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unfailing child-like appetite for what comes next, and the joy and the game of life.

"You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

"In the central place in your heart there is a wireless station. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth, from men and from the Infinite, so long are you young.

"When the wires are all down and the central place of your heart is covered with the snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism, then are you grown old indeed and may God have mercy on your soul."

Tend well the inner room, for from it comes the strength for living. Select well those things you would store up for the difficult days. Search the accumulated Odds and Ends for wisdom and inspiration. Seek guidance as an unknown sought it in the prayer, "God Give Me Strength":

Each day I pray, God give me strength anew
To do the task I do not wish to do;?
To yield obedience, not asking why;
To love and own the truth, and scorn the lie;
To look a cold world in the face;
To cheer for those who pass me in the race;
To bear my burden gaily, unafraid;
To lend a hand to those who need my aid;
To measure what I am, by what I give—
God give me strength that I may rightly live!

Isn't It The Truth?

ISN'T IT THE TRUTH!

When a Plumber makes a mistake—
He charges for it twice.
When a Lawyer makes a mistake—
He has a chance to try the case again.
When a Doctor makes a mistake—
He buries it.
When a Judge makes a mistake—
It becomes the law of the land.
When a Preacher makes a mistake—
Nobody knows the difference.
BUT when a Printer makes an error—
. . . Good Night!—Exchange.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"O wad some Power the giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
An' foolish notion;
What airs in dress an' gait would lea'e us,
An' e'vn devotion!

—Robert Burns.

Few people have the nerve or balance to appraise themselves justly. The scales always tip in their favor. They are too wrapped up in themselves, too prejudiced in their own direction. They like themselves too well. Such a trait is so natural that we expect it, and are startled when we find an exception.

There is scarcely a man who can stand himself up in a corner and chide himself in a critical way for his mistakes and foolish action. The average man, even when he knows he was a fool, will not admit it to himself. While he is in this self-delusion and a sort of hero to himself, he is a most amusing figure to those who look on.

There are some rare souls who are their own sharp critics and most severe taskmasters. They weigh the evidence and prescribe what is best no matter how bitter the pill. They discipline themselves for their errors and weaknesses, and go rough shod over their feelings of egotism and self-pity. They find that this is better, though harder, to take than self-flattery that is easier on their ego. Such persons divest themselves of puny considerations concerning their personal behavior and in their own hearts endure the pain and humiliation, if any, that is justly due them.

But Burns is talking about the ordinary run of mankind. In fact the statement was born of an incident that happened in a church service. He saw a louse crawling on a strand of hair on the head of a lovely lady. It was like burns to note that she was very beautiful.

He wrote "To a Louse" from the incident and coined a thought for a deathless truth. For who is not aware of the fact that others see us through different eyes and with different feelings than those which we see ourselves?

We are too close to ourselves, hence lack perspective. The wise person will try to adjust his sight so he may be able to see himself as he is, or as others see him, which is about the same thing. But how many people are able to crawl out of their hard-baked shell to do this?

If we could do so it would indeed free us from many blunders and ridiculous situations. Then Puck could look down less often and say "What fools these mortals be." Rare and fortunate is the man who can see himself objectively and without bias or prejudice.

With a disciplined body, mind, and spirit; energy rightly directed, responsibility gladly accepted, all areas of life under God's control we can put all things under our feet.

The Gospel Crosses the Arctic Circle

Margaret T. Hills, Librarian, American Bible Society

HE HAD NEVER SEEN A TREE until he was forty-eight, nor a camel, nor running fresh water, nor a city or even a large town. But now he has translated the Gospel of Mark and the Epistle to the Romans for his own people, most of whom, like himself, will probably never see some of these objects that are commonplace in the lives of most men.

"He" is Roy Ahmaogak, a Christian son of Christian parents, at Point Barrow, 300 miles above the Arctic Circle, on the very northern point of Alaska. For years he had served as a teacher in the local schools, for his own eighth-grade education was supplemented by a course of reading under a missionary's direction. For years also, he served as aid and interpreter to missionaries and preachers, and more recently as lay leader of a congregation in Wainwright. He has also lived as a trapper and hunter, married a school teacher and is the father of eleven children and now has two grandchildren. He had had years of experience in putting into his own language for his people the word-of-mouth messages of the English-speaking preachers and missionaries. But there was no Bible or any part of it for the Christian community of twelve hundred people, of whom seven hundred were church members and about eight hundred of whom could read.

In 1946 Mr. Ahmaogak was elected by the Yukon Presbytery the elder commissioner to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and arrangements were made for him to spend a year "out" in special study and language work. Imagine the new experiences for such a man! Although he had read much and seen many pictures, all the activities and life of large towns and the countryside south of the Arctic Circle were new, fascinating and also highly confusing. In quick succession there came the meetings of the General Assembly at Atlantic City; visits with a retired but long-loved missionary in his home in Indiana; July and August at the Summer Institute of Linguistics at Norman, Oklahoma, where Dr. Eugene Nida and John McIntosh helped him get his language into written form, prepare a primer and begin on a translation of the Scriptures. The primer was planned not only to help his people learn to read their own language, but to familiarize them with some of the terms and objects to be met with in the Bible, so many of which had no place in their daily lives.

Then came the fall, winter and spring in New Jersey, where he studied at Bloomfield Seminary. There were visits to the zoo to see camels, lions and sheep; and trips to the Bible House in New York to consult with Dr. Nida on the translation. When summer came again, the translation was finished and Mr. Ahmaogak returned to Alaska, where on June 3, 1947 he was ordained by the Yukon Presbytery—the second of his people to become a church official. The day after his return he hitched up his dog sled and went for a long trip out onto the ice, glad to be back where all was quiet and peaceful. But civilization has caught up with even the northern coast of Alaska. Oil has been discovered, and the new minister and his church realized that they must face the challenge which an invading civilization would bring. To meet this challenge they needed a Book.

The Eskimo dialects into which the Scriptures have been translated differ so greatly from that used by the 3,000 people living in Point Barrow and the region stretching for 500 miles east and west of it, that they cannot be used by these people, who call their language the Inupiat dialect. There are, however, family characteristics among all the dialects. There are prefixes and suffixes, and words which form combinations that must be kept together. Some languages have a variety of vowels. Barrow Eskimo seems to have more problems in the use of consonants. There are three "n" sounds, four "t's," two "k's" and two "g's" but there are lacking the sounds of "r" and a number of other consonants in English. For instance, St. Mark is "Maagum."

There are also problems in expressing unfamiliar objects in terms the Eskimo can visualize without constant use of a Bible dictionary, which very few would have, so a literal translation of Mark 1:6 into English would read:

And John was clothed bighumpanimal hair and habelton a piece of skin and dideat insectsthatjump and beesnottamed thatwhichbeeseat.

Although the translation was completed in the spring of 1947, type difficulties held up its printing until this year. In July 1,000 copies of St. Mark were shipped to Alaska. It is to be hoped they arrive before the winter. Last winter the Eskimos had been supplied with their primer provided by the Presbyterian Board of National Missions. In March they were asking Mr. Ahmaogak, "When are we going to get the translations of the Bible?" and "Be sure to save me a copy when the books come, in case I am out of the village." He wrote: "Our people here have enjoyed learning how to read and write the Eskimo language from the Eskimo primer, and words fail me to express my thanks to Dr. Nida of the American Bible Society for the help and encouragement he gave me in preparing it for our people." Both Eskimos and whites have been using the primer. Now, during the long, dark days of this winter they will have the Gospel to tell them in their own language, translated by one of their own folks, clearly and thrillingly the story often only half understood before. The Epistle to the Romans is now being printed by the American Bible Society and perhaps it, too, will reach Point Barrow before transportation, except by air, is cut off for the winter; for it will help the church community to comprehend more fully the wonders of salvation.

Food For Thought

The following was sent to us by an interested reader of the Evangelist. He did not say that he wanted it included in our columns, but we sensed that such was the case. So we are including the "three" clippings which he sent, and letting them be their own best comment.

1. "Parable of the Vacationist"

Now it came to pass as summer drew nigh, that Mr. Church Member lifted up his eyes unto the hills and said:

"Lo, the hot days come, and even now are at hand. Come, let us go up into the Sierras, where cool breezes refresh us and glorious scenes await us."

"Yea, thou speakest wisely," quoth Mrs. C. M., "yet three or four things must we do before we go."

"Three things I can think of, but not four," responded Mr. C. M. "We must arrange for the flowers and lawn, discontinue the daily paper, and see that the mail is forwarded, but the fourth matter eludes my mind."

"The fourth is like unto the first three, but more important than all, my husband. Thou shalt dig down in thy purse and pay our church pledge before we take off, that the good name of the church may be preserved and that it be well with thee, for verily I say unto thee, thou hast more money than thou wilt have when thou dost return!"

And it came to pass that Mr. Church Member paid his pledge for the summer, and the treasurer rejoiced greatly, saying, "Of a truth there are those who do care for the Lord's work."

And it was so!

2. Ten Reasons Why

A survey was taken in the East at the doors of one thousand churches. As the people came in, they were asked why they came to church. The reasons given were grouped under the following ten heads:

1. I have come to church to worship God.
2. I have always gone to church, I guess it is my habit.
3. I worked pretty hard this week and I am spiritually hungry; I need sustenance.
4. I have come to hear a good sermon.
5. I love better music than I usually hear, and I find the best music in the church.
6. I have come for the sake of my family. I can't raise a family of children without the church.
7. Among other things I have come for the sake of my influence in the community. I love a church-going community.
8. I have come to church today, because I usually get consolation and hope when I attend this church.
9. I came to church today, because I am a Christian and a member of this church. I feel responsible to fill my pew.
10. I came to church today to see what I can do to help out.

3. "Why I Do Not Attend the Movies"

"No one speaks to me; the movies are unfriendly.

"When I go, they ask for money. One ticket should admit my entire family, because there is only one source of income for all of us.

"When I get home from business I am tired and must rest.

"There are so many hypocrites attending the movies.

"Movies may be a good thing, but I just got out of the habit of going.

"I stay away from the movies because I went too much when I was a child.

"I don't go to the movies because they admit undesirable people.

"I don't go to the movies because the manager never calls on me."

Now having read the above, draw your own conclusions as to their relative attitudes to excuses usually given for non-church attendance.

We note that each of these was quoted from a church bulletin.

Would You Like To Help And Be Helped?

The Brethren Home Executive Committee is anxious to secure the services of some lady who would like to make a real contribution to the care of the residents of the Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana, in helping the Matron of the Home in such care. Here is what would be required:

Someone who would be willing to sleep days and be of service at night, to relieve Sister Scott, who has been working almost day and night in caring for some of the residents of the Home. It is the wish of the Board to relieve her of some of this burden. One who would respond to this call would receive room and board and up to $20.00 per week for such service, looking forward toward becoming a permanent resident of the Home when unable longer to serve in this capacity.

It would be a wonderful opportunity for some Brethren widow or maiden lady to have a fine home and at the same time to render a definite service. If you are interested, write to Rev. L. V. King, Benevolent Board Treasurer, and member of Home Executive Committee, 1101 Middlebury Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

The seed of God that is in Christ contains in believing hearts the whole of eternal life.

Some people are like buzzards, they never go near a church until somebody dies.

It isn't hard for some folks to practice what they preach because they don't do much preaching.

HYMNS FOR OUR DAY

Scripture: Ps. 95:1-11; Col. 3:16

For The Leader

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE of a people is reflected in the trend of the ages. As a people is upon a high spiritual plane, so civilization moves. One of the great objects of our church services is to inspire people to a higher spiritual experience with God, so that their homes, their social and community life, will be better. By far, not the least part of these services is hymn singing. As we endeavored to point out a week ago, hymn singing can play a very essential part in the making or breaking of a service. As a trend of the age, we note an influx of new type hymns or songs. What do you think of them? Regardless of your opinion, we do have a "tug of war" between our convictions on the use of the old time gospel hymns and the desire to insert the newer hymns. Personally, we believe that each has its place. Our job in picking hymns for today is to choose those which will bear out the message for the particular service which is at hand.

DISCUSSION

1. THE OLD HYMNS. We have what is known as the old faithful hymns of the Church, "Rock of Ages," "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," "The Old Rugged Cross," and a multitude of others. Pity the church that does not use them, nor teach their melodies and messages to its youth and adults. That church will soon lose its gospel message, warmth, and witness. As a nation, society, club, etc., has a banner, song, or music which inspires its members to progress, so these hymns of the Christian church present to us a real challenge. If we are to keep the spiritual fires burning in our churches, we must make the old standard hymns our "Hymns for today."

2. NEWER HYMNS. Since time began, man has been writing music. Some of this has endured, most of it has perished. Out of the abundance and flood of compositions have come those hymns which now are the good old hymns of the church. For every one that is now remembered, a hundred perished. It is not strange that this present age should see a great writing of hymns and gospel songs. We sing them and enjoy them, for they do have wonderful melodies and messages. But notice how some stand out in popularity and lasting enjoyment. As in other years, a few will endure, and will join the ranks of the immortals. Thus it is well for us to try the new songs that come out, for by our singing of many, we shall discover the one thing about them which even the composer could not foresee—the lasting quality, or the lack thereof.

3. WHAT ABOUT GOSPEL CHORUSES. Here again the composing mills have been grinding out the tunes and words by the thousands. Some have merit, so many do not.

Who is to decide? You will, by your constant use of certain ones, to the lack of use of others. Another question being raised today is the use of choruses to the exclusion of hymns. There is a place for choruses. What Camper is there who does not associate certain choruses with certain camping experiences. With the modern tempo of our life we seem to have found the gospel chorus filling a place for which there is no time for a hymn with four verses and a chorus. We raise the question, Is this good or bad? We answer by stating that there is a place for both. Hymns belong to worship and church services. Choruses can be used in youth meetings, rallies, etc. But, both must be learned. Do not neglect your church hymns for the sake of your choruses.

4. GETTING THE MOST OUT OF OUR HYMN SINGING. Take the average congregation, and you can see that much is wanting in its hymn singing. Choice of hymns is first on the list. If it is a praise service, then pick hymns which will emphasize that angle of worship. If it is prayer, then a good prayer hymn. Most hymnals are printed with what is known as a topical index. Under this heading are many separate headings such as "Praise, Atonement, God, Jesus Christ, Holy Spirit, Heaven, Hope, Prayer." It should be used extensively by the inexperienced leader or beginner in the selecting of service songs. There is nothing more depressing than to sing hymns which are "out of line" with the thought and purpose of the service being conducted. The question of having a song leader or not, is debatable. Local custom and conditions vary. It will help in some cases; it would be out of place in other places. Ninety percent of the time the pastor must lead the singing; 90% of the time this would not be necessary if we who are members of the audience would take the right attitude toward our hymns singing.

5. SINGING HYMNS TODAY. Our attitude in hymns singing determines the success we have. First, every person must be cooperative, including the organist or pianist, the song leader if there is one, and also the audience. Last week we discussed something of the attitude and cooperation of the accompanist, which same things should include the song leader. Tonight the audience is under fire. Look in your church and see how many people are parked right in front of a hymn rack, yet never move a song book during a hymn. Somehow they must just enjoy sitting and doing nothing. We grant that there are people who lack a voice who would love to sing. But many do not sing who could. At least they could open the book and follow the words of the verses. This is especially true when the leader is introducing a new hymn to the congregation. The largest bulk of criticism is hurled at those who could sing better if they'd just try. Certainly the soul possesses little love for God or inward joy, that cannot, when able, see fit to sing a hymn unto His name.

6. LEARNING NEW HYMNS. Each church should learn some brand new hymns. Some churches try what they call a "hymn of the month." This is sung at each service for a month. Then a new one is selected. Others, in introducing a new hymn first teach it to the choir. Then the choir uses it in the service several Sundays in a row, after which it is introduced to the congregation. All that we can do to help our church singing is time and effort well spent.

"NO MAN CARETH FOR MY SOUL"

In the morning of life one passed our way,
We were busy with troubles and cares of the day;
We turned not to greet him—he went on his way;
We saw not the wistful look, nor heard him say:
"I've looked on my right hand and then on my left,
But no man cares for my soul!"

No one sees his need nor points to the Light
That shines from the cross and pierces the night;
He goes on quite heedless of sin and its blight;
As it was at life's morn, so at life's noon and night—
He looks to his right hand and then to his left,
But none, it seems, cares for his soul.

Then he comes to the River and views the far side
With no one to act as a friend or guide.
Alone, he attempts to cross the dark tide.
But the waves o'er him roll; as he lived, so he died,
For he looked on his right hand and then on his left,
But none seemed to care for his soul.

When he faces the Lord on that great Judgment Day,
And when, with the goats, he's been turned away,
Can the Lord smile on us who neglected him? Nay!
Can we face the Master and hear that one say:
"I looked on my right hand and then on my left,
But no one cared for my soul?"

WHY INVITE OTHERS?

Scriptures: Ezek. 33:7, 8; John 4:35, 36; Matt. 24:44-46;
Daniel 12:3

Hymns: "Rescue the Perishing"; "Will There Be Any Stars?"

Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

AFTER THE DESTRUCTION of the golden calf Moses gave an invitation (Ex. 32:26). At the close of life Joshua gave a farewell address and included an invitation (Joshua 24:15). Their decision was written and witnessed by a great stone being placed under an oak tree. King Joash gave a public invitation to the people assembled for the hearing of the law (2 Chron. 34:30-32). Covenants of loyalty were submitted by Ezra and Nehemiah (Ezra 10:5; Neh. 9:38; 10:29).

Jesus gave invitations: to Peter and Andrew (Matt. 4:19); to Matthew (Matt. 9:9); to the burdened and sad (Matt. 11:28-30); to Zacchaeus (Luke 19:5). He gave the parable of the slighted invitation (Luke 14:23); in the fifteenth chapter of Luke He told of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the earnest seeking and diligent searching for them.

The apostles often used earnest persuasion (Acts 2:40; 10:48; 19:8, 26; 26:28; 28:23). Paul was earnest in invitation day and night (Acts 20:31) and from house to house (Acts 20:20). He besought men (2 Cor. 5:20). In the last invitation given in the Bible the Spirit and the Church voice the invitation (Rev. 22:17).

We need to be invitation-minded so that we may be free from the blood of all men (Ezek. 3:18, 19). God is holding us responsible for the lost (Ezek. 33:7, 8). The field is ripe to harvest (John 4:35, 36). Are we proving faithful (Matt. 24:44-46; John 9:4)? God is encouraging and urging us (Prov. 11:30; Dan. 12:3).

FESTIVAL SONGS

Lesson: Psalms 10:1-6; 117: 118:19-24

LAST WEEK we studied about Songs of Thanksgiving. Today we turn to the songs of the Israelites which were used on special occasions. The Psalms we study in this lesson had a special part in the three great Festival Days of the Hebrews—Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles, although they were used on other occasions. To appreciate these Psalms, we should know a little of their background.

When we remember that each Psalm in the Hebrew Song Book was written with a definite purpose, carrying a definite meaning, we better are able to understand that which underlies their writing. Let's take the Passover for example:

When the Israelites fully realized all that the Passover Feast meant to them, and how they, as a result of the Exodus from Egypt by their forefathers under the hand of God, were now out of bondage in Egypt, and not slaves in a foreign land, they had great reason to rejoice, and the songs which came from their lips were songs of praise and adoration for their God.

How similar this is to our own feelings when we have something over which to rejoice. We break forth in song. Have you ever been fortunate enough to hear the broadcast of a Negro Camp meeting, where the preacher raises his audience to the very heights of spiritual ecstasy, with the result that there is new Negro Spiritual spontaneously born? Well, I have. Such a frame of mind is established that they break forth into sudden songs of rejoicing. Such might really be called a "festival song," for it comes to them from a memory of that which they have passed through. It thus becomes a part of their lives, to be sung again and again under similar circumstances.

We, too, have our Festival Days—Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving Day: religious in their nature; Memorial Day, Independence Day, Armistice Day—patriotic festivals. We call them "Holidays" and forget they should be "Holy Days." But examine, if you will, the above special days in our calendar. Each has its special implications: Christmas—the birthday of our Lord; Easter—the crowning day of His sacrificial life; Thanksgiving—a time set apart to remember the Providence of our God; Memorial Day—a day of memory for our departed heroes; Independence Day—the celebration of the real beginning of our own U. S. A.; Armistice Day—a day of rejoicing at a war closed, for a time at least. All of these days, if they should have been observed with their true meaning, following the close of World War II, by all Americans, or at least a major portion, would have left us without the necessity of going through the horrors of Pearl Harbor, the European and Pacific Theaters of War, and the untold suffering and deaths of thousands and thousands of our American youth.

Our Sunday is a Festival Day in reality—"The First day of the Week"—a celebration of the rising of our Lord out from among the dead. We sing "Safely through the week, God has brought us on our way," and then forget to express to Him otherwise, our joy at being under His care and keeping.

How about turning our "Lord's Day" into a real festival, instead of a mere "Holiday?" Then we will really be able to sing "Festival Songs" as did the Israelites of old.

Brother Bates says that the attendance at Sunday School on June 19th was the highest in over five years (except for three Easter Sundays.)

Stockton, Calif. The Northern California District Woman's Missionary Society held their meeting at the Stockton Church on Thursday, July 14th.

Brother Horace Huse, a ministerial student of Ashland College and Seminary, a member of the Manteca, California, Brethren Church, was the guest preacher at Stockton on Sunday morning, July 10th.

The Men's Crusader Team from Ashland College is scheduled to be with the Stockton Church for a full week, beginning August 6th. By that time they will be nearing the end of their cross country trek, and will be about ready to wend their way back to Ashland.

Dayton, Ohio. Brother Whetstone's bulletin of July 3rd has this to say, "We will miss the Choir today, but we are glad for the special music which will be given each Sunday. We will also look forward to the return of the choir at the beginning of September." Giving the choir a vacation? Well, why not? After hearing that magnificent choir at the recent conference, we know the congregation will miss them. But maybe it will make for a deeper appreciation for their services when they return.

By the way, have you ever thought of saying "Thank you" to your choir and choir director? Try it once, and see how much it will help them and how good you will feel over it.

The Editor Travels. It was the privilege of the Editor to bring the morning message at his home church in Warsaw, Indiana, on Sunday, July 3rd. He was fortunate in having Brother Delbert B. Flora, who was in attendance at the service, to assist him by taking charge of the devotional period. Brother W. B. Brant, the Warsaw pastor, was taking a short vacation in Ohio. The attendance was rather good considering the terrific heat which prevailed. It was good to speak to the "home" people again.

The Editor had the opportunity of again being with his mother, who, you will remember, had broken her knee cap the day before Mother's Day, as we have previously reported. We found her able to walk, with some aid, for quite some distance across the floor. At almost eighty-seven, we felt this to be a remarkable recovery, for which we have every reason to praise our loving Father.

To Appear at General Conference

Perry Hayden, the "Quaker Miller" of Tecumseh, Michigan, who planted a cubic inch of wheat in 1940 that fed thousands of starving people in Europe in 1946, and with Henry Ford thus staged the most dramatic tithing experiment in history, will speak and show his famous color sound movie "God Is My Landlord" at Ashland College Gymnasium, Ashland, Ohio, Wednesday, August 24th at 8:30 P. M. at the Laymen's Session of the General Conference.

Mr. Hayden, inspired by a sermon in his local Quaker church, September 22, 1940, based on the text John 12:24, decided to "take God at His word and see what would happen."—Plenty did happen!

That very week he planted one cubic inch of wheat on a tiny plot of ground furnished by Henry Ford. The 1941 harvest of one quart was cut by sickle, the wheat heads cut off by scissors, and the wheat threshed by lung power by members of his family. A tithe of the crop was paid to Hayden's church, and the remaining 90% replanted.

Successively for the next five years, harvesting was done by cradle, reaper, binder and combine, with the crop growing so fast that by 1946 the 2,666 acres needed for the project required the land of 276 cooperative farmers of all faiths and creeds. The total crop was 71,150 bushels of wheat, worth nearly $150,000. Robert Ripley in "Believe It or Not" stated that "if this project were continued for 10 years it would require all of the land in the United States, and in 13 years would cover the whole globe."

"God Is My Landlord" is a color sound film, requiring seven years to produce. Henry Ford, Captain Eddie Rick-enbacker, R. G. LeTourneau, Dr. Walter A. Maier, James L. Kraft, and others, appear and speak in the picture, which is both educational and inspiring.

Perry Hayden, President of Hayden Flour Mills, Inc. of Tecumseh, Michigan, is a dynamic speaker himself, and has shown the picture from coast to coast, and in Mexico and Canada. There is no admission cost, the public is invited.

Reasons For Missions

ONE OF THE most amazing questions that can come from the lips of any man or woman, boy or girl, is this "What's the use of missions, anyway?" Which reminds us of the man, who when the missionary offering was being taken in the church, and the basket was passed to him, said to the usher, under his voice, "I don't believe in missions.." The usher was not as quiet in his speaking, but said in a loud voice, "You don't believe in missions? Well, that's all right; just take something out of the basket—it's for the heathen."

Many American soldiers in the late World War had a real lesson in what missions really meant, when they were contacted by Island Christians in the South Pacific.

But let's look at some reasons for missions:

1. Missions are a transforming power. The soldiers and sailors in the South Seas reported this frequently and emphatically. One boy wrote, "Well, Mom, the missionaries have done absolutely marvelous work among the natives of this island." A service man in New Guinea wrote, "As far as I am concerned, every nickel ever spent on a missionary has been justified." A Navy Officer wrote his pastor as follows: "I don't believe anybody will ever come back from this war without being 100% for foreign missions." (But it doesn't seem to be working out that way, does it?) A corporal, not a church member, wrote his pastor how a handful of missionaries had risked their lives and sacrificed comforts and luxuries of home to teach Christianity to the savages of New Georgia. These natives saved numberless soldiers' lives. Another corporal wrote, "As a token of my appreciation of the wonderful work these missionaries have done, I am enclosing a money order for $100.00 with the request that it be used for foreign missionary work."

2. Missions are the true basis of world peace. Congressman Walter Judd said, "Christianity is the only religion that gives an adequate ideology for co-operation between the people of the world."

3. Missions render a distinct personal service. Individuals are reached with some 55,400 schools, 3,401 hospitals and dispensaries, over 100,000 teachers, and 243,000 native and foreign workers. Just how many lives these are touching and have touched is beyond estimation.

4. Missions are succeeding. Regardless of what may seem to be the present status of foreign missions, they are succeeding. What is done in the name of the Master can never be thought of as a recession, but rather as a spur to greater advancement.

5. Missions go back to the Great Commission. The "go ye into all the world" of our Lord as He was about to ascend to the side of the Father, is the command of the church to "Go Forward." Missions are the will of God to accomplish His eternal purpose and to meet the needs of His less privileged and unreached children. To say "No" to a missionary program, is to say "No" to God.—Adapted.

It is not possible to take Christ out of any phase of life and have anything left that is worth while.

We reach tomorrow only by going through today.

Wedding Announcement

LACY-BECHTEL. In a lovely summer wedding at the First Brethren Church of Goshen, Indiana, at 2:00 o'clock on June 26th, Dorothy Jane Lacy, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ned W. Lacy of Goshen, and Dr. Kermit Ray Bechtel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bechtel of Goshen, exchanged nuptial vows, with the undersigned reading the double ring ceremony in the presence of three hundred relatives and friends. A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church social rooms.

The bride, a teacher in Pike Street school, is a graduate of the Goshen High School, attended Indiana University, and graduated from Goshen College. The bridegroom, who is a local dentist, graduated from Goshen High School, attended Goshen College, and received his D.D.S. degree from Indiana University. He served in the U. S. Medical Corps for three years during World War II.

After a short wedding trip they are at home at 417 East Madison Street, Goshen, Indiana.

W. E. Ronk.

HAMILTON-FRY. On June 18th, at 2:30 in the afternoon, Lodema Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Hamilton, of Goshen, Indiana, became the bride of John Crosby Fry, son of D. W. Fry of Chowchilla, California, in a beautiful wedding in the First Brethren Church of Goshen, the undersigned reading the ceremony. A reception followed the ceremony in the church parlors. Many out-of-town guests were present.

History proves that men have never been as good as their religion, but they have been better than their theology.

Laid to Rest

WILSON. Anna L. Dilts Wilson, beloved wife of Joseph D. Wilson and mother of Emmert R. Wilson, passed to her reward on May 31, 1949, at the age of nearly eighty-five, having been born September 22, 1864.

She was a charter member of the Sergeantsville, New Jersey, Brethren Church, and lived a life deeply consecrated to Christ and the Church. She was ever active in charitable affairs of her community. She contributed largely in the field of Education and Religion, being a life member of Mercer County unit No. 1, W. C. T. U.; a Biblical instructor at the State Prison for eight years. Her charitable inclinations were effectually demonstrated by her untiring service of love and devotion to the Church and to her fellowman. Her faithful fulfillment of her service in her community endeared her to a host of people who will always cherish her memory with a fond and loving recollection.

The funeral services were held on Saturday, June 4th, by Rev. A. V. Kimmel, Rev. A. Cunio and the undersigned pastor. Interment was made in Rosemont Cemetery.

Other survivors are: Edith F. Swain, a granddaughter, and two grandsons, Kenneth and Richard Swain. Her passing marked the end of a full and deeply consecrated Christian life.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

"Preview"

Come To Conference

Yes, we want you to attend National Conference. We want to do everything possible to help you enjoy your week in Ashland.

But

With our alteration and building program underway, which must be completed for the beginning of school this fall, we must apprise you of possible conditions which may interfere with the usual accommodations offered you.

It May Be

That delegates, other than Sisterhood girls, will have to room outside the Dorm; that the usual dining room service will have to be curtailed.

Rest assured that everything possible will be done to hasten the completion of our building alterations, but there may be delays and situations beyond our control.

Many who desire rooms on the Campus may be disappointed, but we will make every effort to provide rooms for you as near to the Campus as possible. Delegates desiring the same rooms in private homes as assigned last year may send reservations to Dr. George C. Carpenter, 1122 Grant St., Ashland, Ohio, or you may send your requests for rooms to Ashland College.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Shipshewana Brethren Retreat, Shipshewana, Indiana. Brother C. A. Stewart, pastor of our New Paris, Indiana, Church, in a note to the editor, says, "We are at Shipshewana at present. We entertained the Jackson Township Ministerial Association here today (July 11th). The dredge is now digging the canal through the marsh and making great improvement here. In two camps thus far the enrollment was 104 and 80 for the respective weeks." Then he adds, "The fish are biting good." It makes the editor wish he was there.

Stockton, Calif. We quote from Brother Charles E. Johnson's bulletin of July 10th, "The Bereans, at a business meeting at camp, voted to send a delegate (young person) from each church to the General Conference at Ashland in August. Each church is to select its own representative." That's a fine new departure in young people's work.

The Stockton Sisterhood sponsored a "Box Social" at Dad's Point on Friday evening, July 15th. The boxes were auctioned at that time.

A contest is being waged between two sections, or "tribes," of the Young People's Class—"The Christian Eagles," led by Joan Walters, and the "Navigators," led by Dorothy Mae Klingeman.

Lanark, Illinois. "The Brethren Youth" fellowship was treated to a "hamburger fry" at Puterbaugh Park recently. The donor of the "fry" was the H. B. Puterbaugh family. Three car-loads of young people, accompanied by Rev. and Mrs. D. C. White, from Milledgeville, were present; also Rev. Spencer Gentle of Ashland, Ohio, and John Lichty of Falls City, Nebraska, who were guests for the occasion.

A "merged" picnic of the Builders and Berean Classes was held on Sunday evening, July 17th, at the Old Mill Park, Savannah, Illinois.

Linwood, Maryland. A note from Brother Dyoll Belote, Linwood pastor, says, "Am very busy teaching in a Community Daily Vacation Bible school at Windsor—the Church of the Brethren, Methodist, Presbyterian and Brethren cooperating in the enterprise. The pastor of the Church of the Brethren is supervisor of the school; the Methodist pastor is recreational director, and the Presbyterian and Brethren pastors are teaching. On the second day of the school there were 192 pupils enrolled. Not bad, we think."

New Lebanon, Ohio. Brother W. C. Berkshire reports a recent service in the New Lebanon church by the Bible Meditation League, at which time an offering amounting to $63.45 was received for the League's work.

We note that one hundred and two new folding chairs for the main assembly room of the Children's Department, and fourteen new Monroe folding tables, for use as occasion demands, have been purchased and delivered and are now in use. Brother Berkshire reports that "the work on the parsonage is coming along nicely. Two rooms are ready for the finish, and the front porch is being overhauled."

A recent guest speaker in the New Lebanon church was Rev. Baker of South West Africa, who is in this country to study.

St. James, Maryland. We note that in the absence of Rev. Warrenfeltz, who has been acting as supply pastor till such time as the new pastor, Brother Freeman Ankrum, arrived on the field, the morning service of July 10th was in charge of the Layman's Organization, with Brother Roy Lowery bringing the message. He used as his subject, "Two Missionaries."

Brother James Ault, pastor of our Hagerstown Church, who has been looking after the doctrinal observances of the St. James Church, baptized five children who had made their first time confession during the recent Vacation Bible School. What a fitting climax to a Vacation School; but we are finding more and more that the emphasis on public confession is being laid in these schools as they are being conducted in our churches.

Concerning the new well at the St. James parsonage we quote, "Water was reached at a depth of sixty feet. The flow of water is about 20 gallons per minute more than enough to meet the need."

Akron, Ohio, Firestone Park. We quote from Brother J. G. Dodds' bulletin of July 10th: "Monday, May 23rd, Brother Rymer brought his steamer to the parsonage and removed the old paper from the walls of the living room. Brother and Sister C. C. Washburn donated paper and paint to redecorate the living room and stairway. A few days later, after the paper was removed, Brother Washburn, with paper, paint and equipment, was at the parsonage to complete the donation. On Friday, July 1st, a paint company delivered five gallons of house paint at the parsonage. Monday, July 4th three sides of the par-

The Editor Thinks Aloud

Fred C. Vanator

AGREED

THE EDITOR has a habit of every once in a while going through his brief case and throwing away various and sundry slips of paper upon which he has jotted down some figures (which, when he finds them thus, are usually meaningless), or a name and address which he has already transferred to the permanent list, or a sentence, which, at the time he heard it caused him to jot it down for further meditation. Each of these is examined to see if recurring memory can make them meaningful and if not, they are consequently consigned to the waste basket.

Such a process of sorting out came tonight as I prepare to go to the Pennsylvania District Conference at Masontown. Down deep in a corner I came across a slip of paper, all wadded up, and started to throw it away. But something told me to look at it first and this is what I found. It was a sentence from an address which was given by Brother S. E. Christiansen at some meeting which I attended, time and place lost to my memory. But this is what I read:

"We may not all agree, but that is no reason why we should be disagreeable."

Well, you know what happened—

It set me to thinking!

Really now, just how many of us would be in absolute agreement about anything? Now, right at the start, that's a silly question! We could not even sit down to a meal and all agree that everything just suited our taste. (That is, if we were honest with ourselves. Of course we would not tell the hostess that.) We would not agree on style of clothing; upon which kind of automobile is best; upon the type of music we like; upon the nature of the literature we read. But, as Brother Christiansen said, "there is no reason why we should be disagreeable about it."

To agree means to fit into each other's thinking without destroying the entire structure of the thought. It means to "go the second mile." It means to consider the other fellow's rights and his way of thinking. It means to exchange selfishness for cooperation. It means to be willing to advance a cause, rather than to destroy it.

Let's go to a church "business meeting." A question is before the house for consideration. The question has been called. The vote is taken—50 "Ayes"; 20 "Nays." "The 'Ayes' have it. Then one who voted 'Nay' rises and says, 'I move to make it unanimous.' That's agreement—if all go out and work to bring it to pass. Those twenty people could "wreck" the whole matter, or they could make it a success. They could be "agreeable" or they could be "disagreeable."

The reason, many times, that a matter has no agreement is because the word "agreed" becomes two words "a greed." That's what is the matter with the world today. It is personal "greed" as against the welfare of the people at large. What happens in the world of business and politics is bound to be felt in every avenue of life. It even makes inroads into the very life of the church.

And so it might be well for us these days, to take to heart that which Brother Christiansen so well said, "We may not all agree, but that is no reason why we should disagreeable."

Think it over!

You Just About Keep Even With Us

This morning, July 18th, a great box of wiping rags came to our office by express, prepaid, from Johnstown, Pennsylvania. Nothing on the box indicated who the sender or senders might be. Therefore we cannot thank them by name. Another sack of rags turned up, evidently from someone in Ashland, but with no name attached. But regardless of the "namelessness" of the donors, we are most appreciative of the box and sack. Well, thanks, anyway. You both seemed to sense the need and your thoughtfulness helps to supply the need, and incidently, to save the Publishing House quite a sum of money.

Just when we look at our rag bin and wonder if it is going to get empty, someday here comes another box or bundle and the need is again supplied. Keep them coming. At Conference time we usually receive a good supply, due to the delegates bringing along a bundle or two. General Conference is not too far away. So we trust the "hint" set forth in the preceding sentence will be sufficient to bring a number of Bundles. How about it?

A Report On Ashland College

By President Glenn L. Clayton

THE RECENT disastrous fire at nearby Kenyon College has alerted Ohio officials to the fire hazards presented by public buildings. Ohio colleges have been carefully inspected and their buildings checked against the State Building Code. When deficiencies were discovered, the buildings have been ordered remodeled to conform with the code.

Founders and Allen Halls were found badly wanting in this respect and drastic changes were ordered. The alternative was to discontinue the use of these buildings, and since that could not be done without virtually closing the College, the Board of Trustees felt obliged to go ahead and authorize the alterations.

This was not something which could be postponed; the orders allow sixty days for the initiation of approved plans to be carried out immediately. Every permissible and wise economy is being observed. No money will be wasted. None will be spent unless necessary to meet the specifications prescribed.

In spite of such economy, the total cost will be in excess of $50,000. Admittedly this is a large sum of money. It is too bad that it cannot be spent on badly needed new buildings, but there is no denying the justice of the demands for safety. It were better far to spend $50,000 or much more, than to have a tragedy of the Kenyon variety. Perhaps the Lord has blessed us in that He has spared us such a terrible experience. Certainly, it could have happened to us.

Now, as to what will be done, specifications call for removal of the chemistry laboratories from the second floor of Founders to the basement of the Library Building. Both Founders and Allen Hall must be rewired in metal conduit. In both halls the wooden stairs must go and be replaced by steel stairs enclosed in concrete and brick wells. Adequate toilet facilities must be provided, and new classrooms and office space provided where old ones are altered. A considerable amount of metal-lath plastering is required in corridors and in the dining hall. Finally, new electric and water service is necessary.

Altogether it involves a project which, if it is to be completed in September, will require the continued efforts and cooperation of every workman as well as every friend of the College.

The question of payment naturally looms very large. Cash is needed at once in large amounts. Brethren people know how to respond to a real emergency, and I am confident that they will not fail on this occasion. We have been mightily blessed with young people working and planning at the College for active duty in the Churches. More Brethren youth than ever before are now enrolled at Ashland. These will be returning to the communities and still more youth will come to the College for help.

Your assistance in meeting the need for cash will be both timely and rewarding if you do it now, before National Conference. Delay is certain to be costly, so your immediate help is urgently and prayerfully requested.

Furthermore, we need workers in every community who will volunteer to see certain people personally. If you would be one of these persons, contact your local member of the College Board of Trustees. He is organizing the work in your area and will appreciate your help. If you have no local Trustee, write to the College for the name or names of those in charge. Your money is badly needed and so are your personal services.

I have no doubt that this money will be raised. Already a sizeable amount has been received or pledged for the near future. It will be raised because people believe in Ashland College; because praying Brethren people realize that Ashland College remains staunchly the only Brethren College, that she is distinctly Christian and definitely Brethren in outlook. For this and other reasons, Brethren people will want to have a large part in paying for the needed and required alterations.

Don't wait for someone to ask you to give. Decide how much the College means to you, then send as much as possible in cash directly to the College now. As for the remainder, simply say, "I will pay $.....," and indicate when we may expect this additional amount.

Much of this money can be raised within the next week or two. I am hoping to be able to make an encouraging report to the National Conference. Will you work and pray and give in an effort to make such a report possible?

What's Right With The Brethren?

Rev. John F. Locke

Moderator's Address to the Sixty-Second Annual Conference of the Southeastern District Conference of Brethren Churches Held at Linwood, Maryland, June 14-16, 1949

AFTER SEVERAL EXPERIENCES of giving, and much experience in taking, I have come to the conclusion that Moderator's addresses are by no means the most felicitous form of address, either to give or to take. There seems to be something rather numbing about receiving or sending one of these efforts. If the address says something vital, prophetic, calling for progressive action it is bound to be met with sullen opposition and determined complacency. The audience seems to say, "Go ahead, just try to make us change, we'll be here doing the same thing long after you are gone. Besides you have no business to go into that!" But if the address is dull, pussy-footing, straddling, the reaction is "Well, that's out of the way, it's a mere formality anyway, you know. The moderator is a nice fellow though."

The subject I have chosen should have the effect of unifying us. If I had attempted to survey, in this address, "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE BRETHREN," it would have had the effect of disunity and depression. For any discussion of one's ailments usually makes both the discussor and the listener feel worse. In the case of our denominational ills, the diagnosis of their cause, and the treatment indicated, varies from individual to individual. Soon charges and counter charges fly thick and fast with the net result of making the poor patient weaker. But we can agree on "WHAT'S RIGHT WITH THE BRETHREN" and after we have surveyed some of our strengths and opportunities we should feel stronger and take a few tottering steps out into the sun or better still, to the dinner table.

Alexander Mack studied the New Testament, having become dissatisfied with the religious system in which he had been brought up, and being anxious to determine the mind of the Lord as revealed in the scriptures. His studies of apostolic Christianity and the Teachings of Jesus led him to the conclusion that these should be the Christian's standard of faith and conduct. He and his friends began looking for a group that practiced the New Testament as they understood it. In 1708 eight persons were baptized . . . covenanting and uniting as brethren and sisters to form a church of Christian believers. One of the oldest observations on record about the conduct of the Brethren was written by a German count's daughter who lived at Schwarzenau. She said, "They spend their time in Bible study, in prayer, and in deeds of kindness and charity."

In answering the question, WHAT'S RIGHT WITH THE BRETHREN? Let us answer in the first place that our view of the authority and value of the Holy Scriptures is and has always been a source of great strength.

2. Hand in hand with that view has been our emphasis on obedience to what the scriptures teach. The early Brethren were baptised in accordance with the Scriptures. From the first they sought to obey the scriptures. You cannot become more Fundamental than that! Many of the so-called Fundamentalists who rail upon all and sundry who are not of their exact company take their hasty departure from us at this point. The Brethren came to the conclusion that to exercise force in causing a person to join the church is not according to the New Testament. Hence no infants were baptised. They emphasized peace because they found that emphasis in the New Testament. The New Testament was the member's guide. That is why they never wrote a Creed, a thing which Benjamin Franklin commented upon in his famed Autobiography, and was regarded by him as most sensible.

The Brethren just studied the New Testament and tried to be a New Testament church and logically, easily, and naturally, they acquired a distinct character. The world noted that they refused to swear oaths; they stayed out of pagan law courts; they practiced the Eighteenth chapter of St. Matthew in their relations with each other; they held the right of individual conscience above the decrees and commands of the state in the matter of bearing arms. They lived a simple life. Their ideal was that the home should be a center of fellowship. Extravagances and luxuries, and frivolous living, were not in accordance with the New Testament, so the Brethren lived a good simple life, uncluttered and unhampered by social customs and practices in variance with the New Testament. No member was allowed to engage in the Liquor traffic.

Their study of the New Testament led to the keeping of the Lord's Supper with its ancient attendants of Love feast, feet Washing, the kiss of Charity and the right hand of fellowship. They anointed the sick with oil and they practiced the laying on of hands and prayer for each one after baptism. They were democratic, letting the people rule the church.

All these things which the Brethren had from their study of the New Testament, we have or should have.

3. We have a wonderful name . . . BRETHREN . . . emphasizing the family spirit and relationship. The name reminds us that "One is our Master." The name ought to remind all the little would-be dictators that brotherly love cannot exist in any but a family-like atmosphere. Politicians do not create Brotherhood even among themselves.

4. Our long history of being right on such questions of Slavery, Temperance, War, the preservation and purity of happy family life from the inroads of easy divorce and low ideals of marriage . . . should help us as we walk the road of Today and Tomorrow.

5. We are certainly right on our recently renewed emphasis on our Youth Program. Christian Endeavor, Youth Activities and Young People's Camps are all encouraging indications of our realization of the necessity and value of such an Emphasis on Youth.

6. We have believed in Missions. No church is right that isn't missionary. Our former Missionary Program has been better than that of more recent date . . . but there is a resurgence. We have again, to the satisfaction of many devout people among us, established a beach-head in Africa. A well trained Young Woman, Graduate of Ashland College and the Medical School of Virginia School of Nursing, Miss Veda Liskey, has gone from our District to Africa, of course representing the whole church. But many will remember that not many years ago at the Mathias, West Virginia Conference she came forward as a Missionary Recruit when an appeal was given by the Missionary Board's Secretary for volunteers.

7. We have some strong churches and able pastors, though our total membership is small as a denomination. This fact must be interpreted as indicating that we have not worked our total field as we should.

8. Our Laymen are on the march and intend to do great things for the Lord. Laymen's organizations are steps in the right direction to help every man be a working member of his church.

No matter how high your principles, beliefs, ideals, or history may have been in the past, these things must be wrought out faithfully and conscientiously today. The incentives were never higher, the opportunity never greater, the need never more demanding. This could be the finest hour for the Brethren since the twenty-seven-year-old Alexander Mack and his friends stepped into the River Eider to receive Apostolic Christian Baptism.

Since that is true, then let the Southeastern District Conference set a godly, and therefore wholesome, example for the whole church in peace, in progress and a firm allegiance to the right as God shows us in His Word what the right is.

To desire to make right prevail is evidence that we have not believed in vain. Otherwise all we say becomes a hollow pretense and we have deceived ourselves. Unless our ideals are operative in the life of the church, and in the lives of individual citizens, we are walking in a vain show of hypocrisy—a state which cannot satisfy us or help others.

Let us, therefore, implement our ideals and express our principles and beliefs by making an honest effort to accomplish the following:

1. To be doers of the Word. Let each Church and Pastor among us place renewed emphasis on Biblical truth—particularly setting forth what the New Testament teaches, and relating these teachings to the life and problems of individuals of today. There is one type of Fundamentalism which seems to wholly by-pass the application of the New Testament to living. Let it never become the Brethren type.

What the church needs most today—above more well-trained and consecrated ministers even, certainly more than buildings, and more elaborate worship, is the leadership and power of the Holy Spirit. Pentecost was preceded by preparation. Let us seek the Spirit's counsel and enlightenment by a renewed emphasis on Bible study.

If we are right, and of course we are, on obeying what the scriptures teach, let us pray to be led of the Spirit. Under His leadership we will ascend the high moral ground on which our Fathers dwelt when they humbly, but tenaciously, held to and practiced, what the scriptures taught. This Conference ought to go on record as being opposed to dragging the good name of Brethren and of the Christian Church, into pagan courts of law. We have gained nothing so far by it in the realm of the good life. Unless we intend to become rank materialists and renounce the teachings of Christ and the New Testament . . . THIS MUST STOP. The Brethren got to America on the principle that it is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. We will also get to Heaven that way. Not one dollar of the Lord's money should be expended for Law Suits by any responsible agent or agency of the church or any of the church Boards. That is, if we still want to stress obedience to the New Testament, and if we want to keep our good name unsullied. It's better for someone to take your property than for the Devil to take your soul.

Our wonderful New Testament Name should prompt us to the doing of brotherly acts. There is one that is at hand at our very doors, namely the strengthening of the church and the enlargement of its fellowship in the area of Fraternal Goodwill with the Church of the Brethren. If various kinds of Lutherans can get together in the United Lutheran Church, if United Brethren and Evangelicals can get together, if several Methodist Bodies can unite to do a larger work and enjoy a happier brotherly fellowship, certainly we should not be unwilling to honestly, and in complete goodwill, explore these possibilities among and with Brethren who like ourselves hold the same precious faith.

Denominations are learning to work together even while they remain organically separate. The identity of these bodies is not being disturbed, but witness is being borne to the fact that we are the true children of God when we act brotherly in our relationships. The man outside the church is often left outside because of our being so busy with bickering and littleness that we have no energies for the real task of witnessing. Distinctive faith and practice, independence and freedom of action, certainly cannot and will not be hindered by the honest practice of brotherly goodwill and cooperation. Fraternal relations begin inside of you, they cannot be imposed or enacted by a Conference. If you love God you will love your brother also, is the New Testament's view. May we so succeed in being obedient to the will of God that we can make real progress in loving our Brethren also.

Several years ago I was walking down a busy thoroughfare in the city of Johnstown, Penna., with the able pastor of the Third Brethren Church, Brother Chester Zimmerman, now Pastor at Muncie, Indiana. I observed a Bulletin Board on one of the large downtown churches which was running a series of "Things you Never Regret." That gave me an idea for a sermon and I said to Bro. Zimmerman that I wished that I could have seen the entire series. These he very graciously obtained for me. The last one was this: You never regret "ACCEPTING THE JUDGMENT OF GOD ON ANY SUBJECT." That is how I feel on the subject of Fraternal relations. That is the explanation, if any need be given, for my own belief and action on the subject. One of the first things to advance the cause of goodwill and Cooperation in the Brethren Family of denominations would be to learn to know them and positively refrain from any and all bearing of false witness. Let the Church be led of the Spirit and the matter of Fraternal Relations is cared for. And it will be cared for in the Lord's way and according to the New Testament . . . not by the working of vicious propaganda with envyings, jealousies, hates, strifes, which murder goodwill and love and the good name of Brethren.

2. The day of increasing intemperance in which we live calls for us to strike some telling blows at a traffic which would enslave our fellowmen, seeking to mislead the very elect.

Nobody is left out of the designs of this big and much-favored business. It gets away with murder all the time. It is robbing us of money and that which is priceless. We dare not as Christians stand idly by. Here is a tree that is evil. It is not of the Father's planting. It must be uprooted and consigned to the continual fires of indignation of alerted children of God. Let us seek to safeguard our youth against it by home instruction and example as well as more formal teaching in Sunday School, Youth Camps, Christian Endeavor and other agencies. Let us help its victims like the Alcoholics Anonymous does. The Church must help these poor fellows back to the way of true temperance which is Total Abstinence from Alcoholic beverages for your own and your brother's sake.

It's great to have been right in the past. It is good to belong to a group whose history has been honorable on the great issues that had to be faced in former times. In our day let us don the full armor of God and stand against the wiles of the devil as he comes in his various guises, seeking to mislead the very elect.

3. Today war, slavery, intemperance, and materialism are still with us. We must stand where our Lord taught us to stand, where the Holy Spirit would lead us to stand—on the great questions of our time. How can we avoid war and establish peace and justice? We know that it is not enough to be against evil; we must be for its opposite.

4. How can we help people to marry and live together so that domestic tragedies can be avoided and family life be made more Christian? How shall we teach young people about such problems as Communism, Gambling, drinking, etc., and inculcate such spiritual ideals in them as to meet their daily temptations arising out of life situations? Our Young People are tomorrow's church as we all know, and our responsibility is plain. What will we build into that church of tomorrow by our own lives, or by our carelessness and neglect? To help youth we must have leaders who will be willing to make the necessary sacrifices of time and energy. We will need Sunday School teachers who will prepare themselves for their tasks with great conscientiousness. This conference should provide the solution or suggestions for the solution of these great problems.

5. The whole district ought to consider Veda Liskey, R.N., as our representative on the field. Our missionary work has lagged for several reasons which would be embarrassing and unprofitable to discuss here. Let us individually get to work on ironing out these difficulties and lay more stress right where it belongs—on fulfilling the Great Commission of Our Lord to "Go into all the world." It would be nice for the Conference to send official greetings to Veda and to go on record as urging that the Brethren Church occupy this wonderful mission field in British West Africa so available to us.

How much we really believe in missions can be gauged by how many missionaries emerge from among us.

Miss Veda Liskey's address, should you want to write her a letter, is Veda C. Liskey, R.N., Garkida, via Jos and Damaruru, Nigeria, British West Africa.

6. Let us stress Evangelism in all our churches this coming year. Let the laymen be fishers of men and a revival will be upon us. The laymen's organization of the District, once it is thoroughly alive and functioning will help provide fellowship and inspiration to every local group. Such a move should be commended heartily and aided by the conference to begin to function.

7. The Conference is now an incorporated body with the ability to care for its affairs more efficiently than before. This will necessitate some minor changes in our conference organization. Churches should be urged to send their full list of delegates to the conferences so that they may participate in the business of the conference. Whatever good the Conference can do is limited by the small representation from the several churches. Part of the increase in attendance should come from the young people in our churches.

May the Guidance of the Spirit, and the blessings of the Father and Grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ be ours as we begin another Conference, and labor on while it is yet day. The night comes. The day with its responsibilities is ours, let us rejoice and work well in it keeping the New Testament faith.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

ANNUAL SHAREHOLDERS' MEETING

OF THE

BRETHREN PUBLISHING COMPANY

The annual meeting of the shareholders of The Brethren Publishing Company will be held Wednesday morning, August 24, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock, E. S. T., at Ashland, Ohio, in the Conference Auditorium, in connection with the General Conference of The Brethren Church, as provided in the Code of Regulations, Article II, Section 1.

Article II of the Code of regulations states that "All members of the National Conference of The Brethren Churches, in good standing, are known and hereinafter designated as The Shareholders." This notice constitutes the official notice to all shareholders.

The purpose of the meeting is to receive reports of the officers of the Corporation, to elect Directors, and to care for such unfinished or new business as the shareholders may direct in accordance with the Code of Regulations.

J. E. Stookey, President
J. G. Dodds, Secretary.

Date of meeting—August 24, 1949.

Looking Forward Toward the 1949 General Conference

Rev. J. G. Dodds, Executive Secretary

A GAIN I AM QUOTING much from back issues of the Brethren Evangelist. What are the possibilities of our field? And again, what can we do?

In the issue of June 8, 1940, Elder G. C. Carpenter wrote: "The Door is wide open: for the preaching of the whole Gospel; for the practice of the Whole Gospel in daily life; for the evangelization of the world; for the Church that will show to the world what genuine Christian stewardship means; for the Church that will make no compromises with the world . . . May the Brethren Church never make any compromises with evil. May every member of the church adhere closely to New Testament standards, wear the whole armor of God, and fight the good fight of faith unto the end. May the Brethren Church enter the open doors and fulfill its God-given mission."

In the issue of August 31, 1940, Rev. Fred C. Vanator made a statement that should be emphasized today: "We are ready to go forward in a great program of advancement." Brethren, may our Spiritual forward acceleration be increased.

Dr. W. S. Bell wrote in issue of September 28, 1940: "We should be concerned as to the place, duty and responsibility of the Brethren Church . . . There has come to us as members of the Brethren Church a wonderful heritage and with it an equal responsibility. No people on earth has been bequeathed greater spiritual gifts and a greater message than we . . . May we dedicate ourselves to our God-given task by placing on the altar our lives, time and money for Christ and His Church . . . May we be faithful to the great trust that is ours and up to our high privileges and responsibilities to go forward in the greatest work ever given to man and meet the great task that is ours as a people."

In the issue of October 19, 1940, Rev. Vernon Grisso challenged: "Brethren Churches of America—move out, move on, Christ calls and challenges us to move forward and take the field of service. The program and needs are before you; how can you refuse? Isn't this the proper time?"

The world needs the Brethren Church today. We have a great mission to perform. May we launch great forward looking programs, then let us go forward unto great achievements as we zealously perform the tasks advanced in the programs.

Rev. E. L. Miller wrote in the issue of February 15, 1941: "The true Christian profession is a life well lived according to the dictates of the Holy Spirit . . . Our Christian obligation is to so live that men may know that we are children of God and therefore glorify our Father in Heaven."

Rev. C. Y. Gilmer wrote in the issue of April 13, 1941: "There is no greater commission to the Church than evangelism to the lost. Any body of Christian people that ceases to obey the Great Commission will be either greatly persecuted in order that a great revival may break out, or it will suffer a spiritual paralysis . . . For the (Brethren) Church to grow it must spread. They who are saved from sin unto God, and are Spirit-endowed, have a real brotherhood that shares Christ."

In an Editorial by W. E. Ronk in the issue of April 19, 1941, we read: "We dare not meditate too much on the past, we cannot be satisfied with the the present attainments, but we must be challenged by tomorrow . . . Every pastor and every congregation should feel the challenge in their own communities to preach, teach, and live the Word as never before, for America has never before faced such religious and spiritual apathy."

And in the issue of July 12, same year, Rev. S. M. Whetstone said: "We must not forget, Brethren, that we have some BIG things to aim at. Paul had big things to aim at, so have we. Paul's big opportunities were not bound by the past, neither are ours. Let us think of some things which we should be reaching forth to in this next Conference year."

I close this article with an Editorial from the Brethren Evangelist of August 9, 1941: "General Conference so soon? . . . Yes, time flies and there is so much of the Lord's work left to be done. It is always so with the Christian—so much to be done. We need then to gird ourselves for the task.

"Conference is coming, but are YOU COMING TO CONFERENCE? You need to come for inspiration to carry forward the Lord's work. That inspiration will come through the inspirational messages, through the information received, and no less with the fellowship with the Brethren. YOU NEED THE CONFERENCE. It is also true that the CONFERENCE NEEDS YOU. It needs your presence, and the inspiration which comes through your presence. It needs YOUR COUNSEL AND ADVICE. Let us plan then to attend the Conference and plan together for the future of the church. On to Ashland for the National Conference."

A Missionary's Equipment

Hudson Taylor thus sums up the Missionaries' Equipment. Every minister of the Gospel, as well, needs such equipment:

A life yielded to God and controlled by His Spirit.

A restful trust in God for the supply of all needs.

A sympathetic spirit, and a willingness to take a lowly place.

Tact in dealing with men, and an adaptability to circumstances.

Zeal in service, and steadfastness in times of discouragement.

Love for communion with God, and for the study of His Word.

A healthy body and a vigorous mind.

New Additions To The Ashland College and Seminary Faculty

Edwin Boardman

Henry Bates

Two members have been added to the staff of the Ashland Seminary, President Clayton announced last week. Both men are well known to the Brethren Church. Rev. Edwin Boardman, one-time missionary in the Argentine for the denomination and at present pastor of Macalester Memorial Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Rev. Henry Bates, pastor of the Oakville, Indiana Brethren Church will come to the Seminary in the next year.

Rev. Boardman will become Acting Assistant Professor of Homiletics in September. Rev. Bates will assume the position of Assistant Professor of Greek and Old Testament in January. These additions are made due to the leave of absence of Dean M. A. Stuckey and Professor L. E. Lindower each of whom will be absent from the college for a semester.

Mr. Boardman has held pastorates in the Brethren denomination in the following congregations: Middlebranch, Ohio; Gretna (Bellefontaine), Ohio; Hudson, Iowa; Terra Alta, W. Va.; Accident, Md.; Waterloo, Iowa and Hagerstown, Md. He graduated from Ashland College and, in addition, has attended Iowa State Teachers College, Princeton, University, Princeton Theological Seminary and Temple University School of Theology. He spent two years, 1922-1924 in the Argentine in mission work for the Brethren Church.

The Boardmans have four children, three of whom have been or are enrolled in Ashland College. The fourth is still in High School.

Mr. Bates graduated from Ashland College in 1945 and from the Ashland Seminary in 1946. Since then he has attended Gettysburg Lutheran Seminary. He will spend a semester in Butler University prior to his coming to Ashland. He has held pastorates in Mansfield, Ohio; St. James, Maryland, and Oakville, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Bates have two children.

Both new professors will move their families to Ashland when they assume their new duties.

"The Legendary Doctor" Returns from Siam

Dr. Edwin C. Cort, first missionary doctor to return to Siam following the war, and superintendent of the Chiangmai Leprosy Colony north of Bangkok, returned to this country on the American President Liner, President Cleveland, arriving in San Francisco, Thursday, June 9, from Hongkong.

Dr. Cort, whose brother, John S. Cort, is vice-president of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., in Pittsburgh, is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine in England.

As the only missionary doctor in Siam for two years, Dr. Cort supervised seven hospitals and the Leprosy Colony, at the same time handling relief work for Church World Service.

During that time he re-established thirteen of the seventeen leprosy clinics in North Siam communities that had existed before the war, stopped a cholera epidemic, and was credited with giving Siam the lowest death rate from malaria since records had been kept by the Minister of Public Health.

He treated 145,000 patients in one province and organizing relief activities in nine others.

Largest hospital under his supervision was the Presbyterian McCormick Hospital with nearly 5000 patients which he helped found in 1915. The Chiangmai Leprosy Colony's population increased from about 200 to nearly 500 during the three years that he supervised it.

During the war the Government of Siam took over all the hospitals and the Leprosy Colony in order to prevent their falling into the hands of the Japanese military, and when Dr. Cort returned in January, 1946, the government entrusted all the institutions to his care.

Earlier the King of Siam awarded him the "Insignia of Knight of the Order of the Crown" for distinguished service in medicine, and among those whom he trained as doctors and nurses were members of the Royal family. He sent Siamese students to Johns Hopkins and placed them in positions of responsibility.

After 40 years' service he is believed to have carried one of the largest programs in missionary history and he has been called "The Legendary Doctor."

Chiangmai Leprosy Colony is maintained by the American Mission to Lepers.

It is also the place where Ai Sam, the recipient of a ten-year-old Kansas Boy's gift, lived. That boy, Wilbur Chapman, now 43, is presently on a tour of leprosy colonies in the Far East and Africa. His gift to Ai Sam was $25 raised from sale of a pig named "Pete." The act inspired a whole new movement of "Petes"—first they were cast iron, then wooden, and finally plastic. Some $2,000,000 has been raised by people feeding these "Petes" with money instead of corn.

As my expectation is from the Lord, I will listen today.

Writes Concerning "A Universal Church"

INASMUCH as attempts are in progress to reorganize and federate all religious Denominations, may I say I believe that is the thing to do if such reorganization will fully Christianize the world. There is one religion only that can do that, and that is the religion originated, taught, and exemplified by Jesus Christ the Son of God.

I think this present surge for some sort of action is in an especial way a fulfilment of prophecy; but not a fulfilment of prophecy because God would have it so; but as world conditions, religiously, in the mind of God would be the natural human trend. I think any person of any denominational affiliation would do well to read and ponder II Thes. 2: and Matt. 24: and others. That the Denominations need unity is true, but not union in the sense as to what would result from a union or an alliance that would exclude Christ as God's Son and any or all the doctrines He established and commanded His followers to teach and observe.

I have it on good authority, that after the union of Denominations is fully completed, a Creed suitable for its operation will be written. I ask, suitable to whom? and if a new Creed is necessary, why not let the people know what it is before, that they may not be led blindly to accept a Creed that might lead farther away from God instead of closer to Him? The Church of God, whose Head is Christ, has a CREED; the only Creed efficient,—even if it is not "suitable." "Other foundation can no Man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Exclude Him who is to be given the preeminence, and His doctrines and teachings, and any union of Denominations would be nothing more than a large social Club, under the jurisdiction of One Head, with a supervisory committee whose authority would be limited, yet so elastic as to be conformable to any suggested change human nature might insist upon; and that is the point where the line is tightly drawn in the Church of Christ.

I stand firmly against any organization that considers every human creature a "child of God," (except in the sense as being such by creation) without confession of sin, baptism according to scripture, and the acceptance of Jesus as Saviour; which according to scripture is a spiritual birth, and entitles the individual, thus reborn, to be enrolled as a "Child of God." Jesus said to one who could not fathom the possibility of being re-born, "Marvel not that I said unto thee 'Ye must be Born Again.'"

The Church was once organized, but became factionized because certain leaders thought their wisdom was superior to God's, evidently, and for self-glorification disrupted the Church in order to have a following. If reorganization would reestablish the Church upon the foundation from which she has in part fallen, and could assure her abiding there, that would be worth more than any sacrifice humanity could make. But that cannot be accomplished by "another Creed"; or a Creed intended to ignore Christ as the Son of God; or in any way to formulate His teachings in order to minimize the importance of their observing, or to mystify any doctrine for the purpose of removing any required action in the execution of that doctrine.

I surmise—and I claim I do so with a degree of evidence too apparent to be misleading—that the main cause, not the main reason, for a union of Denominations and for a New CREED, is not sought with the confident hope of getting back to bed-rock; but because of having gotten so far from bed-rock, and because of the sacrifice necessary to return, a substitute is sought to appease a conscience so morbid and so long hard-seared, that despair is driving both leaders and followers, for the most part good, back to wallow in the mud. I predict the proposed union when completed will be a failure; not because it's Right, but because it's Wrong; that people seeing their mistake, will turn from it with a vengeance, and I hope with a determination to rekindle the spark that led and warmed the Church of Christ at its beginning.

sonage were painted by C. C. Washburn, E. Wallace, Howard Joy and Dean Blosser. Thursday evening from 7:00 to 9:00 P. M., the east side of the parsonage was painted by C. C. Washburn, Dean Blosser, A. R. Black, Russell Rymer and Royce Gates. And church is justly privileged to be proud of Laymen like these."

Brother Dodds then goes on to say, "Painting the parsonage is only one of the projects being sponsored by the Laymen of our church. The program machinery is already starting to roll toward getting the church parking lot ready for use. They are also preparing to install steps from the street to the sidewalk in front of the building."

We note that Brother and Sister Dale Roesch were guests at the July 10th services and at the evening hour they brought messages concerning their experiences in Puerto Rico, illustrating them with pictures which they had taken.

The Firestone Park Sunday School picnic was scheduled for Saturday, July 23rd. All kinds of good things were prepared.

Milledgeville, Illinois. Brother D. C. White, Milledgeville pastor, reports that the Sunday School average attendance for April, May and June was 165, with an average offering of $25.73.

Ashland, Ohio. At the recent business meeting of the church, Brother H. H. Rowsey was extended and accepted a call for another year of service as pastor of the Ashland Church.

Spiritual Meditations

THE ETERNAL KING

The Text: Isaiah 6:1-8

FOR FIFTY-TWO YEARS Uzziah had reigned over Israel, and in that time he brought forth material and spiritual prosperity to his people. His reign had been a blessed one for his subjects, and none understood this better than Isaiah. I have a copy of the sermon delivered at the funeral of the sainted Queen Victoria, of England. With a reign of almost identically the length of that of Uzziah, the minister most appropriately spoke of the blessings she had brought to her people, but best of all the wonderful Christian example she had set before her subjects.

It is no wonder then that Isaiah should have regarded the passing of his earthly monarch as scarcely less than a calamity. And Israel felt that a vacant throne spelled disaster. Men are prone to see earthly thrones and to set their affections on earthly monarchs. And when the throne becomes vacant their faith has nothing on which to lean.

And so Isaiah records that "In the year that king Uzziah died I saw the Lord." And with the prophet in that revelation, men need to learn that there is a never-vacant throne—the THRONE OF GOD. It took this vision of the Eternal King to bring serenity and courage to Isaiah—and do men need such a vision any less today than in Isaiah's day?

I want to remind you now of two things that happened to Isaiah when he visioned the "Lord high and lifted up": Verse 5, "Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Isaiah saw himself second—God first, "high and lifted up," himself second, poor, unworthy, undone. Seeing the Lord will change any man who has the actual experience.

1. It will shame his own unworthiness, his own complacency, his own self-satisfaction, his own self-esteem.

2. It will create a desire for cleansing. He will welcome the "coal from off the altar."

3. And cleansed, he will echo to God's call for workers, "Here am I, send me, send me."

We sing, and we should mean it:

"Majestic sweetness sits enthroned
Upon the Saviour's brow,
His head with radiant glories crowned,
His lips with grace o'erflow."

A little girl was born blind and consequently had never seen her father. While he was away on a trip her eyesight was restored. When he returned she was at the train to meet him. This is what she said, "Oh, Daddy, Daddy, I didn't know you were so beautiful."

Oh God, we have been blinded by sin and selfishness, and we have not known the beauty of Thy face. Open our eyes that we may see Thee in all Thy beauty and purity and glory, that we may be like Thee, and we shall be satisfied.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

WORK IS PROGRESSING on the remodeling of Founder's Hall. The rooms in the basement have all been plastered to meet the building code of the Ohio Industrial Commission. The footers for the new stairwell in what is now the east hall have been poured and brickwork up to the ground floor is about completed. "Tearing out," always the heartbreaking part of remodeling is progressing from floor to floor. Preparations for the plumbers to install the new rest room goes at a fast pace.

The chemistry laboratories have been moved from Founders to the Library building where the first floor will be given over to science. Some new desks and tables will bring the standards of the laboratories much higher.

Summer school is in full swing and has probably the second highest enrollment in the history of the college. In 1931, 311 students enrolled for the summer session. This summer, 303 are in attendance. There will be over 40 graduates in August. This will bring the total degrees granted in 1949 to over 100, the most ever at Ashland. The names of the graduates have not been released as yet but it is known that several Brethren students are among them.

Enrollment for next fall is somewhat behind last year as was expected. However, it is holding up to the estimates made by the administration last spring. If the trend continues, the number of students in attendance next year will be well over 500. Present economic conditions in the nation make predictions precarious. It is gratifying to note the number of Brethren young people who have indicated an intention of enrolling.

May we remind you to spend Conference week in Ashland?

The Lifted Heart

"Lift up your hearts"—"We lift them up"—Ah me?

I cannot, Lord, lift up my heart to Thee;

Stoop, life it up, that where Thou art I too may be.

"Give Me thy heart"—I would not say Thee nay,

But have no power to keep or give away

My heart; stoop, Lord, and take it to Thyself today.

Stoop, Lord, as once before, now once anew.

Stoop, Lord, and hearken, hearken, Lord and do,

And take my will, and take my heart, and take me too.

—Christina Rossetti.

A LOOK AT THE MICROSCOPE

Scripture: Psalms 148:1-14; 139:7-10

For The Leader

WHERE CAN WE GO in the world and not find God? Where in this universe, be it high above the heavens, or in the smallest cell, can we find a place where God is not? Everywhere we look, we find God. Tonight we are interested in finding God revealed in His handiwork in the small things of our world. Take a look into a microscope, and you will find life. You will find patterns and structures which defy duplication by man. The whole sum and substance of our study tonight is to show the matchless ingenuity and creative ability of the heavenly Father. We trust that you will, in this service, gain a deeper and more profound respect for God as the Creator of all things, and His matchless power above all things.

DISCUSSION

1. GOD, THE GIVER OF LIFE. An interesting project is to take a microscope and supplemental equipment and study the life of the amoeba, a single-celled animal. It will divide and divide again and again. Each cell becoming a new single-celled animal. Getting the process of life down to this small iota, one wonders from whence it comes. Surely just any bit of matter that size and make-up would not maintain life. Man himself can make particles of matter smaller than the amoeba. Whence then cometh the life of the cell? We can take any animal, or any plant life, and kill it. Life is gone. No power of man on earth can restore life to a dead animal, or a dead plant. Life is something that is mysterious. So, it stands to reason that there is some giver of life. Do you know Who that is? It is God! The eternal God of Heaven. Acknowledge Him as such in your life.

2. IN THE BEGINNING. Some may argue that each plant, each cell, each animal possesses life because it is the offspring of a living being. All well and good. But drive your generations of reproduction back to the far off beginning of time. Go back to amoeba number one. Where did that first one get its life, and power of reproduction? Take the first plant back to the very beginning. What started the first green shoot? Take any animal and go back through endless ages of time. Where did the first of any species of animal get that mysterious thing called life? Scripture answers it perfectly for us! In the beginning God. Yes, young people, drive your quest into the microscope and observe the tiniest form of life. Drive your quest back through all time to the very beginning. Life did not just happen. It was the result of a direct plan of God. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." That is God's own explanation of the beginning of Life. God, the father of life, created life in the animals and cells and plants which He formed.

3. THE WORLD WE SEE NOT. Only when our attention is called to it, do we ever think of the great and mysterious world of life and movement seen only through a microscope. As we observe with the naked eye the beauties of nature around us, we praise God. But we have not seen anything, in comparison to that seen through the lens. Do you know that your drinking water, purified as it may be, is teeming with minute plant and animal life? Your food contains billions of spores and bacteria. Your medicines are worlds of living specks of their own. You, yourself are full of minute crawling worms, cells and bacteria. Life could not be sustained if it were not for these things. Cannot we see the majestic ability of God in making us so well balanced that life is possible? He knew the need of this invisible plant and animal life in our systems. Our God is a wonderful God. We also see how He has made the entire universe dependent on other parts. We ourselves could not live without these bacteria that roam about within us, nor could they exist except for the home we give them. We need the trees and the grass to purify the air we breathe. The trees and the grass need the carbon dioxide which we give off when we breathe.

4. WHY ALL THIS? Now, we could well ask ourselves the question, "Why did God do all this?" Well, God is the God of all the eternities of time, creation and existence. He likes to be honored, so He created life on the earth to glorify Him. The Psalmist says, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth His handiwork." Thus creation glorifies God. Then, after that was all said and done, He realized that He did not have perfect praise. So, He made man in His own image; gave him the power to think and to have dominion over other forms of life. Why? So that man, thinking along the same lines of God, could praise Him to the fullest measure. Of course, man sinned, and refused to praise God, but took life, natural resources, and blessings to heap upon himself possessions, lusts, hate and murder. Man became a selfish, egotistical beast. The love of Christ in men's hearts has changed all this for those who will submit to Him. Our prayer is tonight that each of us will be among those who devote their time and substance to praising the God who made them. For such God has created a greater, more beautiful place in which to live forever more. Take a look into the microscope, and discover in what you see, the presence and work of Almighty God. From your study, you will have a deeper appreciation of His handiwork.

QUESTIONS

1. What is the smallest form of life?
2. Do you think God created each species of animals as the Bible says, or do you think that all life started from a single cell which is reputed to have evolved into snakes, lizards, fish, apes and man?
3. How can we best show our appreciation to God for His abundant goodness in the provision of all things, both great and small, for our good?

In Pharaoh's case, the PROFESSIONS of repentance were frequent; but the TEARS of repentance were never seen.

Better is a handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.—Ecc. 4:6.

ME CARETH FOR THEE

I Peter 5:7

What! Careth He for me—of saints the least,
Of sinners chief,
Indifferent to His love, and bringing Him
No joy, but grief?
“He cares for thee.”

Stay! Careth He for me—a wayward child,
Weak, worthless, poor,
Among the hearers of His holy Word,
But not a doer?
“He cares for thee.”

Wait! Careth He for me—a wandering sheep,
Far from the fold;
Meandering through the maze of unbelief,
A doubter bold?
“He cares for thee.”

Oh, careth He for me—of lustful eye,
And tongue unclean?
For me—with stony heart and wavering mind,
And haughty mien?
“He cares for thee.”

Lord, since Thou makest one so vile, Thy care,
I come! I come!
My heart responds to such amazing love—
The lost comes home!
“I care for Thee.”—The Christian (London).

THE GRACIOUS INVITATION

Scripture: Matt. 11:28-30

Invitation Hymns

Intercessory prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE BIBLE is freighted with promises and invitations. God has been calling, “Where art thou?” to evading sinners from Adam’s fall until now. Time and again God sought the sinner in the Old Testament (Isa. 55:1, 2; 45:22; Ezekiel 33:11). None who come will be rejected (John 6:37). Even the children are invited (Luke 18:16). All who feel their spiritual need can be fully satisfied (Rev. 21:6).

Only by coming to Jesus can the sinner be saved. All have drifted away from God and must come back to God as did the prodigal (Luke 15:18). Salvation is in the person of Jesus Christ and nowhere else. Seven times our Lord refers to Himself in Matt. 11:28-30. It is not churchanity nor a way of living, but Christ (Rom. 10:4). Christ is the Way—not “Wayshower” (John 14:6). Peace and soul rest are found in Christ Himself (1 John 5:11, 12). In Christ we have all that we need: Savior, Burden-Bearer, Elder Brother, High Priest, Intercessor, Sacrifice, Atonement, Advocate. “Come ye disconsolate,” poor, heavy-laden, burdened, troubled soul! Lose condemnation, have the peace of forgiveness, and thereafter daily cleansing from the defilement of sin.

Jesus exactly suits us. He knew poverty (Luke 9:58); labor (Mark 6:3); hunger (Matt. 4:2); temptation; betrayal; loneliness; persecution; sorrow (Heb. 4:15). This world furnishes no rest for the soul (Isa. 57:21). Only Jesus can do this.

On The Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for August 21, 1949

PRAISE FOR THE WORKS OF GOD

Lesson: Psalms 19:1-6; 65:9-13; 104:4

HERE IS A LESSON which gives us an opportunity to make a study of God’s activity. So many times we ask ourselves whether we really know anything at all about God in His past and present activity. How anyone could conceive of God as an inactive Being should be beyond comprehension. Jesus said, “My Father worketh even up until now, and I work.” It would indeed be difficult to imagine God as merely sitting on a throne, doing nothing. We have been lulled to sleep regarding the majesty of our God, by pictures of rulers of ancient times sitting on their thrones, receiving ambassadors, who knelt before them, while slaves stood behind these monarchs with feathered fans, to keep them cool, and other slaves ran hither and yon to bring them rich imported foods and frosted drinks.

But that would be no picture of Jehovah God. More likely is the picture which Jeremiah paints in Jeremiah 49:16, where he says, “O Thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock; that holdest the height of the hill.” He holds the very universe in His hand.

I read just tonight that when the great two hundred inch telescope is finally adjusted and complete for observation, it will be possible to see the moon as plainly as those who are across the English Channel in France can see the White Cliffs of Dover on the English side of the channel. Then will astronomers know even more than they do now about our universe and its makeup. But the distance to the moon is a mere fraction, and an exceedingly small fraction at that, of the distance which separates God’s other creations from the earth. Go out and look off into space and try even to think in terms of its vastness. It is far too deep for human comprehension and explanation. Yet it is all the work of God’s hands.

How deep and fathomless are the words that form the opening of the Old Testament in Genesis 1:1—“In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” And this is but a part of the works of God.

The best comment on the lesson today is found in the lesson itself. Stop right now and read carefully and prayerfully the first six verses of Psalm 19, as recorded in our printed text, which passage begins with the words, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork," then, once more, go out under the stars when night comes and see that indeed this firmament uttereth speech and sheweth knowledge.

We said a moment ago that God's creative acts were only a part of His work. Even now He works in His creation and among His creatures. He sustains His creation—"He holdeth the stars in their place"; His is a watchful care—"Even the hairs of your head are numbered, and not a sparrow falls without the Father." His is a divine providence—"He sends the rain to water the earth that it may bring forth bountifully." And we could go on and on.

We think we praise God for His wonderful works, but do we really do so? It might be that

If I had the eyes of God to see—

What would I see?

The great, the vast, the universe—

The wide expanse, 'twixt heaven and earth;

The little gnat, the busy bee;

The smallest insect given birth.

I'd see all this, with man between—

And seeing all, I'd note the worth

Of all that is of man unseen;

And then I'd better able be

To praise Our God for what I see.

Christian Leprosy Missions Reach Half-Million Mark

By Raymond P. Currier, Executive Secretary
American Mission to Lepers, Inc.

From $4,365, contributed by the American Committee to the Mission to Lepers of London in 1906, enough to give succor in Christ's name to a handful of leprosy sufferers, to $521,404.26, over a half-million, to be distributed among 125 mission stations in 29 countries on five continents this year starting July 1—that's the story of the growth of American Christian Leprosy Missions in less than a half century.

With the example set by the Mission to Lepers of London, which was already 31 years old when the American Mission was founded, a combined program of medical, physical, and spiritual care had been developed in cooperation with missionaries of 43 Protestant Foreign Mission Boards, whose salaries for the most part are carried by their denominations.

They have been aided in that service with medicine, plant and physical equipment, worship materials, and other supplies contributed by the American Mission to Lepers. During the fiscal year now drawing to a close nearly $400,000 were expended for these necessary services.

Of the half-million earmarked for specific stations in the coming year, $118,000 comes from the $500,000 Postwar Fund raised in 1944-46 to help found lay training centers in order to find leprosy in village homes and attack it early.

For the first time, the American Mission will carry the full salaries of medical personnel engaged in leprosy work. Dr. and Mrs. Marinus Van Weels, Presbyterian missionaries, who will supervise five leprosy stations in the Camerouns, Africa, will come on the payroll in August and sail for Paris in September, for a year of study. Six other missionaries presently received salaries wholly or in part from the American Mission.

Among outstanding expenditures are $10,000 reserved to send Christmas cheer to leprosy colonies all over the world, and $60,000 earmarked for sulfa drugs and, other medicines necessary to arrest the disease.

Postwar reconstruction and construction are a necessary and major responsibility this year, as many colonies were left destitute without sufficient personnel at the outbreak of war, and others were not able to obtain supplies during hostilities and the immediate postwar hiatus. Approximately $130,000 will be expended for new churches, chapels, homes, additional wings for hospitals, repairs, tractors, trucks and other motor vehicles, and even clay huts.

An encouraging development is the formation elsewhere of local cooperative, interdenominational committees to handle leprosy work such as have existed over the years in Japan and the Philippines. Several such committees were formed in China when Dr. Eugene R. Kellersberger, General Secretary of the American Mission and Mr. A. Donald Miller of the London Mission visited the country during November and December of 1947.

Among these, the Fukien Committee will receive $10,524.20 this year to assist nine colonies, six of which are administered by Methodist missionaries, and the other three by representatives of the Christian Missionary Society of London.

India, the country where desultory and scattered leprosy work first gave rise to the Mission to Lepers of London in 1874, has one of the most active programs through cooperation between the London and American Missions striving to meet a tremendous need.

This year India will receive the largest grant of any country from the American Mission, with $103,944.08 going to 26 stations. While the major portion of leprosy work in India is carried by the London Mission, the American Mission handles 60 percent of the needs of all stations with an American base, i. e., those founded by American missionaries whether continued by them or handed over to competent Indian administrators.

The well-known Mary Reed Hospital at Chandag Heights has had $10,000 set aside for it during the past year and this fund will be available whenever further building can proceed.

The largest grant for a single colony—$20,500—will go to Chiangmai, Siam. This station with a population of 500, which reaches out into 13 Thailand communities through clinics handled by trained Siamese personnel, enjoys an organized community and church life. Founded by Dr. James McKean, a Presbyterian medical doctor, then carried on by his son, James Hugh McKean, up to the outbreak of the war, when the government took control in order to prevent the Japanese military from acquiring possession, Chiangmai has two claims to fame—Dr. Douglas T. Collier experimented with a new form of treatment there in 1933, and Ai Sam, the recipient of the proceeds from the sale of Pete, a pig, 36 years ago, lived there. Pete, now done in plastic, has become an “institution,” having raised $2,000,000 through nearly 200,000 “brothers.”

Not only will India receive the largest grant of any country, but the continent of Asia will also be given more than any other continent, with a total of $188,263.08, not including the Philippines which alone will use $28,507.

Next in line is Africa with $160,424.22, then South America with $44,296.76, followed by North America with $7,486, and finally Europe requiring only $3,708.

Most of the funds for the North American continent will go to the Community Church at the government-sponsored National Leprosarium in Carville, La., where Rev. Clifton E. Rash, Protestant chaplain conducts spiritual and social services. For an organ, a piano, his salary, and incidentals, $5,710 has been allocated. Other American stations are Palo Seco, Canal Zone; Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico and Christiansted, St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

The European missions are in France and Portugal.

Next to India, the country where mission stations will expend the most funds is Nigeria to the extent of $67,369, then China with $46,858.20, the Philippines with $28,507, as already indicated, the Camerouns, Africa, with $25,890, and Paraguay, South America, with $25,803.

Another encouraging development is the cooperation shown by governments—both national and local—in a number of places. At least fourteen national governments have contributed to the growth of leprosaria, with perhaps India taking the lead, where a large number of colonies have been founded with land-grants and other forms of aid. The government of Japan now maintains ten leprosaria, having absorbed those formerly conducted by Christian mission groups, and the government of Paraguay maintains a colony and a childrens “Preventorium,” while cooperating with the Mennonite Central Committee toward starting one that is projected by the Mennonite refugee settlers to express appreciation to the people of Paraguay for their hospitality.

Colombia, S. A., maintains three colonies, and the Belgian Congo administration has given land and helped very generously with the support of a number of institutions.

City, town and tribal governments in India, China and various parts of Africa as well as Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are also carrying on colonies or aiding missionary colonies.

It is through the cooperation of these official groups that local support for leprosy work has been possible, thus reducing the assistance required from church groups and individuals in this and other countries, and helping to spread the aid that is given to a maximum number of stations.

That's the story of American Christian Leprosy Missions today—a half-million-dollar institution, made possible by cooperation between Protestant Mission Boards, government agencies, and interested individuals, handled by consecrated missionaries devoting their lives in the tradition of the Great Physician, and supported by equally consecrated Christians contributing to provide medicines, supplies, buildings and a profound spiritual ministry.

One of Our Poets Publishes Some of Her Poems

DOROTHY (Dot) RUTH CUSTER, many of whose poems have appeared in the Evangelist, and which we are sure you have enjoyed, has sent the Editor a complimentary copy of her little book of poems which she has titled, “Thoughts in Rhyme.” Those who know her realize the hours of suffering she has gone through, being afflicted with rheumatic fever, and how she has dedicated her hours to trying to help others with her sunshiny disposition and her poems, which in no way reflect her confining illness. In this little book of poems she has selected fifty-two of her poems which will appeal to every one, for they are homey, down-to-earth verses that will do you good to read and ponder over. She has given us permission to print any of them we desire, but we are sure that you will want one of them for your own. They are priced at $1.00 and they will make splendid gifts to your friends. You can obtain one by sending a one dollar bill to her address, 7578 Kelly Street, Pittsburgh 8, Penna. We are glad to make this announcement for her, even though she did not request it. She is also sending some of these books to the General Conference where they can be purchased.

Here is a sample of what appears in her book, entitled.

“A TRIBUTE TO MY DOCTOR”

Every time I see him a smile he wears,
Even though my troubles he shares.
He's always so helpful, kind and true,
He's a wonderful guy, I'm telling you.

A friend of mine he's been for years,
He's also stopped a lot of my tears.
When I see him I'm no more blue,
He's a wonderful guy, I'm telling you.

An awful lot to him I owe,
For always listening to my woe;
As how to thank him, I wish I knew—
He's a wonderful guy, I'm telling you.

God and my friend work hand in hand.
As lives they save, in this our land.
To make you well his best he'll do—
He's a wonderful guy, I'm telling you.

His identity now I proudly tell,
He's simply my doctor who's making me well.
Although he gives me pills to chew,
He's a wonderful guy, I'm telling you.

Thanks, Dot, for the book you sent us. We will want some more of them for our friends. We hope you get lots of orders for your fine little book, “Thoughts in Rhyme.”

If you are not kind, you are the wrong kind.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT LAYMEN

All Southern Indiana District Brethren Laymen please take note. Our next regular meeting will be held on Monday evening, August 15th, at the Center Chapel Brethren Church, located five miles south and two miles west of Roann, Indiana. The supper will be served beginning at 6:30, and the regular meeting will begin at 8:00 o'clock, D. S. T. A good attendance is urged.

Guy V. Purdy, Secretary.

Some one has said, "Christianity is the good man's text; his life the illustration."

Love reaches its climax, sacrifices most freely, and manifests its greatest magnanimity only when ardently opposed.

Our Lord will use in His building enterprise men and women who love Him personally, passionately, and devotedly.

Wedding Announcement

GARVER-GEER. On May 28, 1949, at the Brethren parsonage, Linwood, Maryland, occurred the marriage of Paul Spencer Garver and Marilyn Elizabeth Geer. The groom is a loyal member of the Linwood congregation, and the bride a member of the Methodist church at New Windsor, Maryland. Both of the contracting parties are residents of New Windsor. The groom had as his best man, Mr. Charles P. Sayler, Jr., while Miss Betty Buffington, fiancée of Mr. Sayler, served as bridesmaid. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. Belote and the groomsmen and bridesmaid. The newly wedded couple have set up house-keeping in New Windsor. The best wishes of their many friends accompany this worthy young couple on the journey of life.

Dyoll Belote.

LANTZ-WETZEL. At the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, at Union Bridge, Maryland, on May 28, 1949, occurred the marriage of Mr. James Carroll Lantz and Miss Betty Lenora Wetzell. These are two estimable young people, who start life's journey together with all prospects of a successful wedded career. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate families of the contracting parties. Ceremony by the undersigned.

Dyoll Belote.

You must infuse your best into the moments if you hope to receive God's best out of the years.

We should give as we would receive—cheerfully, quickly, and without hesitation, for there is no grace in a gift that sticks to the fingers.—Seneca.

Laid to Rest

RENCH. The death of Rev. George Rench marked the passing of a great man of God. He quietly passed to his reward after eighty-five years of sojourn here, at 8:30 o'clock on Monday morning, June 20th, following a very brief illness. He became ill on Friday night and passed away Monday morning. Brother Rench led a very active life until about three years ago, when he retired from the active ministry.

It has been our privilege to know and to work with Brother Rench more or less for forty-five years. However, we have become more closely associated with him in the last three years, after we were called to serve the church he had served for almost fifteen years. We always found him interested in the work of the church and denomination, up to his last moments of life. It was always a privilege and a joy to have the opportunity of consulting with him on any problem concerning the work, either of the local church or the church at large. We spent many hours together and he was a wise counsellor. On Friday before his passing he called me and asked about the Indiana conference and we had a long conversation. When he and Mrs. Rench were able they were always in the services and although he was a great preacher, he was also a good listener. He gave many years of his life to the denominational interests of our church and the church has sustained the loss of a great man.

The funeral service was conducted by the undersigned, assisted by Rev. S. M. Whetstone of Dayton, Ohio, and Rev. Claud Studebaker of South Bend, Indiana, in the Brethren Church in Goshen, Indiana.

He leaves many friends over the brotherhood where he had served as pastor, both in the church and out of it. He leaves his companion, who remains in their home in New Paris, Indiana.

C. A. Stewart.

HAWN. Mrs. Lillian Gertrude Hawn, widow of Edward Hawn, and a member of the Linwood congregation, passed to her eternal reward, at the home of her son, Mr. Earl Hawn, at Westminster, Maryland, July 2, 1949, at the age of 74 years, 9 months, 25 days. Sister Hawn was a daughter of David and Mary Nusbaum Franklin, and a native of Carroll county. Sister Hawn was ill but a few days and was not called upon to suffer for a long period. The obsequies were conducted at the Hartzler Funeral Home in New Windsor, Md., on July 5th, and were in charge of Rev. Early, a minister of the Church of the Brethren and a life-long friend, with assistance in the service given by the undersigned, her pastor.

Dyoll Belote.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Waterloo, Iowa. Brother V. E. Meyer reports a fine attendance at the meetings held recently by the Brethren Youth Crusaders in the Waterloo Church. The church gave them a fine offering of $82.00. He says that their work was much appreciated.

The annual Sunday School picnic was held at Byrnes Park on Saturday, July 30th.

At a recent business meeting of the Waterloo Church a committee was appointed to investigate the possibility of building a new parsonage on the vacant lot beside the church.

Canton, Ohio. Brother E. J. Beekley has placed a "suggestion box" in the church and asks anyone who desires, to place suggestions there, which, he says "will be carefully considered."

August 7th has been designated by the Canton Church as a time to take a special offering for improvements on the church. Among the plans is one that calls for new steps at the main entrance of the church, a badly needed improvement.

Brother Beekley reports the average attendance for the second quarter at 118 at the morning service and 35 at the evening service. However he reports an average evening attendance for June as 54.

Warsaw, Indiana. We note from Brother W. B. Brant's bulletin of July 24th that he announces the closing of his pastorate with the Warsaw Church as of September 1st.

Brother Delbert B. Flora was a recent guest preacher at the morning service at Warsaw.

Johnstown, Penna. Second. Brother N. V. Leatherman reports the baptism of one of their campers who made the good confession during the recent Pennsylvania Camp.

Brother Leatherman also reports the ordination of Brother Charles Munson, our National Youth Director, who holds his membership in the Second Church of Johnstown, to the full Gospel Ministry at that Church on Sunday morning, July 17th. Mrs. Munson was also dedicated to service as a minister's wife.

A recent business meeting of the Second Church voted to refinish the floors and pews and recarpet the aisles and front of the church auditorium. It was also voted to completely repair the heating plant and to purchase paint for the repainting of the outside of the church, the same to be applied by volunteer labor.

Nappanee, Indiana. Brother J. Milton Bowman expresses the appreciation of his entire family for the "splendid Farewell Supper, program and gift. Mrs. Bowman conducted the final Mid-week prayer service of Brother Bowman's Nappanee pastorate on Thursday evening, July 28th. Following this service Brother Bowman showed motion pictures of the new church as it progressed in construction. Brother and Sister Bowman will soon take up their duties at Peru, Indiana.

Milledgeville, Illinois. Brother D. C. White says that Milledgeville also is joining in the "improvements completed" list in our churches. He says, "The walls, floors and woodwork have been completed; windows and lights cleaned, and the carpet committee has selected and ordered the carpet.

We note that Brother W. S. Benshoff, a former pastor of the Milledgeville church, was a week-end visitor at the church and brought the morning message, while Mrs. Benshoff presided at the organ and their little son, Jimmie, sang for them.

Berlin, Penna. Brother Percy Miller reports that at last the carpet has been placed on the church floor, or as he says, "has become a reality, and is all paid for except for the final $600.00 needed. No doubt this amount has been greatly reduced by this time and, perhaps, entirely wiped out.

The Somerset County W. C. T. U. held their convention in the Berlin Church on Thursday, July 28th, with sessions afternoon and evening.

The annual Brotherhood Picnic was held at Trent Park on July 23rd. The Sisterhoods, Daily Vacation Bible School Teachers, helpers and pupils, were guests.

St. James, Maryland. St. James surely has a fine group of workers in more ways than one. Each organization seems to be vying with each other to see which can do the most in getting the parsonage and church ready for their new pastor. The latest is that the Young Married People's class has completely renovated the parsonage bathroom, lining it with tile and adding new lights and medicine cabinet.

Only one thing seemed to be left, according to the bulletin on July 24th, and that was a general cleanup. We take it that this was done prior to the arrival of the Ank-rums, who were scheduled to arrive August 1st. A reception was to be held for them on Friday, August 5th.

Flora, Indiana. We note that while Brother J. Edgar Berkshire and his family are on their vacation, visiting

GOD IS WILLING

THE OTHER NIGHT I was reading a book, "Prayer and the Common life," by Harkness, and I was stopped very suddenly by two sentences. The author had been seeking a definition of prayer, and in the midst of this seeking says, "Prayer is the opening of the soul to God so He can speak to us. Prayer is not overcoming God's reluctance; it is laying hold on God's willingness." It was this last sentence

That set me to thinking!

Do we really know how to pray? Do we approach God with a definite objective? Do we pray in a meaningful manner? Do we pray words, or desires? Have we made prayer such a part of our lives that it really "opens our souls to Him so He can speak to us," as the author suggests. Do we "say" our prayer, or do we "pray" our prayer? Do we "ask" God for advice, and then jump up and hurry away before He has opportunity to give us that advice? What do we really pray for? When we pray are we really asking God to help us in our problems, or are we trying to tell God our plans, with the hope that the mere telling God about what we intend to do will justify us in the doing—regardless of whether it fits into His plans or not. Do we make a habit of including in our prayers, especially our public prayers, a reciting of the actions of those around us that do not particularly appeal to us? In other words, do we "take a slap" at our neighbors while we ostensibly are "talking" to God? Do we feel we can gain the ear of God at all times; that we are in such close touch with Him that He "inclines His ear unto us" to hear us? Or do we feel when we start to pray that there is a sort of a barrier between us?

We might easily go on and on, piling up question upon question—questions which can be answered only by each individual. For prayer is a personal thing; it speaks of a relation between God and the pray-er. It is more than talking—it is likewise listening—it is genuine hearing. The dictionary says that to hear is to "apprehend by means of the ear." Apprehend means "to lay hold of or grasp mentally, or perceive." And perceive means "to have knowledge of through the medium of the senses; to understand." Therefore, when we listen to God when we are in the spirit of prayer, we are seeking to have a knowledge of His desires for our lives and and to understand His will for us. We seek; God answers.

If we were to go to the dictionary for a definition of prayer we would find that prayer is "the act of offering reverent petitions, especially to God." It is the act of "beseeching earnestly." That "God is Willing" is evidenced by the many injunctions found in the Word to pray, and the many, many examples of prayer made unto God. God never would have asked us to pray if He did not expect to answer.

So we go back to the sentences which arrested our attention at the very outset, "Prayer is the opening of the soul to God so He can speak to us. Prayer is not overcoming God's reluctance; it is laying hold of God's willingness." We ought the more to realize that God is willing to grant our petitions if we are willing to meet His conditions. After all, it is always up to us whether we meet these conditions or not.

Think it over!

We Have Had Our Troubles

There is an old verse which goes like this :

"It is easy enough to be pleasant
When things go along with a song;
But the one that's worth while,
Is the one with a smile—
When everything goes dead wrong."

Well, we have had some circumstances these last few weeks that have made us feel anything like smiling. But we have come to the conclusion that we had just as well smile about it as to let "old man down-in-dumps" get hold of us. Why all this? Well, it's just like this. Evidently something either went awry in the making of labels for the mailing out of the Sunday School quarterlies and orders were duplicated (Did any of your schools get two packages of Brethren quarterlies?); or an entire sack of mail went astray after having been despatched from the Ashland Post Office? One of these two things must have happened, for we find that our stock of quarterlies is entirely depleted, a thing which never before has happened, for we always overprint our orders by several hundred in order to be safe if an emergency arises. At the present writing there is not a quarterly in the house.

If, by chance, you did get a double supply (Bryan, Ohio, did, and sent the duplicate order back to us) won't you drop us a post card telling us you did? Don't mail them back to us—that would simply cost you postage and we would have to reimburse you for it. But simply tell us, and thus relieve our minds of the wonder of what became of them.

Yes, we have our troubles, too. But we are trying now to set up a system whereby there cannot be another slip-up. So we beg your indulgence over what would seem to be a bit of carelessness, but which, in reality, is just one of those things which cannot be entirely explained. In a diligent check we have found that most of the ones that have reported a failure to receive their quarterlies, showed them checked off here as mailed. We are sorry that they failed to come through. We have tried in each instance to duplicate the order. It has not been possible in all cases. We assure you a closer check will be kept on all orders from this time forth.

The Answer Is -- Evangelism

Rev. W. S. Benshoff, Pennsylvania District Moderator

(We are endeavoring to bring our readers the Pennsylvania District Moderator's address insofar as space will permit. We have Brother Benshoff's permission to "cut" it, which we have done, seeking not to leave out any of the important things contained therein.—Editor)

* * * * *

ONCE AGAIN in the divine providence of God we are permitted to assemble in annual conference, and our hearts are compelled to join with the Psalmist who said, "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; his mercy endureth forever." We are assembled together for the purpose of spiritual refreshment, encouragement, and for the planning of another year's work for the Master.

Naturally one cannot come into a conference without asking himself, "Why a conference, and to what end?" The very nature of the word denotes a period of time in which workers confer and plan. Thus our coming together is intended to bring about a better relationship and program among our local churches for the advance of Christ's cause. To this end we pray we may work.

The Year Past and the Present Situation

Let us review briefly the work accomplished in the year past, and as briefly analyze the present situation. We have lost some ministers from our district, both through death and removal to other districts of our Brotherhood. We have also gained a number, whom we now welcome into our district. But the overall picture of ministers is still a dark one.

The present Moderator, being a realist, cannot help but see things as they are in the world today. He is well pleased when he sees the determined faithfulness of people in the churches, who shoulder the heavy loads and carry through with a smile. He observes an increased zeal in mission work, both at home and abroad. He praises God for the people of the churches who are going "all out" for Christ. It is this kind of loyalty and effort upon which Christ has been building His Church for centuries. On the other hand, the forces of evil seem to be creeping in on every hand. It appears that slowly, but certainly, the crushing tide of Communism and godlessness is creeping over the face of the earth. Free people, worshipping God according to conscience and the Bible, are throttled into apparent silence. This engulfing wave of spiritual darkness is sweeping over the whole earth. It is present in our own nation. This we should be alarmed about.

It may be that we are not yet aware of this trend, for things in our daily life continue much as they were. But let us not be fooled! It is taking place, but it does not have to succeed. The answer is not found in material things; it is a spiritual problem touching us all.

Evangelism is the Answer

We can answer the problem which threatens us with one word—Evangelism. It is the eternal call-word of the church. At times the church has followed it, and grown. Neglected, it has brought on a wave of godlessness.

1. Evangelism is the answer because Christ Commanded it. It is interesting to note that our blessed Lord gave just one command to the disciples. He has never altered it, nor retracted it. The words, "Go ye," are as convicting and unavoidable today as when Christ gave them to the first century Christians. We can but briefly comment on the tremendous progress which came when men and women responded to the call with their hearts, their lives, their talents and their substance. We can only mention the bloody sacrifices and martyrs' deaths of people who took literally the words of Christ. Through their efforts, empowered by the Holy Spirit, the gospel has been carried on to our present day. It is our prayer that we will find ourselves just as faithful and determined to follow Christ's single command, "Go ye!"

2. Evangelism is the Answer because our survival depends on it. When we go to the doctor to see what ails us, we expect help. Often times we are told that we must do thus and so, or we will not live. We must evangelize or die as a church. Common sense backs up this statement. Do you know that if the church did not gain one new member this year, and the next and the next, that in one generation of time there would be no church? The church is forever just one generation away from extinction. We must evangelize, or perish. If our youth are not brought face to face with their need of Jesus Christ, and won to Him, and aligned in His service—there is no future. For we, who are now on the battle front, are aging year upon year, and in the near or far future will join the ranks of those whose rest is won.

Each church should have a definite program of reaching the unchurched in its vicinity. It should hold, not one, but two or more special series of services a year, the purpose of which is to bring men and women to a saving knowledge of Christ. This is the business of the laity, along with the minister. Do it, or die!

The Message of Evangelism

The message of evangelism is a point which now we must consider. Just what is evangelism? In seeking the answer to it, we shall find the secret of the message of "Go ye," which is, and must continue to be, the message of the church. The dictionary defines evangelism as "zeal in spreading the Gospel." The word Gospel is defined as "the announcement of salvation through Jesus Christ." Salvation is defined as "the state of being saved; deliverance from sin and penalty, realized in a future state." Zeal is defined as "ardor for a cause; enthusiastic devotion; fervor." So you see that evangelism is zeal, enthusiasm and fervor in preaching the salvation of the soul from sin and death, through Jesus Christ. Paul says, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." And the same can easily be said of each of us, if we do not preach it daily by word and act.

Maybe in our zeal to grow in numbers in our churches, we have let down the bars and attained members without conversion. Candidates are simply urged to unite with the church because "the better people belong." Morals and ethics have taken the place of genuine conversion. The church has even permitted the world to creep in by polishing up "evil" amusements.

What has been the result? People assembled in our churches who don't know why they are there. Christ, as the Savior of their soul, was never mentioned to them. In their hour of need their varnished religion fails them and the church suffers. Moreover, a people not convicted of sin will surely not feel any obligation to refrain from sinful things.

Let us follow through on the remaining words of the Great Commission. Christ said, "Go ye," but He also told them what to do. "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you . . ." We must analyze this command. He said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind." He also taught that He was the only way to eternal life; He laid down His life for the sheep. A life must be given for a life; someone must die for the sinner who was condemned to die. Christ did that, and His shed blood ever flows as a covering for man's sin. There is no other way. So the message of evangelism denotes Christ as the personal, eternal Savior of the soul. If men are to be presented faultless before the heavenly Father, they must come to a personal relationship with Jesus Christ; they must acknowledge Him as the Son of the Living God; they must accept His work and sacrifice as a sufficient and acceptable payment for their sin; they must be buried with Him in baptism, all of which is a part of the Great Commission. The message of evangelism also includes the separated walk of the Christian. There dare not be any compromise by the Christian with the things of the world. There are things which are spiritually and morally wrong and we dare not do them. If we love God as we should, we will not do them.

The message of evangelism is essential to our survival as a Church, as a District, as a Denomination. It is the message of salvation for a world lost in sin.

Are We Equipped?

We can well raise the question as to whether or not the church is equipped sufficiently to carry out this great commission. It is well to note that in some ways we are well equipped, while in others we are woefully inadequate. We do have the very best in buildings, in material supplies and facilities. We have our local, district and national organizations—enough organization machinery to accomplish 100 times what we are doing. So, as far as things are concerned, we have enough.

What then is lacking? Frankly, we lack a dependency on God for power, plus a lack of personal devotion and sacrifice to the task. In other words, evangelism suffers because we are not working hard enough at it. The Brethren Church is as well equipped as any church, if not better than many, to do this work. Our ministry and laity, as a whole, is pretty orthodox on scriptural interpretation, and the message of salvation is being preached from the pulpit. The Brethren Church has pretty well minded its business of preaching the gospel.

Sometimes there are those among us who would belittle our Church because of our smallness, our lack of preachers, and our inability to become "great" among the churches. It is better to be small, and preaching the gospel, than to be among the great of the apostate and socially-minded churches that too often exist today. We are sure we shall be more pleasing to our Master in this way. Christ turned the world upside down with a few apostles. What Are We Waiting For? The Brethren Church, nationally, by districts and locally, can be the biggest little church in the world, for it has the saving message of Jesus Christ for the dying world of men. Let's mind our own business, and get down to work.

Recommendations

We would recommend:

1. A Greater Vision of Purpose. The Brethren Church has a great open door. Possessed with the message of salvation, plus orthodox scriptural interpretations of baptism and the other ordinances, we must reach out. Systematic plans of visitation on the part of the membership, correlated with the pastor's visits, will produce results. This vision of purpose must include a long-range membership building program. Every Cradle Roll member should be catalogued in the church, and considered a potential pillar in the church. Not one should be allowed to stray away. Our Sunday Schools could well adopt a systematic study course in Brethren doctrines, history and practices.

2. A Greater Prayer Life. When we, as a church, learn to pray together about problems, then we will find our answers. We are working for God, so why not make ourselves conform to His will by keeping in conversation with Him each day? The path will be smoother, and there will be less trial and error in our efforts.

3. A Greater Personal Devotion to the Task. Each of us is familiar with the situation in our churches—a few people carry the load. Too many are content to sit back and sleep their way into glory. We must rid ourselves of the feeling of satisfaction that we have accomplished a little and are thus entitled to sit back. There is work yet to be done.

4. A Greater Concern for the Lost. We work and live next to people that, if their lives were snuffed out, would go to an eternal Hell. But how concerned are we? When once we get a conviction in our hearts for the lost, all other problems of our churches will disappear.

5. A Better Separation from the World. Always the Christian has been admonished in the scriptures to live a separated life. We are in the world, but not of the world. John tells us, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." We cannot be winning the lost to Christ as a church or as individuals, if we are full of worldly cares and pleasures.

6. A Greater Missionary Effort. Somehow our churches seem to feel that even giving the small amount of 75 cents per member for District Mission support is a great burden. Thus our board is limited in the advance of its work. When this attitude changes and our people gladly pour out ten times that amount for our District mission work, then Evangelism will advance in our district. We wish to commend our district mission board in an especial manner for their devotion of time and energy in their efforts this past year in going to our district pastorless churches for a week's revival meetings.

7. Increased Giving to Missions. Here is a point that "hurts." We are responsible to God for the proper use of the possessions we have. Most of us do not want for money for what we want. Our churches have about reached the end of redecorating, refinishing, rebuilding, and adding; we are pretty well supplied with equipment, and we are now looking for new worlds to conquer. All right—let's give to missions.

8. Better Training for Our Youth. Here is another field in which we feel very much encouraged. Our Camp this year was successful, not alone in numbers, but in spiritual values received. Our camp leaders are to be commended for the emphasis placed upon the spiritual side of the child.

9. Simplification of Machinery. It would be well to consider combining organization efforts wherever possible. The simpler the machine, the easier it is to operate, and the better the results obtained.

10. A Better Pastor and People Relationship. As the years roll by and the minister learns the community, he can map out his visitation and evangelization program, and can lay his hand on the problems of the church, solving them with a minimum of effort. But he is often throttled by factions within the church which hinder his efforts. He cannot work where there is discord or lack of cooperation among the people. God's people should always work together with their minister, for he is the servant of the most High God.

Again, one of the greatest tragic patterns of church and minister relationships is the continual emphasis on the desire to get a young man. Always it is the young man who is wanted. This naturally discourages young men from wanting to enter the ministry, for they know that as the years roll on, they will be less desired for pastorates. We cannot figure out why, for a man who has come up through the years of his ministry is best able to cope with the problems and spiritual needs of his flock, for he has that one thing which seminary and youth cannot give to a young man—experience. We say, "Praise God" for our older ministers in our Church, for their calm deliberation, for their practical experience and well-seasoned judgment.

11. Increased Emphasis upon our Church Services. We are cursed with an indifferent attitude regarding church services. We go if it suits; too often it doesn't. Fortunate is the church that finds half of its resident membership present on any one Sunday morning. Each pastor and church leader should analyze the local church service and endeavor to revamp it to suit changing conditions. It must be kept worshipful, but most of all, it must boast a gospel, Biblical message each week.

Two services which Brethren could well capitalize upon are the Sunday evening church service and the Mid-week service. Some churches do not have them. Others have a remarkable success with them. We ask, "Why?" If they possess the right appeal, they will draw attendance. Where they have really worked, they have succeeded. But first of all the people of the local church must want them. The minister cannot do it all. It takes people to make a crowd.

12. Emphasis upon our Own Brethren Literature. Every home in the District should now be receiving the Brethren Evangelist. We need say very little more on this point because it stands to reason that a reading people is an informed people. How can we know what our plans for missions; our plans for church advancement and evangelism are, if we do not read our church paper?

So, we have endeavored to bring forth a few thoughts, a few observations, and a few suggestions, with the prayer that we might grow spiritually and in numbers. May we be inspired to devote our time and substance to the propagation of the saving gospel of Jesus Christ, through our churches, auxiliaries and missions, that Christ might be lifted up and exalted in life and deed, and that His righteousness might shine forth in the hearts of men everywhere, that the tide of evil might be driven back. This is possible if we will but forget the little hurts, the personal feelings, and center our lives in Christ who purchased us with His precious blood, and whose we are, and whom we serve.

Dale and Norma Roesch To Speak At General Conference

Why Attend The General Conference This Year?

By Rev. J. G. Dodds, Executive Secretary

ONLY THREE WEEKS until General Conference, August 22-28, 1949. You have the privilege of helping to make the 1949 General Conference the kind of Conference it ought to be. And because you have the privilege it becomes your responsibility. Will you accept the opportunity? "We can have a bigger and better Brethren Church if we want it hard enough."

In the Brethren Evangelist, issue of August 2, 1941 the question at the head of this article is answered with very cogent reasoning, by several Brethren ministers. We can do well to study the reasons there given, and to apply them to the question, Why attend the 1949 General Conference.

I. Why attend the National Conference this year?

"To make the 1949 Conference and the Church what they should be, a full representation should be had from each and every local church group in the brotherhood. Come and get the cheer, inspiration and information that such meetings afford. Come and help shape the program and plans for the years ahead . . . Brethren, one of the greatest reasons for attending this Conference is to show your loyalty, love and interest to and in the church of your choice. The BRETHREN CHURCH is and must be different from all other churches because of its doctrinal and governmental positions. If these things are worth continuing, and they are, then we should be awake and on the job to assure their continuance . . . You should be there to give your assistance and approval as the Church moves forward on Brethren lines."—Rev. E. L. Miller.

II. Why I should attend General Conference

"1. I should attend the General Conference because it is the General Conference of my denomination.

"2. I should attend the General Conference of the Brethren Church because I need the unifying experiences this Conference can and should bring.

"3. Attendance at this Conference should make us more discerning. We need to discern the difference between strong meat and milk; between liberty and license; between personal dedication and personal aggrandizement; between the human mind and the mind of Christ.

"4. Attendance at General Conference should put the fear of God in our souls. We are living in an awful day. Truly a new world order is upon us: man made, with God left out and disregarded. Our Conference should remind us God cannot be left out nor disregarded.

"5. Attendance at this Conference should put the joy of salvation in our souls.

"6. Attendance at this Conference should aid us all in more efficient service for our Master. Because so much work to be done rests upon the shoulders of so few, greater care must be exercised for a wider distribution of labor in the church. All should be given a task. And the church should expect that all tasks be done well.

"7. Attendance at this Conference should increase our faith in our Lord Jesus Christ."—Rev. N. V. Leatherman.

III. My Church Conference

"1. The laity of the Brethren Church should attend National Conference because the laity has the largest share in the work and progress of the Brethren Church.

"2. It is important that laity as well as ministry attend this Conference because we need to definitely arrange our Church program."

"3. The National Conference is the great worship assembly of the Brethren Church. National Conference offers a lasting blessing upon all who come. Your life will be enriched and your local church will receive a new blessing from you."—Dr. R. F. Porte.

VI. Are you going to General Conference?

"Here is the golden opportunity to learn about your Church, your College, your Publishing House, your Brethren Home and your Brethren Missionary Program, . . . If we could double the attendance at this next Conference from all our churches, thereby bringing together interested laymen and young people, we could and would double our achievements during the next year."—Rev. John F. Locke.

The reasons given by these men for attending the Conference in the year 1941 are just as applicable to attendance at the General Conference of 1949. What are you going to do about it? The pre-printing of the 1949 Program appeared in a recent issue of the Brethren Evangelist. Did you read it? Did you note the changes? Instead of the early morning prayer service an evening Vesper Service is being inaugurated. However, if there be a demand for the Morning Prayer Hour it can readily be provided. An Evangelistic Hour is programmed for the closing service each week night. Upon close reading other interesting innovations will be found.

Inasmuch as the 1948 General Conference authorized the Executive Committee to prepare a program outline reaching toward the 75th anniversary of the Brethren Church and the 250th anniversary of the Tunker fraternity, such a program will be presented at this Conference. The Brethren Church, whose membership is united in promoting the Biblical church program, will go forward together with Christ in church expansion and the gates of hell will not prevail against it.

"Our membership is not numbered in millions, but neither was the army of Gideon, but God used it. We do have something that can't be set down in rows of figures and added up by statisticians. And that something does warm your heart and inspire your soul. Your presence at National Conference will make the heart-warming experience even more pronounced for all of us."

Who knows but what you were born into the Brethren Church for such a time as this! This should be a great Conference, in fact one of the best. It should be challenging and urgent in its appeals, with every speaker on the alert and feeling the urge of the responsibilities which are before us. "WE CAN HAVE A BIGGER AND BETTER BRETHREN CHURCH, if we want it—if we want it hard enough."

—Akron, Ohio.

Brethren Youth at General Conference

Rev. Charles Munson, National Youth Director

DR GROVER SWOYER SUNDAY VESPER SPEAKER

DR. GROVER E. SWOYER from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, is our Sunday evening Vesper speaker. Dr. Swoyer comes to us with high recommendations from all who have heard him. He has been speaker at a number of meetings held by the Brethren Church. He is noted for his wit, and for his ability to speak interestingly to young and old alike. This service, which begins at 3:00 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, concludes the Conference.

NOTICE that we have allowed you enough time to travel home after the program—which will dismiss not later than 6:00 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. John Guy of Cleveland, Ohio, are going to be with us during Friday, Saturday and Sunday of our Youth Conference. These are fine consecrated Christians, who, according to reports of our own people, are full of good music. They are coming to lead the singing of the Conference during the week-end program which is designed for those who cannot attend the whole service.

Dale and Norma Roesch, two of our Brethren young people, have recently completed their missionary work in Puerto Rico. They will attend the General Conference and Speak to the Youth on Thursday evening, August 25th, following the regular session. They will show colored slides of their work in Puerto Rico.

Rev. Roland Hudson is our daily chapel speaker for our Youth Conference which is held in connection with the General Conference—August 22-28. He is Dean of Men at Bethel College, in Indiana, and also a professor in the same college. He comes highly recommended as an outstanding speaker. During each day there are to be devotional services, among which is the chapel service under the direction of Rev. Hudson. You will want to come for the whole week.

Rev. N. Carl Elder, another of our special speakers, has just recently completed sixteen years as a missionary in Siam. He has also been a Chaplain in the Air Forces, a rural pastor, and has worked a few months with the Voice of America radio programs. He will speak to us on Saturday night during the Conference and show a movie taken at the Leper Colony where our missionary, Miss Veda Liskey is now working. This is another feature of our Conference which you will not want to miss.

A Tribute To Dr. George W. Rench

My first acquaintance with the life and work of my esteemed friend and brother, Dr. G. W. Rench, now of sacred memory, was through the Brethren Evangelist and a tract which he had written on the teachings of his beloved church. I remember the picture in the paper of the First Brethren Church of South Bend, and his picture as pastor during the process of building the new church. It was not long after that till I became personally acquainted with him, admired him as a person of such fine qualities, and his fruitful work as a pastor, and prized his counsel very highly as coming from a wise administrator of church activity.

For more than ten years it has been my privilege to live rather near him and it was a real joy to visit in the home rather regularly. He was a diligent student all through his active ministry, an eloquent preacher and an excellent pastor. These things I could better understand as I served the churches where he had formerly served as pastor.

His first pastorate was at Milford, Indiana, where he was doing a fine work; but a mission had been started at Goshen, twelve miles north and he was called to take charge and remained there for eleven years, building one church and outgrowing it, then building the second church. He received some 600 members into the church membership, and it soon became one of the strong Brethren churches.

From Goshen he accepted a call to the First Brethren church at Johnstown, Pa., and his fine pastoral work did much to contribute to the strength of this large church.

Coming back to his native Indiana, where he spent his life save the years at Johnstown, he accepted a call to the South Bend church, and, with his usual wisdom and diligence, he built strength and numbers into the church. The church building was destroyed by fire in November 1920, and the task of holding a congregation together and building a new church is a herculean task. This Dr. Rench did, and this fine church building and parsonage is evidence of his good work.

Following him as pastor at Goshen and South Bend, and knowing the First Brethren church at Johnstown, Pa., where he served, and also the churches at Milford and New Paris, Indiana, and his years of rest to restore his health at Shipshewana, and his vision and labor to establish this center for Brethren work, I feel that I have rather intimate knowledge of his life and work. I have heard nothing but good, and in our friendship there has been nothing but sweetness. He was a man of firm conviction and could make plain his scriptural reason, which was the final word. He was unkindly called a legalist and therefore a modernist in the church controversy which resulted in division in his beloved church, he believed with his whole heart in the Bible as the word of God and that the historical teaching of the Brethren church as to the essentiality of baptism and other distinctive teachings of our beloved church, were based on, "Thus saith the Lord," and therefore could not be changed, but would judge us in the last day. There was no uncertain sound in his teaching and no instability in his life.

His beloved wife shared his conviction on matters of Bible doctrine as well as sharing all of life in as complete a union of two lives as it is humanly possible for two lives to be one. Our deepest sympathy is felt for her as she completes life's journey alone, and yet not alone, although she is in the house that is still, save for her own footsteps, yet she has the constant presence in sweet memory of her noble companion and the comfort of God's precious promise to be with her. Any remembrance addressed to New Paris, Indiana, will reach her, and of course will give comfort and cheer in her lonely hours.

"Know ye no that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel." We rejoice in the glorious hope of heaven and the crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge will give us in that day.

Claud Studebaker, South Bend, Indiana.

The only possession we are to hold fast is that vessel of oil—the supply of Holy Ghost grace and power, which will assure us an abundant entrance in.

"I am determined my children shall be brought up in their father's religion, if they can find out what it is."—Charles Lamb.

The Brethren Church

What Is It? Who Founded It?

By L. O. McCartneysmith

IT IS APPARENT that much confusion exists in the minds of many relative to the Brethren movement: just what it is, what it stands for, and who founded it. This prompts the writer to most humbly present the above topic and undertake to give what he believes to be a true evaluation of The Brethren Church.

As this is written I have before me a partial report of the moderator's address delivered at a recent church conference in which he makes the following statement: "Brethrenism came into being in a time of confusion, corruption, misery, and religious, and social and economic revolution. The founders of the church were familiar with the history of the Roman church and with the Protestant movement: they were in close touch with minority groups. After coming to this country our early fathers were in the current of conflicts and controversies that characterized the 18th century. Out of this background of struggle, conflict and confusion came what we know as our Brethren heritage."

Leaving the moderator's address, I quote from another conference speaker: "We have emphasized the common humanity of man; we must identify ourselves with those who serve; we have insisted upon the stewardship of property. Our Brethren principles are inherently radical, and Brethrenism is a primitive communism. We must project our heritage into the institutions of our society; in other words, we must bring our religion to bear on our economics and our politics."

From another source we read: "The Brethren Church was founded by Alexander Mack in the 18th century."

Now honestly, Brethren, are we to believe that the Brethren Church "came into being" in a time of confusion, corruption, misery, and religious and economic revolution that characterized the 18th century? Are we to accept the statement that "Out of this background of struggle, conflict and confusion came what we know as our Brethren heritage?" Are we to believe that the Brethren Church was founded by Alexander Mack in the 18th century?

If our Brethren movement is that described by either of the above, then what right have we any claim of being The New Testament Church? If these be true statements, that the early Brethren Church was "primitive communism," that it came out of the social and economic struggles of the 18th century, and was founded by Alexander Mack, undoubtedly Jesus Christ had nothing whatever to do with its coming into being!

That we may see what the Brethren Church is, who founded it, and what it stands for, let us forget the statements and claims of men, and listen to the Word of our dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock I will build my Church; and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it." (Matthew 16:18.) Neither here nor in any other place in God's word do we find that Jesus Christ ever spoke of His Church in a plural manner, because He never founded but one Church! Speaking of this Church as recorded in Ephesians 4:4-6 the Holy Spirit had the apostle Paul write: "There is one body (or Bride or Church) and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling: one Lord, one Faith, one baptism (dipping) one God and Father of all." Referring back now to the 2nd and 3rd verses of this same chapter we ascertain the purpose of the above declaration: "With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity (oneness) of the Spirit in the bond of peace." For the first 400 years of the history of the Church this "unity" or oneness was kept. However, during the latter part of that century Satan caused the Roman Emperor Augustine I to declare himself "head of the Church." At his death two of his sons took over the empire and dividing it into two empires each of these sons declared himself to be the "head" of the church, which resulted in the Eastern, or Orthodox (so called), and the Western, or Roman Catholic churches; each led far away from apostolic Christianity, worshipping idols, the Virgin Mary, angels, saints, relics, pictures, selling indulgences, and many other infamous sins were practised; forsaking the ordinances and teachings of Jesus and substituting the doctrines and ordinances of men, retaining just enough to deceive the people.

Keeping in mind the true statement of Jesus Christ relative to sustaining His Church, we may safely assert that there has never been one single day when the Church that Jesus Christ instituted has not been in evidence. There has always remained a faithful remnant of true New Testament Christians in every age, upholding, believing and practising the doctrines and ordinances of the New Testament or Apostolic Church! Jesus Christ kept his promise: "The gates of hades shall not prevail against it" (His Church). The persecution of the Roman Catholic Church before and since the Reformation is ample proof of this statement. Had there been none who believed and practised New Testament doctrines, Rome would have no need of persecution. The New Testament Church has always existed since its founding by the Christ, and its members were called "Brethren." This Church was not formed by Alexander Mack; neither did it come into being in a time of confusion, corruption, misery, and religious, social and economic revolution. Neither was that Church ever "primitive communism" as claimed by the speaker quoted! Nor was it ever mentioned in God's word as being "Brethrenism!" Noah Webster tells us that an "ism" is "A wild and visionary theory." Well, some of the quotations seem to me to be just that! There's nothing wild or visionary about New Testament Christianity. It is so clear that "A wayfaring man, though he be a fool, need not err therein."

That we may more clearly understand the authenticity of our Faith, even the Roman Catholic Church admits that our Triune immersion is apostolic. In the Catholic Encyclopedia, Book 2, page 262 we read: "The three-fold immersion is unquestionably very ancient in the Church, and apparently of Apostolic origin." It is also commonly said that the Pope washes the feet of twelve beggars each Easter as a testimony to the washing of the Saints' feet.

Just a word relative to Alexander Mack. It is not my intention to minimize his ministry, but I do believe that Alexander Mack would hold up his hands in holy horror if he knew anyone claimed that he founded the Brethren Church. Recall, if you will, how that those who were dipped in the Oder River kept secret the name of the first one to be dipped into the water at that time. In none of Mack's writings do we find the lest inference that it was he who founded the Brethren Church. He knew that it was Jesus Christ who founded His Church, and doubtless believed with the apostle Paul that: "Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3:11).

It is indeed strange that so few people fully realize that those who believe the teaching of the New Testament and practise the ordinances stated therein are members of the New Testament Church, and that in Apostolic times these were called "Brethren," because these alone had the right to be so named. Born again, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. It seems to me that if we who call ourselves Brethren would capitalize our position as being The New Testament Church, with doctrines that need no apology to uphold them, with the New Testament ordinances to offer to all men, that we should possess greater zeal to spread the doctrines of New Testament Christianity to a lost and condemned world. Another suggestion: Let us not call our doctrines "Brethren Doctrines." Rather we should call them "New Testament Doctrines," and state that men and women who call themselves "Brethren" believe these doctrines and practise them.

In conclusion we must agree that people who call themselves Brethren and believe and practise the ordinances of the New Testament have been in existence since the day that Jesus Christ said "Upon this Rock I will build my Church." That Alexander Mack was used by the Lord to lead the remnant of such believers out to proclaim New Testament Christianity to the whole world. That it is a precious privilege to be a member of the New Testament Church, and as such we are obligated to keep its doctrines true to the word of God. That we are obligated to preach this precious message to lost men, throughout the whole world, "dipping them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

Let us not forget the warning of Revelation 18:4-5 relative to the present condition of apostate Christendom: "Come out of her, my people, and be not partakers of her sins, that ye receive not her plagues, for her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." During the Reformation God mercifully led us out of this Babel or confusion. Is it not our duty to the God who led us out, that we stay out?

Pennsylvania District Conference Notes

The Fifty-ninth Annual Pennsylvania District Conference of the Brethren Church, convened in the Masontown Brethren Church on Monday evening, July 28 and concluded Thursday evening, July 21.

Moderator Rev. W. S. Benshoff presided during most of the three day session and delivered his address on Tuesday morning. This address merits reading by all the Brethren and will appear in The Evangelist. Vice Moderator Walter Wertz, along with Rev. N. V. Leatherman, Rev. D. R. Wolfe, Rev. Percy Miller, Rev. Naff, Rev. A. R. Baer, and Rev. S. E. Christiansen brought excellent messages during our Masontown stay. Rev. E. M. Riddle, Dr. Glenn Clayton and Rev. Fred Vanator were visiting Brethren who presented their various works to conference. Rev. Russell Showalter of the Mt. Joy Church of the Brethren, brought a stirring message to the Fraternal Relations session.

The music, in charge of Pauline Benshoff, was handled in good style. The final report of the credential committee showed that 109 lay delegates were present along with 11 Ministerial delegates. The various boards and committees were prepared and gave reports which indicated advances along the line.

A new "Constitution and By-Laws" was adopted at this conference. Having had in our hands for three years a "Tentative" copy of such, conference finally adopted said "tentative" with a number of deletions, additions and transfers. This, they voted to have put in printed form at once and distribution will be early this fall.

Conference voted to accept the invitation of the Meyersdale Church to hold the 1950 conference there. The time will be July 17 through July 20, 1950.

Conference officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Moderator, Rev. Percy C. Miller; Vice Moderator, Rev. D. Richard Wolfe; Secretary, Floyd S. Benshoff; Ass't Secretary, Catherine Benshoff; Treasurer, John H. Glessner; Statistician, Mrs. Arthur R. Baer.

Floyd S. Benshoff, Secretary.

A LOOK IN THE TELESCOPE

Scripture: Psalms 19:1-6; 8:1, 8-9

For The Leader

LAST WEEK we centered our thoughts on the greatness of God as seen through the Microscope. This week, we are going into something a little bigger. That is, what we see through the great telescopes of the land. Two things are certain. God is limitless in His creative ability, and His power to run things in an orderly way. The vastness of creation amazes us. And it is amazing to know that in this great creation we are more than just a cog in a wheel—we are the born again sons of the God who created it all. We are heirs and joint heirs with Christ. As we study the greatness of creation and space through the telescope, let us be mindful that God's grace and mercy is even greater than all that. It should help to keep us more faithful to Him day by day in all we do.

DISCUSSION

1. HOW GREAT IS SPACE? This at once seems like a foolish question. Yet it isn't. Man has been seeking the answer to this question for ages. He is practically as far from receiving His answer as ever. For no one can put a figure on the limits of space. The larger the telescope, the more space there is to see. To bring the idea of space a little closer. If a highway were built to the nearest star, and you were to get in a modern automobile and travel 100 miles an hour, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 52 weeks a year, never stopping, ever traveling, it would take you 24,000,000 years to get there. By that time you'd be just a little too tired and aged to enjoy your visit. Top that with the knowledge that there are stars in the heavens millions of times farther away than the nearest star. Thus we have a vague idea of what our God has done.

2. VIEWPOINT. We might raise the question, "Is the universe so large, or is man so small?" Again we might raise the question, "Is our universe, stars, planets, etc., the biggest thing God has created, or is all that we call space merely an atom in some greater universe beyond our comprehension? Be that as it may, for we are unable to answer the questions, but the matter is worthy of consideration in pondering the magnitude of God's creative ability. We stand by the side of the Psalmist and say, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" Whatever may be the true perspective, it is wonderful to know that God loves us when we do His will, and will preserve us through life, and reward us with a perfect, endless existence in heaven. There we shall learn the true viewpoint on things of this life. Until then, we leave unanswerable questions in His hands.

3. GOD IS ETERNAL. Take a good look into the stars on a dark, clear night. Can you realize that the stars at which you look are the same stars at which Abraham stared when God asked Him to? That is a fact. It bears out something else that brings assurance and comfort. These stars, from their creation billions and billions of years ago, through the life-time of Abraham, up to the present moment, and on to the time when they shall burn out in the heavens, represents but a moment of time in God's endless eternity. Further the apparent eternity of the stars is an indication of the eternity of God's promises, both to the righteous and to the unrighteous.

4. THE INESCAPABLE GOD. As you swing your telescope around the bowl of the heavens, you will see mysteries and wonders in which God is revealed. You will come to the conclusion that God is everywhere in creation. The things He has done, and that which He is doing to keep the machinery running in perfect order. Has it occurred to you that you cannot escape God? Men have tried it. People are trying it today. They drink to escape reality. They take sleeping pills when they go to bed. In these ways they hope to get away from God. They hope to silence God's wrathful voice as it warns them of the transgression of their sin. But God is inescapable. Though the deed be done in the dark and secretly, God sees, and makes note. There is no such thing as an individual presuming to sin and feeling that God will ignore it. God is inescapable now, and in the day of judgment. Best to be ready to meet Him by a pure life daily in Christ.

5. APPRECIATING GOD MORE. As Christians we do take too much for granted. How often do we take time to look into the heavens and thank God for all that He does for us. We should count it a great privilege to be honored by Him with the breath of life. In God's great destiny of the years, He has granted to us the privilege of life and service. Are we truly His? Do we truly thank Him for all He does for us day by day?

6. HE IS SUPREME. Far too many of us feel that the universe revolves around us. Somewhere, early in life we gain the impression that life, other people, the universe and the passing years, are designed to revolve around our own individual life. This is not so. God is the supreme! We, in Christ, are His subjects, His children. We must be obedient unto Him. We must hide our own ambitions and prides as we seek out His true purpose and will for our lives. God has a pattern for us, but we are the ones who determine whether or not God is successful in working out that pattern. God cannot cross our will. What a wonderful joy there is in life when we submit our wills to Him as supreme in our lives. That is the day when happiness and joy really begins for us. Until that time there is the fight between His will and ours. As God's great universe runs in a pattern according to His will, let us center our lives in Him, that we might be as orderly as the universe.

QUESTIONS

Explain what you think was God's method in flinging the worlds into space. Do you think He created things "over night" or is there room in the scriptures for the billions of years for creation as claimed by the scientists?

Insist on having strength to make your love fruitful in service.

The thorn that God sends is better than the crown the devil brings.

HOW CHRIST IS SEEN

Not only in the words you say,
Nor in the deeds expressed,
But in the most unconscious way,
Is Christ by you confessed.

Not in the fascinating smile,
Or holy light upon your brow—
Ah no, I felt His presence while
Your laugh rang out just now.

For me 'twas not the truth you taught—
To you so clear, to me so dim—
But when you came to me you brought
A deeper sense of Him.

And from your eyes He beckons me,
And from your heart His love is shed,
Until I lose all sight of you,
And see the Christ instead.

Let The Light Shine Through

A little girl who had seen the sunlight stream through beautiful stained glass windows figured with the servants of God was asked, "What is a saint?" She replied, "A saint is a person who lets the light shine through." Children of God, "called to be saints," (Romans 1:7) we are to let His light shine through us.

THE LIGHT

Hymn: "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning"

Scripture: John 8:12; Matt. 5:14-16

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE SUN is the light of the world, and the moon becomes the light of the world because the sun shines upon the moon. Christ is the Light of the world, but a Christian becomes the light of the world when Jesus Christ shines into his heart (2 Cor. 4:6). A shadow over the face of the moon is an eclipse. Christians shine in wonderful beauty until they permit the world to cast its shadow upon them by allowing it to come between them and their Sun of Righteousness (Luke 12:35). "The greatest proof of the Christian religion is a Christian" (Phil. 2:15). What is the gospel according to you (Psa. 37:6)?

If we do not let our light shine men will stumble over us into everlasting ruin (1 John 1:5). We are COMMANDED to "Let your light so shine before men . . ." (Col. 3:17). God said, "Let there be light: and there was light." Everything God created obeys His voice except man. God made us to shine for Him, and we shall never be happy unless we do (Isa. 60:1). He made us to walk in the light (Eph. 5:8; 1 John 1:6, 7). Into the darkness of this world Jesus came (John 1:5; 2 Peter 1:19). He is the light of the intellectual world (1 Cor. 1:21). He is the light of the social world, elevating manhood, womanhood and childhood. He is the light of the religious world. Only a Christian can sing his way through the sorrows of life (Psa. 23:4; 1 Cor. 15:55; Job 1:21). He is the light of the individual world (John 1:9). The world does not want the light of Jesus because it does not like to look right in the light (John 3:19-21). Christian, let your light shine (Eph. 5:14). Trim your lights and let them shine (Matt. 25:7). Have you any oil in your lamp (Matt. 25:8)? Jesus is the Light of Heaven (Rev. 21:23).

EXALTING THE WORD OF GOD

Lesson: Psalms 19:7-14; 119:1-8

THE BIBLE, THE WORD OF GOD, contains the revelation which God made of Himself and of His Son, through the prophets and the various writers of the text, who were led and guided by the Holy Spirit. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews put it this way, "God (and note that the emphasis is placed right where it belongs) who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, (God speaking and the prophets forth telling) hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son . . ." Hebrews 1:1, 2. The Gospels tell us of the "Son's" revelation of both Himself and His Father—"He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." In fact, from beginning to end—Old and New Testaments—the central figure is the Christ; the Atoning Saviour, foretold in prophecy, manifest in the birth, life, death and resurrection of Jesus our Lord, and set forth in finality in His Coming Again. This is the Bible—The Word of God.

To "exalt" simply means to place upon a high plane. We do not worship the Bible, but we do hold it in high reverence for what it reveals. Far too often God's Word is held too cheaply. Children should be taught to treat the Bible somewhat differently than they treat secular books. That it should not be thrown around or just used as any other book. It should be regarded as one would regard a letter from a very dear friend, or as the last letter received from a father or mother. It seems to me that much of the irreverence shown the church today stems from a failure to teach the children to reverence holy things.

Our text speaks of the law contained in God's Word. Note that God's law is "perfect." So different from man-made laws. Someone has said that man has made so many laws that a smart lawyer can find a law on the statute books that will abrogate any other law that is made. Whether this be true or not, it is safe to say that we are over-lawed in this country and that many "laws" are not God's laws. For example, it is not against the law of the land to sell liquor, or to drink it. But surely it is against God's law. The law of the land permits the drafting of men to fight; but it surely is not according to God's law, whose law is one of peace.

The text says that God's testimonies are "sure." We are helped thereby to live better lives and to meet each succeeding problem with enlightened eyes and understanding.

To "fear God" is not to be afraid of God. Fear in its best sense is to have reverence for Him. Our fear should be that we do not please Him. Perhaps the thing that is keeping more people away from God than any other is because in childhood He was set up before them as a "policeman" who would bring dire punishment down on them if they did something wrong. Of course we should teach the child that "deliberate" sin should make him afraid of the consequences of his act. The Psalmist calls deliberate sins "presumptuous sins."

We are asked, "Does the Christian sin?" Probably not willful sin, but many, many times they commit sins of omission—they fail to do what they know they ought to do. Dr. J. Allen Miller often said, "The choice of a lesser opportunity in the place of a greater opportunity is sin to the Christian."

God's laws do not change. They need no revision, amendment or curtailment. That is why we can exalt the Word of God—lift it high, and rejoice in its purity. May we say, with the Psalmist, "I will keep thy statutes." Psalm 119:8.

A drive for new members is being made by the Christian Endeavorers.

Loree, Indiana. Brother Robert Higgins says that the W. M. S. have voted to purchase a number of new hymnals to augment the present supply, which has become inadequate for the services.

He also reports that the tentative dates of their revival has been set as December 4 to 18, and that the tentative speaker will be Dr. Grover E. Swoyer, of Pittsburgh, Penna.

Homecoming Day at Loree has been set for October 23rd.

Mexico, Indiana. The Mexico Sunday School Picnic was held at the MacConaquah Park, at Peru, Indiana.

Dr. Grover Swoyer, of Pittsburgh, Penna., was guest speaker at the Mexico church for the Community service on Sunday evening, July 31st. This was a special Sunday evening service. The Loree Quartet and the Church of the Brethren Choir furnished the music.

Brother Higgins reports a recent trip to Kentucky as follows: "Rev. Austin Gable, 'Bud' Hunter and I made a trip to our Lost Creek, Kentucky, Mission field this week (week of July 17th), with a truck load of school desks, stoves, clothing, etc. The trip was very much enjoyed by all. Brother Hunter remained there to supervise the construction of the new boys' dormitory which is to replace the one which was burned. We had the privilege of speaking at our new church in Rowdy on Thursday evening."

Mexico's Homecoming is scheduled for October 24th.

Brother Higgins has been granted the privilege of holding a revival at our Center Chapel church in September.

Ashland, Ohio. The Ashland Laymen's Organization recently elected officers for the coming year as follows: President—Rex Martin; Vice President—Delbert Mellinger; Treasurer—J. Arthur DeLozier; Secretary—Ted Sapyta; Representative of the Laymen to the Church Official Board—Donald Bame.

Dr. Martin Shively, who is a member of the Ashland Church, celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday on Wednesday, July 20th. He is still a regular attendant at the services of both Sunday School, church and mid-week session.

Dayton, Ohio. We note that the Whetstones spent their vacation in Michigan, just traveling, or as Brother Whetstone says, "Just seeing some of the sights of Michigan."

In the absence of Brother Whetstone the morning services of July 24th were in charge of the Dayton Laymen. This was their annual public service. Mr. Broda of the Dayton Public Schools was the guest speaker.

The Dayton Choir was recently "Guest" at the Antioch U. B. Church.

Huntington, Indiana. Brother C. Y. Gilmer sends us a card with the following announcements: "The Huntington Church has scheduled the following: Rev. and Mrs. Dale Larue Roesch, Sunday evening, August 7th; Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Bright, Sunday evening, August 21st. Rev. Bright is preaching on the date of his 29th anniversary in the ministry, having preached his first sermon in the Huntington Brethren Church twenty-nine years ago."

Brother Gilmer also says, "Five were baptized on July 20th. Two of these were intermediate boys who had accepted Christ at Camp; the other three were heads of families."

The Huntington Brethren Men's Chorus, under the direction of Mrs. C. Y. Gilmer, with Mrs. Elbert Trainer at the piano, presented a program at the Huntington Church on Sunday evening, July 17th. Brother Gilmer reports that there were 130 present and that an offering of $50.57 was received. All were well pleased with the program. The Huntington Men's Chorus is making a name for themselves.

News From Our Churches

OAKVILLE, INDIANA

Greetings to the Brethren from the Oakville Brethren Church! Several months have elapsed since the last report of the work here appeared in the Evangelist. This is due, not to any lack of activities to be reported, but rather to a busy summer which has allowed but little time for writing.

The work in this beautiful rural community is moving along in a most encouraging manner—thanks to the guidance and loving care of the Heavenly Father. We had trepidations that the news of our leaving this field at the beginning of next year might cause a decline in enthusiasm and interest amongst the brethren, but such has not been the case, for both enthusiasm and interest are continually mounting.

No summer slump is in evidence here. The average Sunday School attendance for May was 114; for June 119; and for the first three weeks of July 118, as compared with 90, 92, and 81 for the same period last year. Since the first Sunday of February there have been but three Sundays when the attendance fell below the 100 mark (and all three of those were 98), while in the past five years there was not a single year in which the attendance passed the attendance mark of 100 on more than twelve Sundays. Similar growth is likewise manifested in the other services and meetings of the church. And this growth is brought about largely through the enthusiasm of the folks in the church who are endeavoring to put into practice those well known words—"You bring the one next to you . . ."

As in other years, we are cooperating with the churches in the surrounding villages in sponsoring union services during the month of July and the first week of August. Thus far these services have been quite well attended.

Each Sunday morning our worship service is richly blessed through the special music and the responses of a most efficient choir. Under the supervision of a paid director—who at the present time is Mrs. Bates—the choir, which is composed of practically all trained singers or musicians, is doing a work not to be excelled in any rural church.

One other phase of the work here that should be mentioned is the Junior Department of the Sunday School. On the first Sunday of February we arranged for the youngsters to meet in the basement of the church (and we have an especially nice one here) for their own exercises and class sessions, rather than gathering with the older folks, as had been the custom. The average attendance for the month of June in the Junior Department was just a fraction less than a 100% increase over the average attendance for the same group previous to the change. The youngsters have a very interesting and instructive program each Sunday—many of them taking an active part in the exercises, which are supervised by one of our young ladies, Sister Pat Ball.

As with the great majority of Brethren people, the folks here love to hear the glorious message of the Gospel, and many of them are doing their part to fulfill the commission of our Lord to "preach to all creatures," by speaking to the unsaved in our community.

Brethren, we solicit your continuing prayers that the work of the Lord might move forward in this field which is ripe unto the harvest.

Henry Bates, pastor.

CHEYENNE, WYOMING

The first two weeks of June, proceeded by weeks of prayer, we held our first Daily Vacation Bible School. It really thrilled our hearts to see those twenty-eight youngsters come smiling, talking and laughing into the house of the Lord each morning.

In spite of, or maybe, because of the rain (which fell in torrents almost every morning) we had a very regular attendance.

Our school was conducted entirely by home talent, and the cooperation between parents, teachers, the Sunday School, the pastor and the children was grand. Two boys accepted Christ, one of which was baptized the following Sunday, when also, we had an exhibition of the hand work and a program which consisted of Bible Stories enacted, songs and choruses sung, which had been learned at the sessions of the school.

We truly feel that "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Mrs. J. K. White, Cor. Sec.

TERRA ALTA, WEST VIRGINIA (Co-operative Church)

Brother Wendell Flory, missionary to China, was with us on May 7th and talked on the China mission work. We are sorry to have lost one of our members by death, Sister Ocean Rhodes. Several members of our church attended the Church of the Brethren Annual Conference at Ocean Grove and brought back a very interesting report. Brother Olonzo Fike of Accident, Maryland, held a revival meeting for us from July 10th to July 17th. The meeting was well attended. Eight persons were baptized; seven into the Church of the Brethren and one into the Brethren Church. We had our Love Feast in the evening of July 17th. We were glad for the opportunity on July 18th to hear Mrs. Helena Kruger of the Church World Service tell of her experience in Europe and of the things that are still greatly needed there. A carload of our Women attended the Pennsylvania District Conference at Masetown, Pa., on July 20th and also the banquet in the evening. Several of our young people are planning on attending camp at Camp Galilee the first part of August.

Mrs. Roy Whitehair.

Wedding Announcement

Beverly Jean Harden and Jack L. Titus were united in marriage on June 18th at the church with a double ring service, read by the pastor. At home in this city for a few weeks, but after September 1st at St. Louis, Mo., where Mr. Titus is completing his course in medical college.

Alma Mae Weesner and Lawrence Anthony Turner were united in marriage on June 25th at the church with a double ring service read by the pastor. At home in this city till September, when Mr. Turner will resume his studies in Michigan State University to complete his course in chemical engineering.

Gloria Dell Epley and Robert Eugene Hancock were united in marriage on June 26th at the church with a double ring ceremony by the pastor. At home at Osceola, Indiana.

Lois Wynn and Justin DeBoer were united in marriage on July 2nd at the church with a lovely service read by Rev. E. A. Duker. At home to their friends at Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Jacqueline Ann Warner and John Joseph Metz were united in marriage on July 9th at the church with a ring service read by the pastor. Both are employed by Western Union and are at home in South Bend, Indiana.

Shirley Jean Bourdon and William H. Wynn, Jr., were united in marriage on July 17th at the church with a love'y ring ceremony. At home to their friends at 1913 Marine Street, South Bend, Indiana.

Congratulations and every good blessing of life and the rich blessings of God's grace be on these fine young couples as they unitedly take up life. All of them are either members of this church or have some definite relation to this church. Claud Studebaker, South Bend, Indiana.

MUSSER-HOFFMAN. At a garden wedding Sunday afternoon, July 3, 1949, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Jay Musser, the Deep Spring Farm, of Berlin, Pennsylvania, their youngest daughter, Rae, became the bride of Robert Hoffman, son of Harrison Hoffman of Berlin, and the late Mrs. Hoffman. The writer, pastor of the Berlin Brethren Church, officiated at the double ring ceremony before an improvised altar of white lilies, carnations and ferns, with tall white tapers. Baskets of flowers and white streamers marked an aisle for the wedding party. The bride carried a white Bible, with ribbon showers and a marker of white roses. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Mary Musser. Rev. Joe Shultz, cousin of the bride, was Mr. Hoffman's best man. Miss Doris Hart, roommate of the bride at Ashland College, played several beautiful numbers on the organ and also the traditional wedding marches. Miss Virginia Barnard, also a roommate of the bride, sang several beautiful numbers. Mrs. Hoffman is a graduate of Ashland College and Mr. Hoffman is a pre-seminary student in Ashland College.

Percy C. Miller.

Laid to Rest

TOWNER. Theodore Towner departed this life to be with his Lord on June 14, 1949. He had suffered intensely for several months; several major surgical operations and every medication seemed futile. His extreme suffering he bore most patiently, and his faith was gloriously triumphant.

He leaves a beloved wife (Ann Hullinger) and a daughter; quite a large number of relatives and a host of dear friends. The large number of floral tributes and very large attendance at the memorial service bore evidence of the esteem in which he was held. He was a member of the trustee board of this church.

Our comfort is in the glorious hope of heaven and eternal joy with our Lord in the house of many mansions. May our dear Lord bind up the broken hearts and raise up new strength in members to faithfully do His will.

GLOSS. William H. Gloss of 936 Arlington Ave., S. W., Canton, Ohio, came to the end of life's earthly journey on Monday, June 27, 1949, at the age of seventy-seven years, having suffered a cerebral hemorrhage the evening before.

Mr. Gloss was a resident of Canton for sixty years, coming from his birthplace, Neffsville, Pennsylvania, where he was born in 1872. He was last employed by Diebold, Inc., and had previously been a freight foreman for the B. & O. and W. & L. E. railroads. He retired from active work in 1944 because of ill health.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Arie E. Gloss, to whom he was united in marriage on July 2, 1893. On the anniversary of this date in 1943 they celebrated their Golden Wedding, at which time Rev. Fred C. Vanator, a former pastor of the Canton Brethren Church, officiated at their "Golden Marriage Ceremony." Thus they had journeyed within a few days of fifty-six years of married life at the time of his passing.

Surviving also are: three daughters—Mrs. Charles Lydick, Mrs. W. C. Bowser, and Mrs. Thomas Worley, all of Canton; two sons—Ray A. of Philadelphia, Penna., and Wilbur of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio; a sister—Mrs. Anna Frank of Lancaster, Penna.; two brothers—George and Edward, both of Canton; nine grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted in the Schneeberger Funeral Home on Wednesday, June 29th, by Rev. L. O. Hegnauer, a long time friend of the deceased, in the absence of the undersigned. The sermon was based on Psalm 23. Burial was made in Westlawn Cemetery.

The Brethren Evangelist

vangelism

"I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life"—

When General Douglas McArthur said so dramatically at the Japanese surrender, that there must be "... a spiritual recrudescence ... or Armageddon will be at our door," he was not congratulating the Christian churches on their importance. He was voicing a sobering and tellible challenge.

In our program of Evangelism lies the answer. More Christians are needed if we are to become a more Christian world. Every walk of life must have men and women, increasingly more, who will allow this life to be guided by the Christ, our Saviour.

If Christianity cannot conquer America, it cannot conquer the world; and a Christianity that cannot conquer America is a Christianity that we do not want to carry to the world.

To Evangelize the world is to do something more than preach the Gospel. It is to put the Gospel into the forces that are remaking the world in which we live.

We have come to know that we must do more than cure unfortunates. Evangelism is so much more than a movement of social evolution. It is more than being good Samaritans. When we think of "Good Samaritans" at once we think of highwaymen on every road between Jerusalem and Jericho.

America's supreme obligation is the obligation of supreme advantage. This obligation of special privilege rests upon the nation as well as the individual. Our nation needs to be sobered, in order that we might be inspired. The inspiration is in the high calling which comes to every Christian of our North American continent, to do something real, something worth while, to enable this continent to come to its own and do its world duty in making Jesus Christ known to this generation.

Down through the ages young enthusiasts have picked out their specific jobs. Paul sees his task to be founding churches. Dorcas making coats for the poor at Joppa. St. Francis washes the wounds of lepers. Bernard preaches a Crusade. Luther nails his world-shaking challenge on the church door at Wittenberg. George Williams founds the Y. M. C. A. Jane Adams brings hope to youth on the city streets. D. L. Moody and Wm. A. Sunday win their tens of thousands for Jesus Christ. Millions down through the ages have caught the vision of God's Kingdom on the horizon in the sky, and have followed the gleam each in his own way to a finite and definite end; and always under the inspiration of the great Captain.

America's world calling is clearer, more insistent, more appealing, than any other call that ever disturbed any nation, ancient or modern. Israel, Greece, Rome, Spain, France, Britain, Germany or Russia, and the new nations east and west—all have had their day of visitation. But to none of them came a chance so stupendous, a vocation so commanding, a vision so splendid, as now challenges North America.

Might we not well PRAY DAILY for an increasing interest in EVANGELISTIC missions. This challenge does not stop with those who can "GO FOR HIM," but includes every Christian who should be willing to support those who do "forsake all for Jesus' sake."

Travels

A combined visit and business trip to Illinois was enjoyed over the Fourth of July week-end. The temperature was high, the traffic heavy, but we went through with no difficulty. The Lanark Church, under the care of Brother McCartney-smith, gave a very good audience for the missionary message at the morning hour. During the afternoon we visited Dr. and Mrs. Bell, Mrs. White and at the home of an Ashland student, Miss Coleman. The Fourth was enjoyed with relatives formerly from the East, all of whom are connected with the Church of the Brethren. The following day, I kept my promise with the college and visited the Iowa-Illinois Camp at the Mississippi Palisades. This is a very fine location and set-up for a camp. It was my joy to bring the first message in a worship service to this group with their leaders.

July 15th your secretary cared for the pulpit at Bryan, while the minister was on vacation in the East. Since we once served this church for a five year pastorate, you may be sure it was a delightful worship. The church was almost filled for the service. Enroute a call was made at Fremont where we found Mrs. Hagenbuch able to be at home and up part of the time. The twin boys are doing fine. Surely the prayers of hundreds were answered for the recovery of Sister Hagenbuch.

Home one day, then with the Vanators in the rear seat, we went "Dodge Cruising" to Mason-town, Pa., for the conference. It was a hot time too; I refer again to the heat. However, it was acclaimed a very good conference. The attendance was extra good, the program was well planned and well executed. Every interest of the church was well emphasized.

After a half day at home, Garber Drushal, President of the Board, and I took to the road again headed for Kentucky to assist in the final detail, some of which needed legal advice from the state of Kentucky, for the beginning of the replacement of the Wheeler Home.

Our genial friend, "Bud" Hunter, was on the job to superintend the work. Men were already busy on the foundation. Local men are being used as much as possible, since so many of them need the work. The work will be rushed as much as possible so as to have this building in readiness before bad weather.

The church will rejoice to know that Sister Ada Drushal was able to ride to Jackson with us. Her recovery also is directly attributed to the power of prayer.

President Drushal is a real traveling companion and a proficient assistant at the wheel, especially in Kentucky.

We'll be seeing many of our readers at General Conference time, soon. Pray for this conference.

Ninety Minutes of Ecstasy—Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing (Psa. 100:2, Golden Text)). In a log cabin in the hills of West Virginia, I have heard the singing of a congregation of men and women poorly clad, overworked, and perhaps undernourished. Tears flowed and shouts interfered with the singing as they sang such songs as "Oh, happy day, that fixed my choice on Thee, my Saviour and my God." They had a preacher but once a month and it seemed that God loaned them enough Heaven to fill them with overflowing. I rejoiced with them, and thanked God that people who had no paper on their walls or carpet on their floor could have ninety minutes of ecstasy once a month which is far more than some churchgoers have in a lifetime.—S. The Importance of Missionary Leadership in the Home Church

R. F. Porte

The rising power of spiritual leadership among the men of the Brethren Church is the factual answer to my topic. For a long time, we have been aware that the men of the church have not made the united imprint upon the work of the church as is now witnessed in the growth of men's work. The Brethren Church is witnessing an effective team, women's work and men's work pulling evenly and bringing the church into successful missionary accomplishment. There is never a successful work for Christ without the laity heartily supporting the claims of Christ to every Christian.

The importance of our aroused laity is well supported by the words of Saint Paul when he said, "... and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? Romans 10:14. Every successful missionary or evangelistic program has at the foundation of its success a group of consecrated laity, men and women. A Christian laity is the most fertile ground to plant the missionary program of our Lord. These are the people who receive the Word of Life gladly and proceed to bring forth a great increase of spiritual blessing. The unsaved and the indifferent certainly need the blessing of the saving Gospel but the Gospel itself must start with willing hearts who accept the message and make some good from it. The preacher is merely a voice crying in the wilderness without his faithful people who demonstrate and amplify the message the pastors may bring. It takes the laity to plant the message in the hearts of people who are unsaved and indifferent to the Christian message.

We do not minimize the importance of the individual but the increasing effect of a great leader rests upon those who hear his message, receive it gladly and enthusiastically and multiply it. It was our Lord Himself who told His disciples that, "Greater works than these shall ye do" John 14:12. The increase of the Master's work lay in the hearts of faithful believers who would go forth to preach the message of salvation and hope. I am laying stress upon the field of increase in missionary leadership. Nowhere is missionary leadership confined to those definitely set apart to full time service. The missionary and evangelistic effort is only spear-pointed by the leader who stands at the head of the total effort. Leadership passes down to every faithful believer in the work of Christ to become a voice, a light, and example of Christian victory over the common opposition to the work of Christ.

Church leaders and pastors frequently hear members of the congregation remark, "We need more leaders." It is just as logical to retort that we need a soil or background out of which to develop this needed Christian leadership. Is it also not true that the source from which our consecrated-leadership will come must be just as devoted to the cause of Christ as the leadership itself? The Brethren Church has never emphasized the ministry into a professionalized class as we note in the high liturgical churches; our ministry is apostolic in character, that is, a selected number set apart and dedicated by the church body itself to do the distinctive work which the church itself wants done. The power of the early apostolic group was a corporate body, "all together in one place." The Antioch church was a total missionary church out of which Paul, Barnabas, and Silas became the vocal expression of a group just as missionary as the church itself, we believe. I am saying that our leadership develops out of a spiritual soil, out of Christian lives convicted of the truth that we do have a message to give to the nations that shall turn their hearts to the right. Here let it be well stated that no true Christian excuses himself by saying, "We lack leadership." What we lack is a spiritual soil out of which great spiritual leaders will spring; capable men and women who shall exemplify the character of the group of believers in Christ they represent. The importance of the Christian body cannot be over-emphasized in my judgment. Our leadership has to be in some way comparable to the character of the group from which they spring.

Let us refrain from departmentalizing Christian testimony. All Christian missionary work is evangelizing and evangelizing is missionary work every where in the whole world. There is a sort of glamour to the person who travels abroad but the importance of the home field is just as heroic and challenging. It would certainly be folly to evangelize Africa and at the same time neglect to warn America to the danger of neglecting obedience to the law of Christ. The reaction of a group of young people who had attended a world conference of Christian people and had worshipped, prayed, sang together with Christians of different races was, "Why can't we do this at home?" That is a perfect question and it puts us to thinking, as the Editor says. I have heard people boasting what is being done in other places and these same people make almost no effort to inject their enthusiasm into their own church and community. If Jesus was partial at all to any locality Jesus certainly emphasized the necessity of building up to the home community and then going forth to the entire world. "Beginning at Jerusalem" certainly indicates the importance of leadership and work in the home community but like charity, it should never always stay at home. When we invite the neighbors into our home we make more light in our own home—at least more than we usually do when we are alone.

What will you say of this statement namely, that the home leadership is of necessity an aroused lay leadership? Every Christian member of the church is a potential leader in his or her congregation. The development of leadership is possible by a continual presentation of the need for Christian work. The ability and power of local leadership declines in proportion to the individual's attendance at the congregational assembly. The faithfulness of a person's attendance at the local church assembly leads into the attendance at district, national, and world conferences. The world view and wider missionary vision is the fruit of fellowship with Christians who are filled with the enthusiasm of the program of Christ. When a church member keeps uninformed about the Christian program he is keeping his light under a table and does not give light to all them in the house. God told Ezekiel that the watchman failed to warn the city of immanent danger that watchman was responsible for the lives of the city. The reason from a missionary standpoint why a Christian should be a witnessing Christian is that he may keep some other person from dying in sin. A person that refuses to accept the salvation in Christ Jesus loses his own soul and fails in doing the service he might do and should do for his Lord, but the church-member who walks after the way of the world loses his own soul, misleads his close companions and causes them to neglect salvation and is also guilty of neglecting his duty to his Lord. Who knows but God, how great a minister of righteousness a Christian might be until he gives himself wholly to the Lord to do the Lord's work? What is the importance of missionary leadership in the local church? It is the difference between a Spirit-filled, Gospel preaching, soul saving church and a luke-warm, self-satisfied and self-righteous dying church. The apostolic church was a witnessing church and a Gospel preaching church and a soulsaving church and altogether a missionary church and evangelistic.

Camp at Lost Creek, Kentucky

On Monday evening, June 7, the undersigned and "Doc" Shank arrived at their destination in Lost Creek, Kentucky, 337 miles from Ashland. Upon our arrival little did we realize that before us was one of the most enjoyable and satisfying weeks of our summer. To some 40 children of Kentucky it meant the long awaited week of summer camp.

There was an organization of all the campers into four tribes on Monday night and this proved to be a keen source of competition for the campers. Some of the activities during the week included morning watch, tribe meetings and classes of Biblical instruction. Chapel services were also conducted every morning quite ably by the pastor of Sergeantsville, New Jersey Church, Reverend J. J. Margush. During recess "Doc" Shank just had to have a bottle of pop (or was it a chat with Bonnie) at the local store?

In the afternoon handcraft was taught by Miss Anderson, a successful teacher from a camp just a few miles from the Lost Creek Camp.

Recreation during the week varied from treasure and scavenger hunts to races and relays and soft ball. Our recreation periods were only a success because of the spirit of cooperation among the campers.

Evening vespers were conducted by "Doc" Shank and then tribes gave their programs of Bible dramatization after which Rev. Margush was in charge of the worship services.

As has already been said we had great cooperation from all the campers and we must add to this that we were indeed grateful for the hospitality and the cooperation given to us by Mr. and Mrs. Drushal, Miss Stevenson, Mr. Hall, Gordan and Ada Mae Drushal.

I believe part of the success of the week is shown by the fact that forty tired campers worn by a week of camp life were sorry to see the camp come to a close.

Concerning the Ministry of Dr. G. W. Rench

The Dayton Convention of 1883 was held in June of that year, and two years later to the very week I was baptized by Elder W. W. Sommers, in Massissinewa River, near Eaton, Indiana, and thus became a member of the Brethren (Progressive) Church. I was twenty-one years of age at this time, having been born on May 27, 1864 within two miles of where I was baptized. The religious atmosphere at that time was disturbed by a great controversy over the organization of this church. The right of Progressive ministers to baptize and the baptism of those who had been baptized by triune immersion was foremost in this early controversy. The subject of this sketch took his stand against this as well as other humanisms disallowed by the Scriptures. The church was organized in a country school house where I was then teaching. A year later, in 1886, at the same place I was called (by secret ballot) to the ministry, and ordained by Elder David K. Teeter of the Oakville, Indiana, church. I continued teaching, however, and preaching for my home church as duties would permit. During these years I was led to champion the cause of the rights and practices of the congregation as set forth in the New Testament scriptures. The jurisdiction of outside bodies was denied. Such men as Holsinger, Bashor, Swihart, Wampler, Brown, and J. D. Bowman were supporting that position with great courage and clearness. There followed in the wake of these men such staunch advocates of the "Bible alone" position as Gnagey, Tombaugh, Shively, J. Allen Miller, Knepper, Livengood, C. F. Yoder and R. R. Teeter.

I was called to my first full-time pastorate at Milford, Indiana, in April, 1892. I was educated at Lebanon, Ohio (teachers' course) and at the Valparaiso University, Indiana, at which institution I attended on two different occasions, majoring in the sciences. In the college year of 1894 I was urged by the trustees of Ashland College to come there to fill a vacancy in the faculty. I returned to Milford pastorate at the close of the college year. In the fall of 1897 I was chosen to make a canvas of the Indiana churches for the purpose of raising the apportionment of these churches in the final effort to pay off the debt of long standing for Ashland College. The apportionments ran from $50 to $100. A few churches had already raised their quota. The remainder of the 25 churches rallied to the appeal in splendid fashion, and with the other districts, the debt was paid. I regard this achievement as one of the outstanding events of my ministry.

About the year 1900, the Indiana Mission Board was organized with the view of establishing new churches in this district. It was agreed that our first effort should be to redeem our fair name in the city of Goshen, Indiana. The work started there a few years before had failed to develop. I was selected to lead that work. I quote from the Indiana Year Book of 1904: "The Goshen Church is a triumph of State Mission work. Appropriations first year $600, second $600, third $400, fourth $200. Four hundred dollars of this was spent for a lot for the church. How State Mission Work pay?" During this time about two hundred members have been added. At one of my revival meetings 101 people were taken into the church. I always regarded this as an outstanding event of my ministry.

I have served pastorates in the following churches: Maple Grove, Indiana, 6 years; Milford, 9 years; Goshen, 11 years; Johnstown First, Pennsylvania, 6 years; South Bend, Indiana, 7 years; North Liberty, 2 years; and New Paris, 13 years. I am now closing my ministerial career at New Paris, Indiana, a very delightful pastorate of almost 13 years. At my next birthday, May 27, 1944, I shall have reached the age of 80 years.

My Brethren have selected me to numerous positions of trust and responsibility, twice Moderator of the National Conference, and for many years President of the National Ministerial Association, and again Moderator of the Indiana State Conference and various standing committees. During the South Bend pastorate in connection with other ministers, the beautiful conference grounds of Shipshewana Lake with its tabernacle and Women's Lodge and Hotel was developed. In the capacity of a minister of the Brethren Church of almost 58 years, I would gladly spend another life time in such a high calling.

—G. W. Rench, February 1, 1944.

This modest statement concerning the life of our late brother, Dr. G. W. Rench, should be a challenge and stimulus to the ministry of our church. It should also become an urge to young men of the church to offer their life in such a service. Dean M. A. Stuckey who has held this life report felt it should be used in the missionary number.

CHEYENNE, WYOMING

A recent message from Pastor Frank W. Garber says the building program for this year is finished. The building presents a nice appearance with the white coat finish. He says further that the first service in the new auditorium was held on Easter Sunday with 85 persons present. The Vacation Bible School was a real success. It is the plan to dedicate the new church on Sunday before the District conference, which convenes in the Cheyenne Church, in October.

RETURNS BY PLANE

It is reported in the Huntington Bulletin that Miss Janet King, who is visiting her sister and family in South America, will return by airplane. She intends to arrive by General Conference.

LETTER FROM MISS KUGLER

To all my dear Brethren and friends in the States,

Often, very often, I remember all of you and the great experiences the Lord gave me visiting our churches in the States. With much interest I am always reading the news and the articles in the Brethren Evangelist and it seemed to me then as if I would be there among you. But now is the time that you receive a word from me. I don't write too often because of my activities in the mission work. However, I am always very happy to serve the Lord, we can feel His presence guiding and blessing us. Everything is going fine and the work is progressing. The meetings are well attended and my people are remaining faithful and cooperating in everything.

Besides our W. M. S., I have now organized a Senior S. M. M. with 14 girls. They enjoy our meetings very much, meeting once a month for two and a half hours. First we have tea as some girls come from high school or some other place directly to the meeting. Then we have songs, Bible study, and prayer and then we begin work, preparing materials for the meetings among the children, and sewing for the cradle-roll babies and arranging some used clothes for poor children. So we hope through our meetings we shall receive spiritual help and at the same time be a blessing for others.

On Sunday morning we have Sunday School but on Saturday afternoon we have another meeting for children, mostly Bible study and flannelgraph. There is a very nice group of children which we can see are growing in their spiritual life. We have this meeting in the home of the Hernandez family and when this meeting is over then we have in our hall a study of preparation. We are studying the book "Seeking the Lost" written by Dr. Leavell. The group has 12 members who are studying, besides them, Benjamin is in the Bible school at Buenos Aires, where he began last year and Azucena Martin is at the Bible school in Rosario. They are consecrated, good students. Imael and Atuel couldn't go to Bible school this year because only one has a brother who is in military service, so they have to work to help with the expenses in their homes. But meanwhile they are quite active in the work and taking part in our studies.

Here in Villa Constitucion we are now facing the project to build our church. We thank the Lord, and we thank all of you, our dear Brethren, because we could buy a very appropriate lot for our building. It is well located. We hope to be able soon to build since the owner of the house where we are at this time, needs it for his own use. Maybe you remember that I spoke about a Kindergarten or Good Will Center which I hope to be able to start here. This would be very importance since Villa Constitucion is becoming a great industrial center. Some factories are already working and some are yet in construction. The town is growing and I am happy because our work is growing too.

The Government and Catholic restrictions are more and more severe against the Evangelicals. For a long time many preachers gave really good messages over the radio. Even though it was very expensive we considered it a good way to preach the Gospel, as so many sick people could hear it in their homes and many others who wouldn't attend churches. In the past two weeks they have been limited to only music by the piano and violin. In some churches they are already prohibited to hold meetings or to have meetings in streets or parks. We want to pray that the Lord may give us strength and courage to give our testimony for His glory and that we can love those who are against His Word. So I consider this restriction a special reason for a Good Will Center or Kindergarten work as well as teaching and preaching the Gospel. The Methodists and Baptists have already established some Good Will Centers.

Some weeks ago the Bylers were here visiting. I was so happy having them in my home. They are progressing now with the Spanish and are already helping in the work. Everybody likes them and little, sweet Susan is making friends everywhere. We are happy that Miss June Byler got her visa and we hope she can soon be among us. Next week I am going to Buenos Aires to meet Miss Janet King at the port. She is coming for a short visit and then will be back for General Conference. I am anxious to see her, as she will represent for me all my dear friends from the States.

Brethren, pray for us, you are giving your offerings and may the Lord bless us as we are working together for Him.

Sincerely yours in His Service,

H. Louisa Kugler.

ATTENTION ALL CHURCHES

We call your attention to a motion which was passed at last year's General Conference: We quote—"A motion was sustained that each and every church send a conference offering every year, of at least five cents per member, for the operating expenses of General Conference." Do not fail to either SEND or BRING this offering to conference.

E. J. Beekley, Conference Secretary.

SOUTH AMERICA----

by L. O. McCartneysmith

In compliance to the request of our Missions Secretary, Rev. E. M. Riddle, it is a pleasure to present this brief Geological Survey of South America, dealing particularly with that portion of the Continent in which we have for several years been greatly interested in spreading the doctrines of the New Testament Church: namely the republic of Argentina.

To supply our readers with some idea of the size and population of South America as a whole, it is interesting to know that this continent is ruled by eleven republics somewhat similar in government to our own United States, with an area of 6,775,410 square miles, and a population as shown by the 1947 census of 101,946,956. Argentina ranks second in both size and population, with an area of 1,078,769 square miles, and a population of 16,107,936, which amounts approximately to one sixth of the area of the Continent, and about the same relation of population.

Argentina occupies the greater portion of southern South America, extending from the southern border of the republic of Brazil southwardly to the southern tip of the Continent, Cape Horn, a distance of 2300 miles. It varies in width from the point of Cape Horn to its widest portion in the North which is 930 miles in width.

There are 5 great river divisions or systems in Argentina: the Plata, Central, Cordillera, Pampa, and the Patagonia in the extreme southern part. The mountains of Argentina are grouped into 4 perfectly defined systems: the Andean on the West, the Central in the central part, the Misiones in the eastern, and the Southern in the south. Beautiful lakes are to be seen in the southern mountainous section, with glaciers, and ice covered peaks. Skiing and trout fishing are very popular.

East of the Andes we find great plains, some of which are very heavily wooded, called the Grand Chaco in the northern area; and south of this are the vast treeless "pampas" or plains, where we see vast fields of wheat, morn, oats, flax, and alfalfa, much resembling our own Western Plains country, excepting that they extend in a southerly direction instead of toward the West as our plains are. Here are the vast cattle and horse ranches of the Argentine, extending down to the plains of Patagonia.

Climate. The climate of Argentina with exception of the extreme northern and southern portions may be said to be "temperate." This part is the most thickly settled. Variations in this particular area are slight. The northern tip of Argentina may be called "tropical," and exceedingly hot, while the southern tip or extremity is exceedingly cold. Rainfall is heavy in the northern part of the republic, and slightest in the central western, and southern portions. Our seasons are directly opposite those of Argentina; January, February and March being their very hottest or summer months, while with us these months mean wintry winds and sub-zero weather. During their winter months of June, July, and August, the citizens of Buenos Aires begin to prepare for tourists from the colder climes of Argentina, as this city ranks in about the same column as Florida with our northern citizens as a tourist hangout for the colder months.

A Brief Geographical Survey

Resources and Industries. Argentina's mountains contain large deposits of silver, copper, and gold; however, the mining of these precious metals has been held back for lack of proper machinery for mining and smelting. With outside capital many new oil wells have recently been drilled, and petroleum is to be found in abundance. The Government has also recently started several drilling operations which have proved excellent. Wheat, oats, corn, linseed, or flax, and alfalfa are the leading agricultural crops; alfalfa being grown in great quantities. Sheep, cattle, horses, hogs, and goats are the chief form of wealth on the ranches. Great packing houses, some from our own country, have been established on a large scale, and meat refrigeration has become the country's greatest industry; the largest refrigeration plant in the world being located at Buenos Aires, with a daily capacity of 5,000 cattle, and 10,000 sheep or goats. Argentina supplies us with over 50 per cent of the hides used in the United States. Flour mills hold second place in industry, and recent undertakings in the manufacturing of wines, sugar, and by-products have recently begun. Textiles, oils, chemicals, iron, agricultural implements, machinery of various kinds, glassware, and crockery are the principal imports to Argentina.

Government: Argentina is a Republic somewhat like our own United States, established after a revolt against Spain, May 25th, 1810, with constitution modeled after that of the United States of America and adopted in 1853. The president must be a native of Argentina, a Roman Catholic, and is normally elected by a congress of Electors, 376 in number, for a 6 year term. The present president being Juan Domingo Peron, elected in 1946. Voting is compulsory, and women may vote for presidential and congressional candidates only. There are 14 provinces with a high measure of home rule, electing their own Governors and Legislators; the 10 territories are administered by Governors appointed by the President, who also appoints the Mayors of the larger cities such as Buenos Aires, which is a Federal District similar to our own Washington, and District of Columbia. The members of these Mayoral Councils are elected by the people. The Senate has 30 members who are selected by a special body of electors for 9 years, one third retiring every three years, and a House of Deputies for a six year term. The Capitol is Buenos Aires (Good Air) with a population of 3,150,000, the second largest Latin city in the world; situated on the banks of the Rio de la Plata river which is 28 miles wide at this point, although 170 miles from Atlantic Ocean. It is a city of beautiful broad, straight streets, with 157 parks and plazas. Here is situated the great National University of Argentina, in which our beloved Dr. Charles F. Yoder was an instructor for a number of years.

Religion and Education. The Roman Catholic Religion is supported by the State, but all religious creeds are tolerated. Primary education is secular, or supervised by the Roman Catholic Church, but is free and compulsory. Illit-

Dr. Robert Morrison-

Missionary to China

by Charles Munson, Youth Director

The life of Dr. Robert Morrison covered but twenty-seven years, yet in view of all the circumstances it is almost incredible the amount of work he was able to do. He was the pioneer missionary to the Chinese nation, sent out by the London Missionary Society in 1807. Morrison was of humble parentage and occupation, a shoe-last maker. He acquired a good education, and several languages because of his continued work and perseverance. It was necessary for Dr. Morrison to come to the United States in order to get permission to go to China, having been refused passage by the East India Company, which was in control of passages being granted. His famous answer to a sneering question asked him by a New York ship owner reveals somewhat the character of the man.

"So then, Mr. Morrison, you really expect to make an impression on the idolatry of the great Chinese Empire?" asked the skeptic. Quickly and with emphasis came the reply, "No, sir, but I expect God will."

Morrison could not have accomplished all he did had he not been prepared by God, for the discouragement would have made a lot of men quit the work. The Chinese people did not welcome him, the Catholic missionaries did not welcome him, and the controlling East India Company did not give him any encouragement. For some time he lived in a room of an American warehouse in Canton, dressed as a Chinese, concealing himself while he studied the language of the country. After two years of study he was able to get a job as translator for the East India Company which once had refused him permission to enter the country. Here again it seems as if God was with him for it provided him a salary, and the security and safety of the company while he stayed in China. If it had not been for that he probably would not have been permitted to stay.

Along with his official duties Morrison applied himself to the task of thoroughly mastering the language and translating the scriptures, while also doing evangelistic work. In the year 1813 he completed the New Testament in Chinese, and the entire Bible in 1818, with help from Dr. Milne. In addition to this great work he published more than 20 different works, including a dictionary of six volumes and 4,500 pages, and a huge grammar. After seven years of labor, mixed with patience, he baptized in Macao Tsai A-ko, the first known Chinese Christian convert. Dr. Morrison visited England in 1824 and was received by the king, and given great honor by the churches. He did not wish to stay, however, but returned to China in 1826 and died there in 1834.

The work of Dr. Morrison brought in less than a dozen converts, yet in spite of the fact that he was excluded from all but a corner of the land to which he devoted his life, he laid the foundations for all future work in China. By giving the Chinese the Christian Scriptures in their own language he captured a very high position in the heart of the Chinese people. "By the Chinese Bible," he said himself, "when dead, I shall yet speak."

" SOUL WINNING ESSENTIAL IN PREPARING FOR A FRUITFUL MISSIONARY CAREER "

by Virgil Ingraham

This statement of fact is one with which every candidate for missionary service should be in perfect accord. Soul winning is a topic of considerable discussion in present-day church circles, but the number of actual soul winners is pitifully few. The term "soul winning" has been used so often it has almost lost its real meaning.

God has said: "He that winneth souls is wise" (Proverbs 11:30). Why does God emphasize the wisdom of soul winning? The answer to this question has caused men and women from all walks of life to dedicate themselves to this great work. To them the Holy Spirit has revealed the true value of a human soul. They have come to realize the terribleness of perishing without Christ and without hope, and are willing to devote their entire lives to the task of rescuing lost humanity from their dreadful plight. To them hell is a vivid reality; a place of eternal torment and punishment for all who die in their sins. They are full of gratitude to Christ for their own redemption, and seek to win others to Him, that they might share with them the peace and joy they have in Him. Is it any wonder God says, "he that winneth souls is wise?"

When we think of a missionary career, we are reminded that a missionary does not become one of his own accord. Jesus told His disciples, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you; that ye should go and bring forth fruit; and that your fruit should remain." (John 15:16) If a gospel messenger is chosen, appointed and sent forth by Christ, it is His will that fruit should be the result. And his fruit, which Jesus calls "the fruit that remaineth," is the harvest of souls of men made clean by His shed blood. It is folly to go forth without first being sent. It is greater folly to be sent and not bring forth everlasting fruit—souls introduced and made acquainted with "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world."

There is no justification for spending time, effort and money in any missionary endeavor where soul winning is not the prime objective. It is not enough to feed, clothe, house, heal and educate the needy. All are good, but if man's temporal needs alone are met, if no provisions are made for his spiritual needs, the entire mission has failed. Whatever achievements which result are of short duration, for they cannot be included with the everlasting fruit. They are the product of man's handiwork and will perish. Only those things wrought in the name of the Lord Jesus will last.

The candidate for missionary service must keep his objective ever before him as he prepares for his life work. Whether making ready for service at home or abroad, the test of good things to come will intensify his desire to witness and work during his preparation. The period of training will not be grievous, for it is recognized to be an important part of God's plan for his life.

Preparation for missionary service (or any Christian ministry, for that matter) includes much more than mere attainment of certain academic goals. If foreign service is contemplated much more is required than merely learning a new language and the customs of the people to whom one should go. The life of a missionary is one of self-denial and often of hardship, and one must be prepared to meet and overcome obstacles as they appear. This requires the ability to be utterly dependent upon the Lord. We cannot minimize the value of adequate formal education, for it enables the Christian to wield the Sword of the Lord more effectively if used properly. Having the advantage of man's knowledge collected by experience down through the centuries, and overshadowing it with the superior knowledge of God and the power of the Holy Spirit provide formidable weapons for the Christian's warfare. The Apostle Paul is a splendid example of an educated, Spirit-filled missionary using all the resources at his command to win men to Christ.

There are two other essentials in preparation for a fruitful missionary career which cannot be overlooked. The first is daily spiritual growth. There must be personal "growth in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18) if one ever expects to render effective service for Him. Daily devotions: time spent with the Word of God for our own daily soul-food, ample time spent in communion with the Lord in prayer, time for meditation thereon, result in a closer walk with Christ day by day. Too often we allow the pressure of full schedules and busy days to deprive us of these essentials, and the result is an enemic, undernourished, stunted Christian. We never overlook the importance of food, sleep, exercise, etc. for our daily physical requirements. How, then, can we expect sustenance and growth in the inner man without likewise daily taking in and appropriating for our use the necessities God has graciously provided for us?

There is a young man in our city whose life was nearly ruined because he overlooked these things during his school days. He had finished college and was attending a certain seminary in preparation for the ministry. In his early days of preparation he had been full of zeal for the Lord, and looked forward to the completion of his training that he might go out into active ministry. Yet, he became so busy that he began to neglect his prayer life and personal Bible study; with the result that he lost his zeal and finally drifted back into a life of sin. It became so bad that he had to leave school in disgrace, and he dropped all thoughts of the ministry or any kind of Christian service. Yet the Holy Spirit has continued to strive with him, and a few months ago he came back to the Lord. He has been humbled greatly, and is full of regrets for these years that have been wasted as a result of sin. He has learned the importance of prayer, Bible study and Christian service, and now gives it proper place in his life. Christ is having His way, and he is now planning to enter seminary again this fall, that he might take up where he left off when side-tracked by neglect.

A second essential in preparation for a fruitful missionary career is the daily exercise of faith and service for Christ according to increased enlightenment. Most of us know people who have spent years in preparation for a certain life's work, but who never achieve success because they are unable to put into application what they have learned. If soul winning is the objective of all missionary endeavor, then it is well for the student to master the application as he acquires the theory. This can come only by doing.

The young man or woman who engages in active Christian witnessing wherever he goes soon becomes impervious to the restraint of self and the possible ridicule of those to whom he is witnessing. He soon learns to depend upon Christ for his strength and the Holy Spirit for his power and guidance. Often when he is dealing with an unsaved person he prays for guidance in what he should say—how he should overcome objections which are raised. He soon realizes the importance of being familiar with God's Word and adept in its use, and is encouraged to spend much time studying to show himself "approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15).

And when he actually wins a person to Christ he himself is encouraged and strengthened. Those of us who have had the privilege of leading men and women to Christ know that once we have won a soul for the Lord the joy and blessing received increases our desire to win more. When we see the transformation of the lives of those who have given themselves to Christ, when we see the evidence of the Holy Spirit at work in them, we soon lose other ambitions we may have had, and desire in our heart to be a fruitful soul winner more than anything else in the world. This fruitfulness in preparation, this single-mindedness of purpose, will result in a Christ-centered, Spirit-filled ministry reaping a rich harvest of souls.

RADAR—BAT STYLE—The Prophetic News.

The bat is a unique little monster with needle-sharp teeth, silken flapping wings, mouse-like body, and beady pinpoint eyes which are of little use to him. Scientists are not agreed about those eyes, but they are agreed about his uncanny sense of direction. Some fifth sense unerringly leads him to avoid any maze of obstacles strung across his path. No cracked skulls for bats! Perhaps the bat's radar is his sense of touch, or a delicate organ something like our sense of balance. God gives the Spirit-filled Christian a similar fifth sense, his radar, one which is very necessary for his soul's survival. It is an acute awareness of the presence of sin and the ability to avoid it. He need have no crack-ups, no head-on collisions, no catastrophic falls! "This is the way: walk ye in it!" Adolescents may ask, "But what's wrong with it? I don't see any harm doing that!" Yet even the youngest Christian, if truly sincere, will soon acquire his bearing about sin. It is the presence of the Holy Spirit in him which unerringly warns of danger. The long days ahead, so strung with traps and obstacles, need hold no terrors for the Spirit-sensitized Christian. "I will guide thee with Mine eye!" I am glad my "instrument panel" is equipped with Divine guidance!

Improvements: In 1947 what is known as "The Five Year Plan" was instituted in Argentina, for economic and social development, which included domestic industries, transportation, public works, and natural resources. Other aspects are: reorganization of education and labor legislation, social insurance, immigration, and much Governmental reorganization, to cost approximately $1,665,000,000. Goals for 1951 include a 43 per cent increase over 1943 levels in value of goods processed; 50 per cent increase of installed motive power, 52 per cent expansion in wages paid, and 34 per cent increase in employment. In 1947 all foreign owned railroads and transportation systems were taken over by the Federal Government and paid for out of the National Treasury. In the same year the State laid 543 miles of new track, extending railroad facilities to the borders of Chile and connecting with the roads of that country.

The population of Argentina is predominantly European in its origin, and principally from Spain and Italy, with a sprinkling of Germans in the northern part. The paper Peso is the unit of currency, and worth about 30c of the United States money in exchange. Roughly three Pesos equal one United States Dollar.

Much more could and perhaps should be said about this wonderful country, and it is the writer's personal opinion that our missions should be confined to this great field for several reasons 1.: The language is easily mastered. 2. The people are said to be desirous for another form of Christianity than that which they are accustomed. 3. It is a new and prosperous country, filled with opportunity. 4. Greater expansion means more people to be led to the precious New Testament Gospel. 5. Last, but not least, we have a good beginning there, with native preachers eager to enter this field. Therefore let us prayerfully centralize our efforts there and invest our mission dollars where they will bring greatest results for the Brethren Church.

David Jobson in Fatal Accident

A telephone message to the Secretary last week gave the tragic announcement of the death of David Jobson in an automobile accident. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Jobson, missionaries to Africa. As a boy he lived several years in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Smoker of New Paris, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Smoker went for the body, which was brought to New Paris for funeral services July 25th. His sister, Catherine and her husband are members of the New Paris Brethren Church, so we are informed.

No doubt a detailed account will soon appear in these columns.

News From Rosario, Argentina

We thank God once again that with great joy we can report how the Lord is blessing and prospering, day by day, His work in this great vineyard in this South American country.

Not only have our churches in the different towns giving proof of greater enthusiasm and evangelization but have also gone out to new towns and districts where we know that there is no other evangelical work established.

Our Brother Pablo Espinosa is visiting the town of Maria Terresa once a month. It is not far from Colon, where he has regular meetings. One of our young students of Nazarene Bible Institute, Francisco Fiorenza, goes to Victoria, another city of the Province of Entre Rios, not far from Rosario. Miss Kugler goes to Las Violetas, a town not far from Villa Constitucion, where she has regular meetings too. And Brother Anton goes to Quilmes.

We are also diligently working in the construction of our Bible-Coach that is almost finished. We have enlarged it to give more capacity for equipment—a folding organ, Bibles, New Testaments, tracts or literatures, and some time the tent and its equipment too. We shall be able to take our young people in it and evangelize the various towns around Rosario and others.

So far we are having good success in our street-meeting which we hold almost every Saturday afternoon in same part of the city.

We can report with real joy an increase of 40% of attendance in our Sunday Schools, and 10% in our young people and adult meeting programs. We vary our street-meeting-programs with music. My daughter Esther plays piano-accordion (a little one that she has) and that attracts the people. Then we sing some hymns, our youth give a short testimony of their life, and then we wind up with two or three short messages and an invitation to attend the church. Some time we give flannel-graph with childrens lessons, and we also give messages with Bible-scenes through our Slide DeVry Projector.

The Christian Endeavor Society is also working diligently making each service very interesting and profitable. They have held consecration services, calling some eminent preachers. This time they called Rev. Avoguadra and Rev. Atilio Emanuelt from the Methodist Church. They were harmonic with music, special songs, poetry, etc., finishing with a nice message of the love of God, to the young people.

On each occasion we have had an attendance of 100 persons; many of which manifested great interest in their personal salvation, and desire to know more of the truth of the Gospel.

Due to our Executive field-counsel-meeting, we received the visit from Dr. C. F. Yoder, Jose Anton and Harrison Byler, who brought us wonderful messages of spiritual help to our church, as also a greater uniting in brotherly love.

We were also able to resolve many problems of the work in general. Most of our attention was given to the problems of Gerli and Villa Constitucion; both of these places have urgent need of their own church building.

Thanks to the kindness to the Missionary Board and the beloved Brethren of the Brethren Church in the U. S. A. that this problem has been solved.

We fervently solicit the prayers of all on behalf of these problems, which are always difficult for us alone.

We have felt greatly honored and very happy in receiving and greeting Miss Janet King, sister of Mrs. Robert Byler, on her arrival to Argentina. During their trip from Buenos Aires to Cordoba city, Brother Byler and Miss King paid a short visit to Rosario; how happy we were! Unfortunately it was rainy all day, it had rained all the week. Everything was damp. Many towns around Rosario were flooded with water, owing to the heavy rains this winter. This required us to postpone our district meeting that we should have had in Colon B. A. on the 9th of July.

Taking advantage of the National Flag-Day, almost all the members of our church of Rosario, and some of Villa Constitucion, met and rented a bus to take us to San Nicolas, a city not very far from here, near Villa. We went to cooperate with the Brethren of the church there, who received us very heartily. We enjoyed beautiful fellowship in Christ.

During all the day we had special spiritual programs, winding up with a beautiful evangelistic service for the public in general.

We returned very happy, after having spent such a fine day.

Sincerely yours,

Adolfo Zeebe, 273 Antennas, Rosario, Argentina.

Practice Also Comes In Handy

by Arthur Mercer

A British soldier one night was caught creeping stealthily back into his quarters from the near-by woods. He was taken before his commanding officer and charged with holding communications with the enemy. The man pleaded that he had gone into the woods to pray by himself. That was his only defense.

"Have you been in the habit of spending hours in private prayer?" the officer growled.

"Yes, Sir!"

"Then down on your knees and pray now," he roared. "you never needed to so much."

Expecting immediate death the soldier knelt and poured out his soul in prayer that for eloquence could have been inspired only by the power of the Holy Spirit. "You may go," said the officer simply when finished. "I believe your story. If you hadn't drilled often you couldn't have done as well at review."—Christian Action.

NEWS

From the Christian World

Huge Figures—From the Bureau of Internal Revenue we learn that the people of the United States in 1947, spent the stupendous sum of $9,640,000,000 for alcoholic beverages legally available. Let us imagine this as a huge pile of silver dollars, each weighing one ounce, 2½ inches in diameter and 1/3 inch thick. An ordinary railroad boxcar holds thirty tons or 60,000 pounds. To transport this huge sum in silver dollars, there would be needed 10,041 boxcars and 201 locomotives, each pulling fifty boxcars. There would be a solid line of cars over seventy-six miles long! At the speed of thirty miles an hour, it would take two and one-half hours to pass a given point.

If laid flat on the ground, edge to edge, these silver dollars would form a line 288,000 miles long, or more than nine times around the earth. Since the birth of Christ, 2,000 years ago, there have been 1,051,200,000 minutes. Last year in this country we spent $8 for liquors for every minute since Christ was born, and trying to counteract the effect of it, we had to spend $16 every minute for crime.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, vice-president of the University of Illinois, declares, "If we are going to prevent an increase in the number of the now three million excessive drinkers, and the 750,000 chronic alcoholics, we must extensively and intensely educate and propagandize the facts: Alcohol is a narcotic . . . drinking it is not smart . . . intoxication is a disgrace, and there is nothing funny about it."

Penicillin and Hyssop—Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean (Psa. 51:7). The history of penicillin is most interesting. From a chance spore that blew in through a hospital window and settled on a culture plate, it has developed into one of the most effective weapons in fighting disease. Some time after its discovery the British Medical Bulletin reported that penicillin mold has been identified as a specie found in decaying hyssop. How stimulating it must have been to Sir Alexandria Fleming, and his co-workers, to recall the words of the Psalmist: "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean!"—Condensed from National Geographic Magazine.

The Gospel is spreading among the Haka Chins of Burma. Before the war there were about a thousand believers. Now six thousand! When foreign funds were cut off, they decided to tithe themselves, and so become self-supporting. In this way they raised $9,000. They are all learning to read. Government schools have reopened, but so keen are the Chins for literacy that they have opened five rival ones without government aid, the villagers giving the teachers food and a small salary. For lack of New Testaments, services depend on the memory of those who can recite a little of the Scriptures. In other villages they have hand written parts of the New Testament, and they know many Old Testament stories. The pastors are holding a series of Bible schools in each area. Pastor Sang Ling cares for seventy villages. Two people came from each Christian village to attend a central Bible study class. They had only ten New Testaments among them; the others had to copy from the blackboard.

"A famine of the World," as in medieval Europe. But this can be rectified.

August 6, the anniversary of the dropping of the first atomic bomb, was celebrated as World Peace Day in a number of countries. An international committee is working to get this day officially designated as peace day throughout the world. The Japanese Diet has established Hiroshima as the "eternal peace commemorating city." Out of the ruins of this city the people are constructing a finer one that will be a challenge for and a memorial to world peace.

India will proclaim herself a sovereign independent republic on January 26, 1950, according to a tentative program adopted by the Congress Party in the Constituent Assembly. This day is remembrance day, the day on which members of the party annually renewed the independence pledge taken in 1929.

Our Times—A Christian magazine carries in the July number a forcible criticism of Mr. Westbrook Pegler's syndicated column on March 15th this year. The "Our Times" rightly disagrees with his statement that the "18th Amendment was awful." Surely the repeal was the awful thing. In defense the editor quotes director J. Edgar Hoover, who states that "there were three times as many major crimes last year as there were minutes." Mr. Hoover states that there was a serious crime for every 18.7 seconds. Further, with the passing of each day last year, an average of 36 persons were murdered, 255 were victims of assault or rape, 463 automobiles were stolen, 2,672 miscellaneous larcenies took place. Surely the Christian people of our land believe the 18th Amendment to have been a worthy addition to this great document, the Constitution.

The Soviet authorities have closed the only Roman Catholic church in Moscow, and this is another indisputable proof that there is complete freedom of worship in the Soviet Union—if you worship Stalin.

Headlines in Soviet newspaper: "Output overtakes five-year-plan targets." The targets overtaken are, as usual, the Russian people.—Plain Talk.

High School Alcoholism—Two-thirds of the alcoholics in the United States began drinking habits during their high school years. One-third of them were showing signs of alcoholism by the time they were of college age. Conclusion by director of Alcoholic Studies in Yale University, Dr. Gellinek.

"WHEELER HOME"

Here is the picture of the building which was destroyed by fire. We are replacing it and construction is now going forth. The new building will be a little larger, made of cement blocks, with a built up roof. You may share in the completion of this building with a gift. Additional funds are needed. We dare not face winter with our friends in the House of Cracks. Address the Missionary Board, Ashland, Ohio.

"THE HOUSE OF CRACKS"

"The House of Cracks" is pictured herewith. Who named it? That I do not know. However, the name is appropriate because it truly has many cracks. Well, the story is that several boys, besides Reverend and Mrs. Keck lived here the latter part of the winter, after the Wheeler Home burned.

WORTHY OF HIS HIRE

Scripture: Luke 10:1-7

For The Leader

TONIGHT we are on the eve of another "Labor Day." At this season we are made especially conscious of labor-management conditions, and of their effect on our American way of life. We have also the matter of Christian workers and their relationship with their employers. It is a big field to cover in so short a time, but one that is worthy of our consideration. Christian love and unselfishness will go a long ways toward settling strife between employers and employees. We are convinced that a proper solution can be worked out that will bring fairness to everyone.

DISCUSSION

1. THE PROPER PLACE TO SETTLE DISPUTES. We were in conversation some time ago with a man on this very problem of labor and management when he said, "If the bosses and the employees would go to church together, and worship together, they would soon solve their problems." That is a good suggestion. The only reason we have labor strifes is because of selfishness or greed on the part of one party or the other. Either the employer wants more work for less money from the employee, or the employee wants more money for less work. Surely by going to church together, each would see the viewpoint of the other in Christian love, and could work out an agreeable arrangement.

2. OUR AMERICAN SYSTEM OF FREE ENTERPRISE. In America, (and only in America) you can start a business, make something, hire employees, sell your product, and reap your profit. Outside of income taxes, if you're successful, you are left pretty much to your own self as to wages, price and profit. This system of capital corporations has made America the greatest industrial nation ever. Had it been operated by the capitalists with more than a fleeting interest for the man at the machine, we would not have had all the labor grief we've had. A man working from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M. to earn the necessities of life, all the while padding the millions for the "big-bests" is not a happy man. A man who makes automobiles, radios and refrigerators, and is paid such low wages that he cannot afford to buy them for his own home, is also a very unhappy man. So, in that respect, capitalism failed. But the system, properly worked, is the only system for a free people.

3. THE RIGHTS OF LABOR. Every man is entitled to a fair remuneration for his labors. Unions when first started were designed to effect better working conditions, better wages, and to correct conditions in our capitalistic system without damage to the system itself. And conditions did improve. But today, it is being over-done. What the average working man cannot seem to see is that a good thing can be overdone. And we believe that the average working man is not responsible for the extreme situations now present in our unions. If we dare launch out on a limb, we shall say that a lot of our union demands today are communistic inspired and designed to destroy our system of free enterprise. Excessive union demands of free time, shorter hours, higher wages will do just one thing and that is, destroy the firm, or company that pays the wages. Then what will you have? We need to beware of the dangers involved.

4. TOO MUCH FREE TIME. Higher wages and shorter hours can be a blessing. They can also be a curse. For with plenty of money and plenty of time, the Devil starts to work in people. Idleness is a curse. Rest is sweet when it follows labor. Rest upon rest works on the mind. And people today have too much time with nothing to occupy their hours of leisure. They don't go to church. The bingo gambling joints, our entertainment concerns, etc., receive their time and money, to the loss of the finer things of life. Our idle people, in taverns, etc., is a far greater menace to our national welfare than the most powerful atomic bombs.

5. CHRISTIAN WORKERS WORTHY OF THEIR HIRE. We must touch upon this subject, too. It relates specifically to that one in your church who is called of God to minister to your spiritual needs. He is worthy of his hire. Maybe he doesn't put on his old "duds" and go out and plow, or go into the shop and build machines. But he is working just the same. If he is doing his business, he is preparing spirit-filled sermons for your souls. That is your greatest need, and he is the one ordained of God to prepare those messages for you. Remember, for every cent of his daily bread, he is dependent on what you place on the offering plate. He cannot work if he is pressed for money. Analyze your minister's salary in the light of present day costs of living. Could you and your family live on what he gets, remembering that he has expenses as a minister that you don't have. Perhaps he isn't bound to a time clock, so many days each week. But remember, he is a reputation builder in your community, he must be on the job at hours when perhaps your family is completely free of the worries of the job. He carries the burdens of his job twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week. His is a work that you cannot always measure in dollars and cents. The fruits of his labors are not machines, products, or other material things. But he produces spiritual fruits in your life and in the lives of others. So, ask him if he's satisfied with his salary, each of you give a little more and surprise him with a little raise in salary; or better still, surprise him with an extra gift every once in a while. Perhaps, coming from a preacher, your first reaction to this paragraph will not be so good. But remember, too, that one of the main reasons for a shortage of ministers today is the tendency to low salaries paid. Some of us are in churches where they are doing all right by their ministers, but others of our churches need to wake up and give offerings of dollars instead of cents. That is, more sense in their heads, and less "cents" on the offering plate.

The victorious testimony is a glorious testimony. It is sometimes "unspeakable and full of glory."

STIR ME, LORD

Stir me, Oh stir me, Lord, I care not how;
But stir my heart in passion for the world.
Stir me to give, to go, but most to pray.
Stir till the blood-red banner be unfurled
O'er desert where no cross is lifted high.

Stir me, Oh stir me, Lord, Thy heart was stirred
By love's intensest fire, till Thou didst give Thine only Son, Thy best beloved One,
Even to the dreadful Cross, that I might live;
Stir me to give myself so back to Thee
That Thou canst give Thyself again through me.

A THIRST FOR GOD'S POWER

Scripture: Luke 11:5-13

Hymns on the Holy Spirit

Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

GOD HAS PROMISED water for the thirsty in the midst of spiritual deadness and barrenness, and the blessing of salvation upon their children (Isa. 44:3; Acts 2:7). The Holy Spirit is the Christian's power, refreshing life and joy (John 7:37, 38). This means that from the heart-life of the Christian will flow rivers of water for a thirsty world (John 7:39). The saddest dilemma of Christendom is not denominationalism, ignorance of the Scriptures, worldliness in the churches, infidelity in the pulpit—bad as they are—but the fact that orthodox born-again believers have no miraculous power in their lives to win the lost. Are we willing to pay God's price—a life of daily crucifixion (1 Cor. 15:31)? It means the denying of the desires of the flesh and one's own will (Gal. 5:17).

Christ had the fullness of the Spirit "without measure" because He was fully surrendered to God (John 6:38). To have God's fullness we must first empty ourselves (Luke 9:22-24). To be wholly sold out to Christ we must forsake the good as well as the bad things of life (Luke 14:26, 27). It may often mean a lonely life (Luke 9:57-62). Persecution often follows the fullness of the Spirit (Gal. 4:9). Our Lord's persecution began after His baptism. Persecution came upon the apostles after Pentecost (Acts 4:1-3; 7:54-60; 12:1-3, etc.). The world does not mind a man's being saved, but will persecute him for seeking the lost. For soul winning Paul and Silas were jailed (Acts 16:20, 21). Of all things done in the name of Christ Satan hates soul winning the most. Christ and Paul for being Spirit-filled were spoken against with contempt (Matt. 12:24; Acts 26:24). Are we willing to pay the price of persecution?

Again, are we willing to seek God's face (2 Chron. 7:14), and to wait long enough for enduement of power (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:4)? Christ did not say "wait ten days," nor "wait until Pentecost," but "tarry UNTIL ye be endued." We are to wait in earnest until our prayer is answered (Luke 11:8).

PSALMS OF JUSTICE

Lesson: Psalms 49:1-7; 82

A MAN being haled into court for an offence he had committed, was trembling intensely as he was led before the judge. The judge, seeing his condition and fear, which was expressed by his face, said in a kindly manner, "Now don't be afraid; you will receive justice in this court." To which the man replied, "That's just what I'm afraid of."

A farmer who tried to express his contempt for the Lord by disobeying every law of God, wrote as follows to a weekly newspaper: "You have intimated that retribution was sure to fall upon the one who ignores entirely your God's command to keep His day holy. Now let me tell you something. I ploughed one of my fields on Sunday; I planted it on Sunday; I tended it on Sunday; I reaped it on Sunday, and I have the greatest yield of grain from that field I ever had. Now what have you to say?" The editor printed his letter. Then in bold face type he added this significant comment: "The Lord don't pay all of His debts on Sunday—just wait for the Judgment Day."

The above two stories quite aptly illustrate the thought of our lesson today—Justice and Judgment. When sin is committed, judgment and punishment is sure to follow. Paul gets at the root of the matter in II Cor. 5:10, "... all must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each one may receive good or evil, according to what he has done in the body" (R. S. V.). We note that whatever the judgment may be, it is always just and equitable. The phrase, "according to what he has done," assures us that there surely must be degrees of punishment, as well as degrees of reward. In our laws about the same penalty is meted out to the man who steals a loaf of bread to feed a starving child, as is imposed on the man who embezzles $100,000.00—which, in God's economy is not justice at all.

The Psalms, which we call Psalms of Justice in our lesson today, show us that the writers had a pretty firm grasp on how God's judgment acted. They contrast the activities of men in their relation to false judgment, with the true judgment of an All-Wise God. Far too often our judgment is based on faulty testimony—testimony given not from pure facts, but rather from a personal bias; it is testimony of desire, not of reality. God's judgments are rendered on absolute knowledge; ours, too often, on hearsay.

How long will it be before we recognize in our lives the truth of Psalm 89:14—our golden text—"Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face."

Your Money - At Work For God

Christians, you will be happier, if some of your money is working directly for God.

Some Suggested Plans--

A. The Life Annuity Plan—The rate varies with the age of the annuitant. Four per cent on any amount, paid semi-annually where annuitant is 50 to 65 years; 4½% between 65 and 75 years; and 5% 75 years or older (Adopted by Board in 1947 meeting.)

No danger of loss as is possible in a contested or broken will. No waste, no delay in settlement. Your income is sure. No fluctuation in value. No court costs or legal fees.

B. This plan includes gifts of property. Give your property or farm and retain a life estate, so you may have the benefits during your lifetime, then it becomes an unrestricted gift for God's service.

C. You may turn Government Bonds and War Savings into immediate use through the channels of the Missionary Board.

D. Have a will with your Missionary Board named the beneficiary.

E. Take out a life insurance policy and name the Missionary Board as beneficiary.

Thus you extend your Christian Service far beyond your lifetime.

FIGURES DO TELL

Here is an interesting study. It has been selected from the statistical report of the Pennsylvania District Conference, compiled and edited by Miss Wilma Leidy of Conemaugh. A study of similar figures with other district conferences would be helpful, if each statistician would every year carry such reports. Note—Watch for the National statistician's report by Rev. William Crick when we meet at General Conference.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Dayton, Ohio. We note from Brother Whetstone's bulletin of August 7th that Family Night was to be observed in the Dayton Church on Wednesday evening, August 17th.

The Dayton Youth Rally was held on Sunday afternoon, July 31st, at Englewood Dam. Recreation, supper and vespers were enjoyed.

Milledgeville, Illinois. The Milledgeville Christian Endeavorers enjoyed a picnic supper on the church lawn on Sunday evening, August 7th. Brother W. S. Benshoff, former Milledgeville pastor, and his family were guests of the society.

A new departure for W. M. S. Meetings was tried out by the Milledgeville Junior society when it held its meeting in the nature of a picnic at Sinnissippi Park on Sunday afternoon, August 14th. The Chapel offering was received at this time.

The Milledgeville Homecoming date has been set as of October 23rd.

Oakville, Indiana. We received a card from Brother Henry Bates under the date of August 8th. We quote: "Due to the polio epidemic all public gatherings have been banned in Delaware County, in which Muncie and Oakville are situated. Have not had services or meetings for two weeks and do not know how much longer. We have been visiting other churches—Center Chapel last week; Goshen yesterday. One redeeming feature is that saloons and taverns are also closed. We covet your prayers."

We note from Brother Bates' monthly Oakville parish paper, "The Guidepost," that he and his good wife recently presented the church with a hymn number board, which was given in conjunction with the improvement and beautification project of the church.

Gratis, Ohio. We would judge that by the time you read these items that the carpet will have been laid in the sanctuary of the Gratis Church, for we quote from Brother W. S. Crick's bulletin of August 7th, as follows: "Thanks to the patience, perseverance, resourcefulness and industry of members of the carpet committee and the cooperation and generosity of many, the funds to underwrite the purchase of the new carpet for the Sanctuary are sufficiently certain to permit the installation to be made." The carpet was to be laid within the next week.

We note also that two lawn socials, sponsored by groups of the W. M. S., netted the society the sum of over $200.00. Ideal weather and good patronage did it.

Brother Crick reports that he recently enjoyed a trip to his former pastorate at Pittsburgh, Penna., where he supplied the pulpit at the morning worship hour.

Cameron, West Virginia. Brother Arthur Baer has this to say in his bulletin of July 31st: "A trip to the furniture factory gave us the information that the pews for both churches should be expected sometime between October 1st and November 1st. The tile flooring has been laid in the Cameron Church and it adds much to its beauty. We feel that all will be ready for the pews when they arrive. Many are wondering why the Chimes have been so silent. Part of the equipment used was borrowed. We thought that our own would arrive before the borrowed equipment would be needed elsewhere, but it did not. We are sorry, yet the silence has given us some knowledge of how they were appreciated. Their value cannot be denied."

It is like the old saying, "We never miss the water till the well runs dry." Well, the sound will be all the sweeter when the equipment arrives.

Masontown, Penna. We note from Brother Freeman Ankrum's closing Masontown bulletin that the Laymen's Organization Picnic was held on Saturday afternoon, August 6th, at Sheets Hill.

Brother Ankrum tells us that four were baptized on Tuesday night, July 26th, and received into membership of the church.

Since this bulletin was Brother Ankrum's last one from Masontown, it will now be up to someone in the Mason-

NO EVANGELIST NEXT WEEK

Since there are only fifty issues of THE EVANGELIST each year, and since our mailing permit is very definite as to which issues are to be omitted from publication (the last week in August and the last week in December) there will be no issue under the date of August 27th. We will try to get as much information concerning the General Conference as possible in the issue of September 3rd. More will appear in the issue of September 10th.

UNCONSCIOUS GIVING

I HEARD SEVERAL MEN talking recently, and their conversation ran something like this:

Said one, "I sure was floored when that paper passed me and I saw $100.00 marked opposite John's name."

"Yes," said another, "I saw that too, and I'm ready to say that since he wrote it down, he will pay it. He's tight in his giving, but if he makes a pledge he'll dough up!"

Then a third man chimed in with these words "Well, knowing him like I do, I'll bet he was unconscious when he did it."

This three-way conversation

Set me to thinking!

Is not that the way too many people give today—unconscious of the effect their giving is going to have on both the project and the people who learn of the gift?

There is a story that illustrates the "effect" part of the above kind of thinking. It goes like this:

A certain church had as a guest preacher, a young man just out of the seminary. He was seeking for experience. When it came time for the morning offering he was still being very observant, for he wanted to gain every available idea possible for his own use as he went into his own pastorate. One of the stewards who took up the offering was the old vestryman who had served thus for many years. The young man was shocked to observe the old man quickly and deftly abstract some money from the plate as he reached the back of the church, before he returned the plate to the altar. It bothered the young man so much that he nearly failed in his sermon.

But finally the service was ended and he retired to the church study, after telling the old vestryman he wanted to see him. When the old man arrived, he asked him to be seated and began the conversation thus:

"Brother Blank, I'm very sorry I saw you do what you did this morning. Don't deny it, for I was looking directly at you."

The old man looked puzzled and said, "Saw me? Doing what?"

The young minister tried to look very severe and answered, "Why you know what you did. You took some money out of the offering plate before you brought it up front."

A light of understanding lit up the old man's face, and he laughed lightly. "Oh," he said, "you mean you saw me taking that old half-dollar out of the plate. Why, man, I've led off with that identical half-dollar for the last twenty years. It's what gets others to give."

Here was a man who thought that the influence of his half-dollar was worth more than it really was. To all intents and purposes he had given $520.00 through those twenty years, when, in fact he had given exactly nothing.

He felt that others seeing him give, would match his gift with at least a like amount, and thus increase the offering. But in the very act he was cheating both himself and the Lord. His was a sort of unconscious giving.

After all, why do we give? Is it for personal praise for the gift given? Is it because others give and we give to keep up with them? Is it because we want our names to appear as the largest givers to certain interests? Or is it because, as Christians, we want to do our part to advance the cause of Christ? And is it because we love the Lord and are conscious of our obligation to Him for all that we have?

The Word says, "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over . . ." (Luke 6:38). "Bring ye all the tithes . . . prove me . . . I . . . will open you the windows of heaven, and pour out upon you a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. 3:10). But that kind of giving is not "the unconscious kind."

Are we conscious of our relationship to our Lord in our material substance, as keenly as we are in our spiritual attitudes? If we are truly Christian we must be, for one cannot definitely separate the spiritual from the material in relation to our obligation to the Master. Don't be an unconscious giver.

Think it over!

A New Book

We have just received a fine little book entitled "Every Day Religion," by Don Delano Tullis, published by the Rodeheaver, Hall-Mack Company. Mr. Rodeheaver says, in his preface to the book, "The world needs a revival. Revivals have been generated through sermons, and sometimes through gospel songs. The greatest revivals have come through the perfect combination of song and sermon. Don D. Tullis has selected some of his best syndicated sermons about every day religion. I have selected songs to fit the sermons."

That is exactly what this little book is—a sermon on one page, and opposite the sermon on the next page is Mr. Rodeheaver's selection of a hymn to fit the thought. For example: on page 4 is the short sermon on "My Religion"; on page 5, the hymn, "My Hope is Built." On page 6, the sermon on "My Song"; on page 7, "Jesus Set the World to Singing."

In all there are thirty-one sermons and thirty-one corresponding hymns. This little book is a worth while addition to any one's library. The price is $1.00 postpaid, and it can be ordered from The Brethren Publishing Company.

The Gospel of God

Rev. Percy C. Miller

(Delivered at Pa. District Conference)

IN ROMANS 1:1 we find Paul separated unto the gospel of God. Truly the theme of the Book of Romans must be "the Gospel of God." We find the Book of Romans to be divided into seven parts: 1. The whole world guilty before God; 2. Justification through the righteousness of God by faith, the Gospel remedy for guilt; 3. Crucifixion with Christ, the resurrection life of Christ, and the walk in the Spirit, the Gospel provision for inherent sin; 4. The full result in blessing of the Gospel; 5. The Gospel does not abolish the covenant promises to Israel; 6. Christian Life and Service; 7. The outflow of Christian love.

It will be impossible for me in this lecture to touch on all seven divisions. In the Book of Romans, as well as in other writings of Paul, we find a peculiarity of Paul. A benediction is found at the beginning of the Book, Romans 1:7. This, to me, is a wonderful thing; wishing the peace of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ upon the people. It would be well for each one of us to wish the peace of God upon all of God's people day by day. This is a prayer also that the hearts of the people might be in tune to what he had to say to them. Would not this be well as we enter into a worship service?

Paul was so glad that their faith was spoken of throughout the whole world, Romans 1:8. Is your faith spoken of throughout your respective church, and your community? Paul was one that loved to be found among God's people. He stated that he longed to come to Rome but was let hitherto. Romans 1:13. It is the desire of all pastors to look back upon their past pastorates, especially if they have been pleasant ones, and recall to mind the faithful of the congregation; many will be the pleasant memories.

Paul was one that preached right from the shoulder. He believed in speaking the truth; not pulling his punches, to speak the language of the street. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." He was not ashamed to speak the truth. He truly believed that the wrath of God would be upon him if he shirked his duty, "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." Are we as ministers today willing to speak the truth with all diligence; fearing not the toes that may be tramped upon?

Now let us look back to 1:16. Paul gives to us many meanings of salvation; deliverance, safety, preservation, healing, soundness. Salvation is the great inclusive word of the Gospel, gathering into itself all the redemptive acts and processes: as justification, redemption, grace propitiation, imputation, forgiveness, sanctification, and glorification. Salvation is in three tenses: 1. The believer has been saved from the guilt and penalty of sin (Luke 7:50). 2. The believer is being saved from the habit and dominion of sin (Romans 8:2). Upon the unbeliever, sin gets such a hold that it is soon a habit. It requires the power of God for man to say "no" to the temptations of the world. 3. The believer is to be saved in the sense of entire conformity to Christ (Rom. 13:11). It is impossible for the saved man to live the perfect life in the world. We are expected to do our very best with the help of God. We are here endeavoring to do the will of God, thereby glorifying His Name. We will not have glorified His Name completely until we have gone home to be with Him. Then we will be able to live in entire conformity to Christ.

Salvation is by grace through faith, is a free gift, and wholly without works. According to 3:23 all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and rightly we deserve to die. The word "all" is all inclusive. Not one of us is exempt. Therefore, being saved is by the grace of God for we rightly deserve to die the death. Several meanings of the word "sin" disclose the true nature of sin in its manifold manifestations:

Transgression—overstepping of the law;

Iniquity—an act inherently wrong (permanently wrong);

Error—departure from the right;

Missing the mark—failure to meet divine standards;

Trespass—intrusion of self-will into the sphere of divine authority;

Lawlessness—spiritual anarchy;

Unbelief—an insult to divine veracity (John 16:9).

Sin originated with Satan and entered the world through Adam. Sin is also universal (Christ alone excepted); incurs the penalties of spiritual and physical death, and has no remedy but in the sacrificial death of Christ availed of by faith. Sin may be summarized as three-fold: An act, the violation of, or want of obedience to the revealed will of God; a state, absence of righteousness; a nature, enmity toward God.

At this point I believe it would be well for us to note some word meanings as found in 3:24-31:

Redemption—to deliver by paying a price;

Propitiation—to appease and dispose to kindness;

Atonement—reparation for wrong or evil;

Righteousness (3:26)—"His righteousness" here is God's consistency with his own law and holiness in freely justifying a sinner who believes in Christ;

Justification—Nothing laid to the believer's charge. Sinner establishes the law by confessing his guilt and acknowledging that he is justly condemned (3:31).

Paul says that salvation is by grace through faith, wholly without works. "For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God." James sees works as justifying. "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?" Now is this a contradiction of the scriptures? Let me say, "no." There is uniformity throughout the entire Bible. We do find here two aspects of one truth. Paul speaks of what God sees—faith (Gen. 15:6); “And he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness.” James speaks of what men see—works (James 2:24); “Ye see then how that by works a man is justified and not by faith only.” James uses “ye see,” for men cannot see faith except as manifested through works. James would say that when we are saved that we will want to work. Therefore, the works will be seen. Let us examine ourselves in the light of the last sentence. Are we shirking our obligation?

Paul continues by saying, “Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” Being saved brings us peace of heart and mind. This is the only way to find this peace which passes all understanding. Only the Christian knows what it is to live. The results of justification are plainly given; tribulation worketh patience, patience worketh experience, experience worketh hope, hope maketh not ashamed, and we are reconciled to God by the death of His Son. “But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.”

Death is universal, all die: sinless infants, moral people, religious people, equally with the depraved. For a universal effect there must be a universal cause; that cause is a state of universal sin (5:12b). The consequences of Adam's sin was that “the many were made sinners” (5:19a).

We thank God for the means of escape from the penalty that we justly deserve. Paul says that our old man is crucified with him. By “old man” we mean the man of old, corrupt human nature, inborn tendency to evil—natural man. Upon the acceptance of Christ Jesus as our Lord and Saviour we become a “renewed man.” Wherein “natural” is Paul's word for unrenewed man so the word “Spiritual” is Paul's word for the renewed man.

Paul knew himself to be “dead to the law by the body of Christ,” and in the power of the indwelling Spirit, “free from the law of sin and death.” Can we say the same? As this lecture must come to a close, I urge you to give heed to the remainder of the Book of Romans. With God's help a more fruitful life will be ours, because of our searching for the truth.

—Berlin, Penna.

A Practical Church Problem

Rev. Henry Bates

A READER OF THE “Evangelist” recently told me that it seemed to her that one of the greatest problems confronting many of our churches is that of finding and keeping a preacher. In view of the fact that this does constitute a real problem to a number of our churches, the writer, in this his last column as contributing editor in the field of Church Methods, would like to offer a few practical suggestions along this line.

1. Remember, the pastor is human too

Don't serve “roast preacher” for dinner every Sunday after having spent the morning at church. There may be certain little things that you do not like about your pastor but it certainly does not help you, the pastor, or the church to continually berate and belittle the minister before the younger members of the family. Of course he makes mistakes—so do you. Perhaps he does not come up to your qualifications for the ideal pastor. But just remember—perhaps you do not come up to his qualifications for the ideal parishioner—but you would not appreciate his going about broadcasting that fact.

2. Don't make unfair claims on his time and efforts

Many folks labor under the impression that all their preacher does is to get up on Sunday morning and, perhaps, on Sunday evening, deliver a sermon of twenty to thirty minutes duration, and then rest the other six days of the week. Such is certainly far from the truth. His mornings are usually spent in the study—preparing sermons, reading and studying books and periodicals in an effort to better prepare himself to be of service to you; printing weekly bulletins; getting out a quarterly pastoral letter; writing articles for magazines and papers, and any number of other essential tasks. Then he is expected to spend four or five afternoons visiting the sick, the hospitalized, the shut-in, the aged, and those who “just like to have the preacher stop in to see them.” No pastor objects to this phase of his work—in fact it is one of the most enjoyable—but it does take time.

In the average church then, there are class meetings, auxiliary meetings, prayer meetings, cabinet and board meetings all of which the pastor is expected to attend thus taking anywhere from one to four evenings out of each week. In his “spare time” then he must study his Sunday School lesson, take care of personal and church correspondence, attend various community functions, possibly help with the Boy Scout work or some other affiliated group, and—if he's lucky—spend an hour or two with his family. Yet in spite of this, some churches insist upon putting the pastor on every committee that is appointed; they ask him to take care of the furnace and lawn at the church; they expect him to serve as chauffeur whenever anything is going on, and if he refuses he is accused of being lazy or un-cooperative. There are any number of good people in the congregation who can do most of these tasks—why place them on the pastor?

3. Appreciate him while you have him

As is all too frequently the case in life, we don't appreciate preachers until they are gone. If your pastor is a hard worker, if he builds and develops your church, show your appreciation. We could name any number of pastors who had to leave churches which they were serving because they could no longer get along on the salary being paid. Perhaps there had been an addition to the family; perhaps the cost of living had increased considerably: or perhaps sickness had brought added expense—but the churches did not see fit to raise the preacher's salary.

I know that I can say without fear of contradiction that none of our pastors are in the ministry to get rich—if they are they will be disappointed. But, Brethren, it costs the pastor just as much to live as it does anybody else. He is expected to keep out of debt, he is expected to dress well, and he, of all people, is expected to tithe—yet many folks are ready to pull their purse strings when the pastor hints that he must have an increase in salary. And so it is that pastors who are doing a good piece of work in certain fields are compelled to move—much against their wills at times. Then the church begins looking for another preacher. Several months go by, perhaps even a year before another man is hired. And lo, and behold, the church has to pay him possibly twenty dollars a week more than they paid their former pastor who would have stayed had the church increased his salary ten dollars. How much better it would have been to have increased the pastor's income and to have avoided the many months of struggling along without a pastor.

4. About the Pastor's Tithe

At the recent Indiana District Conference the pastors gathered each morning to hear various speakers and to discuss mutual problems. At one of these sessions the matter of pastors tithing came up. The question was asked, "Should the pastor tithe his gross income, or should he first of all deduct transportation costs, etc?" Perhaps you have never considered that. Everybody likes to have the preacher visit them occasionally—and of course the sick and hospitalized should be visited frequently—but have you ever stopped to realize how much expense this is to the average pastor? It may not seem far from the parsonage to the Jones' or Browns' or to the city hospital but the miles soon begin to count up. In making an average of sixty-five calls a month, for instance, in this typical rural parish, this writer puts between five hundred and fifty and six hundred and fifty miles on his car. And this is the case with many other pastors. Any person who drives a car knows that such mileage soon begins to cost considerable money in gas, oil and upkeep. A few of our churches allow their pastors ten, twenty, or thirty dollars a month to help with this expense—it would be a fine thing if more churches could or would do likewise. Such action on the part of a congregation lets the pastor know that they appreciate the work that he is doing.

5. Support him in the church's program

Attend all of the regular services of the church, including the mid-week service. Put the church and her program first—then if there is time enter into the various clubs and organizations of the community. Nothing is more discouraging to a minister than to see his people missing prayer meeting, business meetings, auxiliary meetings in order to attend the local bridge club, flower club, P. T. A. picnic, or class proms and socials.

Just remember, if you have preacher problem in your church it might well be that you have brought the problem upon yourselves. Just look back over the past five or ten years and see how much encouragement and help you have given your pastor—and then resolve to do better by him during the next five or ten years.

A Trip To Africa

John Heckman

(Some few weeks ago Brother John Heckman of Polo, Illinois, sent in his re-subscription to the Evangelist, and with it a letter to the editor telling him that he had made a trip to Africa to visit his son and family and had just returned. We asked him to give us a little report of his trip. He has done so and what he has written follows.—Editor)

* * * * *

A few lines about my trip to Africa to visit my son and his wife, who have been missionaries there for twenty-five years, may be of interest.

I went to Nigeria by plane in October 1947, spent eighteen months there, and returned this year by slow freight boat from Lagos, the coast town, to New York. I was on the boat fifty-four days, arriving here just in time to be at the last session of the Ocean Grove Conference.

The boat was thirty rods long, four rods wide and three rods high—twenty-seven feet in the water. It carried 10,250 tons which was loaded at several stopping points along the western coast of Africa. The freight consisted in the main of dry hides, cocoa beans (chocolate), kaolene, raw rubber and manganese ore. There were twelve passengers, seven of whom were returning missionaries on furlough. Arriving home I am glad to pick up again the subscription to your valuable paper, the Evangelist.

Because of restricted house room, I built me a small round house, native fashion, of sun dried brick, laid up in mud mortar, with grass roof. I boarded with the family. At Garkida are the church, the primary and training school, the hospital and the large leper colony, with its 2,000 acres of land, its native villages, its large church, hospitals, clinics, and a few native industries, and more than 1,200 lepers in treatment. Miss Veda Liskey is located here at Garkida. She was supposed to give the first year to language study, but so many patients were coming to the hospital for treatment and surgery, she was called into service before she was there very many weeks.

While I was there the electric plant was installed by Herbert Michael. This equipment was bought with funds given by the Brethren and friends about Goshen, Indiana. Christmas week we had the lights turned on and the folks began laying aside their kerosene lamps and lanterns.

The missionaries to the Bura tribe of Africans are doing a fine piece of work. Those people are so much in need. They are ever filled with fear of the evil spirits which they believe are about them. These evil spirits operate through the witch doctor. They believe these spirits have a commanding and overpowering influence over their lives. It is the Christ and His Holy Spirit alone that can bring freedom to these people from these evil spirits and supplant the fear with hope, confidence and trust that Christ gives to all.

The following incident, which actually took place, will illustrate their attitude toward these evil spirits:

A man, his wife and little boy were going along the road. The boy complained of his head hurting. As they went on it became worse. He could go no farther. He was carried to the hospital at Garkida, where he died the next night. They took the body home for burial the next day. When they were ready for the funeral they lay the body at the place where two roads crossed. A man stood over the body with an egg in his hand, raised above his head, and said, "Did the father cause the death of this boy?" dropping the egg on the corpse. The egg did not break. He again took the egg in his raised hand and said, "Did the mother cause the death of this boy?" again dropping the egg—and it broke. The almost breathless crowd about cried out, "The mother has caused the death by witchcraft."

The people believed it; the father believed it; the mother believed it. She was frightened and filled with fear. She could not eat, she could not sleep. In a week she died, literally scared to death.

To mingle with these people and learn to know them fills one with sympathy and compassion for their helpless condition and great need.

A Plea For Help

We are still short of some help for the coming school year. We need a high school teacher or two yet, and a lower grade teacher, and especially a woman who can look after and manage the food department, and a matron for the boys' dormitory. This place does not require any special education, but does require ability to discipline. We have girls that do the most, or practically all of the work, but they must be managed. Is there not some woman in the Brethren Church who will answer this call, as also someone to answer the call for the teaching places?

But some say, "You don't pay enough salary." Well, my dear brother and sister, you will not be able to take your money to heaven with you, and our God has promised to supply all your needs in Christ Jesus. Phil 4:19. It is hoped that the salary this year may be better than in former years. But salary or no salary here is an opportunity to serve the Lord.

The Wheeler Home is being rebuilt now, and it will be a good building, and a matron is needed for that place also. But what do buildings amount to if folks will not respond to the call for service? But someone says, "You are too tight in your moral standards." Well, the moral standards of Riverside are not tighter than the Gospel is tight. Do you believe the Gospel and desire to live by it and obey it? Then here is an opportunity for real Christian service. WHO WILL RESPOND?

MISSIONARY ARRIVES

Miss June Byler has arrived safely and well in Buenos Aires. After a few days she will go directly to Cordoba. Her brother, Robert C. Byler, met her at the port. We are happy to make this announcement to the church.

WITH THE LAYMEN

NORTHEASTERN OHIO LAYMEN MEET

A NEW DEPARTURE in District Laymen's meetings were tried out on Sunday, July 24th, when the Northeastern Ohio District Laymen met in the Ashland Church for an afternoon meeting and supper. While the attendance was not nearly as large as that which comes with the quarterly fall, winter and spring meetings, yet practically every church in the Northeastern District was represented. In all there were forty-two present, and much favorable comment was made.

The meeting convened at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, under the direction of Elton Whitted, N. E. O. L. President. After a short devotional period, the group was divided into two sections for discussion sessions. Each section had two subjects for discussion, the first period lasting from 4:15 to 5:00, and the other from 5:00 till nearly 5:45, when all were called together again for the closing period.

The four subjects under discussion were: "How to Build Membership," led by Oscar Robarge, of Bryan, Ohio, who was guest of the meeting; "Working With Boys," led by Prof. Donald Bame, of Ashland College; "Planning Your Programs," led by James Ross of Louisville; and "The Brethren Layman Magazine," led by Elton Whitted, Editor of "The Brethren Layman."

The evening meal was served by the Junior Missionary Society of the Ashland Church. Following the supper, the Akron Layman Trio entertained with two songs.

The entire group was invited to attend the Union Services, at the Ashland City Park, with which services the Ashland Brethren Church is cooperating. Quite a number availed themselves of this opportunity. These services are held in the newly dedicated Band Shell, which has a seating capacity of about 2500.

The next meeting will be held some time in the fall, probably in October.

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

W. G. Wolfe

(The author of this little poem is the uncle of the Editor)

No one has ever figured up
The value of a smile!
We know how much a dollar's worth,
And how much is a mile;
We know the distance to the sun,
And the size and weight of the earth—
But there's no one here can tell us just What a smile is worth.

Information About the International Temperance Union

(THE FOLLOWING information concerning the International Temperance Union was sent to the Editor by Dr. W. Earl Hotalen, until recently identified with the National Temperance Movement, Inc., and now State Director of the Louisiana Moral and Civic Foundation, an organization of the Protestant Christian Drys in Louisiana. We had the privilege of hearing Dr. Hotalen in our Warsaw Church on May 8th, and we were so impressed with his message that we asked him to send us an article for our readers. He sent us an extended account of his recent trip through Europe, which is too long to use in our paper, but we are presenting one page of the account for it deals with the observations he made concerning the Temperance issue as he found it on his trip. We pass it on to you as informative regarding this problem.)

AS ONE OF A PARTY that attended the International Congress on Alcoholism which was held last summer at Lausanne, Switzerland, it was my privilege to hear many delegates from many countries, and to meet with various committees. At an afternoon meeting of a special committee on International Collaboration, in which I participated as representing North America, a spokesman for India—Shoran S. Singha—declared that in all probability the entire country of India will enjoy the absolute prohibition of all manufacture, distribution, sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages within the next five years! He testified that while Mohammedans and Hindus quarrel over racial, political and religious matters, they are united in their uncompromising opposition to alcohol; their great leaders are all abstainers and prohibitionists.

At this same committee meeting, Prof. Dr. Fahreddin Kerim Gokey, of Istanbul, stated that in the Near and Far East, all the great religious communions—Mohammedan, Hindu, Buddhist, Confucianist and Shinto alike—are now experiencing a tremendous revival of anti-alcohol sentiment, and that the highest officials of these faiths are leading in the movement to require every adherent of these religions to abstain from the use of beverage alcohol.

If and when India's people achieve continent-wide prohibition, and total abstinence becomes the practice of the millions who adhere to the religious faiths named above, I shall whole-heartedly rejoice with them in their realization of a freedom so glorious and praiseworthy. But I shall hang my head in shame if Christian America lags behind those nations and religionists on the other side of the world.

The propaganda which we have so often heard, that "Over in Europe the people have to drink wine because the water is unfit for drinking," is absolutely false. There is an abundance of good drinking water everywhere in Europe. Sometimes we had to argue with waiters, who insisted on serving us wine, but we always got water—good water and lots of it.

Unfermented grape juice and non-alcoholic fruit juices, as well as marmalades, jellies and fruit preserves, are new to commercial production in Europe. They are found in abundance in every grocery store in the United States, and are made in millions of homes. But in Europe the commercial processing of these good things is comparatively new. Our temperance workers in Europe are teaching housewives how to make them. It would indeed provide an acute economic problem if a suddenly imposed prohibition law in Europe were to stop the use of grapes for wine-making. But I found many government officials and multitudes of the more educated citizens of Europe's countries, who are anxiously concerned about the terrible alcoholism which—for centuries—has been eating away the physical, mental and moral strength of the people. These leaders say that if more and more of Europe's enormous grape harvests can be diverted to the manufacture of non-alcoholic products, their governments will readily and gladly allocate grape tonnages to such diversions.

One of the most important projects of the International Temperance Union is to effect an integration of the world's rapidly worsening alcohol problems with the agenda of the World Health Organization—a subsidiary of the United Nations. Our American group was able, both at the WHO Headquarters in Geneva and in conferences at Lucerne, to give some valuable encouragements to this promising project.

Factual reporting at the congress revealed that nation after nation in Europe is financially going "into the red ink" because of costs and waste, due to the failure of all controls applied to the liquor and beer trades. Expenditures for dealing with the social end-results of alcohol consumption are greatly in excess of the total revenues derived from the legalized liquor traffic. Even in Sweden, where the boasted Bratt System of control is in effect, Alcohol is still the Great Bankrupter and Human Waster.

In a number of European countries the work of temperance organizations is financed by special appropriations or "subventions" provided by their governments. This is in some ways very advantageous. But the advantage, I think, is outweighed by the fact that the governments designate the exact ways in which nearly all such funds shall be used, i. e., so much to provide so many temperance instructors in specified education areas; so much for rehabilitation of alcoholics on farms, in hospitals or by ambulatory treatment; so much for this and that, and almost nothing for other, more direct and more effective anti-alcohol activities. Support by government subvention imposes severe limitations upon temperance work and inhibits the organization of popular resources for realization of reforms desired by the community.

Thus writes Dr. Hotalen, and thus we get a somewhat limited view of the problems, the advances and the work of temperance forces in other and even more difficult countries than our own. The above may give us the impulse to think more deeply concerning this vital civic and moral problem which is becoming larger and larger each and every year, right here in our own country.

The upreach of the soul results in the outreach of the hands.

Personal contact with Jesus alters every thing. Be stupid enough to come and commit yourself to what He says.

Drinking House Over The Way

By a Young Mother

The room was so cold, so cheerless, so bare
With its rickety table and one broken chair,
With its curtainless window with hardly a pane
To keep out the snow, the wind and the rain.

A cradle stood empty, pushed up to the wall
And somehow that seemed the saddest of all.
In the rusty old stove, the fire was dead,
There was snow on the floor at the foot of the bed.

And there, all alone, a pale woman was lying—
You need not look twice to see she was dying—
Dying of want, of hunger and cold,
Shall I tell you her story, the story she told?

No, Ma'am, I'm no better, my cough is so bad
It's wearing me out though, and that makes me glad;
For 'tis wearisome living when one's all alone,
And heaven, they tell me, is just like a home.

Yes, Ma'am, I've a husband, he's somewhere about,
I hoped he'd come in 'fore the fire went out;
But I guess he has gone where he's likely to stay—
I mean to the drinking house over the way.

It was not always so, and I hope you won't think Too hard of him lady, it's only the drink.
I know he's kind hearted, for, oh, how he cried,
For our poor little baby, the morning it died.

You see he took sudden, and grew very bad,
And we had no doctor, my poor little lad.
For his father had gone, never meaning to stay
I am sure, to the drinking house over the way.

And when he came back 'twas far in the night,
And I was so tired and sick with fright
Of staying so long with my baby alone,
And it cutting my heart with its pitiful moan.

He was cross with the drink, poor fellow, I know
It was that, not his baby, that bothered him so;
But he swore at the child, as panting it lay,
And went back to the drinking house over the way.

I heard the gate slam, and my heart seemed to freeze
Like ice in my bosom, and there on my knees
By the side of the cradle, all shivering I stayed—
I wanted my mother, I cried and I prayed.

The clock, it struck two, ere my baby was still,
And my thoughts went back to my home on the hill
Where my happy girlhood had spent its short day,
Far, far from the drinking house over the way.

Could I be that girl, I, the heartbroken wife,
There watching alone while that dear little life
Was going so fast that I had to bend low
To hear if he breathed, 'twas so faint and so low!

Yes, it was easy, his dying, he just grew more white,
And his eyes opened wider to look for the light.

As his father came in, 'twas just break of day,
Came in from the drinking house over the way.

And straight did he come to the cradle bed where
Our baby lay dead, so pretty and fair.
I wondered that I could have wished him to stay,
When there was a drinking house over the way.

He stood quite a while, did not understand
You see, 'til he touched the cold little hand.
O, then came the tears and he shook like a leaf,
And said 'twas the drinking that made all the grief.

The neighbors were kind, and the minister came
And he talked of my seeing my baby again
And of the bright angels, I wondered if they Could see in that drinking house over the way.

Then I thought when my baby was put in the ground,
And the men with their spades were shaping the mound,
If somebody only would help me to save
My husband, who stood by my side at the grave.

If only it were not so handy to drink;
The men that make laws, ma'am, sure didn't think Of the hearts they would break, of the souls they would slay,
When they licensed that drinking house over the way.

I've been sick ever since and it cannot be long;
Be pitiful, lady, to him when I'm gone.
He wants to do right, but you never can think
How weak a man grows when he's fond of the drink.

And it's tempting him here, and it's tempting him there—
Four places I've counted on this very square
Where a man can get whiskey, by night and by day,
Not to mention the drinking house over the way.

There's a verse in the Bible, the minister read,
No drunkard shall enter the kingdom, it said.
And he is my husband, and I love him so,
And where I am going, I want him to go.

Our baby and I will both want him there:
Don't you think the dear Saviour will answer your prayer?
And please, when I'm gone, ask someone to pray
For him, at the drinking house over the way.

luminator" from the Union Gospel Press of Cleveland, which some of the schools order. We have tried to answer each of these inquiries as they came, at first not knowing the reason for non-delivery. But just a few days ago we received word from the company that they were in the process of moving their plant to a new building and that they had cancelled all orders for their literature, having completely exhausted the supply. We are sorry they did not notify our customers of this fact direct. Therefore we are thus passing this word on to you that you may know the reason for failure of some of your literature to arrive. We are very sorry that we have had more trouble for non-delivery of practically every phase of our literature from practically every company this past quarter than we have had since the present Editor of Publications has been with the company. We assure you of better service this coming quarter.

More Wiping Rags

Yesterday (August 9th) we received a bag of rags through the mail, which was simply marked, "A Friend." Thanks, Friend! Then today Brother Charles Munson brought in another bag from one of his neighbors, Mrs. Kennedy, of Ashland. We appreciate these gifts.

town Church to furnish the Evangelist editor with notes of the happenings at that place for the "Interesting Items" column. Who will do it?

An while we are talking about reports, there are a number of the churches in the Brotherhood that do not have news items in this column. Again we would remind the pastor and corresponding secretary of these churches that Uncle Sam still delivers a post card for one cent. How about a few of those unreported interesting things in your churches? This is more than a "hint," it is a "request."

Elkhart, Indiana. Brother L. V. King tells us that he has been extended a unanimous call for his fourth year of service with the Elkhart Church, and that the call has been accepted.

Brother King also reports the average attendance in the Sunday School for the past year as 357, with the highest attendance at 586 and the lowest as 267.

Death of Rev. E. E. Haskins reported. Information comes to us from Mrs. Walter C. Wertz that it was reported in the "Johnstown Tribune" that Rev. Edwin E. Haskins of Johnstown, Penna., passed away on August 5th. Brother Haskins was in evangelistic work in the Brethren Church for a number of years.

St. James, Maryland. We quote from the St. James Bulletin of July 31st:

"The Brotherhood festival, held recently, netted a balance of $58.85.

"The Sunday School Picnic is scheduled for Saturday, September 3rd, at Pangborn Park at Hagerstown."

A paragraph in this bulletin is given over to the expression of appreciation of the congregation for the work of Brother and Sister Warrenfeltz. Brother Warrenfeltz has been serving the congregation as pastor in the interim between the time of the temporary service of Brother Belote and the coming of Brother Ankrum. He is a student in the Gettysburg Seminary.

The St. James bulletin of August 7th says that the Ankrooms have arrived and are already busy at work. A reception, with about eighty in attendance, was held for the Ankrooms on Friday evening, August 5th.

Nappanee, Indiana. Brother J. Milton Bowman brought his closing message to the Nappanee congregation on Sunday morning, July 31st. He says concerning the closing of his pastorate there, "It is with mixed emotions that we terminate a pastorate of eleven years. Generally speaking the association has been of the best. We have made many friends in Nappanee whom we shall cherish in the future. Great things should be accomplished as the Church moves forward to greater heights. We wish to thank our host of friends for the many expressions of kindness." Brother Bowman, we understand, has already moved to Peru, Indiana, his new pastorate.

Gleanings from Brother John F. Locke. The Mt. Olive Church recently completed a Daily Vacation Bible School, with a public program by the pupils. The school enrolled over fifty pupils and was taught by local officers and teachers of the Sunday School.

Brother Locke reports an interesting visit with Mrs. Locke's brother and family at Beaverdam, Virginia. During the week's visit Brother Locke was guest preacher at the Zion Christian Church nightly. The meeting was blessed with splendid weather and large audiences. Thirteen persons came forward, most of them for first time confessions, and some for church membership. Brother Locke says that "the pastor, people and relatives all treated Mrs. Locke and himself to wonderful hospitality."

The fifth Sunday of July was a great day at the Mathias, West Virginia, church. Brother Locke writes that he was invited to assist in the dedicatory services of the new Wurlitzer organ. The services were in charge of the pastor, Brother Guy F. Ludwig. Brother Locke Locke brought the morning message. A most bountiful meal was spread on tables on the church lawn and in the afternoon, following the program of music, a Deacon and Deaconess, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Sandy, were ordained. Brother Locke assisted in this service and spoke on "The Work and Character of Deacons in the New Testament Church." Representatives of the press were present in the morning to get pictures of the organ dedication and dinner tables.

On the evening of July 31st the St. Luke Brethren Church, near Woodstock, Virginia, had the motion picture, "The Power of Decision." The picture was projected by Mark A. Logan of Bridgewater, Virginia, a worker in the Bethlehem Brethren Church. Brother Logan recently made the Bethlehem Church a gift of a new Ampro sound film projector and screen. Brother Locke had charge of the services and gave an address on the alcohol problem before the picture was shown. Elder Timothy D. Swartz of Bethlehem was also present and led in prayer. The picture was also shown at Bethlehem and Maurertown, Mt. Olive and Otterbine U. B. Church, by Brother Logan. Brother Walter D. Koontz was a guest of Brother and Sister Locke at their home recently and accompanied them to Mathias and St. Luke. Brother Koontz is a deacon of the Mt. Olive Church and now resides in Washington, D. C., where he is active in the church.

We learn, further, that "Pulpit Preaching," which refers to itself as "One of the World's leading Homiletical Journals," carries a sermon on Jonah, entitled, "The Super Patriot," by Brother Locke, in its August 1949 issue. Congratulations, Brother Locke.

HEROES BY PROXY

Romans 8:10-17

SOME YEARS AGO there was a sale of military decorations in a city auction mart. Silver stars, gold crosses, jeweled medals and other marks of distinction were offered for sale. Quite naturally they brought very low figures, because they were of no real value save to the person who earned them. Christ's sacrifices mean very little unless we are identified with Him—we cannot be heroes by proxy. We must be there. "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him."

Plenty of people would share in the Lord's glory, without sharing in His sufferings. He said to the people and His disciples, "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his (and not another's) cross, and follow me." I believe it is this teaching of the Master that has given rise to the axiom, "No cross, no crown."

A little servant girl was being examined by the vestry as to her fitness for reception into the church, and she was asked if she understood about the atonement, and what she would say to the Lord when He asked her what she had to offer as a warrant for being received into heaven. "I think I shall just hold up my hands, rough and callous from laboring for others, and let Jesus see them."

We have all heard the word "stigma," and perhaps have used it at some time. Perhaps we were not aware that the word comes from the Greek word, "Stigmata," meaning a mark or scar or wound signifying disgrace, or something received as being indicative of subjection. You will remember that Paul says at one place, "From henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." The word used here is the Greek word "stigmata"—"Marks" of the Lord Jesus. What were those marks? The "Stigmata," or wounds of the cross. (Take up his cross daily, and follow Him.)

There is a story of a mother in a Cleveland School fire. She hears the fire warning, and noting that it is in her section of the city, rushes to learn the location. She finds it is in the school building where her curly-haired daughter is a pupil. She rushes to the school and tries to enter, but cannot. Knowing the room in which her darling stays at school, she rushes to a window of that room, to find the glass blown out and the children huddled in a frightened mass against that side of the room. Looking quickly she glimpses her child just under the window and quickly she reaches in to grasp her child by the hair in a vain effort to extricate her from the milling, screaming mass. But to no avail. Then that mother leaned against the building and kept her hand lovingly caressing the face and head of her beloved darling until the floor gave way and the little body dropped from beneath her touch. Then she left and went to a nearby first-aid station for treatment of a hand and arm that were burned to the elbow; after which she refused further aid until all the children who had been rescued were treated. Do you think those who saw that act will ever forget it, or will see that woman at any time after that without remembering her sacrifice?

The Lord would say to us, "Look at my nail-pierced hands and my wounded side; wounds received on your behalf. I bore it all for thee, for thee; what hast thou borne for me?" Someone has said that when we get to heaven God will not look us over for medals, or earthly distinctions, or diplomas, but for scars of past conflict, waged for righteousness and for God. Posthumous rewards are those received by one, but earned by another. Our salvation was earned for us by Christ.

RELIGIOUS ROOTS OF EDUCATION

Scripture: Deut. 6:4-9

For The Leader

TONIGHT WE HAVE the first of three topics on the general subject, "Religious Freedom." It centers along the general thought that religious freedom is dependent upon religious education. The trend of thought is toward the schools as the basic place for general religious education. Which, of course, is directly opposite to the general pattern today. There can be a lot of discussion on this general subject. At least there should be plenty of sober, serious thinking. Our Democracy is dependent upon the teaching of its principles—principles which stem from the Christian religion. They dare not be neglected.

DISCUSSION

1. HOW OLD IS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION? Search back through history. Where do you find a time when there was no such thing as religious education? Grant you, sure, that it wasn't always the right kind, but always there is education in which people are taught and encouraged to worship their gods. Man by nature is religious. He is going to worship something—if not the true God of heaven, it will be a god of his own making, be it money, possessions, lust, etc. We are taught from little up to worship. Boys and girls learn in school to admire George Washington. He may not become a god to them, but they have a respect for him. They learn early to admire (and worship) certain movie stars and radio stars. They put a picnic or a ball game ahead of coming to church to worship God. So that becomes their god, and they worship it. It is evident that from little up we must teach boys and girls to worship the eternal God, or they will be taught to worship other gods.

2. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION ESSENTIAL. Our scripture tonight points out the necessity of proper education regarding the God of heaven. Pious parents of Bible days were conscious of this fact. Our early pioneers likewise. Now, the question we raise is this, "If other generations found it necessary to have an education about God, can we survive without it?" The answer is evident. We can't. As you think back you will learn that the Bible was parallel with other teaching matter in the schools. It was used as one of the reading books in our early American schools. Other text books had much in them that was taken from Bible stories. Our boys and girls of that age were helped in their daily lives by a close contact with God in the schools.

3. PARENTS SHOULD BEWARE. This week, a million or more boys and girls started their first day of public schools. There were some parents who looked forward to it, so that they could shove their "kids" off on the teachers for the day. Little do they care what their children are taught, nor what habits they pick up. The idea of warning their children against dangers which lurk in every contact with other boys and girls, they are only too glad to get rid of them. It is even worse, for these little boys and girls from such homes often know nothing of restraint or decency. So, the concerned, Christian parent, has a real problem. Carefully they have nurtured their child from birth to school age. They have endeavored to shield the child from many of the cheap, shoddy radio programs and movies. From Bible stories and gospel choruses in the home, they run into cowboy stories, guns, and what-not. It is a matter of grave concern for Christian parents.

4. WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT. Continue to have good wholesome attractions in the home. Take time to tell the Bible stories, sing gospel choruses with them. Have daily devotions with them, and continually back them up with your own constant prayers as they are away from you. Continue to impress upon their minds that there are some things which boys and girls which love Jesus, cannot do and still please Him. They will have a time of it in school and often will be ribbed and jeered, but it is better that way than to lose them forever. We cannot be too careful in this matter. Parents will have a lot of anxious moments in which they will have nothing but prayer to help them. But, if Christian parents want their boys and girls to live for Christ, and not lose their eternal souls, they are going to have to be on guard every school day.

5. UNITED ACTION WILL HELP, TOO. It has not been enough to silence the voice of the Word of God in our schools. This silencing has opened our schools to the multitude of evil doctrines and teachings. Day after day, in our text books, and from the lips of our teachers, this religious poison will be fed into the minds of our innocent boys and girls. It will be fatal unless we drive it out with the true teachings of God's Holy Word. That is the job of parents! Much could be done in our public schools if parents of our churches would unite together and insist on text-books and teachers which would give the correct standard on religious teachings. United action will bring this to pass. It is far more important than it first seems, too, because our very way of life in this great nation is dependent on our boys and girls being taught the things of God. Why? Simply because the doctrines and teachings which permit us to live as a people the way we do, are taken directly from God's Holy Word. Fail to teach it to a generation, and see what you have. So, let's pray and pray for our boys and girls in our schools, that we might be led to do the right thing to insure for them a teaching and education in which they will honor God and live for Him.

And where will a ship land without chart and compass?

No man should think so highly of himself as to think he can receive but little light from books.—Johnson.

Divine revelation needs wise interpretation in these days of foolish "isms."

The difference between an offering and the collection is that an offering is a part of the feast we share, while a collection is a scraping together of the leavings.

FAITH

Faith isn't some sort of mystical thing,
Or the words of a beautiful creed,
Or prayers that are penned by poetical souls,
That people stand up to read.
For faith is the thing that prompts us to go
And give to the hungering bread.
Oh, faith means more than a doctrine or two—
For faith without works is dead.

Faith doesn't mean only a bending of knees,
Or a lifting of prayerful hands.
Or something that makes the bountiful God
Comply with our mortal demands!
But faith sends us, girded, and ready to serve
The masses that need to be fed.
For faith means more than a murmured prayer—
For faith without works is dead.

Faith doesn't pass by on a Jericho road,
When a brother lies bleeding and hurt,
But stoops and pours oil and wine in the wounds,
And lifts the poor man from the dirt.
Faith doesn't sit in the synagogue seat,
With glittering gear on its head,
Nor walk in garments with widened hems—
For faith without works is dead.

Then give us, O Master, the faith that will go
And minister day after day—
Will even accept the arms of a cross,
If best it may serve in that way—
A faith like the Shepherd Who went for His sheep,
Though red were the rocks where He bled—
Oh, faith means more than a song or so—
For faith without works is dead !

HEARING WITHOUT HEEDING

Scripture: Matthew 7:21-27; James 1:22-25

Hymns of Faith and Action

Leader's Petition

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE SERMONS OF THE PROPHET Ezekiel fell on unresponsive ears (Ezek. 33:31). God told Isaiah that his hearers would shut their ears and harden their hearts to his message lest they would be converted and be healed (Isa. 6:9, 10). James warned that if we hear and do nothing we delude ourselves (James 1:22). Our Lord constantly warned us about doing nothing about what we hear (Luke 6:46; John 15:14; 13:17). Hearing without doing is a grievous and besetting sin (James 4:17).

In the Scripture the word "hearken" means to obey what we have heard. To do nothing about the Word we hear is disastrous. The same sun that melts ice hardens clay. If our hearts are not humbled by the Word of God then they are hardened. It is dangerous to be stirred to do and yet do nothing. Soon we lose our capacity for being aroused. We become Gospel-hardened. People who do nothing get critical. If the alarm clock fails to blast one out of bed for a few mornings it soon fails to arouse at all. It is dangerous to play as Pharaoh did with the stirrings of God's Spirit through His Word.

Everywhere the Scriptures proceed from doctrine to duty (2 Tim. 2:19; 2 Peter 3:11). The resurrection chapter of 1 Cor. 15 is followed by the collection chapter, 1 Cor. 16. One may have a headful of Scripture and a heartful of sin. Faith must take hold of the Word (Heb. 4:2) or hearing the Word is of no profit. The Book of James is to Christians. Have we OBEYED the following verses: James 1:19 as to tongue and temper; 4:3 as to prayers unanswered because of sin; 4:8 as to sin keeping us from the Book; 4:10 as to sins of the human spirit; 4:11 and 5:16 as to being critical?

Lesson for September 11, 1949

JESUS AND THE PSALMS

Lesson: Psalm 8:2; Matt. 21:15-16; Psalm 110:1; Matt. 22:41-45; Psalm 118:22-23; Matt. 21:38-39, 42; Luke 24:44

HUNDREDS OF YEARS before Jesus left the side of the Father to come to earth to dwell among men, the Israelites sang concerning Him in their Temple services. True, they did not realize it, yet they, as they sang, were revealing both His nature and coming. They were singing of the coming Messiah; they were revealing His purpose in coming; they were exalting His name. Indeed in all of their worship services they were pre-shadowing His sacrifice and His shed blood by means of their animal sacrifices. Their High Priest was performing a typical service as he went about his duties as the advocate of Jehovah.

As we study this week's lesson we will note several things:

1. There is a close relationship between the Old and New Testaments as they set forth both prophecy and fulfillment.
2. There is a necessity to see and understand the things revealed concerning Jesus in the Psalms.
3. That Jesus took it for granted that the Jews accepted the Psalms as telling about their Messiah (whom He knew He was) just as truly as the prophets prophesied concerning the Messiah.
4. Jesus knew that God had revealed these things to the writers of the Psalms concerning Himself because God knew they would come to pass.

5. Jesus ranks the Psalms with both the words of Moses and the Prophets as necessarily related to Himself.

We also note that Jesus expected, and indeed He had a right to expect, that all should receive the words concerning Him with childlike simplicity. Children take things for granted that adults quibble about to no purpose. He says, "except ye become as little children . . ." Jesus knew! How beautifully the first verse of our lesson (Psalm 8:2) fits into the thought of Jesus concerning the faith of little children, "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength . . ."

We find a strange paradox in the fact that the Jews were perfectly willing to accept the human relationships of Jesus, but were loath to accept His divine relationships. Of course they were compelled to admit certain human relationships through His mother. They could see this. Yet being, as they were, continual students of the ancient scriptures; and searching, as they were, almost daily for a deeper knowledge of God's plan for His Messiah; and with every mother in Israel hoping that she might be the one to bear the Messiah—just why they failed to see the connection between Jesus and the Psalms, which they diligently learned and sang, seems to be the mighty mystery of the ages. But then, why is it that today men fail to recognize Jesus for what He is—the eternal Son of God, the Savior of men from sin? The scriptures bear out every claim of Jesus for His divine purpose and authority.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the last verse of our lesson (Luke 24:44). The emphatic word here is "you." While they were directed to His disciples, yet in keeping with His injunction to "observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," they are just as directly aimed at you and at me. We will find our personal application in the "What think ye?" of Matthew 22:42.

Truly the Psalms sang the praises of Jesus and He recognized it as such praise. What about us? How are we singing? What is our relationship to Him?

Camp Juniata

THE 1949 PENNSYLVANIA BRETHREN TRAINING CAMP

THE BRETHREN Training Camp—Camp Juniata—just closed one of the best years in its history. The Young People were in Camp from July 3 to 10. There were forty-two registered campers, which was an increase over last year. The Junior-Adult Camp was from July 10 to 16. It was one of the largest Junior Camps in our history, there being sixty-four Juniors registered. Of this number, twenty-six were in camp for the first time. Then, with this group, we had fifteen registered adults, who studied the Book of Romans, with Rev. Percy Miller of Berlin, Penna., as teacher.

Walter C. Wertz served as Camp Director and saw that the Campers had plenty to eat. Rev. N. V. Leatherman of Johnstown, Second, was Dean of the Young People's Camp and taught the course in Evangelism. Rev. D. R. Wolfe of Johnstown Third, was Dean of Boys and taught The History of Missions. Rev. Charles Munson, National Youth Director, of Ashland, Ohio, was the instructor in New Testament Studies. Miss Bessie Hooks from the Brush Valley Church, taught Child Study. Miss Lucetta Hibbs of Pittsburgh, was the Camp's registered Nurse. Miss Pauline Pritz of Berlin, served as Registrar, Secretary and Editor. The Daily Quiet Hour Meditations were prepared by Mrs. Arthur Baer of Cameron, W. Va. Charles Lowmaster of Vandergrift, handled the recreation. The crafts were in charge of Mrs. Walter C. Wertz of Cone-maugh and Mrs. Francis Berkshire of Masontown. Pauline Pritts was Dean of Girls. The campers were in charge of eight former graduates of Camp Juniata. These people had Tribe responsibilities, helped with the sports, hikes and the store. Highlighting the activities of camp was the closing night, when each Tribe put on a Stunt, Bible Drama and had a Yell.

One afternoon the campers hiked to Trough Creek State Park. The hike covered a distance of seven miles. The young people saw balanced rock and the ice mine, besides getting a nice cool dip in the mountain stream. The picnic supper was served at the Park. Lots of potato salad, beans, lemonade, etc., was served. Our Vespers were held at the Park in the evening.

Regular Sunday School and Church services were held. Rev. George H. Jones was the speaker. Christian Endeavor was conducted by Charles Thomas and Eileen Metheney.

The Juniors and Adults came on Sunday afternoon, July 10th. Their program was somewhat like the previous week.

Rev. Percy Miller served as Dean. Miss Lucetta Hibbs was Dean of Girls and Nurse. Rev. Charles Munson was Dean of Boys; Mrs. Wertz and Mrs. Berkshire handled the crafts. Miss Pauline Pritz was secretary, Registrar and Editor. The Quiet Hour was prepared by Mrs. Baer. The courses of study were: Bible Memory—Miss Bessie Hooks; The Church at Work—Francis Berkshire; C. E. Programs and Music—Miss Ida Kimmel; God In Creation—Mrs. Francis Berkshire; Life of Paul—Rev. Charles Munson.

The Juniors were quite active in their sports under the direction of Charles Lowmaster. Campfires were held with the Counsellors in charge. During the very impressive candle light service, nine boys and girls gave their hearts to Jesus. Eight of these were baptized in the river by Rev. Percy Miller. It was a beautiful scene to behold.

The candle light service in Junior Camp was held at our Vesper Circle in the woods. It was beautiful to see the lighted candles burning under the cover of the heavenly darkness. Glenn Grumblin was in charge, with Rev. W. S. Benshoff bringing the devotional and inspirational address.

Another highlight was the Candle Float on the river. With the lighted candles coming down the stream, Rev. Munson very ably spoke from the other bank of the river. A group of the older campers were on the one side of the river and sang, with the larger group on this side of the river giving the response. People who have private cottages along the river keep inquiring when this service is to be. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in Heaven."

The good eats were ably prepared by Mrs. Margaret Horner, Mrs. Hazel Benshoff, Mrs. Savilla Horner, Mrs. Lena Hummel, Mrs. Mae Ambrose, Mrs. Margaret Rowser and Miss Arvilla Figert. The cooks always had something prepared for the campers before they went to bed. This snack before bedtime sure was appreciated.

Out-of-state visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Petit of Ashland, Ohio. Mr. Petit spoke on several occasions.

Rev. W. S. Benshoff took care of all the music in both camps. He had a special song book prepared for all the campers.

Mrs. Wertz gave Flannelgraph talks at the Chapel periods and Miss Kimmel was in charge of the Vespers in Junior Camp, while Rev. Wolfe was in charge of the Young People's Vespers.

This was the seventeenth year for the Young people's Camp, and the twelfth year for the Junior Camp in Pennsylvania. Eight people were graduated from the Young People's Camp.

Our thanks and appreciation to all who made Camp Juniata very much of a success. The Sunday Schools in our District help in a big way financially, to make it possible for many to attend camp, and many schools are beginning to reap the results of Camp Juniata's training.

Walter C. Wertz, Camp Director.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine thru his cypress trees;
Who hopeless lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play;
Who has not learned in hours of faith
This truth to flesh and sense unknown—
That life is ever lord of death,
And love can never lose its own—Whittier.

There are few people who do not indulge in the hope that there is something after death. What it is and how it comes about has kept man guessing through the ages. Some of these guesses have been most fantastic. The American Indian speculating on this often buried his dead warrior with his bow and arrow, his favorite hunting dog and provisions of food beside him. These were to be used for his journey and on his arrival at his happier hunting grounds somewhere in the undefined west.

Whittier thinks they are poor creatures and not alert to the realities of life who think there is no life beyond. He thinks the best evidence that the soul lives on is not revealed to flesh and blood nor proved by man's five senses.

Rather it is proved by an inward longing, an inarticulate desire, a sixth sense. This universal longing, this quiet hint, this awareness of the future so universally implanted in the human breast cannot be ignored.

It is often "this dread of something after death" that keeps many a person in the straight and narrow path. He hesitates, he peers furtively in the distance ahead and wonders where he is going on his long journey in the dark.

Every cannibal tribe has its conception of immortality. It may be crude but in the end it spells God. The ancient Norsemen repaired after death to their Valhalla or Avalon. The Japanese build their warlike heaven out of their religious philosophy. And half the eastern world bows toward Mecca. In the religions of India the muddy Ganges offers solace to uncounted millions.

By a universal survey it is not difficult to recognize that there is a general awareness of the strange, elusive, and undefined future. Almost all people see the "stars shine through their cypress trees." They do not lay their loved ones away hopelessly, "for love can never lose its own." Faith and hope are strong and they go on trusting that somehow, somewhere they will meet those they have loved and lost. The proud science sometimes frowns for lack of proof, faith and hope endure.

News From Our Churches

STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA

Brother C. E. Johnson writes of an interesting experience.

I have just had a most interesting experience and feel led to write about it. Last week a lady, not connected with the church, asked if I would not visit a man who had been taken to the hospital. I made the call and found a man in the last stages of cancer of the lung and with a severe cardiac condition. He was in extreme pain and seemed to hardly realize that I was calling. The next time I called the nurse had just given him a "shot" and I waited until it began to take effect and ease his pain. I asked him a few questions concerning his relation to God and he said he was a Christian, but belonged to no church. He was in such a condition I could say no more, but I was not satisfied.

On Monday I got a call saying the man wanted to see me and arrange for baptism. I called and found him in much better condition. He said that it seemed the Lord had revealed to him that he should be baptized. I explained our position to him concerning triune immersion and he said that was the way he wanted to be baptized. He was in no condition to be moved from the hospital, but he said he had heard of people being immersed in a bath tub and wanted to know if it could be arranged. I asked for time to consult his doctor. The doctor was very kind and said he would have to consult the superintendent of the hospital. That was taken care of and then it was left to the head nurse. I went to her office and found her most cooperative. All arrangements were made by the nurses and they offered to supply me with an orderly to assist. I asked for a young man who is a member of the Stockton church and also an orderly. They called him on the phone and told him to report to me.

The man was taken from his bed to the bath room. Two nurses stood by. I baptized him and took him back to his room. The tears flowed down his face and he said, "Do not mistake these tears. They are tears of joy. I am the happiest right now that I have ever been. I do not have a single pain in my whole body."

It was a wonderful experience and moved each one who was present. As I left his room he told me not to worry about him; that he was all right and knew the Lord would care for him. I could not help but praise the Lord for the privilege of being a minister in such a time as this.

Everything is going along fine. Sorry I will have to miss General Conference. We are looking forward to the coming of the Crusaders the last of this week.

C. E. Johnson.

BRIGHTON, INDIANA

Just a note to report what has been done in the Brighton, Indiana, community since our last report.

After school was out the three churches in this community cooperated in a Daily Vacation Bible School for two weeks. There was a total enrollment of one hundred and forty-two, with an average attendance of one hundred and thirty, and eighty-one with perfect attendance. The offerings given by the boys and girls were sent to the Indians in New Mexico.

The attendance at Bible School and Church this summer has been exceptionally good. Today (July 31) Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Holsinger and their son Paul were baptized by trine immersion in Shipshewana Lake by Rev. Claud Studebaker of South Bend. Our membership is now one hundred and three. We expect to have our full quota at General Conference.

Walter Lichtenberger, Lay pastor.

UDELL, IOWA

Good morning! This is August 1, 1949—5:30 A. M. We greet you from this mid-western state in the name of Him who did so much for us, the Lord Jesus Christ!

We are still on the map, serving the Lord; and this has been one of the most busy seasons for moons. We have observed all the special days and offerings. Our Children's program was attended by seventy-one people, with twenty-six taking part in the service.

Several of our church folks were on the Air for a week, over Radio Station KCOG, a nearby station. We will be on another week in September. Our average attendance for April, May and June was: Church school—24; morning worship—25; evening Christian Endeavor—12; evening worship—44, the highest for four years. July attendance dropped down: Church school—16; morning worship—20; evening—45.

We spent a week teaching in the Young People's camp at Savannah, Illinois. We had a community Vacation Bible School with an average attendance of 74. I was the director with the help of a team of Caravaners and Crusaders. The attendance at the public program was 143.

The offerings cared for the overhead. We helped out a neighboring church with Bible study on two evenings.

Recently we had a surprise gift of $25.00 from a lady relative of Rev. S. H. Bashor to help us purchase new hymn books for the church. The lady lives in California. Another gift of $5.00 came in too. We will accept gifts from any of our friends, far or near, for this worthy cause. Praise the Lord.

A set of rods was put through the upper walls of the church building, as it had been spreading since the weight of the new roof was put on it a year ago.

We are still praying for a successor who will take over the work for us. We had poor health awhile, but are much better now, for which we are very grateful.

W. R. Deeter.

Wedding Announcement

RIDDLE-RONK. At eight o'clock on the evening of June 4, 1949, at the First Brethren Church (Park Street) Ashland, Ohio, Miss Joan Elizabeth Riddle became the bride of Dorman L. Ronk, with Rev. E. M. Riddle, father of the bride, reading the beautiful double ring ceremony.

Two hundred guests were seated during the half-hour of music by Miss Mabel Zehner, organist, and Rob Roy Crumrine, soloist. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Jackson W. Riddle of Columbus, Ohio.

The altar was arranged with baskets of white carnations, lilies and baby's breath, backed with palms and ferns. Tapers were fitted into four seven-branch candelabra.

Mrs. Lloyd Calhoun, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Jean Rowsey and Miss Patsy Dovey. Master Jackson Riddle, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and Miss Katherine Ann Riddle, a niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Ushering were Philip Riddle, brother of the bride, and John Lindower, both of Ashland. Ivan Ronk, of Goshen, Indiana, cousin of the groom, was best man.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the Smith Dining Club. Hostesses at the reception were: Mrs. George Schamel, sister of the groom, Miss Doris Guenther and Mrs. Edward Baehr, college friends of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of the Louisville, Ohio, High School and also of Ashland College. The groom is a graduate of the Santa Cruz, California, High School and is a Junior in Ashland College.

After a short honeymoon spent at Fife Lake, Michigan, they are now residing at 1000 Claremont Avenue, Ashland.

Mansfield, Ohio. Brother Elmer Carrithers has completed his pastorate at Peru, Indiana, and has now taken charge of the pastorate at Mansfield. For the past several months Mrs. Carrithers has had charge of the Mansfield work in the interim between the closing of Brother Delbert B. Flora's supplying the pulpit and the coming of her husband to the field.

Ashland, Ohio. Through the month of August, during the vacation period of Brother H. H. Rowsey, Ashland pastor, the pulpit has been supplied as follows: August 7th—Brother Charles Munson, National Youth Director; August 14th—Brother G. C. Carpenter; August 21st—Brother Clarence Fairbanks, pastor of the Washington, D. C. Church. For the evening services the Ashland Church has been cooperating with the City-wide Union services which are held at the City Park, where fine programs have been prepared, with special speakers at each service. The attendance at these union services has been especially good, due in all probability, to the new band shell and its comfortable seating, as well as to the good programs.

The Ashland mid-week services have been holding up exceptionally well during the past summer. Two groups have been meeting instead of the usual three, the adults and youth combining, with a special speaker to bring the study, and the children's group continuing their regular Bible Study as a separate unit. The attendance of the two groups combined has not fallen below the fifty mark and often reaches nearly seventy-five.

Gratis, Ohio. Brother Crick says in his bulletin of August 14th, "Those attending Sunday School and Worship services today will be impressed by the enhanced beauty of the Sanctuary, due to the maroon carpet which was laid last week. While other decorative projects are being worked out, plans for a rededication service will probably be discussed."

Brother Crick reports seventy-nine in attendance at Sunday School and fifty-four at the morning worship service on Sunday, August 7th.

Lanark, Illinois. We note from Brother McCartney's bulletin of August 7th that the evening service was in charge of the Brethren Youth Fellowship. Special music was rendered by a Brass Quartet, a vocal trio, and the choir, while the sermonette was delivered by Brother Edwin Puterbaugh.

Prior to the evening service the Afternoon and Evening circles of the W. M. S. served a pot-luck supper in the church dining room in honor of the Brethren Youth Fellowship which presented the above program.

Johnstown, Penna., Second. Brother N. V. Leatherman, Second Church pastor, announces the election of the following Christian Endeavor officers for the coming year: President—Mrs. Morris Kline; Vice President—Eugene Hostetler; Secretary—Jack Bischof; Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Orval Boyer; Treasurer—Randall Hostetler. A Christian Endeavor outing was held on August 11th.

The Second Church will assist in entertaining the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association, as a part of the Cambria County Sunday School Association, in October. The dates are October 11 to 13.

Cambria County, Penna., C. E. Union. About eighty persons attended the Cambria County Brethren Christian Endeavor Union Quarterly meeting on Tuesday evening August 2nd, on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Straub, at Vinco. A delightful evening is reported. Brother George H. Jones of Johnstown, brought the message, which was well given and well received.

Berlin, Penna. Brother Percy Miller says of the mid-week service, "The attendance was fine last Wednesday evening (August 3), there being forty-three present. Truly the spiritual thermometer of the church is showing in its upward trend by the interest taken in the mid-week prayer service.

We note also the following from Brother Miller's bul-

The Editor Thinks Aloud

Fred C. Vanator

WHAT WILL IT MEAN TO YOU?

I WAS RECENTLY READING a sermon by Rev. Ora Lee Ice, upon the subject, "Psalm-singing Saintliness." I was searching for material for the comments on the Sunday School lesson which appear in the Evangelist each week, and the lesson was "The Psalms We Sing." In this sermon I came across the following two paragraphs, which I want to take out and apply to the attitudes which we find following our conferences, whether they be General or District. Here are the words of Mr. Ice:

"It was a good meeting. They made their love and life pledges. They sang their hymns and went out. They went out to face whatever might be before them. They went out full of sing. It is a good way to go. 'Singing makes the burden lighter; singing drives the cares away.' Have you ever wondered what they sang? I too. 'Jesus I my cross have taken, all to leave and follow thee,' would have been a good one. 'I will follow thee my Saviour, whatsoe'er my lot may be,' would have been good. It could not have been these. Perhaps it was the twenty-seventh psalm—'The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear . . .'

"'They sang a hymn and went out.' What an opportunity they had for heroism; what a time for fortitude and fidelity. Their meeting of consecration was over; the inspiring hymn has been sung, and now they go out to face the crisis of life. Notice how they met it. One betrayed Him with a kiss and precipitated the tragedy of the cross. One denied Him with cursing, and swearing he never knew Him. Some slept through the crisis, unsympathetic. Most of them ran away like scattered sheep."

Well, we could go on with this thought, but this was enough to Set me to thinking!

By the time you read this General Conference will be written into history. You will be back in your homes, either with a firm resolve to do more for the church than ever before, or you will be just too "dog-tired" to care even to finish this "thinking of the editor." Maybe you made the very best of resolves while in attendance at the sessions to go back into your church and see that something definite was done regarding some certain actions of the conference. Then, maybe, in the rush of getting back home, and the work you found there when you arrived that had seemed to pile high before you, you just plain forgot what you aimed to do.

We take copious notes at the conference; we go into details as to what each man said, and concerning every motion passed by the assembled body; we go home, put the notebook on the desk, saying, "Well, I haven't time now to go over it, but maybe if the preacher asks me to make a report I will then go into it." But, in the meantime, you are hoping that no one will say anything about it and probably they do not. Therefore that notebook, so studiously kept, gathers dust in the drawer, and the resolve that you made to do something about a certain resolution passed by the conference is lost under the same dust.

Suppose the early disciples of Jesus, who also made resolves, had failed to do anything about it. Suppose that they had left it to others. Suppose they had failed to "press the message of the Risen Lord," before the people. Would three thousand at Pentecost have cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Would the message have continued to grow and grow in the hearts of men, till it spread over the great territory which it did?

Now you are back from Conference, what are you going to do about it?

Think it over!

Your Sunday School Orders

These orders should be coming in before very long, in fact they should be in our office by the time you receive this paper. Have you sent yours in?

Since there seemed to be some confusion about the orders last quarter, we are asking that you be very specific in your order this quarter; giving us the quantity of each separate item; the house or firm from which you want it ordered; the year and number of the item if it is in the graded lesson series. If you have not received your printed order blank from our office for any reason, make out your order on ordinary stationery and send it to us.

Be sure to state clearly the following: Person ordering the supplies; Name of church school; Name and address to whom order is to be sent; Name and address of person to whom the bill is to be sent, if other than the above. All this is vital to the prompt filling of your order. We will appreciate your full cooperation, even as we appreciate your orders.

The Publication Board

Expresses Appreciation

The Publication Board and the Staff of the Publishing House wishes to take this opportunity to express appreciation for the fine way in which the membership and friends of the Brethren Church have contributed to the Press and Equipment Fund. While it has not reached the full sum of $15,000.00 as set forth in the original launching of the project, yet we are sure that as time goes on the full amount will ultimately be reached. Scarcely a day goes by that there is not some contribution to this fund that reaches the Publication office. Sometimes it is but $1.00, at other times we find a number of contribu-

Moderator's Address Sixty-First General Conference of The Brethren Church

"The Light of Men"

By Moderator Glenn L. Clayton

IT HAS BEEN a new and deeply appreciated privilege for me to serve as your Moderator during this year. In my brief experience I have learned to love and respect the Brethren Church and have been most happy for this chance to serve it. If my ministry has helped in any way to produce a more effective and a more spiritual movement, I am glad. The mistakes must be attributed to my own ineptness and inexperience; the successes are the result of Divine intervention, for the Lord has long protected and blessed those who have earnestly tried to serve Him according to His Word. Such, I take it, is today, and has always been, the attitude of devout Brethren people.

Inasmuch as it is a prerogative of him who holds the title of Moderator, I shall use the minutes allotted to me for a brief appraisal of our Church and perhaps make bold in suggesting some needed improvements in certain areas.

The Gospel of John presents a philosophic picture of the Savior and His relationship to God and Man. Verse 4 of Chapter I reads: "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men." The terms "light" and "life" are among the most popular of all words. Barlett's "Familiar Quotations" lists several hundred quotations on each subject—far more than most words. It should be our purpose as Christians to define the "light of men" in terms of the Brethren Church—to study our Church as part of that body of believers making up the Bride, and do what we can to encourage her as she points the way that leads to eternal life.

The key to the whole program of christendom must be and remain the Holy Word itself. The Hebrews revered it and the whole attitude of Jesus was one of subservience to the fulfillment of its promises. The early Church was keenly aware of its Scriptural authority and responsibility. One of the principle attributes of the Brethren Church has been its proud advocacy of the entire Bible and its profession of regard for its contents.

Such advocacy is still unquestionably true today, but there may be a discrepancy between profession and performance. Too frequently we allow the Word to occupy a place in our program, but fail to build the program around it. Too often it is like a beautiful statue at the entrance to what appears to be a great hall of culture, but turns out to be a place where lewd shows or shoddy performances are enacted. The reading of Holy Writ must not become a ritual; it must remain a solemn rite which is expanded by the remainder of the program into a wholesome, soul-searching service of worship which causes men to bow down their hearts to Almighty God.

I would bespeak for the Brethren Church a renewed emphasis upon the Scriptures. Let us organize study programs on a grand scale, reading courses designed to bring about a more genuine appreciation for the Word, and a teacher training program including the finest and newest methods available today. This Conference would do well to appoint a Bible Promotional Committee whose duty it would be to devise new and interesting methods of studying and mastering the Scriptures.

We must saturate our minds with the Word of God. Someone has said that if all the Bibles in the world were destroyed today, pitifully little of it would live tomorrow in the hearts of the people. This may not be true of Brethren people. But if it is in any measure true, then we should take steps now, at this Conference, to ensure that such a wrong be righted.

If the life is to be the "light of men" it follows that men must know of it, and they can hardly do so unless they have a thorough knowledge of the record and promises contained in the whole of the Scriptures.

Since its foundation the primary purpose of the Church of Jesus Christ has been the carrying on of the ministry and teaching instituted by Him. As He came into the World to be the Life that was the Light of Men, so the Church has the responsibility of witnessing to that Light and spreading and living the Glad Tidings of Salvation. Those Tidings are not restricted to the few or to any given clan or class of people. There is no "closed shop" sign over the Christian Church; it is open, and the sign reads, "Whosoever will may come!"

The missionary application of the "Go ye" command is often cited and, I believe, correctly so, but I am afraid that all too frequently we are inclined to stand on the sidelines and chorus "go ye" to those sainted few who have the courage to venture into foreign or home missions. All too often we echo this command while we aid and praise those who obey it and at the same time blithely ignore its implications for those of us who stay right at home. The program of Jesus cannot be localized. It cannot be confined to a small group any more than it could be confined to the small audience who listened devoutly to its original outline from the lips of the Master Himself.

Have we caught the vision of the world-wide, community-wide appeal of the first Church? Is the Brethren Church ready today, if called to do so, to appear before the throne of judgment upon its record of achievement? "Go ye into all the world,"—that may mean the people on the next street, or the next farm, as well as the people in remote Argentina. We will do well to gear our thinking, our planning, and above all, our praying, to the world program of evangelism. The salvation of souls knows no limits. Let us study again our promotional work in this area. Perhaps less emphasis upon Church growth and more upon saved souls will result in a new and more vigorous outlook for us all.

The Light of men implies a oneness of spirit which will ensure the brotherhood of men. True Brethren know that all men who profess belief in Him and keep His commandments are indeed brothers. It behooves us all to keep our minds clear and our eyes focused upon that truth in order that we may avoid all pharisaical impediments.

Again, there is the matter of Church organization. This is an age of practical thinking and efficiency. We would no more think of running our business or home in a haphazard, go-as-you-can basis than would we expect them to sprout wings and fly. There are certain common-sense rules of co-ordination that we all accept and apply from day to day.

And so it has been of the Church. Organization was found to be necessary from the beginning. The Lord looks after His own, but He also expects those Chosen Ones to exhibit some initiative on their own. There is no excuse for the lack of organization frequently apparent in our congregations, nor for the failure to coordinate our national work.

Surely the program of the Master deserves the best that we can give it. To demand that it have a quality of dignity, of reverence, and of beauty is assuredly in keeping with the impressive bearing of Jesus. We need to recapture the sense of holiness in our worship and to extend it to all phases of Church work. The early Church was not coldly formal, but it was dignified to the point of winning the attention and fearful respect of the powers of the day; it was not pretentious nor was it in any sense of the word cheap—or slipshod; it may have been simple in the simplicity of Jesus, but it was also rich and vibrant in its concentration of purpose.

Here again, it is my belief that this Conference would do well to reaffirm its conviction in the nature of the true function of the Church. There is a need for direction here, perhaps through an advisory committee which could encourage a deeper sense of reverence in our Churches and greater coordination of all our efforts. The same democratic, yet careful, planning which we so readily apply to business is not too much for the Lord's work! I am persuaded that this can be done without in any way infringing upon the congregational independence so long cherished in our Church. On the other hand, our chief objective is the attaining of a closer relationship to Him, who is the Light of Men, and if in our quest we should find it necessary to alter some of our preconceptions, we should allow nothing to prevent our moving closer to that ideal. The Church can have no loyalties which impair a clear vision of the road that leads to the strait gate.

A final area of Church interest is personal relationships between people and responsibility to government. Jesus did not ignore these fields and the early Church recognized them in various ways. That the Church must be a force in political affairs is apparent if she is to be an effective witness among men. That she must assert herself on the side of social welfare is also evident if she is to exemplify the compassion of the Master. The problem is one of balance in which things of primary importance will receive proper emphasis and matters of lesser value will not be forgotten. The Church was never intended to be a social welfare society, but it was most certainly intended to have and show an active interest in such work; it was never meant to be a political pressure group, but it has a sacred responsibility to insist upon good government at all times.

The temptation is either to remain static and do nothing in these matters or to become over-enthusiastic and do nothing else! Since such values change frequently, it would be well for the Church to review its stand on important social and political issues and to make clear such a stand. Some of our attitudes have remained unchanged since the Nineteenth Century and have consequently become senile and have fallen into disuse or confusion. Here again, this Conference might create a special commission to review our stand, historical and actual, upon a series of political and social topics which have a bearing upon the Christian life. The Light of Men cannot be compatible with the devious practices of the world. There needs to be a constant, aggressive interest on the part of those who are living in that light. This interest must be positive, not negative; it must be Christ-centered, not self-centered; it must be expanding, not contracting.

The problem then, is simple, yet its solution is most elusive. The great Whistler was once approached by an admirer who asked, "How do you do it? How do you create such masterful paintings?"

"Why, madame," replied the painter, "it is quite simple. You have but to apply the proper colors in correct amounts in selected places on the canvas, and you have your picture."

Thus we have to but follow the example of the early Church, making proper deductions and applications, and our Church will become the blessed Church that we envision. Yet the attaining of that goal is far from easy. It requires more than any one thing; it demands a balanced coordination of all. As Christ was simple in His teachings of a most complex truth, so the Church must retain a unified and clear outlook while performing the most complex task faced by any institution of our society.

We cannot afford to be bystanders in the great pageant unfolding before us. We must not be esthetics standing on a balcony of synthetic morality called respectability, as we watch civilization march to its doom. It is not enough for us to be nice people. The scorn of the Church today is that it is filled with "nice" people armed with the sword of decency. The world doesn't need any more "nice" people; it desperately needs some new men.

Such, then, is the calling of the Brethren Church. Alert to its possibilities, it can and must assert the power of God which alone can make men want to do right. I have indicated some of the steps which might be taken by this Conference to encourage such a development. I have no fears for the future of a Brethren Church conscious of its power and aware of its responsibilities; I am gravely concerned for the Church which rests on its laurels and turns its gaze backward or inward as it examines its program. The former is a Church which basks in the beneficent glow of God's glory; the latter is an organization which at best lurks in the shadows of a setting sun.

Let us remember that "life" implies a vibrancy and an energy which can only move forward, and together work for the full realization of the content of that Life which is the Light of Men.

"I learn as the years roll onward,
And leave the past behind,
That much I had counted sorrow
But proves that my Lord was kind.
That many a flower I longed for
Had a hidden thorn of pain,
And many a rugged by-path
Led to fields of golden grain."

A Few Items From the 1949 General Conference

PROMPTLY AT THE APPOINTED HOUR Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, Moderator, called the Sixty-first General conference of the Brethren Church to order. After a few appropriate remarks, he introduced Rev. W. Clayton Berkshire as Conference Song Director, who, with Rev. W. S. Benshoff at the piano, led in a service of song which was enjoyed by one of the largest Monday-first-night of conference that we have seen in years. The lower floor of the College Gymnasium was well filled, with very many on each side balcony.

As a "first" in the special music which had been scheduled for the entire conference, Dorman Ronk, accompanied by Mrs. Ronk, rendered a beautiful vocal solo. The Music Committee needs be commended for the time and search they have made for musical talent for the conference sessions, which are proving a fine transition between sessions and lectures.

At this writing the conference choir is being rehearsed for their work under the direction of Mrs. J. D. Hamel, the former Miss Jean Rowsey.

The Moderator had charge of the devotions and led the conference to a clear understanding of the chosen Conference theme, "Forward together with Christ in Church Expansion."

The message of the evening was delivered by Vice Moderator J. Garber Drushal, who used for his theme, "Forwardness and Faithfulness." We hope to bring this inspiring message to the Evangelist readers in the near future.

Throughout the first full day of the conference (Tuesday) the delegates and conference visitors kept coming. The opening simultaneous sessions were well attended and when the morning business session convened the conference membership committee reported delegates as follows: Lay—170; Ministerial—72; District—5; Cooperative—1, for a total of 248, nine more than the first session of last year. Wednesday's additional delegates brought the total to 344, as against 315 for the same time last year. Wednesday's delegates as added were Lay—56; Ministerial—8; Cooperative—2.

The first business session on Tuesday brought the election of officers for the coming year. While the entire officary was not elected on the first ballot, the majority were, leaving the office of Vice Moderator and two members of the Committee on Committees to be elected on Wednesday. The election was completed at the Wednesday morning session and the result of the complete election is to be found on the front of this issue.

Moderator Clayton delivered the retiring moderator's address at the Tuesday morning session. It is to be found in this issue, shorn, however, of the little asides of which President Clayton is a past master. You have the meat of the address, but still you will lack the personality of the one who delivered it.

We will have more to say of the Bible lectures of the conference in the next issue of the Evangelist. Suffice to say here that they were of the highest order.

The reports which have been given so far (up to noon Wednesday) have showed progress in the work of the various interests of the denomination. The Publication Board session held on Wednesday morning gave forth a very gratifying note in the condition of the Publication business.

The annual session of the National Sunday School Association on Tuesday night was highlighted by enthusiastic reports of the Summer camps, there being a representative of each camp present to set forth the merits of his chosen camp activities. The one thing that especially impressed the writer was the emphasis laid on the spiritual side of the camp life and the number of confessions of Christ that were made in each of the camps. This speaks well for the emphasis which is laid on the messages of the camp.

The new departure in the closing evening messages was exhibited in the first of such messages delivered by Rev. E. M. Riddle. These messages are strictly evangelistic in their appeal, both to any that might be in the conference without having accepted Christ, and to the rededication of life by any who might feel so led. Brother Riddle used for his theme, "Repent for Victory."

In the remaining space we want to say a word about the Young People's part in this conference. Brethren Youth is on its toes and the program which they have formed and are carrying out is one that merits the best of praise. About seventy-five have been registered in this department so far, with come coming in each day. Too much credit cannot be given to Brother Charles Munson, National Youth Director, for the progress of these plans. He has had fine help from others identified with Brethren Youth in this work. We will also have more to say of this in next issue.

Now until next week we will sign off from the General Conference.

"Run the straight race through God's good grace;
Lift up thine eyes, and seek His face;
Life with its way before us lies,
Christ is the path and Christ the prize."

"Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,
And back of the flour the mill,
And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower
And the sun and the Father's will."

Spiritual Meditations

Rev. Dyoll Belote

COMETH THE MORNING

"Watch therefore, for ye know not on what day your Lord cometh." Matt. 24:42 (R. V.)

THE TIME AND PLACE of the Lord's coming still intrigues the human mind. The manner and the certainty of it are clearly set forth in Scripture. Many and different are our days, and on any one of them the Lord may come. Hence it behooves us to hallow each day as it comes, because "He may come today."

It may be a day of ordinary business and toil. Then whatsoever we do, we must do it heartily as unto our Master. Cometh He on a day like this, we should want Him to find our work honestly and faithfully discharged. Ours should be an eye that "winces at false work and loves the true."

Or maybe it will be a day of weakness and suffering. Then should we suffer patiently, meekly, quietly, even thankfully. Such will be our opportunity to show that His grace has marvelous power to sustain us. We would escape the humiliation of having Him come and find us complaining.

Again it may be a day bright with a special gladness and success. He is the One to be praised for that gladness and success, and I will glory but in His goodness and mercy. What an eternal regret if He should, coming in the zenith of that success, find me boastful and proud of my own prowess, rather than glorying in His grace.

But if He cometh in a day of worship and prayer, then that day should be lived in sincerity and truth. In His eyes my religion should be a part of me, joyous and glad-some because of my Saviour and Lord. Why not live as though He had already come?

The poet has these challenging and gladsome verses:

The Morning Cometh

Great and glorious morning

First morning of the Resurrection Day,—

When to Himself, without one moment's warning,
His ransomed church entire He'll catch away.

Glad anticipation

Perhaps today may sound the mystic "Come!"

Then—bliss beyond all thought or revelation,—

The Father's House! The Welcome! and the Home!

—Linwood, Maryland.

"I said to the man that stood at the gate of the year,
'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown,' and he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than a light and safer than the known way.'"

—Minnie L. Haskins.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

But pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snowfall on the river,
A moment white, then melts forever.

From Tam O'Shanter

—Robert Burns.

No man ever got pleasure by aiming at it. The only way to attain pleasure is to deliberately aim away from it. This seems like a paradox. It is, but facts bear out the truth.

Pleasure has always been a frail, evasive thing. It is so earnestly sought by purchase, by possession, by taste. All these too often grow stale and no pleasure is found in them. It is true that those who seek most diligently for pleasure are exactly the ones who fail to come into possession of it. It eludes them and it should.

Those who spend their lives in the vain pursuit of pleasure are selfish and unworthy people and fail in the end. They die disillusioned and disappointed. The small pleasures they experience and enjoy wither like the frail poppy or last like a snowflake on the bosom of a river, and are gone.

Real pleasure comes only by indirection, not definitely sought for or expected. It comes as a by-product as the result of worthy deeds and personal sacrifices. It makes itself known when the person is engaged in some worthy task, and creeps unobserved into his heart. He finds it in the thankful glow in the eyes of some unfortunate child that was fed by his sacrificing hand. It is found by the man or woman who has labored diligently to make his community better when he looks into the happy homes his work helped to make that way.

Old Scrooge in Dickens' Christmas Carol found this out to his heart's content, and he also found unbounded happiness when Tiny Tim Crotchett blessed him. No such thing had ever happened to him before. For years he thought pleasure resided with his old money bags. To find out he was mistaken was a real revelation. Right here he found out that genuine pleasure comes by indirection. This fact lodged in his heart and changed the course of his life.

Robert Burns was talking about the pleasures that fail as soon as they are experienced, the seeming pleasures that are sought by the short-sighted multitude. These are the kind of pleasures we pay dearly for and from which we reap such meager benefits. They are deceitful will-o'-the-wisps that lure us on and disappoint us in nothingness.

There are pleasures that are substantial, that live with the one who has helped to lift burdens and ease pain. These have, no doubt, cost money and labor. But the by-product was pleasure, the kind that lasts and gives soul-satisfying comfort. Let us not be deceived in our quest for pleasure.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

"Here and There"

"Thanks for listenin'," as Kate Smith is wont to say. One of the most gratifying sentences I hear as I travel from place to place and from one field of service to another is, "I read your Travel Flashes." Or, "I am so glad to meet you, for I always read your Travel Flashes in the Evangelist."

"Oh, Lord, How Long?"

Do you know how long it has been since I first began to "flash back" the interesting things I see and hear? Well, I do not know precisely myself, but it was long before many "Progressives" knew me or loved me. They began on our wedding trip (more than three years after our wedding) to the great West, when the "Gospel Messenger" gave me the privilege of writing for the expense of that trip. Did we have a nice time and see much to "flash back?" I'll say we did! It took fire as a headliner and has served me well for these more than forty years. I am so happy that after all the wrecks and trials and troubles we have met in train, trolley and automobile, we have been "delivered out of them all" by a gracious Lord and Keeper who promised it all and whom I know will never leave nor forsake, despite the risks and undertakings I am advised to avoid. And before I leave this topic, let me say that I am persuaded that I have been "here and there" with some risks and it has not "been in vain." These journeys have almost without exception, been for the work of my Master whose order is, "Cry aloud and spare not."

It was of great concern to the great Paul that he labor "not in vain." It is also to those who are "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord" whose labor is said to be "not in vain." 1 Cor. 15:58. To the Galatians Paul protested that if they were to go back to the half-way Christianity of legalism, his labor was "in vain." Gal. 4:11. See also Phil. 1:22; 2:25; 1 Thess. 1:3; 2:9, and many others. There is no part of our program that contemplates idleness—much less desertion. The easy gospel (?) dished out in many pulpits and Sunday School classes is a far cry from that of sixty years ago. Or even from the realistic practice of some who sacrifice and give of time, life and money now.

At home (College Corner Church) I had not used many of the "spare" Sundays I had in my agreement with them and so, for an opportunity to mingle with the Youngsters, I accepted an invitation

To Shishewana

It is a privilege that too many of our people do not seem to appreciate—that of spending time at our own Camp. I was asked to help, but the severity of the program (four classes in succession and one other message besides each day) was more than I had anticipated. But "the Lord is my strength and my shield" (Psalm 19:14; 22:19; 62:7; 144:1), and I am pleased to believe that "my strength is made perfect in weakness" (2 Cor. 12:9) even as was Paul's. It is great to mingle with the youth of our day who are given to going to good places for spiritual help, rather than to the more numerous bad places where they are ruined. I really believe that this bunch of Intermediates were of exceptional calibre and feel sure that if they remember or refer to their Note Books in days to come, they will not be too ignorant of the peculiar people to whom they belong as Brethren. 1 Peter 2:9; Titus 2:14.

Peculiar People?

Yes, that's what God's people are and always have been. See Deut. 14:2 and Psalm 135:4, then ask yourself if you'd not like to be one to whom was given such precious promises and who had received so many great deliverances! But the price of all good things is high. 1 Timothy 2:9; 1 Peter 3:3. Brethren were not ashamed once to be called "peculiar people." Now, many of them "rank among the rankest" in worldliness. They shall also pay the price and not for a short time, but everlastingly. Matthew 24:48.

Shishewana Again

You should see it now! With the new canal soon finished and the lurking place for many mosquitos done away; with new lots opening up and a chance for our own people to find there what they'll not find elsewhere—a Brethren atmosphere, cordiality, frank congeniality; without formality to walk up to a stranger and say, "Do I know you, and if not may we get acquainted?" causing no offense; to discover a "brother" or "sister" from another church, state, or foreign field, happy to meet you and to enjoy fellowship in the Lord, denied almost any place else one might go.

The cry has gone forth too, for help. The expense of excavating a channel such as may already have been completed, entails much expense and raises many problems. The trustees are groping with them and have only Brethren to whom to make their appeal and only Brethren in Conference asked them to do it. I appeal with all the force of my being to you to hear this call and answer with dollars, for nothing else will suffice now.

Next—Ashland

There, where to answer the demands of safety and compelled by state authorities to make extensive changes for the safety of the students and professors, there they are tearing down one of the finest landmarks of a former kind of architecture which moderns would not take the time to create (the winding staircase in Founders Hall) one that will cause heartaches and laments to lose, they, after all, are simply doing the thing they must and that to save our institution for future generations; the building that most of all makes a center and shrine for Brethren. It would be folly to disregard it at any cost and that will offer Brethren another chance to sacrifice, for that is what it will cost—immediate sacrifice—a test of our fidelity and devotion, lacking here, all will fall down—poor teachers, unless they are properly sustained; poor students, if they are compelled to go to another school; poor denomination, if denied any or all.

"Speak Again"

That man Rowsey, pastor of the Ashland Church, graduate of Ashland College, has a way about him, as readers of the Evangelist all know, of aligning folk who visit around there, for service. I had seen him "buck the line" in football; had noted his rise among our ministers to the place he holds with distinction; had worked with him in a fine revival at Goshen, and how could I deny his request to speak to the prayer meeting folk? and, of course I did not. I entered the service as vigorously as I usually do, a bit tired from the Camp experience and the journey, but recovered my hesitation and promised! But if I ever was sicker than the next two days, I do not remember it. If there was anything left inside me, I wonder where it could have been lurking. I was like the fellow on the lower deck, who was losing all his $3.00 dinner over the side of the ship, when a "red bandana" floated past his dimming vision, he gulped, "Oh my, there goes my liver!" But I recovered in a few days and again I was repeating, "Many are the afflictions, but the Lord delivered them out of them all." Psalm 34:19.

For Prohibition

Canceling my appointment for our church because I was too weak to return, I came to Carey, Ohio, where a brother is "my doctor" and by Monday we were able to return to "hot, humid, sweltering" Indiana where for the next three days we "came and went" to the conclave of Prohibitionists from all over the U. S. A., and where I was programmed for three efforts. Unable to stay, we came home after each effort to rest and return. Even the "wets" say that Prohibition is coming back and are frightened. Hooray! It is getting so nasty, ridiculous and devastating to society, church and state, that our "cocktail" diplomats ought to lose their places of authority. When the Church concludes it is so, that "The Wets would destroy the church if they could, and the Church could destroy the Traffic if it would," we may get some place. But just read John F. Locke in the Evangelist of July 30. Hurrah for a Hero! And it's True!

THE FIRST PSALM, REVISED

Blessed is the church member who walketh not in the way of the worldling, nor standeth on the baseball ground on Sunday, nor sitteth in the seat of a card player.

But his delight is in the worship of the church and to the services he goeth morning and night.

He shall be like a worker in the vineyard of the Lord; who bringeth his friends unto Christ; his influence also is for good, and whatsoever he doeth is open and above board.

The indifferent church members are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

tions amounting to a number of dollars. Without the fine support of the many, this project could not have been put in operation. That the new equipment has more than met the anticipations of those most interested, is being manifest each and every day. We are sure that it will be a lasting memorial to Brother G. S. Baer, who was so mightily interested in its completion.

The W. M. S. Water Cooler Gift Has Been a Boon

The more we use the fine water cooler that the National Woman's Missionary Society gave the Publishing Company shop, the more appreciative we become. With the weather at its constant 90 to 95 degrees of heat and humidity, a nice cold drink of water has been the life saver of the employees. While we have expressed our appreciation before for this fine gift, we again wish to send out our "Thanks" to the ladies for this very useful and practical gift.

A Vesper Service was held at 8:00 o'clock at Rhodes' Hilltop, on Sunday evening, August 14th. The service was jointly sponsored by the W. M. S. and the Laymen's Organization.

We note that the Laymen's Organization at St. James has recently elected officers as follows: President—Isaac Litton; Vice President—Donald Lowery; Secretary—Gardner Moats; Assistant Secretary—Carson Metz; Treasurer—Myron Bloom; Advisor—Rev. Freeman Ankrum.

Uniontown, Penna. We note that Brother and Sister Ralph Mills, who were recently called to the Uniontown Second Pastorate have moved there and are now living at 60 Lemon Street. We wish them much success in this their first pastorate.

Bryan, Ohio. Brother E. J. Black, Bryan pastor, says, "A recording for use on the radio will be made at the evening service (bulletin does not give date). This will enable the audience to see exactly how our broadcasting is done. The whole radio service will be put on wire recording and will be used at a future broadcast when the pastor is absent."

Recently the Bryan Junior Church had as its guest speaker Lieut. Col. Glen Peterson, who spoke on India. He told how he killed a thirty-five foot Python, caught and trained monkeys, and exhibited many interesting articles from India.

Brother Black also tells how he and his good wife found the refrigerator "stuffed" with fried chicken, pie, eggs, dessert and other things, when they returned from the vacation in the east. Maybe it pays to go on a vacation.

Waterloo, Iowa. Brother V. E. Meyer, Waterloo pastor, has this to say in his August 14th bulletin: "At the official Board meeting on Monday night (August 8th) it was decided that there would be a fund raising drive for the emergency building fund for Ashland Ashland College. A goal of $1,000.00 was set as a minimum. This money will be raised by personal canvass, which will start right after the first of September." That surely is good news for the Ashland College Trustees.

In the absence of Brother Meyer, the Guest Speaker for August 21st and September 4th was announced as Rev. Warren Martin, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Waterloo.

A PRE-VIEW OF THE NEW FILM "DUST OR DESTINY"

A bird that flies non-stop from Labrador to Argentina, bats that use radar to guide them in night flying, fish that lay eggs on dry land—and even a close-up of the human heart—are among the inexplicable miracles of nature to be included in "Dust or Destiny," a new scientific-religious motion picture scheduled for September release.

"Dust or Destiny" is a 40-minute film with a new kind of box-office appeal. It will not be advertised as super-colossal and it will not play in any of the nation's 16,788 movie theaters. But within the next year it will be shown to audiences numbering more than a million people both here and abroad—audiences in America's 76,000 churches as well as schools, civic clubs, military bases, and television shows.

Secret attraction of "Dust or Destiny" is its fresh approach to the problem of relating science and religion. Produced in the Los Angeles science studios of Moody Bible Institute, it is fourth in a series of 16 mm. "Sermons from Science" that have been attracting attention with color-sound films on the atom, fish that talk, and biological subjects.

First in the series, "God of Creation," is a required part of indoctrination for every United States Air Force trainee. All of the films are being widely used in connection with President Truman's Character Guidance Program for servicemen.

Opening "Dust or Destiny" will be a sequence on miracles of the human body—the hand, the eye, the ear, and the heart, including operations on the eye and heart. Next is the story of a 500-mile race illustrating the uncanny flight instincts of the homing pigeon; followed by scenes of the Pacific golden plover which flies 2,000 uncharted miles over open sea from Alaska to the Hawaiian Islands each year.

Also in the bird sequence is the American plover, making an annual non-stop trip from Labrador to Argentina, and the Arctic tern, flying from the North Pole to the South Pole.

The only mammal that flies—the bat—furnishes the cameraman with dramatic material for the next part of his tale. From caves in Texas and California, Moody Institute of Science staff members capture a number of bats, including Mickey, a baby orphan who drinks milk from a doll bottle. Then they perform a series of experiments with Mickey to prove that radar—only recently discovered by scientists—has been the bat's secret guide to night flying all along.

Exclusive movies of a grunion run are shown in the next section. Defying all the laws of watery findom, these small fish occasionally make nocturnal visits to California beaches and bury their eggs in the sand. Though few Californians have ever witnessed this event, M. I. S. photographers not only recorded the sight of hundreds of these spawning grunion on film, but took tiny eggs into the laboratory to watch their development under the microscope. By means of photomicrography and lapse-time photography, this sequence in "Dust or Destiny" portrays the actual growth of the eye, heart, tail, and other parts of the fish before hatching.

Tropism—the response of plants to gravity, water, and light—is subject of the fifth major part of the film, including the story of giant redwoods.

In closing "Dust or Destiny," producer Irwin A. Moon asks thoughtfully, "Can all these phenomena be the result of mere chance? Or is there a divine planner who created and controls this universe of ours?" If there is no creator, Dr. Moon asserts, then man is subject to no law beyond the law of expediency. But—if there is even a possibility of a creator—then "our responsibility is to know him and his law and the salvation he offers," he concludes.

Dr. Moon originated "Sermons from Science" on film after requests for personal appearance tours with his scientific demonstrations became more than he could handle. He is director of Moody Institute of Science in Los Angeles, a research branch of Chicago's Moody Bible Institute.

One hundred leading American cities will be holding premiere showings of "Dust or Destiny" beginning in September, according to Dr. Moon. Previous films in the series have been titled "God of Creation," "God of the Atom," and "Voice of the Deep."

CAN WE EDUCATE WITHOUT RELIGION?

Scripture: Prov. 3:1-6, 13-18; John 8:31, 32

For The Leader

THERE IS CONSIDERABLE turmoil today over this matter of education. In facing another new year of schooling, we are made to wonder just what the year will do to our youth of America. Day in and day out, we will be picking up little bits of information, which, taken as a whole, will formulate our attitudes, beliefs, and destiny. Thinking people are concerned about what they see and hear of in our schools. The problem definitely is acute. Somewhere along the line our schools are failing to instill into the hearts of our youth those vital teachings which will make of them stalwart, law-abiding and satisfactory citizens of our land. It is our purpose to analyze and seek to suggest ways by which the problem can be solved.

DISCUSSION

1. THE WORDS OF AUTHORITY. Way back, long before many of us here tonight were born, a significant statement was made. It was in 1923 that the American Lawyer's Association stated that "America is now the most lawless, civilized nation on this planet, conditions having grown steadily worse since 1890." Records in our prisons reveal that crime has increased steadily since 1904. Now, what does that mean to us tonight? It was about 1925 that Sunday School and Church attendance began to show a great decline. And we see today the almost complete absence of multitudes of our people from the Church services. Can you deny this? With all the modern equipment, and better trained teachers, we in America should be doing far better than this in educating our boys and girls in our schools. There's something wrong somewhere.

2. WORDS OF WISDOM TO ANSWER THE QUESTION. Horace Mann, father of our modern school system said in 1848, "It is only religion (meaning Christianity) that will keep us from wholesale vice and licentiousness, and corrupt civilization." Thomas Huxley, a famous scientist, said in 1873, that "intellectual training alone might produce 'clever devils.'" He urged a teaching of Christian principles in the schools. N. M. Butler once said, "Our schools turn out intellectual giants and moral pigmies." Roger Babson adds his thought when he said, "Trying to operate the schools without religion is like putting a pistol in the hands of a child." There we have it, young people. You hear much in your daily school life that religion is not a part of it. But wise men have prophesied, and we are now seeing the results.

3. PREVAILING CONDITIONS. To brief us on the situation, we could refer you to F. B. I. reports for recent years when they report drunkenness among high school youth, sex crimes, vandalism, thefts, etc., are constantly increasing. Sadistic murders and other crimes by youth have reached amazing proportions. The facts reveal that these conditions began to grow at the same time that religious teaching in the schools was suppressed. This is an undeniable fact. Years ago, the schools gave emphasis to the Bible. Its precepts and morals were used as examples by the teacher, and followed by the students. It was added to by the teachings of the home, plus the church. But now, we guess, we've just gotten too big to be "religious." So, out it goes. The "cultured" people consider it beneath their dignity to even mention religion. The things of the church are ridiculed by the majority of our youth, and their parents. Where does that put us as Americans? Right down the road to national ruin. You cannot educate without a teaching of religious faith in God!

4. A WELL ROUNDED EDUCATION. We educate in the "A-B-C's," the "numbers," writing, etc. We teach the arts, the history, the languages. We insert home economics and manual training. We even delve into the social customs and practices of the day. We offer vocational guidance courses. So, a graduate of our schools can do several things. He can get a job, earn money, act nice at a party, wave a flag, and go to Hell. It doesn't matter even if he falls into a life of crime or becomes a drunkard. Our founder's attitude of severe punishment for crime as a protection for society seems to be done away with. If a person commits a crime he is (a) crazy, (b) mis-guided. So he is (a) committed to a mental hospital to get cured, or (b) given a suspended sentence and "told not to do it any more." There are no more drunkards in the world (Propaganda has done in a few years what temperance has been trying to do since Noah—that is, abolish the drunkard.) To call a man a drunkard would be to offend him. He is merely sick with alcoholicism. It is hard to imagine a great people taken over by such rotten teachings. But then, when you educate without Christian principles that's what you get. So, in order to make a person fit for society and fit for heaven when he dies, we must include Christian training in his education.

5. "THE BIBLE SAYS." This has been the greatest controller of the individual, the greatest help for all mankind's improvement that has ever been. Men have followed the Bible and lived well, and died better. So, in our passage from Proverbs we learn that in keeping the commandments of the Lord we shall have length of days, long life (eternal life), and peace. We shall have favor with God and man. In John's reference we see Jesus as the Way in which we are to walk for truth, understanding and freedom. What a great nation we shall be when we realize that precious secret and learn to include observance of God's commands in our schools.

QUESTIONS

1. Can we teach the principles of Christianity without teaching "denominationalism?" The cry seems to be that we can't teach "religion" because we will favor one church over another. What do you think?

2. Can moral and ethical values be taught without also teaching the religious principle back of them?

"SHOW US THE FATHER"

John 14:8, 9; 1 John 4:12

"Show us the Father," Philip said,
 "So shall our hearts be satisfied."
 "And hast thou been with Me so long, Yet hast not known Me?" Christ replied.
 "He who hath seen Me hath seen God,
 I and My Father are but one;
 In Him My justice bides its time,
 In Me His love and grace are shown."

"Show us thy God," men challenge us,
 "If God there be, where doth He dwell?
 Give us some proof that He exists
 Outside the myths the scholars tell."
 Nay, friends, we cannot show you God,
 No proof, no picture can we give,
 For He is spirit, void of form,
 And none may look on Him and live.

But we can show you Christ, His Son,
 God's brightness veiled for mortal eyes,
 The glory of the Godhead pent
 In human flesh that toils and dies.
 The image of His Father made
 Man's image also while He trod
 Earth's ways as Son of God and Man,
 And who hath seen Him hath seen God.

—Annie Johnson Flint.

"GOD WAS MANIFEST IN THE FLESH"

Scripture: John 14:8-14

Hymns and Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers;

JESUS WAS GOD IN HUMAN FLESH (1 Tim. 3:16; 1 John 1:2). The Father and the Son had the closest identification (John 14:10). Their plans and purposes now and always were the same. Christ was in God (John 1:18); and God was in Christ (2 Cor. 5:19). Jesus was very God in human flesh, yet without sin. He was hurt because His own closest followers could not identify Him with the Father. Men were perplexed about His Deity when His Divine nature was under a veil of poverty, weakness and humiliation. To reach the Father we need only come to Christ (John 14:9). Nothing short of seeing the Father in Christ will suffice us!

The Jehovah of the Old Testament is the Jesus of the New Testament. Jehovah Jesus gave the law, the ark of the covenant, the passover, the first promise of a Redeemer. The Jehovah text is Isaiah 40:3, which is fulfilled in Matthew 3:3. Make a comparison of other companion texts of the Old and New Testaments: Isa. 44:6 and Rev. 1:8; Jer. 23:6 and 1 Cor. 1:30; Psa. 24:10 and 1 Cor. 2:8; Isa. 43:11 and Luke 19:10; John 10:9; Psa. 23 with John 10:11; Deut. 30:20 with John 1:4; 5:26; Isa. 60:20 with John 1:1-4; 8:12.

"Immanuel" means "God with us," or "God among us" (Isa. 7:14; Matt. 1:23). Thomas used the name of "God" to apply to Jesus in John 20:28. He was a Jew and was not blaspheming. Jesus accepted his worship—a worship applicable only to God. Jesus assumed the name of Jehovah. Because He made Himself God the Jews thought they had a right to kill Him (John 8:25, 53, 58). Christ identified Himself with the God Who spoke in Exodus 3:6. Every attribute of the Old Testament Jehovah is claimed by Christ. As the Legislator on Mt. Sinai He could rescind or reverse in the Sermon on the Mount (Ex. 20:2a, 20:10 with Matt. 12:8). "Who can forgive sins but God only?" Jesus-God is our Forgiver (Psa. 130:4 with Matt. 9:6). There is but One Judge (Psa. 98:9; John 15:22). Christ invited and received the worship of men (John 9:35-38). Christ existed in the personality of God—with God as God (Col. 2:9). The chief attribute of God is holiness. His omniscience was shown when Nathaniel was under the fig tree seven miles away with a hill between (John 1:48). Christ is omnipresent (Acts 17:27; Matt. 18:20). Christ was an instrument and channel of creation. He created everything. He was rich and had everything but the love and affection and salvation of hell-bent sinners. For this reason He became poor (2 Cor. 8:9) that we through His poverty might become rich (Rom. 8:17). We may have the riches of His grace. His pardon wipes out our guilty past. He wants to live His Life in us and free us from our bad habits. That is what Paul meant when he said, "For me to live is Christ."

PSALMS FOR DAILY LIVING

Lesson: Psalms 15; 24:1-6; 143:8-10

SOMEONE has very truly said, "The sum total of the influence of our lives is not found in what we do any one particular day, but in the average which we find in our 'day by day' living"

The above might be summed up by saying, "Our influence is to be found in the reflected attitudes of those who live with us day by day; who see us as we retire for the night, and as we arise in the morning to meet the problems of the new day; who sit across from us at the breakfast table, and who mingle thought with thought throughout the day, not for one day or even two, but year in and year out. It is what we are moment by moment, not merely what we were on any one yesterday, nor what we may be on any one tomorrow—but what we are NOW, right at this very moment.

Jesus certainly recognized the need of a day by day examination of self. He said, "Take up your cross daily, and follow Me (daily)." That which is a cross today, may be a crown tomorrow; what seems to be an unbearable burden today, may be a lightened load on the morrow; where we found helplessness today, we may find strength with the rising of the new morning's sun; what is a song of sorrow today, may suddenly change to a chant of praise tomorrow.

That is why we find the Psalms so full of help for each succeeding day. That is why, when we read them, we find solace to our souls and food for spiritual sustenance. For it is here we find food for every phase of Christian living. True, it is not always seasoned to suit our taste; sometimes it even leaves a bitter taste, but more often we arise from our reading and meditation with the sweetened satisfaction of the perfect meal and with our soul sustained by the Bread of Life.

As you read from the Psalms selected for our lesson today (the 15th, 24th and 143rd) note the many things there that are essential to Daily Christian Living. There is honesty; purity of life and thought; clean living and clean speech; thoughtful consideration of others; unselfishness; trust in an All-wise Father God; humbleness of spirit and contriteness of heart—all these brought about by a close and loving consideration of Jehovah.

The study cannot be exhausted by merely stopping with the appointed Psalms. Dozens of other Psalms converge upon our minds as we think of our daily existence; as we live with God and our fellowman.

Probably the best known Psalm, after Psalm 1 and Psalm 23, is Psalm 24. Its every word touches deep into our lives as we live them day by day. Here we find a blessing promised—"and righteousness from the God of our salvation" (Verse 5). As we ascend the "hill of the Lord" let it be with "clean hands and a pure heart," and with a soul devoid of "vanity."

Make a practice of reading from the Psalms daily—it will do you good in your "Every-day Living."

The Brethren Berean Camp

Reported by Rev. J. Wesley Platt, Pastoral Counsellor

THE BRETHREN BEREAN CAMP for 1949 is now history. At their own camp ground, Camp Berea, in Tuolumne County, in the Sierra Nevada Mountains in central California, the sixteenth annual camp meeting of this present organization was held from June 22nd to 29th. An excellent corps of workers made up the staff that led in three periods of classes for the various age groups every day, and in addition a general assembly was held in which young people mainly had charge of devotions, special music, testimony and the like.

Among the members of the staff were, Spencer Gentle, Charlie Johnson, John Wesley Hathaway, Horace Huse, Robert Madoski, Marjorie Liddicoat, Flora Stewart, Mrs. Victor Johnson, Edna Johnson, Arleene Bianchi, Beverly Gall, Hazel Crom, Estelle Huse, Verda Brooks, Jullion Hallett, J. W. Platt and several others.

There were well around 125 early in the camp, and by Sunday there were more than 300.

The joint meetings rather kept before the camp the theme, "The Christian's Spiritual Growth."—"As babes desire the sincere milk of the Word that ye may grow thereby; and grow in grace and in the knowledge of God." The reports that have come to me directly were all appreciative of the lessons presented by the various leaders.

Of course family altar, led by camp-mother Estelle Huse, and camp-father Julion Hallett, always elicited widespread interest. The nightly camp fires, first for juniors and then for the oldsters, showed effectively in the lives of many. There were several life work recruits. In several classes there were decisions for Christ. Three lads were baptized on Sunday afternoon by their request, in the presence of a large crowd. There were reconsecrations of life in a number of instances. One family visiting the camp were deeply moved to come back to Christ and, yielding to Him, left very happy they had come to camp. They live more than 200 miles away and earnestly asked that Brother Hathaway, who brought the evangelistic messages each night, and any others who would do so, to come up to their logging camp and conduct some meetings. Recently a card from Brother Hathaway advised us that he had gone up to their place and held three services, during which four more souls accepted Christ as Saviour. We do thank God for all the constructive, helpful effects and results of the camp.

Every afternoon was devoted to recreation of which Spencer Gentle had charge.

A number of improvements were made during the year, especially a sanitary center at the cost of almost $1,000.00, and a floor for the girls' dormitory tent. Since camp other improvements have gotten under way.

Since some of our Brethren Bereans have moved to neighboring cities and have also transferred their memberships and are active in these churches, at the pre-camp institute in May the Bereans voted to invite those churches to the camp. As a result of the invitation there were a number of folks from both Tracy and Modesto. There were numerous testimonies and expressions of the fine Christian fellowship that was mutually enjoyed.

As of now we are looking forward prayerfully to next year's camp, if our Lord should tarry to that time. A number of improvements, both to the physical property, as well as the camp program, are being considered. By planning now we can anticipate a larger and better camp. May our Father in heaven bless all our camps and cause them to result in the salvation of sinners and the otherwise enrichment of Christians in their decisions for Him.

At the close of camp each year officers are elected to carry on the work of the Brethren Berean Band. The election resulted in the selection of the following officary:

President	Donald Huse, Ripon
Vice-President	Donald Harnden, Manteca
Secretary	Edna Johnson, Manteca
Treasurer	Helen Ernst, Manteca (Stockton Church)

Pianists ..Arleene Bianchi, Ripon, Laberta Larsen, Manteca
ChoristersBeverly Gall, Ripon
Dorothy Harnden, Manteca
HistorianJean Hagstrom, Manteca
TrusteeHarry Ernst, Manteca (Stockton Church)

The Executive Committee selected the writer as pastor counsellor. I have written this report at the request of the new president.

BERLIN, PENNA., YOUNG PEOPLE'S C. E. NEWS

A Camp Juniata Rally was held at the Berlin Brethren Church on May 7th, at 6:30 o'clock in the evening. Several churches were represented: The First and Third Churches of Johnstown, Masontown, Vinco, Meyersdale and Berlin. We all enjoyed a very nice program. The meal was served by the young people of the church. About one hundred and forty were present for the Rally. The favors were boats with lollipops in them; each napkin showed a duck going to camp; and the program covers each had a cabin on it. We carried out the camp colors—red and gray. A good time was enjoyed by all who attended the Rally.

On June 13th the Young People's Christian Endeavor had a moonlight picnic at the Community Grove. After we had refreshments we played games. Then we went back to the fire and sang songs and choruses. There were eleven of the members present. This moonlight picnic was a most enjoyable affair.

The Christian Endeavor had charge of Prayer Meeting on June 15th. We sang several hymns; responsive reading of the scripture was followed by sentence prayers. Several of the campers sang camp songs. Delores Mosgrave asked Bible questions and the people answered them. We then formed a Friendship Circle and closed with a song and the Mizpah Benediction.

At our Christian Endeavor program on June 19th, Rae Musser, now Mrs. Robert Huffman, a graduate of Ashland College, gave a talk entitled, "Story of Job."

Our Christian Endeavor has been trying to be 90% active in phases of Church and Sunday School work, both at home and in other churches. While Rev. Miller was holding meetings in Masontown, thirteen of us attended one of the services, and Regina Hendershot sang a special musical number. We took charge of a Wednesday night prayer meeting service during Rev. Miller's absence.

While Rev. Miller was in Jones Mills for a meeting, two cars of Christian Endeavorers took special musical numbers to an evening service. Again during this period we had the Wednesday evening prayer meeting program.

News From Our Churches

PLEASANT HILL, OHIO

The last six and a half years have been filled with activity and blessing for the good people of the Brethren Church at Pleasant Hill. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Attendance

In 1943 we reached the 200 mark in our Sunday School only one Sunday during the year; in 1944—one Sunday; in 1945—two Sundays; in 1946—three Sundays; in 1947—five Sundays; in 1948—eleven Sundays, and in 1949 we have an average of 200 for the first twenty-six Sundays of the year.

The blessings of the Lord plus the devotion and faithfulness of the loyal people here have made this record possible. Their wholehearted response to their pastor's leadership is a delight to the heart.

New Building

With the increased attendance came the need for more room. As a result a building committee was selected and things soon began to happen. The first thought was to build a frame educational unit on the west side of the church. Then permastone was considered with a view to covering the entire building. The boys, however, were men of vision and chose a beautiful design of varicolored brick for material. Next they more than doubled the size of the first proposed unit. Now the lovely new building stands, almost completed and altogether paid for, as a monument to the spiritual vision, faith and Christian loyalty of our building committee and the people of the congregation. They have worked together in perfect harmony from the start.

This gives us a brick building 76 feet long and 20 feet wide running along the west side of the church and continuing around the corner on the south side about 38 feet.

We have five large rooms on the main floor including a new baptistry, and enlarged and remodeled rostrum in the old building. The entire new part has a basement under it with rest rooms, kitchen and spacious auditorium with fireplace. The new heating plant has been proving its worth as an air-conditioner these hot days.

The basement side walls are to be plastered yet and the archway back of the pulpit finished and the building will be completed with the exception of several little jobs such as caulking windows, etc.

Three things stand out in this building project. First, the perfect harmony and cooperation of the committee and people in working together. Second, the response of 15 to 20 men each time a call was made for a big job to be done. Third, the giving of so large a sum of money without any personal solicitation. The whole life and spiritual tone of the church has risen to a new high as we move along to complete this project. The people have vision and a mind to work. They will not be satisfied until the old church is remodeled. This will make a splendid, modern plant with a large plot of ground surrounding it. Henry Carey made this possible by giving the church five lots on the west side of the church building. The Lord has been good. We are thankful that so many have heard His call to serve and answered with ready action.

Daily Vacation Bible School

Because of the new addition to our building, we were able to have our own Vacation Bible School this year for the first time during our pastorate. There were 150 children enrolled. Scripture Press literature was used in the school, so you know we all worked.

Mrs. Verda Wolfe did a splendid job of supervising the Intermediate Department. She was assisted by Mrs. Eileen Funderburg. There were 17 children enrolled in the Intermediate department.

Mrs. Hazel Hall was in charge of the Juniors. She was assisted by Mrs. Merl Long, Mrs. Chloea Shellenberger, and Mrs. Faye Kibbey. Mrs. Hall was also the story teller of the school. She told a missionary story which continued each morning through the two weeks. Mrs. Hall is a public school teacher. She teaches at West Milton, and lives in Pleasant Hill. There were 39 Juniors enrolled.

The Primary Department was under the leadership of Mrs. Ada Gilbert. She was assisted by Miss Shirley Wolfe, Frances Schatzley, and Mrs. Donna Brown. Mrs. Sibert led the singing for the school. She is a public school teacher, also, being employed in the local school. There were 47 Primary children enrolled in the school.

Mrs. Ada Oburn was at the head of the Beginner's Department. These children were four and five-year-olds. Six-year-olds who had not yet been in school were also included in the group. There were 47 beginners enrolled. Mrs. Oburn was assisted by Mrs. Winifred Deeter, Mrs. Lucile Kinnison, Miss Barbara Lavy, Miss Wanda Wheeler and Miss Janice Kinnison. Mrs. Oburn is a public school teacher. She teaches in the local school.

The secretaries and errand girls were Mrs. Wealtha Stout and Mrs. Mary Rice. They had plenty to do. Marian Hershey was student pianist for the school.

Mrs. Oburn was the director of the school. The pastor was assistant director and "on call" at all times.

The closing program was given on the last Friday evening of the school to a packed house. The children gave an offering of $54.02 which was sent to leper missions.

Pleasant Hill Has Young People, Too

Our church has a fine quartet of young men who sing very well together. In fact, we have a large number of young men and are justly proud of them. Dr. Lakin said, when he was here, that he hadn't seen so many good-looking young men in one church in his 27 years of preaching. If you were listening at the right time you heard him repeat that statement on the Cadle Tabernacle program after he had been here. Of course where there are young men there are young women, also. That goes without saying. These young people wholeheartedly support the program of the church.

Missionary Enthusiasm

Last year at General Conference we were delighted to learn that Pleasant Hill was second in missionary giving in our entire brotherhood. Only one other church gave more to missions than our little (?) church. The people of Pleasant Hill have done other things besides build. During the last year they raised their pastor's salary more than five hundred dollars. They have sent time and again to the Kentucky missions. They have given over two hundred dollars to leper missions. All this besides the regular things required of a congregation.

It is with praise and thanksgiving to the Lord that we write this record of progress in spiritual things.

Floyd Sibert, Minister.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Mexico, Indiana. We note by Brother Higgins' bulletin that two of their organizations, the Signal Lights and the Christian Workers Class, each enjoyed weiner roasts at their August meetings.

Southern District Brethren Youth Go to General Conference. We quote from Brother Higgins' Mexico bulletin: "The Southern District Youth chartered a bus to take them to the 'Big Conference Youth Rally' at Ashland." Those young people had to get up in the morning, for the announcement says that "the bus was scheduled to leave the Court House in Wabash at 3:00 A. M. Sunday morning." Well, they did it!

Ardmore, Indiana. We are informed that Brother C. C. Grisso is to hold an evangelistic meeting for the Ardmore Heights Brethren Church (South Bend) beginning October 30th and closing November 13th. Brother Grisso is at present the acting pastor of the Roann, Indiana, Church, and has been serving them from his home in Mexico, which is only a few miles from Roann, since last October.

We might note in passing that Brother Grisso is available for several evangelistic meetings this fall and winter, and if you are in need of an evangelist, why not contact him at his Mexico address? Simply address him Rev. C. C. Grisso, Mexico, Indiana.

Sergeantsville New Jersey. We note that Brother and Sister Margush, pastor and wife at Sergeantsville, were recently "remembered" on their wedding anniversary by a shower of gifts and cards.

Milledgeville, Illinois. We learn that in the absence of Brother D. C. White in attendance at General Conference, that the Milledgeville pulpit was filled by Rev. Klotz. There was a nice representation from this church at the General Conference. Brother White was made the General Conference Treasurer.

Dayton, Ohio. We note that Brother Whetstone and Brother Ray Yount recently made a trip to our Kentucky Mission Field. Brother Whetstone is the Treasurer of the Mission Board and Brother Yount is helping out with suggestions of an architectural nature, in the new building at Lost Creek.

Brother Whetstone says that he don't believe that rain is such a hindrance to Family Night gatherings in the Dayton Church, since the one on August 17th was well attended in spite of rain.

Miami Valley Brethren Youth Rally. We note that the Miami Brethren Youth Rally was held at Williamstown, Ohio, on Saturday, September 3rd.

Stockton, Calif. Brother Charles Johnson writes the editor as follows: "Had a fine day August 14th, with 105 in Sunday school. I baptized a young lady after the close of the morning service and received the confession of another young lady at the evening service, and also the re-consecration of still another one. The Crusaders did a wonderfully fine piece of work with us."

TIOSA, INDIANADedication Postponed

Due to a delay in furnishing our new pews, our rededication which was originally planned for June had to be postponed. The knowledge of this came to us too late to be of service as an announcement to counteract the announcement was made at that time in the Evangelist.

However, we are now planning this rededication day for September 18th and are all ready this time, having completed the work. The speaker for the day will be Rev. S. M. Whetstone, pastor of the Hillcrest Brethren Church of Dayton, Ohio, who was a former pastor of the Tiosa Church. We will have an all-day meeting and the rededication service will be combined with our Annual Homecoming Day, which is always held at this season of the year.

We have added two new class rooms, new lighting, new pews, and have completely redecorated the church throughout. We have also added two new bottle gas stoves in the kitchen and have refinished the floors. We feel we have a great many blessings for which to be thankful and we are looking forward to this day when old friends will be with us.

Mrs. Frank Lee, Cor. Sec.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF DEDICATION

The Reverend Frank W. Garber of Cheyenne, Wyoming, announced while attending conference, that the new church of which he is pastor will be dedicated Sunday, October 2nd. The dedicatory message will be delivered by the General Secretary of the Missionard Board. Others will share with the services of the day.

Also of importance is the district conference which will begin in the new church the same evening. A picture and story of the dedication will appear in the missionary number.

YOUR "TIN" AND MY "TIN."

SOMETIMES AN IRISH STORY just makes you laugh; sometimes it makes you laugh and think; and sometimes it makes you laugh and think and apply the story to a particular circumstance. It is thus with the following little story:

Pat and Mike were good church members. In fact they were very good church members, so good indeed, that they were constantly trying to help out in every way they could. Their current desire was to start a fund for a new organ for their church. But they were both very poor, so far as this world's goods were concerned, and could not be as helpful as they desired financially. The discussion as to ways and means was making them much trouble. Finally Mike had an idea and said, "Pat, it shure can be did!" Pat did not receive Mike's word with too much enthusiasm and said, "But how kin we did it? We hov no money!" "Oh," explained Mike, "it's your tin cints, and my tin cints."

The story, as I read it,

Set me to thinking!

That's probably the best way to approach any problem of a financial nature—in real cooperation. Here were two men who could start something by combining their resources, small thought they might be.

I remember that, when but a school pupil in the public schools, the children of this country were asked to contribute their pennies to assist in the erecting of the now famous McKinley Memorial in the Canton, Ohio, Cemetery. The pennies rolled in, and together with other contributions, were a mighty factor in the building of that memorial crypt. When in after years I became a pastor in Canton, and visited that memorial many times, I remembered the pennies I myself had contributed and felt that, little though it was, I had had a part in that venture.

Now the Brethren Church is faced with the problem of supplying the money for the work of making the buildings of our own Ashland College "fire-safe." How about applying our Irish story to this situation? Remember that Mike said, "It's your tin cints, and my tin cints" that will do the job. Why not set up a campaign to permit the children to "do something" toward this project in a concerted way? Could not a movement be launched to have the Sunday Schools of our churches unite in a special drive among the children?—not a "penny" drive as was used in the "McKinley Memorial" project, but the "tin cints" drive of Pat and Mike! It can be done, and the "tin cints" can be multiplied into "tins" of dollars by the children. After all, the children are the best canvassers you can send out.

These same children are the ones who will, in a few years, be making footprints along the halls of Old Ashland College, and then they, like the writer with the McKinley Memorial, can say, "I had a part in the improvements which were made here in 1949," and they will be glad they were asked to do it.

This is just a suggestion, but I am sure the College authorities will appreciate any and all help in their present "demanded" improvements.

Think it over!

UTILIZING OUR VISUAL RESOURCES

Hundreds of dollars of visual equipment is not being used as efficiently as possible. Dozens of filmstrips and slides are collecting dust in some home or office. Let's put them to use this easy way.

Each person who has a library of visual materials, regardless of size, is asked to list them with the National Sunday School Association so that a complete listing of our denomination can be issued.

The next step is to Join the Visual Material Co-Operative. The co-operative shall be for the purpose of making visual materials available to the church and co-operating members. There will be no regular meetings, officers, or dues.

The National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church has voted to promote the co-operative through the Educational Director, Delbert B. Flora, and the Director of Visual Education, Chester F. Zimmerman.

Members will exchange materials, with all postage and insurance fees to be paid to the borrower. All materials are to be returned directly to the owner. To avoid disappointment, it is suggested that filmstrips, slide sets and sides be booked well in advance.

Any Brethren organization, church or member may become a member of the co-operative by submitting a list of materials for exchange or making a purchase of materials through the co-operative.

Members agree to purchase at least $10.00 worth of visual materials each year beginning in September, 1950. The co-operative itself shall own no filmstrips or slides. Borrowers shall be responsible for damage and loss of materials. It is required that materials be insured in shipping.

The Sunday School Association will: compile and distribute complete lists of materials available in September of each year; announce new materials of the co-operative through the church publications; provide mailing tubes in reasonable quantities; and provide forms for membership, listing of films and booking of films. The co-operative is sponsored by the National Sunday School Association and the Association is the first member of the co-operative. This means that the many filmstrips of the Association are available for usage—for postage only—by members of the co-operative.

This is not a new organization. It is a co-operative effort between the users of 35mm visual materials. You are invited to send in your list of visual materials for listing with the Visual Education Director. A complete list is being compiled now.

» Redemption, Reconciliation and Propitiation « (A Word Study)

THE BENEFITS in our salvation as a result of Christ's Passion and Death which are expressed in three particular words of the New Testament cause us to stand in awe and wonder and humility before Him who provided all. The three words are apolutrosis or redemption, katallage or reconciliation, and hilasmos.

Dr. Trench says in "Synonyms of the New Testament": "Here, as in other similar cases, what the Scripture does is to approach the central truth from different quarters; to exhibit it not on one side but on many . . ."

He says that to one or the other of these three words almost every word and phrase directly bearing on this work of our salvation through Christ may be more or less closely referred.

I. OUR SALVATION IS A DELIVERANCE

Lutrosis is a redemption; a general deliverance when applied to the nation of Israel by old Zacharias in Luke 1:68. It is used of the redemptive work of Christ in Hebrews 9:12. It refers to a redemption of ransom on the basis of the payment of a price. It is a deliverance or redemption answering to the fact that Christ gave Himself for us as shown in Matthew 20:28 and Mark 10:45.

Apolutrosis is Paul's word for expressing the completeness of our redemption in Christ Jesus. It is literally a releasing upon payment of a ransom, a complete deliverance.

1. It is the deliverance of the people of God at the Coming of Christ with His saints—Luke 21:28; compare 2 Thessalonians 2:8.

2. It is complete deliverance from the guilt of sins. (1) There is justification—Romans 3:24. (2) There is forgiveness—Ephesians 1:7; Colossians 1:14. (3) There is deliverance from transgressions—Hebrews 9:15.

3. It is the deliverance of the believer from the presence and power of sin at the Parousia. (1) Deliverance of the body from the presence of sin—Romans 8:23. (2) Deliverance from the power of sin—1 Corinthians 1:30; Ephesians 1:14. (3) Marked with the seal until the time of the deliverance—Ephesians 4:30.

4. It is the recall of captives from captivity through the work of Christ as the Ransom. (1) Sin is slavery and sinners are slaves in captivity—Romans 6:17, 20; John 8:34; 2 Peter 2:19. (2) Sinners are recalled and ransomed from captivity—Titus 2:14; 1 Peter 1:18.

II. OUR SALVATION CONSTITUTES A NEW STATUS

Katallage, reconciliation, is primarily an exchange. It denotes a change on the part of one party, induced by the action of another. It has behind it the root meaning of "anotherness." In the New Testament it refers to the reconciliation of men to God by His grace and love in Christ.

With katallage is connected all that language of Scripture:

1. Which describes sin as a state of enmity with God—Romans 8:7; Ephesians 2:15.

2. Which describes sinners as enemies to Him and alienated from Him—Romans 5:10; Colossians 1:21.

3. Which sets forth Christ on the Cross as the Peace, and the maker of peace between God and man—Ephesians 2:14; Colossians 1:20.

4. Which enunciates such invitations as this, "Be ye reconciled to God," 2 Cor. 5:20.

It is extremely important that we keep clear as to who are involved in this reconciliation, this change from enmity.

1. It is not God who is changed, but man, sinners—Romans 5:10, 11; Ephesians 2:12.

2. God is the agent of the reconciliation—Romans 5:10; 2 Corinthians 5:18, 19.

3. Christ is the means whereby the love of God is commended to us so that the change may be made—Romans 5:10, 11; 2 Corinthians 5:18, 19.

4. We are ambassadors with the good news that God has never been at enmity toward men, and more than that He has provided reconciliation, pleading with alienated men to return—2 Corinthians 5:20.

By means of apokatallasso Paul expresses the fact of complete reconciliation, a change from one condition to another, so as to remove all enmity—Ephesians 2:16; Colossians 1:20.

III. IN OUR SALVATION OUR SINS ARE COMPLETELY COVERED

Among the ancient Greeks the verb hilaskomai meant to appease the gods. This use is foreign to the New Testament. Rather it means to show mercy, to show favor. When used in reference to sins it means to forgive.

The work of Christ on the Cross has broken down the barrier which sin interposes between God and man. By giving up His sinless life sacrificially, He annuls the power of sin to separate between God and the believer. In Luke 18:13 the publican prays, saying, "God, be merciful to me a sinner," and hilaskomai is the verb he uses. In Hebrews 2:17 it is said that it behooved Christ "to make reconciliation for the sins of the people," and the same verb is used.

Hilasmus is the noun form, signifying an expiation, a means whereby the mercy of God is released upon us. Only twice is it found in the New Testament—1 John 2:2 and 4:10.

Possibly the full force of this aspect of our salvation comes out best in the use of the adjectival form of the word, which is hilasterion. It is used in Hebrews 9:5 for the lid of the Ark, which is called in the Old Testament the Covering or Mercy Seat.

The ram offered at the consecration of the high priest is called a covering in Exodus 29:33, according to William Vine. Also the blood which God gave upon the altar to make propitiation for the souls of the people is called a covering in Leviticus 17:11.

In the Old Testament ritual the blood of the ram was sprinkled on the Covering, the Mercy Seat, of the Ark, under which lay the tables of the Law which cried out against the sins of men. The blood sprinkled there made a covering between God and the broken Law, thus allowing His mercy to flow out upon the worshipper.

Christ is Himself the Covering, the Propitiation, in Romans 3:25. His Blood was poured out for men on Calvary and was at least figuratively sprinkled on the Mercy Seat, the place of propitiation, of the heavenly Ark—Hebrews 9:5. He is the personal means by whom God shows the mercy of His justifying grace to the sinner who believes.

“O the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been His counsellor?” Romans 11:33-34.

- - What Hurts You? - -

(From the Gospel Herald)

WE WERE STRUCK RECENTLY by this sentence in one of our exchanges: “The caliber of a man is indicated by the size of the things that offend him.” That is a sentence to use in a few moments of introspection and self-judgment. Babies cry for slight hurts, or simply to gain attention. Small souls get little sympathy from those who know them, because they have “almost died” for so many reasons. A man learns not to wince at every little pinch and pain.

The smallest people suffer most from personal slights and affronts. They writhe because of insults real or imagined. There are people who stay away from church because someone didn’t say quite the right thing, or perhaps because he said nothing at all. Long-standing grudges and feuds often have their beginning in infinitesimal personalities. These small souls fume in high-dudgeon because the vote went against them or because their opinion was disregarded. The person who is easily hurt betrays by that fact what a puny rat he is.

Not much better are those who are hurt by a lack of appreciation. They mourn and pine because they have done something for someone and he hasn’t even thanked them. They begrudge the dollars and doughnuts that they have given away when they see an apparent ungratefulness. They resolve not to repeat favors until those favored change their attitude. Their one great regret is that they did so much for such unworthy people. They are diligent accountants in seeing that appreciation balances giving. Their hearts bleed in self-pity because they have done so much with so little recognition.

There are those also who suffer chiefly from personal frustrations. The great sore place in their lives is the fact that they could not be and do what they had planned. A thwarted ambition has become a festering regret. To die something short of the cherished goal of wealth, place, or accomplishment is the prospect that turns life’s twilight into dour unpleasantness. God pity those tiny people who sorrow chiefly for what might have been and is not!

Of much greater stature are those who are hurt by their own sins. They ought not to have sinned. But since they have, a godly sorrow is a worthy thing. David shows his greatness in his sincere penitence. Peter towers above Judas because his stricken conscience led him back to a Saviour. People who can sin without compunction and regret reveal their Lilliputian souls. God’s worthies are always people with a great capacity for repentance.

To grieve for the sins of others is another sign of spiritual stature. When blasphemous talk and filthy inuendos and fleshly appetites and lying dishonesty do not cause us to cringe in pain, we can’t have grown far in the kingdom of God. Statistics of crime, delinquency, and moral perversity are more than a curiosity to the Christian man. These facts stab him with pain and drive him to renewed effort to win others from their godlessness, and to keep himself from all these outcroppings of carnality. No spiritual giant can disregard the morass of sin in which the world struggles.

Failures of the church are a real pain to the spiritually sensitive person. The sins and short comings of its members, particularly of its leaders, are an unhealing grief. Evidences of self-sufficiency, of materialism, of carnality, of coldness send him to his knees to confess the corporate sin, as Daniel confessed the sin of his people. Such a mature Christian is grieved when the church lacks in evangelistic zeal and missionary outreach. He refuses to rejoice in mere statistical gains when he sees on every hand the signs of spiritual loss. The affliction of Jacob often brings him tears of regret and confession.

Possibly the greatest height of all is seen in that Christian who is hurt chiefly by anything that detracts from the glory of God. He knows that God made all things, particularly man, to bring Him eternal praise. And so when he sees God going without that which is rightly His, his heart aches. This is the futility, the frustration, that chiefly concerns him—that God should have created men in vain, that He should even have raised up a church which comes so far short of the mark. This is the sorrow supreme, that the Master of the vineyard has planted and pruned and watered, but the grapes prove to be wild.

How big are you? Judge yourself by this rule of what hurts you.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear, The rest may reason and welcome, 'tis we musicians who know."

From, Abt Vogler

—Robert Browning.

There are some fortunate people who seem to know without learning. They are wise without going painfully through a course of study. They see clearly what it has taken the ordinary mind months and even years to grasp.

Mozart, the German musician, was one of these. At three and four years of age he could play learnedly on the piano, and at six he found himself playing the most difficult music before the crowned heads of Europe. Many a musical aspirant has not accomplished as much in a lifetime. He was one who could say "the rest may reason and welcome, 'tis we musicians who know."

God, it seems, whispers His wisdom in their ears and they know. In Shakespeare's As You Like It, Oliver is exasperated at his younger brother Orlando whose vast knowledge he sums up briefly, "Never schooled, yet learned." Other people may reason about the world's best wisdom all they like, 'tis we musicians who know. That seems to sum up the strange situation.

Browning did not mean that it was only the musicians who know but all those inspired people who are on God's direct wire. He meant also the poets, the painters, the sculptors, the educators, the inventors as well as the musicians.

These people go to the very source of truth and often shun rather than attend schools and colleges. They live in the ecstasy of their thoughts and emotions. At such inspired times they often build wiser than they know. They bring back with them the great masterpieces which the world marvels at for a thousand years. They are fundamental and everlasting.

Beethoven in his Moonlight Sonata was one of these. Lincoln in his Gettysburg Address, Milton in his Paradise Lost, Joan of Arc as she led her France, Handel in his inspired Messiah, Edison with his inventions, Newton with his physical laws, Michael Farady with his chemical discoveries, all these belong to that inspired school.

This whispered wisdom in such ears has a certain superiority that is able to scorn the wisdom of books and schools. It seems to be better and surer than ordinary wisdom. It simply knows it is right and does not bother to give reasons, in fact it scorns to give them. This is the gift of the few who are beacon lights across the distances of civilization.

Spiritual Meditations

Rev. Dyoll Belote

A GOOD SUGGESTION

ONCE HEARD a lecturer make this trenchant statement: "Yesterday is but a memory; tomorrow is mere imagination; today is—live for today." There are two days of every week about which we waste time to worry. One is yesterday, the other is tomorrow.

Yesterday, with all its cares and frets; with all its aches and pains; with all its mistakes and blunders, has passed forever beyond all reach of our recall. I cannot undo an act that I wrought; I cannot unsay a word that I said yesterday. All that yesterday holds of my life, of its wrongs, regrets and sorrows, is in the hand of One who can bring honey out of the rock, and sweet waters out of the bitterest desert. He is the One who can make the wrong things right and turn weeping into laughter, that can give beauty for ashes, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.

Oh, yes, the beautiful memories, if such there are, that linger like the perfumes of roses in the heart of the day that is past, these are mine; but beyond these I have nothing to do with yesterday.

And that other day—tomorrow—lies in the uncertain future. Tomorrow, with all its possible adversities and burdens and perils; its large promise and poor performance; its failures and mistakes, is as far beyond my mastery as its dead compatriot, yesterday. It is another of God's days, and He will see to its development. The sun will rise tomorrow as it rose yesterday—at His bidding and discretion; and the same love that held yesterday and holds tomorrow will shine into the heart of today, to help me live THIS day as I should have lived yesterday and as He wishes me to live tomorrow. In that unborn day of grace I have as yet no possession—save that of happy anticipation. All else is in the safe-keeping of the infinite Love that holds for me all the treasures of yesterday, and all the unrealized promises of tomorrow. Tomorrow—it is God's day. It will be mine. But since it is not yet mine, and since today is here, shall I not make the most of it, since I shall have nothing but todays in which to carve out my eternal destiny.

—Linwood, Maryland.

Continuing the General Conference Resume

PICKING UP where we left off last week, we endeavor to bring our readers some further highlights of the General Conference. We will not try to take up the remainder of the conference on a day by day basis, but rather will seek to bring a resume of the last days of the gathering.

As to the delegated body, the count on the final day of business registered what is believed to be a new high, there being reported a total of 361 delegates, which is about 10% above last year's registration. Added to this there were in the neighborhood of 125 Brethren Youth registered for their part of the program activities. The attendance at the business sessions was above the average, the gymnasium being practically full at each session, except for the Saturday morning meeting, which showed a decided decrease. This can be accounted for in part by the fact that a number of the ones in attendance left for home. However, all business of the conference was conducted in proper order.

The National Sunday School Board accepted the desire of Dr. W. I. Duker to retire from the presidency of the Association Board, a position which he has occupied for thirty years. However he was elected to the newly created office of President Emeritus. Rev. H. H. Rowsey, pastor of the Ashland Church, was elected to the presidency. Other officers of the Association include, E. L. Miller, Maurertown, Va., Vice President; N. V. Leatherman, Johnstown, Pa., Secretary; M. A. Stuckey, Ashland, Treasurer.

The Executive Committee for the 1950 Conference was elected as follows: Southeastern District: John F. Locke, Clarence Fairbanks; Pennsylvania District: A. R. Baer, Floyd Hibbs; Ohio District: J. G. Dodds, J. Garber Drushal; Indiana District: C. A. Stewart, C. Y. Gilmer; Central District: D. C. White; Mid-West District: H. E. Eppley; Northern California District: J. W. Platt. This committee has already met and have the conference program for 1950 well under way. J. G. Dodds will again act as Executive Secretary of the committee. The committee recommended that the 1950 conference be held at Ashland, on the corresponding week in August.

A great deal of stress was said upon the necessity of the support of the emergency fund of Ashland College, and it was reported that eleven churches had already pledged $1,000.00 each for the project and that they were going to add to this amount. Each church is asked to do its very best in this emergency. While no attempt has been made to tabulate the funds received so far in the college business office, it is estimated that well over $10,000.00 has been received so far.

The Woman's Missionary Society Banquet on Friday noon, which has always been a high point in the W. M. S. Program for the week, was attended by 280 women, and they laid the sum of over $6,200.00 on the altar, to which they added sufficient from their general treasury to make the sum well over $7,000.00. This makes a grand total now on hand for the Chapel of the College of more than $46,000.00 in this fund. The usual Thank Offering was the largest ever—$4,200.00. Which means that the W. M. S. brought a total of almost $10,500.00, no mean sum, to the conference. The banquet was the most impressive and most enthusiastic gathering that the W. M. S. has ever experienced.

The Bible Lectures were delivered by Rev. M. J. Brougher, Dean M. A. Stuckey and Rev. W. E. Ronk. They were well received and of high worth.

In the matter of the National Ministerial Association organization for the coming year, Rev. Dyoll Belote, who has been President of the Association for the past ten years, was relieved upon his own request, and Rev. Freeman Ankrum was elected to that position. The Missionary Board continued Prof. J. Garber Drushal as Board President, and Rev. E. M. Riddle as Field Secretary. The Benevolent Board elected the entire officary of the past year to their official positions, the editor again being elected President. The Brethren Publishing Company continued J. E. Stookey as president and J. G. Dodds as Secretary-Treasurer. Myron Kimmel was elected to the Trustee Board to succeed his father, N. G. Kimmel who had asked to be relieved.

One of the most impressive parts of each conference is always the honoring the wedding anniversary of Dr. I. D. Bowman. This year was their seventieth wedding anniversary, and they were found in their places in the conference from early morning until late at night, until Dr. Bowman suffered a slight illness which kept him out of the conference for one day and part of another. They were honored this year with a gift of $70.00 in commemoration of their seventy years of wedded life.

Speaking of banquets—The laymen and Ministers had theirs together in Dormitory Dining Hall on Friday noon. More than 100 enjoyed this meal and the fellowship which went with it, together with a short impromptu program under the Laymen's President, "Bud" Hunter.

Banquet No. 3—The Youth banquet was held at the Methodist church where nearly 150 youth and youth leaders gathered. No. 4 was that of the Newly Organized "Brethren Ministers' Wives Association." This was held on Saturday noon at the Smith Dining Club. Around fifty were in attendance. This organization is simply one of fellowship, the aim being to get the ministers' wives better acquainted with each other. This Association was organized last year during the conference, and yearly officers elected. The retiring officers, who were Mrs. E. J. Beekley, President; Mrs. Vernon Grisso, Vice President and Mrs. C. S. Fairbanks, Secretary, prepared the program of the day. This was in the form of a "Dutch" party, waitresses, program and favors carrying out this idea. The new officers are: President, Mrs. V. E. Meyer; Vice President, Mrs. James Ault; Secretary, Mrs. W. S. Ben-shoff; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Thomes Shannon.

No. 5—The Missionary Board, together with the Missionary pastors and their families also held a banquet at the Smith Dining Club. It is reported that a most excellent time and a profitable one was had by all.

The social times of the conference had a very fitting close, for President and Mrs. Glenn L. Clayton invited the

The parsonage at St. James, Maryland

*From Masontown,
Pennsylvania
To St. James,
Maryland*

The difficulty in making a report such as this after leaving one pastorate for another is to do justice and still keep within the bounds of space permitted in the Evangelist. To sum up the events of a pastorate of eight years and seven months with justice is not possible in such limited scope.

July 31 marked the end of a very busy pastorate in Masontown which had taken much from the writer, but not without its recompense. To pull up roots that had gone so deeply in the community was not at all easy. The parting with numerous friends, both inside and outside the church was not a pleasure. The kindnesses, almost without number that were ours, the well wishes, the invitations to return, can only be met with one weak word, THANKS. The farewell at the church will long be remembered. Our appreciation is extended for it. To those who gave money and other gifts we are deeply grateful.

The years of the pastorate saw many changes, both in personal and in property improvement. Among the physical changes were the addition of the Balcony now used for Sunday School and other purposes; and the erection of the commodious parsonage, modern in every way, adjoining the church building. This is valued at $25,000.00 and was dedicated last November, debt free. With our leaving the field there was no debt.

A brief summary of the high spots of the work may suffice in part. It is as follows: sermons preached, 931; weddings, 34; funerals conducted, 120; Evangelistic meetings held, 11; numerous addresses were given to service clubs and other groups of which no record was kept; bulletins printed 50,000 (estimated); number baptized, 128; new members received into the church, 141; communions held here and elsewhere, 24; no record was kept of the numerous calls and contacts made in the homes, on the street or various places of business, and no record was kept of the numerous anointings.

Thursday, August 4, the large Van of Brother Louis Wheeler of Masontown, brought our goods on schedule to the St. James, Maryland, Brethren Parsonage. This the Brethren had renovated with many hours of work. There were a number of improvements made, among which was the drilling of a well which is a splendid one with a bountiful flow of water. In this was placed a turbo-jet pump which keeps water under pressure all at times. The former water problem is now a thing of the past. To give all-year hot water, a large electric heated tank was installed in the basement. The garden had been planted, and the fruits thereof have been enjoyed. Some of the men came in to assist in the unloading and placing of the furniture. For all these things we are deeply grateful. As this is being written the matter of relocating is practically over.

The welcoming reception for us was well attended and the start in attendance and interest speaks well for the future. At St. James, it is a pleasure to find active some who came out in an Evangelistic meeting which we held here under the pastorate of the late Rev. W. S. Baker in January 1938. Our return to this section of Maryland brings us to a District of which we have been a member at two previous periods and close to numerous friends made during our pastorate at Linwood, Maryland, which is just 45 miles from St. James.

The people of St. James have a mind to work and have vision, it appears to the writer. This church was organized in 1866 and we are in historic country, religious as well as otherwise. More shall be heard from this section of the brotherhood in the future.

Freeman Ankrum, pastor.

Much that passes for religion in this world is hurtful rather than helpful. Too little of it attains "Upper Room" levels.

SOME NOBLE MEN

James M. Tombaugh

JAMES A. TOMBAUGH was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, on November 10, 1857. At the age of twenty-one he united with the German Baptist Church, being baptized by A. J. Sterling. He was elected to the ministry in the Pigeon Creek congregations, in his native county, and was installed in the second degree of the ministry by Elder P. J. Brown.

When the division of the church occurred he espoused The Brethren cause, and in April 1885 he became the pastor of the Fairview congregation, at Washington Court House, Ohio, this being his first pastorate, extending over a period of thirteen years, terminating in April 1898. When he became pastor of the congregation in Hagers-town, Maryland, the Bear Creek and Miamisburg congregations became a part of the Fairview pastorate, thus the three churches constituted a circuit in about 1899.

Brother Tombaugh was graduated from Waynesburg College in Pennsylvania, with a degree of A. B., in June 1884. He was for several years the President of Ashland College combining his pastoral work with teaching. He was once a member of the Brethren Publication Board.

Pardon me, but may I give some personal news in regards to the Miamisburg church, as its name was used in this writeup? The Miamisburg church is no more—the work closing in 1932. The church house is now used as a dwelling (so I understand). The writer served the church as pastor the last five years of its existence—from 1927 to 1932. I cannot speak too highly of the loyal workers, for the hospitality I shared with them was above reproach. They were a loyal flock, very seldom absent, but so few in numbers any more that the financial board deemed best to close the work there.

While serving them as pastor I took into the church sixteen-aged converts by baptism; conducted three funerals, and conducted communions each year. Many of the class have since gone to join the Church beyond. May God bless the remaining ones.

Michael J. Thomas

Michael Thomas was born in Preston County, West Virginia, January 1, 1832. When two years of age his parents moved to Fayette County, Pennsylvania, where Michael was educated in the common schools at Mt. Pleasant College in West Moreland County. He was converted and joined the Tunker Church at the age of sixteen. He and Miss Sarah Zimmerman were married on May 10, 1863.

He was called to the ministry in 1864 and ordained to the eldership in 1885. He served in the ministry for thirty-three years, his first twelve years being performed in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia. In 1876 he removed to New Virginia, Iowa, where he lived and labored to the time of his death. The local paper said of Elder Thomas:

"The pulpit from which the deceased had so often spoken was draped in mourning and the house was appropriately decorated, mutely telling of the deep regard in which the congregation and community held the dear old man whose many deeds of kindness and gentle ways had most thoroughly endeared him to all of our people. Few men living in a community for twenty-one years can go out of it leaving behind them so much regret and heartfelt sorrow as has our townsman, Elder Michael J. Thomas."

"The Book to Live By"

Sixth Annual Worldwide Bible Reading

"The Book to Live By" is the theme of the sixth annual Worldwide Bible Reading program, which is sponsored each year by the American Bible Society. The program, started on Thanksgiving Day, November 24 will end on Christmas Day.

The high point of the program is Universal Bible Sunday which occurs this year on December 11. Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, and well-known writer and lecturer, has written the brochure, which is prepared especially for this service. Packets containing the brochure, an attractive poster featuring the theme, "The Book to Live By" and other appropriate material will be mailed to over 120,000 pastors early in the fall.

For the 32-day reading program, the Bible Society has prepared a list of daily Bible readings in the form of a bookmark, which fits conveniently in the Bible. Last year more than twelve million of the bookmarks were distributed. This year, in response to requests from industrial organizations, a bookmark in a special size, has also been prepared. These will be enclosed in salary envelopes, statements, etc.

"We feel that many people form the habit of daily Bible reading through the use of these bookmarks," declares Dr. James V. Claypool of the Bible Society who is in charge of the Worldwide Bible Reading. "I base this statement on the fact there has been a substantial increase in the calls for lists of daily Bible readings which the Society prepares for the entire year. An advance at the rate of 25% each year since 1946 has been noted."

The Worldwide Bible Reading program is also observed in those areas covered by the Bible Society's twelve foreign agencies. The bookmarks are printed in the languages spoken in those countries, which include Chinese, Arabic, Portuguese and Spanish.

I am immortal till my work is done, but as I have eternal work to do I am eternally immortal.

WHO IS THE JUDGE?

H. A. Gossard

Say not when I am gone that I was good,
Nor bad beyond description of degree;
Since judgment without fact, if understood,
Might be less than that which yet is hid in me . . .
The record I make here no man can keep:
'Tis mine until that day when I report;
And then, when judged, I'll either smile or weep—
A Prince, perhaps a laggard in the Court . . .

No potentate will sit upon that throne,
Whose right to judge is limited to earth . . .
The King who never questions knows his own,
And where they follow him there is no dearth . . .
It may be I shall find green pasture where
The Sheep are safe within the Shepherd's care.

BALLADE OF HUSTLE AND BUSTLE

Annabelle Merrifield

Unlike our yesterdays ambling and slow,
When leisure beamed and smiled, a happy guest,
Seconds are swift as blustering winds that blow.
Where are the cadences, the quiet quest?
The minutes gallop on painfully pressed—
Streak by us as a bold despotic jay
Flashes along to loot a robin's nest—
Until the years come oftener, we say.

We tread the hills of hurrying, although Lanes of tranquillity are twice as blest —
The deepest rivers would in silence flow.
Where are the cadences, the quiet quest?
Earth offers now no calming cushioned breast:
The giant, speed, is striding; having sway;
In every hour, made clearly manifest
Until the years come oftener, we say.

Mark how the time ticks faster. There is no
Serenity, no rocking chair for rest.
Can these avail, hours rushing in a row?
Where are the cadences, the quiet quest?
Now each day goes dashing toward the west—
There is so little time, it seems, to pray—
Each, drastic as a hurricane; distressed,
Until the years come oftener, we say.

Who pauses to look up will reach the crest;
There, are the cadences, the quiet quest
While second, minute, hour, day whirs away
Until the years come oftener, we say.

GOD'S BLESSINGS FOR MAN

J. E. Garrett

The blessing of righteousness
Is made for all men,
Through Jesus, God's Son,
On whom all must depend.

Some say I am crazy—
I know that's not so—
Christ delivered God's Word,
All that we must show.

That Word must be honored,
And also proclaimed
Throughout this wide world,
With His honor regained.

This world may be crazy—
They won't hear my stuff;
I pray for their souls,
While I take their rebuff.

This world is unstable,
You lose or you gain;
Eternity is forever,
Where all shall remain.

This world has no comfort
For you or for me;
Every day we are longing
To be happy and free.

But what are we doing
For the help of mankind?
With our selfish ambition
God sees we are blind.

The truth of salvation
Is so far now from man
That he cannot be touched—
It's so far from his plan.

But those who will seek
To know what is pure,
Shall know that God is,
And shall ever endure.

—Muncie, Indiana.

SEVENTH ANNUAL HERBERT MEMORIAL PSALM TUNE COMPETITION

If you are interested in music composition here seems to be an opportunity to try your skill;

"Monmouth College offers a prize of one hundred dollars for the best setting in four voice harmony for congregational singing of a prescribed metrical version of the Twenty-Third Psalm. The competition is open to all composers and closes February 28, 1950. It is the seventh in a ten year series. For the words to be used and conditions of entry, write Thomas W. Hamilton, Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois."

New Discoveries In Jerusalem

The discovery and excavation of a 1,500-year-old Christian burial cave in Jerusalem by a noted biblical scholar just returned from the Near East, was disclosed here today (July 26th).

The cave was found by the Rev. Ovid R. Sellers, Dean of McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. Mr. Sellers conducted his excavations during a year's service as Director of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem.

Announcement of Mr. Sellers' return to this country and his findings were made by Prof. Carl H. Kraeling, President of the American Schools of Oriental Research and Chairman of the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Literatures at Yale University. The American Schools and McCormick Seminary co-sponsored Mr. Sellers' excavations.

With the permission of the Transjordan Government, Mr. Sellers spent two weeks excavating the burial cave. During the investigation Mr. Sellers learned that the cave contained five silos which the early Christians had cut through in order to make their burial chambers.

In the cave itself Mr. Sellers' party discovered numerous fourth and fifth century Roman-Byzantine ceremonial lamps, ornaments and statues. The bust statues are thought to be resemblances of native Palestinian Christians buried in the cave. Mr. Sellers brought back with him scores of photographs of the materials discovered in the cave.

In addition to the fourth and fifth century materials, Mr. Sellers and his colleagues chanced upon three lamps left in the debris by tomb robbers. These lamps date back to the 13th century. They also found two rings, one with the figure of St. George on horseback, the other thought to resemble the figure of a dragon.

Mr. Sellers was a staff member of the excavation at Tell Beit Mirsim in 1930 and director of the excavation at Beth-zur in 1931. He has also been a trustee of the American Schools of Oriental Research since 1939.

entire conference to an informal reception at the F. E. Myers Memorial Home on Saturday evening. The only shower of the Conference up to Saturday evening in no way dampened the joy of the occasion. President and Mrs. Clayton are indeed gracious host and hostess.

The Brethren Youth Conference surpassed our highest hopes, both in quantity and quality. Brother Charles Munson, hard working National Youth Director felt well repaid for all the effort he had put forth for the advancement of the Youth work. The speakers of the week had developed a splendid attitude leading up to the climax service on Saturday afternoon, which was truly a Brethren Youth Communion. While your editor was not permitted to attend, splendid reports of the fine spiritual uplift of that service to the youth, has come to him. Truly our young men and women are appreciating the deeper things of life.

Coming to the closing day of the conference, many new faces came to take the place of those who had left the conference grounds for one reason or another. They came by car and by bus loads. The Sunday School attendance was 448 as compared to 374 last year, while the offering was $234.89. Church attendance was 475 as compared to 374 last year, and the offering was $207.71. Thus the total offering for the morning services was $440.60, which sum was designated to be sent to our new Cheyenne, Wyoming, Church to be used for the purchase of furniture. The Sunday School was under the superintendency of Dr. W. I. Duker, retiring National Sunday School Association president. The morning message was delivered by Brother John F. Locke.

The youth had charge of the afternoon service, at which time the message was brought by Dr. Grover Swoyer, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

All in all the 1949 General Conference had been a very enjoyable and profitable conference. The full conference minutes, together with the organization of all Boards and committees and District organizations, will be found in the regular edition of the Brethren Annual Evangelist Number, which we hope to be able to bring to you earlier than in previous years.

NATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OFFICIARY

Encouraging reports and plans were made by the officers of the Brotherhood this year at Conference. The Brotherhood is anticipating its best year in 1949-1950. The districts have been active and more churches are reporting Brotherhoods and Brotherhood Advisors. The Brotherhood Board is much encouraged.

The officers of the Young Men and Boys' Brotherhood for 1949-1950 are: President, Oville Allen, Milledgeville, Illinois; Vice President, Harold Barnett, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio; Recording Secretary, Robert Keplinger, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio; Financial Secretary, Joseph Shultz, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio; Membership Chairman Jack Dovey, New Lebanon, Ohio; Welfare Chairman, Danny Royer, 725 E. Main Street, Louisville, Ohio; Missionary Chairman, Hobert Mullins, Box 159, Morehead College, Morehead, Ky.; Project Chairman, Stanford Amstutz, Orrville, Ohio.

The Brotherhood Board met faithfully during conference and approved plans and organizational details. A splendid spirit of co-operation was shown and renewed enthusiasm for the task was abundant.

The organization of the board is as follows: President, C. Y. Gilmer, 421 Webster St., Huntington, Indiana; Vice President, Woodrow Brant, Box 152, R. R. No. 1, Conemaugh, Penna.; Secretary, Spencer Gentle, 403 Broad St., Ashland, Ohio; Treasurer, Virgil Meyer, 282 Hammond Ave., Waterloo, Iowa; Membership Commissioner, Charles Munson, 829 Grant St., Ashland, Ohio; Welfare Commissioner, W. L. Thomas, Mulvane, Kansas; Missionary Commissioner, Robert Byler, Cordoba, Argentina, South America; Project Commissioner, Fred W. Brant, Berlin, Pa.; Program Editor, John Byler, 1033 East Main Street, Louisville, Ohio; Literature Secretary, Virgil Ingraham, Stockton, California; Recreational Director, Gilbert Dodds, Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois; News Editor, Chester F. Zimmerman, 1413 Kirby Ave., Muncie, Ind.

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS TODAY

Scripture: Proverbs 8:1-11; II Peter 1:1-9

For The Leader

WAY BACK, some hundreds of years ago, a group of people set about to formulate a government which would guarantee the rights and privileges of the individual as a cooperative unit in a great society. The world at that time was full of dynasties, monarchies, terror governments, oppression governments. Law and order were maintained by force. The individual had few, if any, rights. But this group of people were determined that government could be different. The individual could be recognized or his own worth. So, to formulate their prize government, they turned to the Bible, the Holy Word of God. In it they found the controlling precepts for their own soul and life, plus the rules of conduct for their relationships with their fellowmen. These they incorporated in their constitution. They sought, through their schools, to train their children in these rules of conduct and relationships, recognizing that they were inseparable from a teaching of God's Holy Word. The result was DEMOCRACY.

DISCUSSION

1. THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE. A sweet bit of subtle propaganda has been slipped over on us in recent years. A common term we hear constantly is the "American way of life." It hints vaguely at the inbred Democratic way of life; but if there is any relationship at all, it is half-breed. Catch the shade of difference, and you will catch the significance of the trend of American life. Democracy stems from Christian principles, and acknowledges the rightful place of God in the affairs of the individual and nation. The individual worships God, having respect for His laws and the rights of his fellowmen. Now note, the American way of life is "every man for himself, and the satisfaction of his own selfish desires." If a man wants to drink, it's all right, whether or not he goes out and murders someone while drunk. God is left out entirely. So, when you hear some one preaching about the American way of life, mark it down that he is interested only in his own self. There is such a small shade of apparent difference between Democracy and the American way of life, so called, that it is sometimes hard to detect, but there is that difference.

2. WE WANT THE GRAVY WITHOUT THE WORK. Generations of Americans have enjoyed the fruits of their labors through a well disciplined life and a Christian faith. Work was hard, and the pay maybe not so good, but there was satisfaction in knowing a man had earned his daily bread and had given his worship unto God. So God blessed our great nation far more than any nation has ever been blessed. But now, it is a different story. We in our schools are still made aware of our natural resources and the benefits of great inventions. But is credit given to God? We grow up now without much encouragement to thank the One who blessed us in this way. Thus we are trained to take the good things and ignore the God who made them possible. How long this can go on is unpredictable. But it's time that we woke up and did something about it.

3. DOES RELIGION HAVE A PLACE IN OUR SCHOOLS? The forces of evil in our nation have succeeded in taking all hints of religion out of our schools. They have influenced school boards and teachers with the theory that any religious instruction in a school destroys religious freedom. And so in following that belief, our school boards have done the craziest thing they've ever done. In so doing, they have destroyed the teaching of the one thing which will keep their Democracy alive—Christianity. There must come, and shortly, a revival of Christian emphasis in our schools, or Democracy will perish in this land.

4. THE FALLACY OF "RELIGIOUS FREEDOM." We hear much crying around about religious freedom. If we read the Bible or have the Lord's Prayer in the school room, we are offending Catholics, or making an example of some child who doesn't want to hear it read, or pray. So, in order to guarantee religious freedom for all peoples, we are stopping the growth of the one religion which guarantees it. Do you think if the Catholics were in majority in America, we would have "religious freedom?" Just ask some of our missionaries in South America about that one! Do you think if Atheists dominated the affairs of Government that we could worship as we choose? So, let's be careful in supporting religious freedom that we don't free ourselves into religious slavery.

5. WHAT WE CAN DO ABOUT IT. We can make our weight known around the School Boards. They are very sensitive to public opinion. Local School Boards can still pretty well dictate the policies of the local school. We are not too far from the years when the ministers of the town used to be invited in to give chapel talks about once a week. We can go back to that. We can make an effort to have the services and activities of our churches announced from the school platform and posted on the school bulletin board. We can have a gathering of teachers and board members several times a year, in our churches and build a Christian atmosphere and relationship. At these, a stress can be laid on better church and school cooperation. We can give support to a program of released time religious education classes. A church, or churches, close to the school could be used for this teaching. Above all, we can make our lives an example of what Christ wants us to be. If we throw our weight on the side of the right, it will conquer, for God is ever faithful to them that fear and worship Him.

QUESTIONS

1. How would you go about getting Bible reading and prayer back into your daily opening exercises in your school?

2. Realizing the seriousness of the situation facing us as a nation, how would you go about getting the national government to encourage the use of the Bible in our public schools?

KEEPING OURSELVES FIT

Scripture: Luke 2:52; I Cor. 3:16, 17; II Tim. 2:3-7

For The Leader

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

IF THESE WORDS were taken seriously by all Christian young people, there would be no need for constant instruction about purity of life and body. At once, when we have become Christians, the Holy Spirit of God enters into our heart and dwells there. Thus, we are the temple of God. Each day we should be mindful of our obligation of pure living and habits, so that our body might be a fit temple for God. The problem of what Christian young people can do and still remain pure and clean is very acute today, and thus merits our attention tonight.

DISCUSSION

1. PURE THOUGHTS. The first blast at a young person's purity comes through his or her thinking. We are what we have been thinking. If we have been thinking impure thoughts, allowing them to dwell in our minds, then our acts and habits will be impure. Reading cheap magazines, love stories, and sensuous, lustful novels will, sooner than you think, begin to show up in your acts and desires. The same can be said of the torrid love movies flashed on theater screens. Surely the Christian young person cannot see these vulgar shows and still feel they have done right by the Holy Spirit which dwells within them.

2. PURE CONDUCT. Are you doing things which are wrong, with yourself, with others? Maybe it is secret from other people, but do you think it is secret from God? The next time you desire to do that which you know is morally and spiritually wrong, try to go somewhere where you think God isn't. You'll never get away from God. You may fool your friends, but God, you can never fool. Far too many of our young people are engaging in acts of immorality, hidden from the public eye in parked automobiles or lonely places. They may even be young people who apparently stand high in their churches, coming from good families. To such we say, did you ever try asking God's blessing upon your acts? No, you could not do that, so you know within yourself it is wrong, that it is sin. Grieve not the Holy Spirit, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul.

3. A GUILTY CONSCIENCE. Ask any one who has gone into the depths of immorality and sin if they are happy about it. The first cigarette, the first drink, the first act of immorality left a keen feeling of guilt. Tears upon the pillow spoke of the remorse and guilt of the soul. Defiled and unclean. The heart became heavy, the eye faltered, the strain began to show upon the face. Young people it isn't worth the cost of purity to do these things. Before you follow your friends into sin remember that purity (never having smoked a cigarette, never having taken a drink, etc.) when once lost, can never be regained. Oh yes, sin can be forgiven, for God is merciful, but the longest years of this life can never quite remove that sense of guilt. We have talked with young people, we have talked with elderly people, and we find this to be true. So, keep thyself pure!

4. BOY-GIRL RELATIONSHIPS. Conscientious young people are definitely concerned over this problem of dating. Especially so when they have dedicated themselves to serving Christ. They want to know how far they can go, and what they may or may not do on dates. First of all, remember that your future joy in anticipated married life, and your success in Christian service depends largely on what you do as a teen-ager. Secondly, ask yourselves just how much self-respect you want to have. A girl who gets a reputation as an "easy mark" may have many boy-friends, but at the sacrifice of respect by those who date her. Many a girl thought she was a big success on a date when, if she only knew it, her date despised her for her cheapness. Too much intimacy on dates destroys something that is pure, fine and respectable about both boys and girls. It is hard to think of serving Christ, in fact almost impossible, if dating includes uninhibited "petting." A true, clean young person may not have quite as many "friends," but we know they'll be far better quality. If a friend cannot accept your Christian standards of purity on a date, he or she would be a bad risk for marriage, or companion in your anticipated Christian service.

5. A GOD TO ANSWER TO. In the last analysis, this problem is not so much what constitutes purity in our judgment, but what God thinks about it. We should not be so much concerned about what we think is right or wrong, or what our friends may think about it, but we should be concerned about what God thinks of it. To Him we must answer for the deeds done in the flesh. Every act will be called into remembrance and judgment. We are none of us perfect, by any means. But, we can travel far in this life on the road to personal purity by setting our sights on Christ and His purity. We can overcome, through Him, the things of the world. We can live a life with no regrets. This is accomplished by walking with Jesus all day long. Prayer, Bible study, and meditation. We can set our affections on things above, for a day will come when we too shall join the ranks of those who have overcome, who have striven to serve Christ with pure lives and have succeeded. Life is short, young people, to live even an hour of it in open or secret sin. There are just not enough days of life to waste any of them "having your fling." God has given us a body for a purpose. To glorify Him. Sin seeks to destroy that purpose; thus we must ever trust Him for strength to live that pure life, which, through our faith in Christ, is so essential to eternal happiness with Him.

QUESTIONS

1. A lot of churches are including dancing, pool tables, etc., into their basements to hold their young people. Do you think this is a good thing? Why or why not? Give your reasons.

We are to deliberately uncompromisingly proselyte men and women in all nations from false philosophies that rule the present orders "Go ye" by the pocket book route.

BLESSINGS THROUGH BURDENS

TROUBLE is the common lot of humanity (Job 14:1). The burden of suffering, trouble, sickness, disappointment and sorrow are evidently the loving provision of an all-wise God for a sinning race. Man has to eat his bread in sorrow from an accursed earth (Gen. 3:17-19). Sin caused God to multiply sorrow for woman (Gen. 3:16). Suffering, labor, and sickness have no doubt, served as checks to a worse wickedness and violence of mankind. The longer lives of earth's inhabitants prior to the flood of Noah's days seemed to have occasioned greater wickedness.

God also allows suffering to come upon His saints as a blessing in disguise. Job, Joseph, Daniel, Jeremiah and Paul are examples of some who suffered apparently for no fault of their own. Even our Saviour was made complete through suffering (Isa. 53:3, 10; Heb. 2:10). Paul had great victory over bodily suffering (2 Cor. 12:9).

Trouble enriches Christian character (Rom. 5:3, 4; 2 Cor. 4:8-11). Sorrow teaches us to be able to weep with those who weep. God has healed many in answer to prayer, but it is not always His will to do so. He did not heal Paul's thorn (2 Cor. 12:7-10) and Timothy's chronic infirmities (1 Tim. 5:23). Since "it is appointed unto men once to die," it is better that we should suffer some and draw near to God, be purged of our sins, be more like Jesus, and go to be with the Lord.

God is nearer in time of trouble and infinitely tender (Psa. 51:17; 50:15). It is then that we feel our spiritual need and get a blessing (Matt. 5:3). The beatitudes inform us that they that mourn, hunger and thirst, and are persecuted are blessed. God is near to the orphan and the widow (Psa. 68:5; 27:10). God is near at hand even when we are the cause of our own troubles. He was nearer to the Prodigal in the hog pen than the brother safe at home, the dying thief than the scribes and elders. When in trouble it is easier to pray and to feel the Spirit of God.

God has a loving purpose in permitting trouble (Heb. 12:6, 7, 11). He wants to save us from sin and place us in His sweet will. It would be wicked for us to be indifferent, prayerless or impatient about suffering. Let us be submissive to God's purpose in every sorrow and burden (Job 13:15; 1:21; Hos. 6:2). Trouble is God's call to the sinner to be saved (1 Kings 21:27-29; 2 Chron. 33:11-13; Luke 23:39-43; Matt. 11:28, 29).

THE CHRISTIAN DEAD

Scripture: 2 Cor. 4:16; 5:1-10

Hymns about Heaven

Prayer Band

Seed Thought Provokers:

IN ABOUT a DOZEN contrasts our Scripture selection emphasizes the transitory character of our earthly bodies as "tents" in contrast with the resurrection body as "a building of God." These contrasts assure us that all is well with those in the future state who knew here the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour.

Man is spirit, and soul, and body (1 Thess. 5:23). A man is not his body. He may be in his body or out of his body (2 Cor. 12:3, 4). When the spirit is separated from the body the result is death (James 2:26). The body is the outward man. The spirit and the soul constitute the inward man. The spirit and the soul constitute the inward man. The believer has something which the natural man does not possess since he has been "born of the Spirit" (John 3:6).

Death has no effect upon the living powers of a Christian. At death he moves out of his bodily tabernacle (2 Peter 1:13-15). There is no break in eternal life (John 11:25). To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord (2 Cor. 5:6-8), "which is far better" (Phil 1:21-25) than being in the flesh. "Far better" does not mean "oblivion" as soul sleeping cults would have us think (Psa. 16:11; John 17:24). At death the body cannot "retain the spirit" (Eccl. 8:8; 12:7). The sleep of death applies only to the body (Luke 23:43). While Christ's body lay asleep in the tomb. He himself was active in the spirit world (1 Peter 3:18-20; Mt. 12:40).

The resurrection does not involve salvation in the sense that there will be a "resurrection both of the just and the unjust" (John 5:29). The Christian dead are destined for the first resurrection (Rev. 20:5, 6). The presence of the Holy Spirit in us is a pledge of our resurrection with the righteous (Rom. 8:11). The bodies of the saints will be redeemed in the resurrection (1 Cor. 15:55-58). The Christian's complete hope is not deliverance from the body but redemption of the body (Rom. 8:19-23). We are not to "sorrow as those who have no hope" (1 Thess. 4:13-18). How does God look upon the death of a Christian (Psa. 116:15)?

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Due to the severe illness of their daughter Judy, Mr. and Mrs. James Scott, Superintendent and Matron of the Brethren Home, will be compelled to either resign their positions or be given a leave of absence for six months in order that they may take their daughter to Arizona. They would like to relinquish their positions as soon as possible, and this is an urgent call for volunteers to take over the positions, either on a temporary basis, or for permanent positions. If there are those who would consider the positions either temporary or permanent, on the conference grounds, please report this to any member of the Benevolence Board at once. Or if you know of anyone who might consider the positions, give us the names and addresses of such that we may contact them in the immediate future.

THE PSALMS WE SING

Lesson: Psalms 23; 42:1-2; 90:1-2, 16-17

PROBABLY THE BEST KNOWN and best loved Psalm is the Twenty-third. Baby lips have lisped it; the trembling lips of the aged have intoned it; almost from birth to dying breath it has been repeated; its immortal words have been set to music and sung over practically all the world. It tells us of the Shepherd's care; of His provision and providence. It tells us how the Great Shepherd is even more than a shepherd—He becomes a gracious host, prepares a wonderful table, and even anoints our heads with oil. Is it any wonder, as we repeat it again and again, that "our cup runneth over," and we feel that "surely goodness and mercy shall follow us all the days of our lives," and that we "shall dwell in the House of the Lord forever!"

As we turn again to this precious Psalm, we find it making melody in our hearts, and almost unconsciously we find a new song born within us—a tune that is all our own.

After all, What is singing, anyway? It is simply the expression of a heart by means of sounds evoked from the vocal chords in the throat. At least that is what we "hear." But haven't you ever "sung silently?" Has not melody abounded in your heart when the voice could not utter the sound? Have you not sung along with the choir when they rendered a special number with which you were familiar, even though no sound came from your lips? If you haven't, then you surely are missing something in your life.

The Psalms were "composed" to be set to music. They were thus set to music, for they were the hymns of the Temple services; they were sung in the homes; at their religious gatherings; on the way to and from their yearly festivals. Indeed, we read that at the close of Jesus' last night with His disciples, in that upper room, "they sang a hymn and went out into the Mount of Olives." Was that a hymn composed especially for the occasion? Of course not—it was simply one of the Psalms.

We sing the sentiment of the Psalms, whether we know it or not—for many of our best old hymns are paraphrased Psalms. Certain churches, like the United Presbyterians, still cling to the singing of the Psalms. And why not? They are such that they readily lend themselves to melodious cadence, and, at least, they are scriptural (which cannot be said of many of the modern songs).

Paul's injunction is, "to make melody in your hearts before God, with Psalms and hymns, and spiritual songs." The melody must first be in the heart, before it can really praise God with the lips.

GOD CALLS A SPOKESMAN

Lesson: Isaiah 6:1-10

SINCE WE ARE TO STUDY the work of the Prophets during this quarter, it might be well if we would first of all spend a little time in considering just what the real mission of a prophet is.

We came across this definition which was taken from "The Universal English Dictionary"—"A prophet is a person inspired and directed by God to announce His will to men." Such a man must of necessity be one with real insight; he at once becomes an authority, not by quoting precedents, but one who will set before the people the revealed will of God. There is the overwhelming conviction in the heart of the prophet that, through Him, God has something special to say to His people, and that he is the chosen agent to so declare it.

Being divinely inspired, he exalts the moral and spiritual above the ceremonial and the institutional. He ministers to the needs of man, although he is many times rebuffed; he gives forth his message, but he never seeks to administer it; he always emphasizes the truth, but gives it the proper trend to fit the times in which he prophesies.

If we keep these things in mind, we will better be able to understand the working of the mind of the prophets whose lives and work we shall study.

First of all, let us remember that God never calls to one that He has no place for in His plan and program. In the second place, we need to realize that the individuals who have received the divine call have placed themselves in a position to hear the call and to react toward it.

Note, if you will, Isaiah's attitude. He evidently was in the spirit to receive the call or he would not have received it. Follow the sequence: "I saw the Lord . . ." (Verse 1)—he did not go into this blindly; "I said, I am a man of unclean lips . . ." (Verse 5)—realization of the need of cleansing; "Thine iniquity is taken away . . ." (Verse 7)—cleansing before the call; "I heard the voice of the Lord . . ." (Verse 8)—The open ear and heart; "Here am I send me" (Verse 8)—The answer to the call without debating either time or place; "Go and tell . . ." (Verse 9)—The command is issued.

That the call was God-given Isaiah never doubted for one moment. He does not make excuses of inability like Moses, nor does he become fearful or discouraged like Elijah. Listen to him speak the words of God, accurately and without deviation as we study concerning his activities. His call resulted in a life spent in delivering the Word of God—unselfishly, uncompromisingly and in absolute fairness.

When we apply this lesson to our own lives, we should remember that, while we may not have received a call to a prophetic office like Isaiah; and that while we may not have been commissioned to "Preach the Word" as an ordained minister—that a call to follow "Whithersoever He leads" has been issued to each of us, and the only answer we dare give is couched in the language of the prophet—"Here am I send me!" It may be that our journey to speak may only be across the room of our own dwelling to some member of our own family; or over to another block in our own town to set forth the gospel to a neighbor—but wherever it may be, we are all called to be "spokesmen" for our Lord and Master.

Columbus, Ohio, Co-operative Vacation Bible School

The Coperative Brethren Church of Columbus, Ohio, held its Daily Vacation Bible School from July 11 to 22. This was the twentieth consecutive year that we have conducted a Vacation Bible School here. The total enrollment was ninety, with an average attendance of eighty-five. We have always been pleased with the regular attendance throughout the two weeks of the school. Thirteen workers assisted the pastor and his wife.

On Friday evening, July 22nd, the school gave a closing program, the church being well filled with the parents and friends of the children. In the primary rooms were arranged the displays of the work of the school. The outstanding feature of our closing program was the showing of color pictures of each class and the children at work. The teachers in turn gave the names of the pupils as the picture of that class was shown. These color pictures were taken by Miss Mildred Etter, of the Ft. McKinley Church, Dayton, Ohio, who has assisted us in our schools for the past thirteen years.

Our Vacation Bible School is a big event in the lives of the children of our Sunday School and Community. They plan on it from one year to the next. During the school the boys and girls brought offerings from day to day for the support of children of our missionaries and for our Kentucky missions. We greatly appreciate the prayers and financial aid of all who make the work here in Columbus possible.

D. R. Murray, pastor.

News From Our Churches

NEW LEBANON, OHIO

Greetings from the New Lebanon Brethren Church. It seems that we have been a little negligent in writing, for it has been some time since our last report. This is possibly because we were a little too busy with other things, and not realizing how time flies.

It is almost the close of another church year, and many things have taken place during the past year. There were times of rejoicing and times of sorrowing. Eight members of our church were called over to be with their Lord. All of them will be missed very much; but the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

The year has seemed a full one—special days now and then with the calendar being full most of the time. Church attendance has kept up fairly well; vacation time always makes some difference. Parents have had some fright through the appearance of Polio cases. We are trusting that the disease may soon be checked.

The attendance in the Sunday School has been a little above the average, especially in the children's division. Last quarter an average of 110 in that department was reported, which was very gratifying.

Rev. Berkshire has been called to and has accepted the pastorate for another year. At present the Berkshire family are on vacation, but are expected home soon.

Sunday, August 7th, the pulpit was filled by Rev. Baker, a native of South West Africa. He is in the States preparing himself for the ministry, although having a great struggle making his way through school. But we are sure the Lord will provide for him and make it possible for him to carry the message back to his native land. Rev. Baker has the faith to put out the faith.

Sunday, August 4th, the young people of the church had charge of the service. We pray the Lord's blessing on these services.

Some improvements have been made on the parsonage; more room added and a new porch built, all of which adds to the value of the property.

A Sunday School picnic was held the last day of July. The attendance was small, but we had an enjoyable time.

Vacation Bible School was held in June, with a Crusader Team from Ashland in charge. A week of Bible Study was also held in June.

Rev. S. E. Christiansen from Georgetown, Delaware, came to New Lebanon on March 7th and labored with us through the 1st. Interest and attendance was good from the start. Each evening before the service a few moments were spent in prayer by different groups in different rooms of the church. Good seed was sown and a number were added to the church membership. Delegations from other churches were present on different evenings. There are still people looking for the Old Time Religion.

We are looking forward toward General Conference which is only a week away. We always look forward to conference with a great deal of pleasure, for it is here that we meet old friends and make new ones.

We close with a thought that our daily living may be a testimony to the Lord. We ask that your prayers be blended with ours for the work of the Master and that we will continue forward. We are glad for all things the Lord has done.

The Brethren Evangelist

General Conference - Then What?

I personally believe we have a number of responsibilities at the closing of the 61st General Conference on Ashland College campus, a few days ago.

First—there is a personal responsibility to Jesus Christ to face the facts, the Truth that carried many appeals during those days of inspiration. We must now act upon these facts and appeals. The visions of those days must be incarnated; they must be made into the bedrock of character. We must, if we would profit, put into concrete life what we have thought, felt and resolved. We have been warned about unbelief, the unconcern, the wave of apostacy and the wide-spread unrest in certain portions of the world. We have found facts, referring to the needs of so many in various sections of the world. As our Lord once said, "Settle it therefore in your hearts," understand what His will is for you. In the light of all the facts and inspiration some, we pray, will decide their life work. And in the light of the great spiritual realities let us live our life.

As you reflect and think of the noble men and women who have labored, prayed and helped to carry the Banner high during the past forty or fifty years; servants of God who were full of faith and willingness to sacrifice; as you think of D. A. Hapkins, L. G. Wood, E. B. Shaver, J. Knepper, J. M. Tombaugh, Wm. H. Beachler, G. W. Rench and others; all have laid down the armour; and a few yet living, who perhaps ought to be named, who have done as valiantly; will you not live a new life and work with a new faith in your church?

Second—every conference attendant has a responsibility to his church. The church is the home base of missions. We must move the church. Think of the power of the 1000 people (more or less) who attended some part of our conference.

Our church might well become aroused and awakened because of the spirit and challenge of this conference. The fire and zeal must be carried to every church.

Third—our responsibility to the world, "None of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. . . ." We have already assumed a share in South America and in Nigeria and Puerto Rico. Your Board stands ready to have a share elsewhere, at the opportune time. More workers are being prepared. At the command of Jesus, our Master, let us arise in an endless undiscourageable crusade, till we help win the victory. Under God, we will press to the front until the work be done. We may not live to see the victory; others will press forward to take our places.

*"What matter, we or they,
Ours or another's day,
Others shall sing the song;
Others shall right the wrong,
Finish what we begin,
And all we fail of, win.*

*Ring, bells, in far-off steeples,
The joy of unborn peoples!
Sound trumpets! Far off blown,
Your triumph is our own."*

The

Field Secretary

Travels

The month of July was my heaviest month for travel, but to offset it, August was the least. August was vacation for so many ministers and likewise parishioners. It was conference month, with all of the preparations; not only at the missionary office to be sure.

To the secretary came other calls during the month—two devotional broadcasts from the local FM station, three calls for funerals, and preaching in two Ashland pulpits, while parsons were on vacations. The appointment at our own church was cancelled because of a call for my services at Linwood, Maryland, the day before conference convened.

My good friend of more than 30 years, Seward Englar, suddenly passed from this life, a few minutes after he had been working on his lawn. His wife, the only survivor of the family, will be remembered by many as the organist for more than 25 years, at the Linwood Brethren Church. The final service for Mr. Englar was attended by many people. The Reverend Dyoll Belote, the pastor, assisted the writer.

The Mansfield Pullman officials promised to have a sleeper on the Manhattan Limited at Baltimore City ready for me Sunday night. The promise was kept and I was at my home 8:30 Monday morning, ready for conference activity.

It will not be easy to excel or even duplicate the general conference of a few days ago. The attendance was more than for years. The spirit of wonderful fellowship was present throughout. Interest and enthusiasm was revealed generally. The weather was certainly ideal. Any who would be critical or non-appreciative surely did not enter into the conference very far.

The Missionary Board had a full attendance of members. Most reports received were very good. The Board endorsed the purchase of lots at Villa Constitucion, Argentina, and asked the commission to carry out the building program as rapidly as possible. Also, money was voted for use at Gerli, where a new building is needed, as soon as the commission reports their reactions to the suggestion of the Board, as to type of building. Miss Janet King of Elkhart appeared before the Board and gave a detailed report of our missionary work in Argentina. She had just returned via plane from South America where she had visited for about two months.

We enter another conference year with more responsibility than ever before. E.M.R

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The Missionary Board in session at General Conference time, after hearing the committee report on prospects for new fields of service, named a special committee to draft a resolution for future activity. The following is the report: "If Brethren young people are called to do missionary work in any specific areas in the world such as Japan, India, China, the Philippines, etc., where we do not at present have a functioning missionary program—the Missionary Board welcomes and will take under advisement, then seek to support and provide the channel for their going. Such persons are invited to communicate their desires to the Secretary of the Mission Board and the Director of Brethren Youth." Signed by Vernon Grisso, J. W. Platt, John Locke. This report was adopted by the Board.

The Evangelism Of The World--What Does This Mean?

by Claud Studebaker

The church has been assigned one primary task by her Lord—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28:19, 20 . . . "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature, He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16:15, 16 . . . "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things . . . : but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:47-49 . . . "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." John 17:18 . . . "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost has come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1:8.

The above quotations from Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Acts are the words of our Lord. The one spoken by our Lord just before he entered the garden of Gethsemane, in his great intercessory prayer, John the beloved apostle reports these words in his gospel. The others are spoken by our Lord shortly before he ascends back to heaven from whence he came.

WORDS OF ACTION—

These words spoken by our Christ are words of action:—"I send you,"—"Go,"—"Teach,"—"Preach,"—"Witness." The Christian faith is not a faith of mysticism, and unintelligible yearning for the infinite good, or an indefinite desire or hope that all will be well, if we do some self disciplining and exercise some degree of faith in a God of our own imagination, and conjure our own way of salvation and blindly hope that God will approve our plans and ideas for another life. These attitudes and ideas are rather common in the world today, in spite of 2000 years of church history and preaching the gospel.

To many people in this land of churches the true gospel is a foreign language and a message they have never heard. Probably 30 million of youth today in the U. S. (some years ago the best statistics gave 27 million) and probably as many adults receive no religious teaching whatsoever. To these millions, Jesus Christ is only a name used in profanity. The date, 1949, does not mean the year of our Lord, but merely figures for legal purposes. The church to them has no practical value, but a last resort for a decent burial and a vague hope for a world to come. I think people will agree that the moral and spiritual state is not improving but growing worse. From an educational background where the Bible was the text book, and later McGuffeys Readers, filled with Bible readings and great lessons in true character building; when 97 out of our first 100 colleges were church colleges; when even Harvard required every student to read the Bible and recite the meaning of the scripture to the professor, and that he be taught to know Christ, whom to know aright was life eternal—from such a beginning and through the colonizing and settling this vast expanse of territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the church was the social center of our community life and the parent of the school system.

It was the church and her influence which set the pattern of life and gave strength and prosperity to our nation. Today, with the Bible forbidden in our public school system, and neglected by some organizations called churches, the social center of the world is no longer the church, but has shifted to the MOVIES, TAVERNS, RECREATION CENTERS and many clubs and lodges. Whatever may be good or bad, in any of these, they fall in reaching the heart of man for regeneration and salvation. From this redemption of the souls of men must come the high standards of holiness and righteous living.

The urge is just as imperative to "Go and Teach and Preach" as when Christ spoke the words to his apostles. The world can only be Evangelized by giving the world the gospel of Jesus Christ in the power of the Holy Ghost. As the historian said, "Nero fiddled while Rome burned," so the church is fiddling around with a lot of organizational work and tinkering with the machinery, while the power of the gospel ebbs low, because it is not presented to those who so greatly need it. We are all to be witnesses. We are to testify earnestly of Christ the Saviour. Confessing him ourselves and regularly or spasmodically or perfunctorily worshipping will not evangelize the world. The Protestant churches should learn a lesson on "Action" from Jehovah's Witnesses, and other cults whose growth is quite phenomenal. The secret is, they work at the task. They go teach, preach and witness. That is the pattern Christ gave to the church.

OUR FIELD OF LABOR

Evangelization of the world begins for every one at Jerusalem, i. e., at home. Every person who has accepted Jesus Christ as their Saviour and Lord is a missionary. You are to tell others of your Christ and his love and salvation. The people about you are to see Christ in you. "Do you live so close to the Lord each day, Passing to and fro in life's busy way; That the world in us can a likeness see, To the man of Calvary. Can the world see Jesus in me? Can the world see Jesus in You? Does your love to him ring true, in your life and service too. Can the world see Jesus in you?"

Your part of evangelization of the world and mine as well begins at home. If you are a born again Christian you are congenial, kind, unselfish, and manifest the love and sacrifice of our Master in your home, to your family, in your church, in your community, to your neighbors, in your work, in your play. In fact, the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruits: so shall ye be my disciples." The purpose of fruit is to bear the seed and reproduce its kind. Adding true members to the church, at home or abroad, is the process by which the world is evangelized. If you are not adding members to your church you are not evangelizing. If you are contentious, ill tempered, gossipy, speaking evil and showing malice and revengeful in spirit, you are the greatest hindrance to the missionary work

It Was Finished At Calvary

by Virgil Meyer

There is no single recorded event in all history which is as well attested to as the crucifixion of Jesus, His death and burial, and his resurrection on the third day—victorious over sin and the grave. For Christians of today, the cross the symbol of Christ's eternal victory over the forces of evil and of death, is one of the most perplexing aspects of modern day Christianity. Men seem to understand the teachings of Jesus and at times, try to put them into practice. But, for the most part, church members stand before the great symbol of their faith—the cross—and, though they have great respect for what it stands for, they are quite at a loss to put into words what it means to them in daily living.

In your life and mine, what did happen on Calvary? What did take place that caused Jesus to say "it is finished?"

His words were a mighty shout of victory! As John gives us the account, "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, 'It is finished': as he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost", we are apt to give a lot of attention to the "giving up the ghost" and are liable to lightly pass over the "it is finished." He gives a shout of victory because the predictions of His death are fulfilled. The world is overcome; sin is overcome; and Satan is overcome. We cannot get a conception of what this all meant unless we realize that this was the greatest battle of all time! All of the hosts of hell had been marshalled against God and this His Son. Satan was using every means; Judas, the high priests, and rejecting humanity, to defeat Jesus and kill Him. They thought they had won. Judas had betrayed Him with the death kiss, the priests had falsely condemned Him, the Gentile representative—Pontius Pilate—hadn't the courage to set Him free and the crowd had demanded that He be crucified. It looked very much as if the Devil were winning. Then there came the victorious shout "it is finished." Jesus had won! The conquest of the powers of darkness had been achieved.

This was His day of victory. Just the night before he had prayed in His pleadings with the Father, "I have finished the work which thou gavest Me to do. I am tired, sick, lonely. Let Me come home. I have glorified Thee." This was the end of His earthly ordeal. Now He could go back to the glory which He had with the Father before creation.

What was it then that Christ did for us? It was expressed quite well by Samuel Rutherford. He was sentenced to imprisonment in the city of Aberdeen "for righteousness sake." He wrote thus, "The Lord is with me; I care not what man can do. I burden no man, and I want nothing. No being is better provided for than I am. My chains are over-gilded with gold. No pen, no words can express to you the loveliness of my only, only Lord Jesus."

The great work of salvation was now, at last completed; prophecy fulfilled; the Ancient Covenant at an end, the Holy of Holies had ceased to be, for the great veil of the Temple had suddenly rent itself in two; as if he who had hitherto dwelt there had gone forth to lead up His Eternal Son to his own right hand.

Finished was his holy life; with his life, his struggle, with his struggle his work, with his work the redemption, with the redemption the foundation of the new world. The secular historian, be he ever so skeptical, cannot fail to see in it the central point of the world's history, the boundary between ancient and modern days. From that hour loneliness became the universal ideal of all who name His name, and the attainment of that ideal, the common heritage of souls in which His spirit dwells.

Men's lives are incomplete only as they fail to fulfill God's plan. The flower that blooms and dies though it waste its sweetness of desert air; the tiny animal that builds his nest in the prairie; the cloud that disappears as it sends down refreshing showers; the sun that runs its day's course even when it sets in darkness—all have finished their work in the universe of God—if they can say "I have done His will."

God sent Christ to the earth to save sinners and thus on the Cross He made salvation free to all men.

JEWES AND THE MESSIAH of the church; for such are enemies of the church and are in the same class in regard to the church as a fifth columnist is to the nation.

If every member of every church was imbued with the one great task of the church, i. e., to lead others to Christ and salvation, we would first of all walk in the Spirit ourselves. Then the lives we touched would see and hear Jesus in us. If every Christian would lead even one soul to Christ and the church, each five years, the world would soon be evangelized. We do not work at it very seriously. Our lives in the church are gravely inconsistent; our offerings to spread the gospel to the world are pitifully meager. The Lord commands, "I send you," go, teach, preach, baptize, witness. Will we obey? Or will we idle the time away and seek to entertain ourselves rather than tell men they are lost and must turn to God in repentance and receive Christ as Saviour and Lord, else they are doomed. Would Christ say to us as he did to the Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites?

South Bend, Indiana.

The remarkable events taking place in world Jewry provide indisputable proof that the Society for Distributing the Holy Scriptures to the Jews, formed in 1939, was brought into being by God, expressly to meet the present tremendous opportunities to evangelize His covenant people. At the annual meeting this year in London, the Secretary, Mr. J. Yoelson-Taffen, referred to the changed attitude of the Jews toward Christ, whom they now realized demanded their attention, and to the New Testament, in which they found hope such as Judaism had not to offer. Consequently there was, throughout Jewry, a longing desire to know God and to read His Word, and requests for New Testaments were being received from all parts of the world.

Let us pray for blessing on the distribution of God's Word among His Chosen People.—Prophetic News and Israel's Watchman.

God's Urgent Call

by Rev. J. G. Dodds

Men of today have reversed the divine order. In the mind of most people today the local church is first, and in many cases it has become the all-important thing. The work of the missionary and the evangelist is pushed into the far background. In the first century church, missions and evangelism was the great work of the Church; today it is a work of the church. The First-Century Church was impassioned for the gospel to be preached everywhere. The urgency of the call that impassioned the early Church is clearly stated in Acts 4:12—"Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." By thus commissioning his disciples, He was commissioning the Church for all time—until He returns and the Church is caught up to be with Him. Wherever the early Church went the disciples were flaming evangelists. The urgency of God's call has never waned. To the early Church the call was urgent, imperative, inescapable. It is yet the same for us today. "Ye shall be my witnesses in Akron, and in Chicago, and in Omaha, and in San Francisco, and in our own surrounding communities, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

God's urgent call is manifest in the earth life of our Lord. "When He saw the multitude He was moved with compassion." Not simply touched but swept with a vitalizing force as by a storm. When He cleansed the temple, He was hot with urgent haste and a mighty spiritual indignation. His urgency is stressed by the Psalmist: "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up." A city persecuted him, rejected him, yet he wept over that city: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how many times would I have gathered thee as a hen gathereth her brood, and ye would not." Jesus went everywhere preaching the Word, "Repent for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand." He never faltered; His was no "middle of the road" attitude; He never compromised God's holy Truth.

We say "We be Brethren." The disciple is to be as his Lord. We bear His name; we represent His life to the world; we are to personify His teachings. How can we do that if we are not on fire with holy urgency?

Again God's urgent call comes: "Ye are the light of the world, ye are the salt of the earth." The great task which the Church (the Brethren Church) has is to bring men to loyalty to Jesus Christ as Saviour; to loyalty to God's world; to loyalty to the Church, to prayer, to study of the Bible, the worship of God's house, to Christian love and fellowship.

Yes, Brethren, God's call is urgent. We need more Whitfields, who, stopping on the stairs to preach his last message, and then going upstairs to die. We need more Wesleys, wearing his life away because of his consciousness of the urgency of God's call to evangelism. We need more Macks, giving all he had of money and energy and time, and leaving an heritage—the BRETHREN CHURCH.

Yes, we need more H. R. Holsingers, and S. H. Bashors, and J. B. Wamplers, and G. W. Renschs, and C. F. Yoders, and Martin Shivelys, and J. Allen Millers. Who of our young men will be their worthy successors?

God's urgent call demands missionary and evangelistic zeal. The Church is to be the regenerator of the world. IS THE BRETHREN CHURCH THROWING HERSELF INTO THE BREACH? Does she stand supremely for the Gospel of Christ which is "the power of God unto salvation" to all who believe? May we never compromise our message; let us stand steadfast to our motto: "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible for the whole world." "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and is righteousness."

How can any pastor sleep at nights or enjoy the comforts of life, when he is listless and indifferent toward the fulfilling of the mission for which he has been ordained? How can any member of the Brethren Church recall his own holy promise to be true to Christ, without realizing that he must unceasingly, in daylight and in darkness, sound forth the urgent call of his Master by his lips and by his life?

The 1949 General Conference ended August 28. We have now returned to our own local communities. Look about you, "the harvest is ripe but the laborers are few." Do you see any little area where the people have not heard the whole Gospel? The very fact that you see the need is God's urgent call for you to do something about it. SUPPOSE YOU FAIL, WHAT THEN?

Rev. Adoniram Judson

By Ralph Mills

"Go ye, therefore, into all the world and preach the Gospel," was the beconing call for Adoniram Judson, who became the God-chosen apostle of Burma. The task that lay before him was not an easy one because of the opposition he faced, especially at times like his arrival at Calcutta. Here he was immediately ordered out by the despotic and Gospel-hating East India Company. His efforts to be allowed to labor in Madras proved in vain and as an only resort he took passage to Burma.

Like Paul, persecutions were not uncommon but in Burma he was received with eagerness. His achievements in Karan Missions have never been equalled by any other in modern times. When Judson died hundreds of baptized Burmans and Karens were leaning on Jesus and over seven thousand survived in sixty-three churches.

Judson had finished his Bible translation, compiled a Burmese dictionary, and laid the basis of Christian character deep down in the Burman heart. These results were not achieved without suffering and toil. He was thrown into prison where he received brutal treatment and physical agony, which he endured for nearly two years, after which time he owed a great deal of gratitude to his consecrated wife, Anne Hasseltine Judson, who labored to support him.

Judson had a task to perform, though he was meeting opposition from the Buddhism and the Burmans who were mocking and challenging his faith. Thus Judson was asked as to the outlook and replied, "It is as bright as the promises of God." Certainly such words under such circumstances are evidence of Judson's character and service. It can be unchallengingly said that Adoniram Judson's service, his self devotions, and scholarships, and the result of his trials are surpassed by no other missionary since Paul.

Thus as a final tribute to the man who meant so much to the missionary effort of the Christian people is found a memorial tablet at Malden, Mass., with the following inscription:

I AM THE SMALL CHURCH

I am the small church. And I want to speak in behalf of tens of thousands of churches like me.

Many are the claims which I cannot make for myself. The things that happen in my parish do not make the headlines of the newspapers. No famous ministers have preached from my pulpit. I do not have a choir. No vast congregations worship within my walls. I am not able to give large sums of money to the work of the Kingdom; but the per capita giving of my people is much above the average of that of many of the large churches.

Yes, I am the small church. But I have what many large churches do not have. I am persuaded you will find in me a genuine Christian fellowship, a zeal, an enthusiasm, a devotion, and a spirit of consecration and sacrifice which you cannot find in many of the large churches.

I am small. But I am indispensable. The Kingdom of God cannot go forward without me. I am the life-blood of the large churches. I send out from my parish many young men who become great ministers, to shepherd large congregations. Into the mission fields, and other areas of Christian service and leadership, I send more young people than do many of the large churches.

Another thing you should remember about me. I hold in myself vast potentialities. I shall not always remain small. Remember the Christian movement itself began as a small church! Indeed, throughout the history of the Christian movement I have always played a vastly significant role. I am the soil out of which the large church had a small beginning. Many small churches like me have grown rapidly and in a few years have become large churches. Truly I am the lifeblood of Christian civilization! Neglect me, and the progress of the Kingdom will be enormously retarded.

Our Interest In And Duty Toward Missions

by Dyoll Belote

John 4:35

Procrastination has always been, and still is, a thief. Our text warns us against it in connection with our obligation to serve as messengers of the Gospel. The call to this service was issued centuries ago by our Saviour and Lord, and that mission has never been revoked. His call still sounds, "Go ye—preach—make disciples—baptize—and Lo I am with you alway." This was the commission entrusted to the apostles, and by right of succession entrusted to His followers of our own day.

To call oneself a Christian and not be interested in Missions is a misnomer, a misappropriation of terms to say the least and put it in the mildest terms. Christ's Gospel is nothing, if not Missionary at its very foundation. Christ's plan for the accomplishment of His divine purpose of redemption was an orderly one, "preach the Gospel to every creature," . . . Jerusalem, Judea, and the uttermost parts of the earth."

The Macedonian Call

It does not take an intimate acquaintance with God to conceive of His understanding of the thoughts and having Fatherly care and pity for some cannibal on an island where the breath of Christianity has not been carried. To believe this we need the light from the outside, the knowledge of the transformations that His followers through His power have wrought upon some of these islands. We need to become conversant with the lives of men like Livingstone, Judson, Moffat and Mackey. They will tell us that from where the darkness is darkest comes to the Church—and the Christian—the call to dare and to do.

To What the Call is given.

Of every two infants born into the world, one first beholds the light of day among the idolaters of southern and eastern Asia. Of every two brides one offers her vows in that same area. Of every two families in the world, one spreads its table there. Of every two widows, one is lamenting in that part of the world. Of every two orphan girls, one is wandering in the gloom of that heathendom. Of every two wounded consciences, one trembles there. Of every two individuals that die, one departs from that continent.

Can you not see, dear readers, to what you are called? The same Christ who died for all, through His free Gospel, has blessed our infants, cherished our brides, cheered our family circles, comforted our widows, cared for the orphans of our land, healed the wounded consciences in our land, and spread heaven before the gaze of the dying.

And to the carrying of the "Good News" of the Gospel to those who do not know it, whether in Asia, or Africa, or anywhere over the whole earth, we are called. Our obligation is to be discharged in one of three ways, viz., pray, or give, or go — or all three. The praying we can all share in; some measure of giving we can all do, and to some it is given to share the Master's supreme joy of forsaking all to bring salvation's story to their fellows.

For What the Call Comes

As we have just intimated above, the call comes for ourselves, our prayers, our means. All these we have, and then as a convert to the Missionary movement once said: "We also have the meanness, and we must get rid of that first." The same man remarked that he had to be operated upon to get the meanness out of him, but that it was the only way to get it out of some people. In India, China, Japan and Korea alone are massed some seven hundred million idolaters. With such figures for only four of the world's nations, and the fact that God's love has shone upon us for centuries, if it isn't meanness that makes us withhold our money, men and prayers, what is it?

'Where Begin to Answer the Call

A man in Minnesota built a magnificent home, and on the top of it he placed a lighthouse. The explanation is this: Years ago, when traveling across the prairies in the night a terrible snow storm came upon him. He was just about to lie down in the snow to die when he saw a faint light in the distance. Summoning all his strength he dragged himself toward the light, and his effort brought him to a log cabin and safety. And so he set this lighthouse on his house top that it may guide others.

"His lights are we,
To shine where He shall say;
And lamps are not for sunny rooms,
Nor for the light of day,
But for the dark places of the earth,
Where shame and wrong and crime are born."

Where to Begin to Answer the Call

The man who placed the light atop his house began to "shine" at home—but while it is said that "charity should begin at home," it is also remarked that it should not stay there. We may safely bestow our sympathy upon the needy of every land without fear of exhausting the supply, if Christian love prompts the expenditure. This little poem may serve as a suggestion to help us answer our last question.

Waiting

"The restless millions wait

The light whose dawning maketh all things new:
Christ also waits, but men are slow and late.

Have we done all we could? Have I? Have you?

A cloud of witnesses above encompass,

We love to think of all they see and know;

But what of this great multitude in peril,

Who sadly wait below?

Oh, let this thrilling vision daily move us

To earnest prayer and deeds before unknown.

That souls from many lands may join us,

When Christ brings home His own."

"Behold now is the day of salvation; today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your heart." But how convict an individual of the possession of a heart hardened by sin if he has never heard the message of salvation? If, then, it is dangerous for men to delay in the acceptance of the offer of salvation, it is by the same logic dangerous to neglect to carry the message to them.

SHALL WE KEEP ON ASKING GOD?

by the late James H. McConkey

More than half a century ago George Muller, that prince of intercessors with God, began to pray for a group of five personal friends. After five years one of them came to Christ. In ten years two more of them found peace in the same Saviour. He prayed on for twenty-five years and the fourth man was saved. For the fifth he played until the time of his death, and this friend too came to Christ a few months afterward. For this latter friend Muller had prayed almost fifty-two years!

But someone says: "How long shall we pray? Do we not come to a place where we may cease from our petitions and rest the matter in God's hands?" He alone, and not we, must decide when we shall cease from petitioning. We may stop praying for someone because we receive the answer or we stop because we believe God has given His answer. The faith of our heart is as sure as the sight of our eyes, for it is faith in God. More and more as we live the prayer life we come to experience and recognize this God-given assurance, and know when to continue our petitioning.

A SURVEY OF RELIGIOUS LIFE AND THOUGHT

Mr. Walter Montano, "The Monk Who Lived Again," now evangelizing in Latin America, was once attached to the Dominican preaching order. A recent convert has been his own father in Cochabamba, Bolivia. Of this he writes:

"Saturday afternoon . . . I began to speak with him again about his soul, eternity, salvation, the love of God. The Holy Spirit seemed to show that this was the time, that this was my father's opportunity; then it was all so easy, yet so sublime. The two of us knelt together. I prayed first and could not hold back the tears. As we knelt I asked him if he did not want to give his heart to God. With all the sincerity of his soul he said that he knew he was a sinner and that now, yes, right away and for always, he wanted to depend only on the blood of Christ.

How can I describe what happened in those moments? For the first time in his life he began to pray in reality . . . With tears flowing and in a loud voice, not caring who might hear, my father prayed: 'Finally, my God, Thou hast taken the bandage from my eyes. Today to Thee only do I surrender myself and in Thee only do I trust. Accept me as Thy son; from now on I belong to Thee. This day is my day of birth. Write my name in the Book of Life. Thou art my Mediator, my Help, my Defender, and my All. Wash all my sins in the blood of the Cross, and teach me the things that as yet I do not know. When I die, I shall go to Thy arms because Thou hast made me to understand through faith (that) there is no condemnation for those who come to Thee.'

"After this I continued in prayer and thanksgiving. When we arose from our knees, we hugged each other for a long time, crying for joy. My father said, 'Now I am content and happy. There is no other religion but God; there is no Saviour for me but Christ.' His very first testimony was to his own son."—S. S. Times.

THE PLEADING OF PRESENT PLEASANT PROSPECTS

by Dr. C. F. Yoder

I have used this tongue-twister heading because I want you to get it. We have a big field with open doors and many young people, competent and consecrated, who need help to get training. You people in the homeland have others, and you have the abundance with which to help us with the problem of preparing our young people. We appreciate what you have been doing about it, but if you would sacrifice as much as some of our converts are doing you could do five or ten times more. An average of three dollars a year is something, but if it were thirty or fifty instead it would be more as it should be.

Let us have prayer lists, and prayer bands, and missionary savings banks and a missionary message in sermons and in conversations and conference messages until old and young are missionary minded and the church awakes to its one great mission in the world. Matt. 28:19; 24:14.

Readers will remember, of course, that to avoid further ill feeling and foreign mission property and the work of thirty years was left to the seceding group, but the lessons learned have passed on to our present work, and the blessing of God as well.

Forty Years In Argentina

On September 10th, 1909, my wife and I and two little children and Miss Bell landed in Argentina. Three months we remained in Buenos Aires, waiting to get our goods out of the customs house, and meanwhile studying the language and also the country, so as to be guided to the most important field. We felt led to Rio Cuarto, the largest unoccupied city in the interior, with no other mission within fifty miles. There we rented a suburban house to use while learning the language and in May following, were able to sub-rent from a doctor, a nice hall and two rooms with the rear adjoining the rear of the cathedral fronting on the central plaza.

We found a few families who had some evangelical training in Europe and they formed the nucleus for a congregation. But we also found that with the open door there were many adversaries. There was a plot to hire an assassin to kill me. Boys were hired to stone me and we were often insulted in the street. But all these things turned into blessing and in three years we were able to have our own building, where the Sunday school rose rapidly in attendance until we had to enlarge the auditorium. The growth continued until the Sunday school attendance was seldom less than 230 and the evening church attendance was still larger. Other missionaries came to visit us in order to learn how this was possible in a city considered one of the worst in the country.

In this brief glimpse at the past I will therefore limit myself to naming what I consider as the most important factors in the success attained.

Prayer—The apostolic church was a praying church. We therefore, from the first, taught the people to pray. Besides the weekly prayer meeting in the church we had cottage prayer meetings and prayer with anointing for the sick. THE CHILDREN WERE ALSO TAUGHT TO PRAY. Later we had a day of fasting and prayer once a year. Our seasons of greatest blessing followed our seasons of greatest prayer.

Recreation—To conquer the prejudice against us we provided playgrounds for the children. Many would come to play and, once acquainted, would come in to the Sunday school. Next they would come to social meetings or picnics and were then prepared to learn the serious teaching of sin and salvation.

Service—We remembered the high tribute paid to Jesus—"He went about doing good." In our visits we always tried to find some way to be useful to the people visited, and found that by winning the gratitude and confidence of the people it was far easier to win them also to Christ. To be sure, some sought the loaves and fishes, but they were as nothing compared to the many who were truly converted and in turn found their joy in serving others.

Bible Study—Few of our converts had ever seen a Bible. Several house to house canvasses of the city selling Bibles and giving tracts, revealed that there were less than a dozen Bibles in the city. In such visits the chief object was to obtain conversations in which to teach the Bible. All such visits became the subject for neighborhood conversations which extended the work. We always carried a Catholic Bible also in order to show that ours was not falsified.

Teacher Training—As soon as we had promising persons for teachers we formed a class which completed the international Sunday school course in teacher training and received diplomas from the World Association. With these twelve trained teachers the Sunday school took wings.

Personal Work—We tried to give every convert a sense of responsibility in winning others. The life of Charles Finney in Spanish made a great impression on the young people and we had volunteers enough to divide the city in eight districts and put a tract in every house in a district in turn once a week. Tracts were also left in public offices or stations and in parks where people would sit and read. They were given to passengers on the trains when we travelled and given out to the crowds at the stations where we stopped. The children in the schools not only braved the insults of the ignorant, but were incessant in winning others to the Sunday school.

Auxiliary Societies—In 1914, after one year in our own property, several advance steps were taken. The first of these was the organization of a Christian Endeavor society. We found the young people eager to lead meetings and hold office. This was followed by a Women's Missionary Society and later a men's society, which the rector of the college attended. He at last professed conversion but soon after moved to Buenos Aires where he died.

In 1914 Our Bible Coach Began Work—Money had been offered for an auto for me, but by consent of the donors it was used for the first auto-Bible coach in the country. The frame was of a hard wood that has enabled the coach to endure thirty-five years of service without a loose joint, but it was lost to us at the time of secession in 1939. With

A Brethren Missionary

Adolfo Zeche

(By Dr. C. F. Yoder)

I have been asked to write historical sketches of each of the present foreign missionaries of the Brethren Church, and I will begin with the one who has been selected to be the representative of the Brethren Missionary Board in Argentina.

I have known brother Zeche from his childhood. It was not long after we opened the mission in our property in Rio Cuarto that we were delighted to see him come with his four sisters and his mother, and from that day on we had no more faithful attendants and workers than they were.

Brother Zeche is of German-Polish descent, but was born in Argentina. He grew up in our Sunday School and early accepted Christ and was baptized. He graduated from the common school and took the five-year A. B. course in the National College, and thus was in my classes there. He was a good student, both in conduct and in scholarship. He was popular among the other students and brought some of them with him to the mission; but of the hundreds of students who became friends of the mission, brother Zeche is the only one who himself became a missionary.

Because of his faithfulness and proficiency we sent him to the Baptist Seminary in Buenos Aires, as we had none of our own. There he won the praises of his professors and graduated with honors.

While in the Seminary he acted as pastor of our mission in Buenos Aires and his work was blessed of the Lord. If he could have continued I am sure that he would now have a great work there with many branch missions. But the Board decided to stay out of the cities on account of their already having the Gospel from other missions.

Brother Zeche then worked with the Bible coach for a time and showed great aptitude for that work, but as it was out only a part of the year, he became assistant pastor in Huinca Renanco and Realico and was highly esteemed by the people. Then he was given the pastorate in Cabrera and that work rapidly grew under his care. Later he was promoted to the pastorate of Huinca Renanco and Realico and remained in that work until called in 1940 to Rosario. So great was his success in Huinca Renanco that the mission hall was not large enough to hold the people.

Brother Zeche succeeded in raising funds for its enlargement and with some help from the Board a beautiful chapel resulted and was soon filled with devoted people. He began preaching in 1921 and has therefore been preaching about twenty-five years. He married a Christian German Girl in Uruguay who has two sisters and a brother-in-law who are missionaries in Argentina. One of the sisters is Miss Louisa Kugler who is an efficient Brethren missionary. Brother and sister Zeche have two children, lovely girls of 18 and 15 years of age. They are active helpers, doing what they can at their age.

In January, 1941, brother Zeche began work under our original Mission Board and took over the work in Rosario which had been begun by a group of members who had moved there from Rio Cuarto years ago and had been kept up through the faithful labors of brother Garcia, a lay preacher, and his helpers, including brother Yett, who did good work while he remained.

Brother Zeche now has a large and enthusiastic membership with several branch missions besides the central group. There is an enthusiastic Christian Endeavor society which has won the banner for the best record of any in the Northern district of Argentina. The Woman's Missionary Society is also large and active with several able leaders. A young peoples Bible Institute for the preparation of workers was attended by sixty-five young people, some of whom are already able to preach.

Brother Zeche is already well known as a preacher and worker and has been called to speak in prominent conventions and teach in summer camps. He is now actively promoting our own summer camp, since a beautiful site has at last been found for it near Cordoba.

When a young man brother Zeche could not sing, but when he was called to be a pastor the Lord gave him the gift of song, and he could thenceforth lead the singing very well. He is also learning to speak and read the English language, which he now speaks in addition to Spanish and German.

As superintendent of Brethren Missionary activity in South America, he craves, and needs, the prayers of all. I am sure our pastors and churches will not forget him.

CRIME AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

by J. Edgar Hoover Director of F. B. I., U. S. Department of Justice

The criminal is the product of spiritual starvation. Someone failed miserably to bring him to know God, love Him, and serve Him. As a result, the criminal's mental attitudes and actions are guided by a selfish individualism. He has no respect for the law—he hates it. Moral traditions are subject to his scorn as he declares war on society.

Unfortunately, there are many in the United States today who flout the laws of both God and man. This is borne out by facts and figures in the possession of the FBI.

By the end of 1946, a total of 1,685,203 major crimes were recorded in the United States—the highest annual total recorded in the past decade. Crime in urban areas in 1946 increased 7.4 per cent over the previous year as sharp rises were noted in murders, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries, larcenies, manslaughters by negligence, and rapes.

The upward crime trend in the rural areas was more pronounced in 1946, with an increase of 14 per cent. In each crime classification the rural upswing exceeded that in the cities.

A Shocking Record

The gravity of the crime situation in 1946 was reflected by the fact that during the average day 36 persons were slain, 33 were raped, and 185 others were feloniously assaulted. During each twenty-four hours, on the average, 172 persons were robbed, 901 burglaries were reported to the police, 630 cars were stolen, in addition to 2,580 miscellaneous larcenies of various types being committed. Although a comparatively small percentage of the total offenses were classed as violent crimes against persons, it is significant to observe that every 5.7 minutes in 1946 there was a criminal homicide, rape, or assault with intent to kill.

The rise in crime during 1946 revealed that we are still faced with an abnormally high rate of juvenile misbehavior. Youngsters under 21 years of age were responsible for 51 per cent of the auto thefts, 41 per cent of the burglaries, 28 per cent of the robberies, 27 per cent of the thefts, 26 per cent of the rapes, and 18 per cent of the arsons. More than one-half of all crimes against property during 1946 were committed by persons under 25 years of age.

The upward sweep in the postwar crime is characterized by criminal incidents reminiscent of gang events following World War I. Gangsters, hoodlums, and trigger men are eagerly recruiting youngsters into the criminal army. Guns are finding their way into the hands of mere boys who are ready to laugh at the law and kill if necessary.

I recall one case where two police officers were dispatched to a cabin on the outskirts of a town to locate several boys who were wanted at that time for questioning. The officers located the boys and were at once confronted with a defiant group of youngsters rivaling the hostility of hardened gangsters. Four boys armed with machine guns held the officers at bay. As the two officers awaited reinforcements and sought to avoid bloodshed, the boys retreated to the swamps along a near-by river. The youngsters were surrounded and called upon to surrender. Their answer was a volley of gunfire. In the pitched battle which followed, a 14-year-old boy was killed. The others surrendered.

These youngsters turned out to be the ringleaders of a youthful gang which had perpetrated a wave of thefts. On two successive nights prior to the gun battle, the gang of boys had burglarized a National Guard armory and had made away with an arsenal consisting of sub-machine guns, rifles, hand grenades, several thousand rounds of ammunition, and other government property. Previously, the boys had stolen several cars, burglarized storehouses, an automobile agency, a bowling alley, and a private residence.

The leader of the gang was 18. He led a band who refused to practice the very necessary virtues of honor, decency, and love of God and country. Certainly, these boys had very little chance to learn and appreciate these virtues because they had been exposed to indifference, lack of parental guidance, and drunkenness.

After reviewing the thousands of case histories which have poured into the FBI, I am firmly convinced that there are two factors in our outlook which if not checked will plunge us headlong into national decadence. The first is the failure of the home itself as the first classroom and, second, our national indifference toward evil influences in our life which are beyond the immediate control of parents.

The Initial Responsibility

Criminals are not born. They are the products of neglect, the victims of indifference, the results of an age which has tossed morality in the junk yard. Moral chaos and crime run hand in hand as they eagerly attempt to destroy peace, order, and happiness. If we are to get down to fundamentals in approaching the problem of crime it is necessary to begin to build the spiritual structure of the child at the cradle. This responsibility rests initially with the parents. The home must be the first great arena of teaching. In the final analysis, the child who fails to learn honesty, discipline, and respect for authority from his parents can quickly become exposed to the virus of crime.

Unhappily, there are many homes where parents are untrained in their obligations to their offspring; where unguarded talk is as regular as three meals a day; where disrespect for authority and criticism of officials are common occurrences; where childish independence is encouraged, and refractory conduct is condoned; where breaches of discipline and antisocial whims are overlooked; and where God and religion are considered too old-fashioned in an age dedicated to materialism.

The children of such homes need help and the Sunday schools can do much and are doing much to bring God and religion into the starved souls of these youngsters. Our Sunday schools are not sending forth children who easily succumb to life-wrecking temptations. Instead, the boys and girls who have gone to Sunday school have been well prepared for the entire span of life.

The Sunday school is a citadel of real spiritual influences. Religion to a boy or girl becomes a reality based on love and not on fear. Youngsters come to know that God asks more than mere lip service to His command-

Four states—California, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Massachusetts—have passed laws which deal with youth delinquents in a new way. Instead of the old training school a youth service board handles each case. This means that each offender is assured personal study by specialists, treatment and training suggested by a carefully prepared diagnosis and eventual re-establishment in his community.

Fifty-four college students from twenty-six countries spent eight weeks at Lake Success this summer learning how the UN works. These interns, as they call them, worked a forty-hour week without salary in the secretarial offices. In return nearly all their expenses except travel were paid. They received free instruction in lectures and seminars on UN's operation and its problems, they mingled daily with its personnel and they met some of its leaders. The intern program is also conducted for civil servants.

Carelessness of smokers accounted for fire loss in New York City greater than that from any other single cause. Of the more than forty thousand fires in 1948, 5,367 were caused by smokers; the loss was over three million dollars.

More than ten billion dollars was spent by Americans in 1947 in search of a good time, according to the Department of Commerce. Nearly two billions of that sum was used to purchase radio and television sets, photographs, pianos, and other musical instruments. Moving pictures claimed almost a billion and a half dollars. Other spectator sports took in a little more than a half billion.

Sunday School Enrollment Jumps 5 million in 3 Years. Statistics released recently by the International Council of Religious Education, official co-operative Christian agency of 40 denominations and more than 700 territorial councils of churches and religious education, show that there were more than five million more pupils in Sunday schools in 1948 than in 1945. The total number of church school pupils in the continental United States now is 29,745,580.—World Outlook.

Stubborn Husband. A Japanese Christian lady is most happy, because her husband, who has always been against Christianity, is now studying the Bible earnestly. Her son has joined a Bible Class. This woman has told other Christian ladies not to give up hope for their husbands because, she says, no husband was ever as stubborn as hers and see how he has changed!

In Black and White. An American negro soldier at one of our Central African railway stations was waiting for a train when a European asked him the time of the departure of the train. Our negro friend told him. Almost immediately afterwards the European asked a white passenger the same question—and obtained the same answer. The American negro, overhearing this, quietly said as he continued to chew his gum—"These guys sure want things in black and white."

ments; that He asks us to live under His guidance and love.

The Sunday school teaches the power of prayer and the need to make God an intrinsic part of our daily lives. The Sunday school teaches the child to "rule his spirit" and to place a reliance upon God which will not be shaken in later years. It stands as a strong bulwark against the angry waves of evil presently sweeping across our nation. It is a powerful medium in materially reducing the army of youthful offenders and delinquents.

I would like to pay tribute to the thousands of loyal men and women who are serving unselfishly as teachers in our Sunday schools. We in law enforcement look upon them as companions-in-arms in the fight against crime.

As true Crusaders of Christ, the Sunday school teachers want the nation's children to be honest, truthful, and unselfish. They are convincing youngsters that right habits, attitudes, and appreciations are necessary attributes for decent living. They are in the front ranks of the great army of Americans who are courageously fighting to free our national scene from dishonesty, selfishness, greed, and moral instability. In recruiting for God, they are building for America.

More often than not, a child is first introduced to the Bible by a Sunday school teacher. It is quite impossible to believe that progress along the road to righteous living may be accomplished with the guidance of the Bible. It is the source of spiritual food, the solution of life's problems, and the inspiration for Christian living.

"Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" is a precept which must be followed by all if life is to have a meaning. Our forefathers believed in the inspired Word of God and their religious faith and simple devotion produced a strong national character.

If we are to make progress in the fight against crime, make certain that the children of the nation attend Sunday school. It is difficult to understand why many mothers and fathers refuse to afford to their children the wholesome, healthful, character-building environment of the Sunday school.

As a law enforcement officer, I am certain that unless children are given the opportunity of participating in activities which have God as their fundamental objective, we cannot hope to materially reduce crime in our country. —Sunday School Times.

the Bible coach and a tent we could preach to crowds from 300 to 700 every night and in almost any new town have enough converts in a campaign of ten days to begin Sunday school.

By 1920 six lay workers were ordained to the ministry and we have always followed the policy of using native material as far as possible. If alien workers were now excluded our national workers would go right on with the work.

Teaching natural science in the National College did not produce many new members, although our present superintendent, Adolfo Zeche, was one of the students. It did provide many influential friends, not only in the city but in the entire district. It also provided cooperation on the part of public officials in our coach and tent work, and gave the opportunity of providing a basis for faith on the part of the hundreds of students contacted.

Our tenth anniversary, 1920, also marked the beginning of summer camp work. We began with just the pastors, but soon added candidates and then others, and now have something for everyone. The government has given us a concession to use our site on government land. We hope to have here a great center for youth movement work.

Evangelism—Missionary work must necessarily be evangelistic, for that is the mission of missionaries. We believe in frequent revival campaigns and have a prominent part in the child evangelism movement, especially here in Cordoba.

Hospitality—The term hospitality is only found four times in the New Testament but each time it is mentioned as something of transcendent importance. Our experience has shown it to be, not only a necessary trait of the Christian character, but also of effective service. Workers, members, societies, and entire churches can help win souls by keeping up the "love feasts" of the apostolic church in spirit as well as the letter.

I cannot close the list without mentioning the supreme virtue—LOVE. Without this we had better remain at home. With it we cannot fail to win souls. The little boy who went to Moody's Sunday school because, as he said, "They love a fellow over there," is just like boys and everybody anywhere else.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

The Co-operative Brethren Church of Columbus, Ohio, held its Daily Vacation Bible School from July 11 to 22. This was the twentieth consecutive year that we have conducted a Vacation Bible School here. The total enrollment was 90, with an average attendance of 85. We have always been pleased with the regular attendance throughout the two weeks of the school. Thirteen workers assisted the pastor and his wife.

On Friday evening, July 22nd, the school gave a closing program; the church being well filled with the parents and friends of the children. In the Primary Room were arranged displays of the work of the school. The outstanding feature of our closing program was the showing of color pictures of each class and the children at work. The teachers in turn gave the names of the pupils as the picture of that class was shown. These color pictures were taken by Miss Mildred Etter, of the Ft. McKinley Church, Dayton, Ohio, who has assisted us in our school for thirteen years.

Our Daily Vacation Bible School is a big event in the lives of the children of our Sunday School and Church community. They plan on it from one year to the next. During the school the boys and girls brought offerings from day to day for the support of children of our missionaries and for our Kentucky missions. We greatly appreciate the prayers and financial aid of all who make the work here in Columbus possible.

THOSE INFERIORITY COMPLEXES

Scripture: Proverbs 16:18, 19; 18:34; Romans 12:3-8

For The Leader

WE ARE TAKING up tonight the second in a series of topics on "know thyself." This one deals with a subject which all too often keeps us from doing our best work for the Lord. A lot of us are afflicted with inferiority complexes which throttle our efforts. We are afraid to speak out with a good idea in a discussion. We refuse to lead a meeting, we always let others walk ahead of us, etc. On the other hand, a lot of us are afraid of ourselves, so we try always to put on a "brave" front, oftentimes becoming offensive in our desire to hide our true feelings. We over-do it, in other words. God's Word is really very plain when it comes to dealing with this matter. So, tonight, let us seek the solution to this vital problem, that our talents might be better used for Christ and His Church.

DISCUSSION

1. FEAR IS BACK OF IT. One sure sign that you have an inferiority complex is the fear of being laughed at. It is a natural thing for people to laugh at another person's antics. But it isn't always so easy on the person who is laughed at. We are reminded of a case in which a very bashful preacher was substituting for the regular pastor at a Sunday morning church service. The Pastor previously had urged a good attendance for the visitor, and the people responded, including a host of teen age girls who congregated at the front of the church, off to the one side of the auditorium. A fairly good worship service prevailed, and all was well until the brother commenced his sermon. Then his inferiority complex broke loose and captured him. For every sentence he said, he stopped and almost apologetically looked over to that group of girls, as if to see whether or not they were still there, or had gotten up and gone home in disgust. Secretly perhaps he felt they were laughing at him. The truth of the matter was that the group thought they were encouraging him by coming up front, and being very attentive. He isn't preaching today. Had he trusted God for strength, realized he had been asked to preach, and was the man of the hour, and, with confidence, gone ahead, results would have been different.

2. EGOTISM. On the other hand there are those who knowing they have failed, and are victims of a complex which causes them to blunder, stutter, and always do the wrong thing, often step out into a "sham" appearance. We heard of a young man who had difficulty in getting his schooling. Those who knew him had cracked his defense against his feeling of helplessness. But to see him, he was a powerful preacher, friendly, capable, etc. He had been handicapped as a child, inhibited as a youth, and so when he got away to school he fought to overcome this. So, he became overbearing, loud, boastful, and by the time he was ready for the ministry, pretty well thought of by himself. Thus there were two natures there. His true one, lacking self-confidence, blundering, etc., and his false one, showing a loud fanfare, good impressions, etc. In his ministry, the first always won out over his "sham" impression, and caused his failure. Thus in two illustrations we have endeavored to show the two extremes to which inferiority complex will lead us.

3. GOD HAS AN ANSWER. So, what to do about it? A lot of good talent is being lost to the Lord by these two weaknesses. Some people, too self-conscious to take part in anything are wasting their talents to sing, play, speak. Others, by their over-bearing egotism, ruin everything they start to do. It is a problem. And what are we to do with our problems? Take them to the Lord in prayer. God has never yet turned away from the prayer of a humble heart. Realize first of all that such a complex is a weakness of your human flesh. Realize, too, that God uses fleshly instruments to accomplish His will. Realize also that God uses people just like you. He has no perfect people on earth working for Him. (The perfect people are working for the Devil). Through the help of God, humbleness of heart, much prayer, etc., we can, through the grace of God, overcome these weaknesses and become a genuine power for Christ.

4. FOR INSTANCE. Suppose you played the piano, as many of you do. But you've made so many mistakes that you have resolved never to play again in public. Then, your Sunday School Superintendent asked you to play for Sunday School next Sunday, as the "regular" is going to be away. What do you do? Throw up your hands and scream that you'd never think of playing again? Or do you recognize it as an invitation to be of service to your Lord, willingly say "yes," and then go home and pray and pray and practice. God will certainly use your humble efforts for His glory. Listen, if we all stopped because of the mistakes we've made, and given up in despair, there'd be no preachers, piano players, or missionaries. Great men for God today are men who have come up through their mistakes by prayer and a re-yielding of themselves to God. One of our ministers today was voted by the faculty when he was in school as the least likely to succeed in the ministry. Prayer, recognition of weaknesses, persistent trying, and a trust in God is the secret of any Christian worker's success. Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

5. USE EVERY OPPORTUNITY. If you are troubled with lack of confidence, then be sure to use every opportunity to pray, sing, play, take part, read, that you can in a service. Practice makes for confidence. That, coupled with the knowledge that your help cometh from the Lord, and that what you are doing is in His service, you will have victory. That, dear friend, is how leaders are made in Christ's work. The humble of heart, fully yielded to Him, are ringing the bells of heaven by the work they are doing to the glory of God. Are you one of them?

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. How can our C. E. help those of our number who lack confidence, who are scared to take part, or, who are over-bearing in their egotism and self-confidence?

2. C. E. being a training school for our youth can help in what ways the most to prepare our youth for leadership in the future Church?

ACTIVE OR PASSIVE FAITH

PASSIVE faith accepts the word as true—But never moves.

ACTIVE FAITH begins the work to do, And thereby proves.

PASSIVE faith says, "I believe it! Every word of God is true.

Well I know He hath not spoken what He cannot, will not do.

He hath bidden me, "Go forward!" but a closed-up way I see,

When the waters are divided, soon in Canaan's land I'll be.

O! I hear His voice commanding, "Rise and walk: take up thy bed

And, 'stretch forth thy withered member!' which for so long has been dead.

When I am a little stronger, then I know I'll surely stand:

When there comes a thrill of healing, I will use with ease my other hand.

Yes, I know that 'God is able' and full willing all to do: believe that every promise, sometime, will to me come true.

ACTIVE faith says, "I believe it and the promise now I take,

Knowing well as I receive it, God, each promise real will make.

So I step into the waters, finding there an open way;

Onward press, the land possessing, nothing can my progress stay.

Yea, I rise at His commanding, walk straightway and joyfully;

This my hand, so sadly shrivelled, as I reach, restored will be.

What beyond His faithful promise would I wish or do I need?

Looking not for signs or wonders, I'll no contradiction heed.

Well I know that 'God is able' and full willing all to do, believe that every promise at this moment will come true."—Selected.

FOOLING OURSELVES

Scripture: James 1:22; Gal. 6:7; 1 Cor. 6:9

ONE CAN SEE the temptation to fool others, but why should one be tempted to fool himself (Heb. 3:13)? God wants us to study His Word (2 Tim. 2:15), but He wants us to put into practice what we study (James 1:22). Saul was tempted to serve God apart from obedience (1 Sam. 15:22). Man is tempted to fool himself into thinking that he can serve God apart from God's terms (Isa. 40:19). Man is tempted to compromise the truth of God's Word in order to find favor and friends (Jer. 2:33). If we sacrifice and serve God with obedience our fruit will remain (Isa. 55:10, 11; 1 Cor. 3:12-15). It does not pay to do wrong in order to accomplish good (Prov. 21:3).

When God says "GO" (Luke 14:23; Matt. 28:19) we deceive ourselves by not going (Jas. 4:17; Ezek. 33:7-9). Ali-bis for not going will cancel the promise of Matthew 28:20.

When Christ said, "Give ye them to eat" (Mark 6:37), the disciples received provision from Him. Luke 11:5-13 teaches us to come to the Bread of Life for our friend, the sinner, who is hungry on his journey. If we starve our friends, we also starve ourselves. If we feed them, we shall also be fed from the same Word of Life (Luke 6:38).

People foolishly think they can sin without reaping sin's wages (Gal. 6:7; Num. 32:23; Prov. 13:13).

Some fool themselves about the way of salvation (Prov. 14:12). They think it matters not what one believes, just so he is sincere (John 14:6; Acts 4:12). Man foolishly thinks he can save himself by his own good life (Rom. 3:23; Eccl. 7:20; 2 Cor. 5:21; Col. 1:14). Some are fooled by a badly educated conscience (1 Tim. 4:2; Heb. 3:7, 8). Some let their "personal liberty" take them to Hell (Prov. 29:1). No fooling—there is only one escape for the sinner (Isa. 55:7).

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for October 9, 1949

THE MORAL BASIS OF WORSHIP

Lesson: Isaiah 1:11-18; Jeremiah 7:3-7

MANY TIMES we are made to wonder whether the present generation has learned, to any great extent, what worship really means! We might also say the same of the older ones. True, we go to church; we bow our heads when prayer is made; we do not whisper one to the other as the Scripture is being read; we join in the singing in a hearty manner, and we keep awake while the minister is bringing the message. But is that worship? Is God and His only begotten Son central in our thoughts, or is this service which we attend one of mere custom?

Our lesson today gives us a very good clue as to God's feelings in the matter. Note that He says, "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me?" He sees the failure of Israel to really perform the rites He has set forth; that they are simply going through a "form." Read carefully Isa. 1:11-15, then apply the sense of it to present-day worship.

In the following verses (16-18) we find the remedy: "Clean up; put away evil; learn to do well; change the scarlet to white by repentance." How applicable to our own day.

The Jeremiah passage is just as full of instruction for remedying the failure to really worship: "Amend your ways; trust not in lying words; execute judgment; shed not innocent blood." And finally the note of promise of God (Jer. 7:7). His attitude toward us is surely the same as it was to these Israelites.

Truly we today need not only to teach the principles of worship to our youth, but likewise practice these principles in our own lives which are here laid down.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Bryan, Ohio. Brother E. J. Black, Bryan pastor, in a note to the editor says, "Every department of the work here seems to be growing and everyone is anxious to do all they can to help. The attendance has kept up during the past warm weather in a remarkable way. Our ministry is being enlarged more and more through the radio, listeners from as far away as Battle Creek and Detroit having attended our church during the summer."

We note from the Bryan bulletin that the Cradle Roll Department has more babies enrolled than at any time since this department was started. The total enrolled now stands at 73. Mrs. Frank Roesch, mother of Brother Dale Roesch, is the most efficient superintendent of this department.

Brother and Sister Dale Roesch were in charge of the evening service at Bryan on Sunday, August 21st, when they gave their report of the work they had done in Puerto Rico. On August 28th, Conference Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pullen, missionaries to the Mexicans in New Mexico, had charge of the morning service.

Mexico-Loree, Indiana, Circuit. These two churches will observe their Homecoming in October—Mexico on October 16th and Loree on October 23rd. Brother Higgins, pastor of these churches has been engaged in a revival at our Center Chapel, Indiana, Church, which began on Monday, September 12th and is closing on Sunday, September 25th. Brother Higgins is scheduled to speak at the Corinth, Indiana, Homecoming on Sunday, September 25th and at the North Liberty, Indiana, Homecoming on Sunday, October 2nd.

We note that the Loree Sunday School attendance for September 11th was 152, and that in the afternoon of that day seven were baptized.

Gratis, Ohio. Brother W. S. Crick says, "To make it possible to keep the newly laid carpet in the Sanctuary clean, Mrs. John Turpin has given the church a Hoover sweeper. It was given a complete overhauling by W. W. Essig at his own expense."

Berlin, Penna. Brother Percy C. Miller, Berlin pastor, announces that an advanced course in Teacher Training is to be offered in the Berlin Church beginning on Monday evening, October 3rd, and continuing each Monday evening for a period of six weeks.

Rally Day is scheduled at the Berlin Church for Sunday, September 25th.

In his statistics covering his first year of service as pastor of the Berlin Church, Brother Miller lists ten received by letter and fourteen received by baptism, with fifteen letters granted, leaving a net gain of nine for the year.

Brother John F. Locke Broadcasts. A card from Brother Locke, which was received too late to be of value as an announcement, tells that he gave the comments on the Sunday School lessons over station WSVB of Harisonburg, Virginia, each Saturday morning during the month of September at 9:45. Sorry the card did not arrive in time to permit those in tuning range of this station to receive this announcement.

Dayton, Ohio. We note from Brother Whetstone's bulletin of September 11th that as of that date $1,200.00 had been raised in cash for the College emergency fund, with more to follow.

On Sunday, October 2nd Rally Day will be observed at the morning hour, and Holy Communion will be celebrated at the evening hour.

Family night was observed on Wednesday evening, September 14th, with a carry-in supper at 6:45, followed by a playlet, given by the young people, "The Booster Club," and musical selections. This was followed by the regular Bible study.

SPECIAL NOTICE

By suggestion from the Shareholders in the business session of General Conference devoted to the Publishing Company, and by action of the Publication Board, all death notices (Laid to Rest column) and all marriage reports (Wedding Announcement column) will be limited to a short announcement of same, stating necessary information, as they appear in the Evangelist. The one exception is in the case of the death of prominent church leaders, when due recognition will be given them in a single number of the paper. This does not mean that notices of marriages and deaths will not be included if kept to the shortened form. We will continue to print such notices as they come to the editorial office.

WHY SUPPORT THE CHURCH?

THREE SHORT PARAGRAPHS, under the caption of "Ways of Supporting the Church," caught my eye, and they read like this:

"There are three ways of supporting the Church. The first way is probably the oldest way. This is the Way of Gratitude. It has been followed by all those who are conscious of having received at God's hands blessings and benefits, and they have gladly placed an offering on God's altar.

"The second way of supporting the Church has guaranteed the continuance and progress of the Church. This is the Way of Obligation. Those who have realized their dependence upon the Church for spiritual support have also recognized the Church's dependence upon them for material support.

"The third way of supporting the Church brings the Church close to personal experience. This is the Way of Affection. With it, any other way may accomplish much more than its intended purpose. For the gift is part of the giver. The offering is an expression of love—love of God and God's children."

Reading this set me to thinking!

This time of thinking was introspective and I began to ask myself, "Just what is my motive in supporting the church and her various interests? Is it simply to show my gratitude to God; or is it because I feel a personal obligation to the church; or is it because I love the Lord and want to give out of true affection?"

And then I began to wonder whether, after all, giving to the Lord is a combination of all of these—gratitude, obligation and love! When we consider it in this light we find that to be a real Christian is to feel our personal responsibility to God in all things. Far too many times we neglect the "personal" implication in our general church relationship. Our interest is centered on one particular phase of our church activity to the practical exclusion of all others. Thus we sometimes become "local church" lop-sided, or in other words, we do not care to support any activity that does not have its center in the local church. Or we may even become "missionary giving" lop-sided, and give all our enthusiasm to missionary giving.

Now do not mistake me—there should be great emphasis laid upon missionary giving. But not to the exclusion of all other church activity. Someone has put it this way, "Every member caring, means every member sharing." Another has said, "A church wholly living means every member giving, for deeper giving means deeper living."

After all does it not simmer itself down to a problem of Stewardship?

I have before me a little paragraph entitled, "What God Owns." It reads like this:

"Life has a way of reminding us that we are not as independent as we often think. Bishop Hughes once told of preaching a strong sermon on stewardship, saying, 'We do not own what we have.' The following day a leading member of his church took him out to see some houses he owned and asked, 'Who owns these?' The bishop replied, 'Ask me a thousand years from now.' When we take the long look we perceive that we own comparatively little."

How and Why do we support the Church? Ask yourself—make it a personal question.

Think it over!

During the late General Conference* we received some very nice gifts to this fund. We still wonder whether there are not some gifts that are due on pledges which have been made in the past three years that have not yet arrived at the Publishing House office. The Educational Day OFFERING

By Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President Ashland College

MUCH HAS RIGHTLY been written and spoken about the emergency at Ashland College. Not only have there been many words, but there have been magnificent deeds and indications are that there will be still more. The emergency is very real and must be met if Ashland College is to survive. Elsewhere in this issue of the Evangelist will be found a summary of progress resulting from that appeal. The results are thrilling for those who have taken part; they are most challenging for those who have not yet acted. Every Brethren Church must assume full responsibility if the unavoidable debt of nearly $60,000 is to be paid.

It is important to remember that this work was forced upon the College without warning or time to raise funds first. If our school was to operate this fall the Trustees had to take action at once. This they did, not because they were rich men, but because they had faith in the Brethren Church and in Ashland College as the one institution which could provide a life stream for that Church. It took faith in large measure; it took determination and confidence; and it took a willingness to work and shoulder responsibility for a great project. The Church will not fail to see them through victoriously.

Now, the College faces a dilemma. It must have the support of every friend and of every Church in order to meet the large emergency debt. At the same time, the College depends upon gifts from many of these same friends for operational expenses each year, and this is no exception.

Each year, Church people contribute about $10,000 to the operating fund of the College. In return for this, the College admits Seminary students, tuition free, and pays about $15,000 in salaries to Seminary teaching personnel.

Several thousands of dollars are spent in religious programs, special Chapels, and Seminary library. In addition, there is certain emphasis upon Brethren students and general church welfare. An effort is made to encourage young people to prepare themselves for active church work when they return home after graduating from Ashland College.

The month of October has been designated as Educational Offering Month by National Conference and it is hoped that those who have given in the past will once again remember the College and its needs. More Brethren students are coming to Ashland each year. More are entering the Seminary and Pre-Seminary program and more are especially interested in religious education. All this means that more money is needed to operate the college, especially if the desired Brethren emphasis is given, than ever before. It is not too much to ask the Church to support its own interests, and the training of future ministers, missionaries, and lay leaders is certainly a part of that interest.

It is therefore with confidence that we announce the 1949 Educational Day Offering. In view of the need, each church is urged to attempt at least to equal its 1948 contribution. Any such amount is to be in addition to the amount contributed for the emergency fund. IT MUST BE MARKED "Educational Day Offering," before it can be used for the operational purposes. All "Emergency Funds" will be applied toward paying for the alterations in Founders and Allen Halls, not for purely educational purposes. It is important that each church attempt to send in an "Educational Day Offering" in ADDITION to its Emergency Fund contribution.

With this continued support the College will undertake prayerfully to improve the great task which it has. Closer cooperation between Church and College may mean God's blessing on us all as He leads us into new fields and ever-richer harvests.

Growing Up In The Church

Orville Allen

(The following is a summary of the address which was given by the President of the Young Men's and Boys' Brotherhood at the late General Conference.)

WHEN I WAS ASKED to make suggestions for the annual Brotherhood program this year I replied with a request of my own. I wanted to discuss with the young men and boys some of those problems and responsibilities which are part of growing up in the church. I think that it is obvious to all of us that there is a need for such discussions if we young people are to intelligently take our place in the church.

Perhaps the best way to start our talk is to try to understand what is meant by "growing-up." Webster would tell us that to grow up is to advance to a higher position. It is evident that as we grow older we advance physically.

And if we have been properly instructed we will advance spiritually. But many of us have not had preparation for proper advancement in church matters. It is certainly inspiring to know that you young people who are attending conference have the opportunity to attend the lectures and discussions on church doctrine. We need this type of training and I want to urge all of you to attend these sessions. You won't regret it!

In order to get an overall picture of our discussion, we shall think in terms of growing up in the church, by the church, and with the church. In order to grow up in the church we must first of all make it a habit to be in church on the Lord's Day. It should not be a habit in the sense that we go to church merely from force of custom, but rather that we develop going to church as one of our worthwhile voluntary activities. One of the best ways in which we can develop such an attitude is to stop and realize all of the benefits that accompany church attendance. I'm sure that we would agree that there are profits from this experience that cannot be gained anywhere else.

When we say that we should grow up by the church, we mean that the doctrines and policies of the church should become our governing principles. If we are to become the future leaders of our denomination as well as leaders in our communities, our actions and deeds should comply with the rules set up by the church.

Is the church growing up? I think that the answer to that question is evident when we realize how few churches there were when the apostles traveled the earth in contrast to the number of Christian churches on the earth's face today. And we know that missionary work and church expansion are constantly promoting more churches. Thus, we as young men have something in common with the Christian church. We are both growing! Doesn't it seem plausible, then, that more good can be accomplished if we grow together? It is my prayer that we will take both inspiration and challenge with us when we leave this conference, so that its theme—"Forward Together With Christ in Church Expansion"—will become our theme as we strive to grow with the church.

One of the most important factors in spiritual growth is prayer. Hence, it seems that to more advantageously grow up in the church we must look up. We know that we are to call on the Lord for help in times of need, and thus it is imperative that we ask for His guidance to help us advance in His work. Along with prayer in connection with looking up we should strive to think on high planes. I am of the opinion that when we keep our thoughts on things pleasing to God, we will find ourselves doing deeds which will help us in this growing up process.

The natural outcome of this process of growing up in the church is to take one's place as an adult member of the church. When I think of this situation I am reminded of a picture which I once saw showing a two-wheeled cart being pulled by oxen. The wheels were made of slices from a huge log. As time went on the outer layers of wood on the log-slice wore off and the inner layers took the brunt of the road. It is easy for me to picture the church—in its expansion movement—as one of these wheels. The older people in the church would be represented by the outer rings and the inner rings would stand for the youth. As time passes and the older members go to their eternal rest the young people have to take the wear and carry the load. Since it is obvious that there are going to be definite responsibilities thrust upon the shoulders of the young people, we should begin to think about some of our obligations.

Cooperation with the planning of church activities is one of the first obligations of the youth in the church. If they help in the organization of the various functions they will know more about such tasks when they are called on to lead in this work. There are many places where the young people should be taking the load on their shoulders. Teaching Sunday School classes, singing in the choir, acting as members on planning committees, and other related jobs should become responsibilities of we young people. Your being here at conference is an indication that you want to learn more about your church and its functioning. The number of us at the youth conference should let the older people know that we do want to take our place in the church. Let's work throughout the year in our home churches in such a way that, old and young alike, the congregation will evidence the fact that we are growing up in the church.

Leprosy Missions Leaders Return From Global Tour

WHEN WILBUR CHAPMAN of "Wilbur and Pete" fame, and Mrs. Catherine Ulstrom, creator of the Flannelgraph stories about children with leprosy, returned on August 19 from their 8-month trip to 25 leprosy colonies in India and Africa, a distance of some 45,000 miles, they were greeted by newspaper reporters.

The newsmen asked Wilbur, "Who paid for your trip?" His reply was, "I did, of course. I wouldn't take money from a Mission just to go around the world."

Anyone who has tried it knows that "just go around the world" is no simple matter, and the effect that the two unofficial missionaries had on patients cannot be counted in terms of money. It was expressed simply by the patients in Kothara C. P. India, a Conservative Baptist mission, through a written testimonial presented during an hour-long service on their visitors' arrival.

The document conveyed "heartly congratulations for your presence and love" and added: "May you live many years to enjoy that happiness attendant on that Christian life which you entered into from proper motives because 'He that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.'"

These patients had prayed for their visitors' safety for six weeks prior to the actual arrival.

In the New York headquarters of the American Mission to Lepers, the first question the two weary travellers asked was: "What can we do to use our trip for the benefit of leprosy missions?"

They brought back 5,000 feet of movie film and 500 colored slides, as well as any number of photographs of patients doing everything from eating their meals to playing in the village orchestra. Mrs. Ulstrom will edit the films and slides and make them available to the Mission for use around the country. Those who know her Flannelgraph stories will now be able to see the colonies through her camera eye.

Wilbur grabbed a big China "Pete" from the office curio cabinet and said he had resolved to do even more than he has over the years, including his activity as president of the Twin Cities (St. Paul-Minneapolis) Chapter of the American Mission.

"Until I took this trip, everything had been second-hand," he said. "I had been trying to get the need across to people but when I actually saw things with my own eyes, I realized that the suffering was all so real and the spiritual need so deep that no matter how much is done for those with leprosy along spiritual and medical lines, it can never be too much. Their suffering is the deepest kind and they are the lowliest people. Yet we found a happy spirit in every colony and even the blind are cheerful. The only bitterness we found was among those who had been well off, and even some of these had acquired contentment through the Christian message."

To his great disappointment, Wilbur couldn't go to Siam and visit Chiangmai, home of Ai Sam, the recipient of his first gift from the sale of Pete the pig in 1913 when they were both ten years old and he was living in White Cloud, Kansas. Unfortunately a violent coup d'etat was taking place in Siam last March.

The travelers had a problem in India whenever they talked about stuffing pigs for leprosy missions, because pigs are anathema in India. When they explained, though, that Pete is plastic, everything was all right. While the two were on their trip the 200,000th Pete was distributed by the American Mission and to date some $2,000,000 have been raised through his "brothers" in 37 years.

The 300 Kothara patients' "bon voyage" stayed with Wilbur and Mrs. Ulstrom through the journey and was fresh in their memories on their return. The testimonial concluded with Christian wishes for a safe journey:

"No person rejoices more fervently at your present happiness than your affectionate and faithful friends who earnestly pray for your journey homeward, free from anxiety and perils, with Lord Jesus, to whom all Glory be, as your guide—Your affectionate and faithful friends, Kothara patients, March 4, 1949."

"We went to India expecting to find beautiful temples," said Wilbur, "and we were disappointed. The most worthwhile things in India are by far the Christian things. There is one beautiful building—the Taj Mahal. There is no denying, it is one of the most beautiful buildings in the world but, after all, it does nothing to heal the sick or help those with leprosy."

"There is no thrill in all the world like going into those far-off places and hearing the same Christian hymns sung heartily as we sing them. Their singing tied the whole Christian world together."

The services conducted by the Kothara patients included the 23rd Psalm and concluded with "God Be with You." They also gave their visitors each a check drawn on the "Bank of Providence" in the amount of "Three hundred and sixty-five days of health and prosperity" made out on "Welcome Day," numbered "1949."

The two travelers have returned to Minneapolis, Minn., where Wilbur works as an engineer for the Pioneer Engineering Co., and Mrs. Ulstrom, besides being a home maker, does writing and speaking for leprosy missions and other church efforts.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

The registration for the new college year had reached 540 on September 15 when this is being written. While you read this, undoubtedly this number will have passed the 550 which was expected. Many of these are Brethren young people, but as yet no tabulation is possible. They will be noted as soon as possible.

The first home football game is scheduled for September 23, with another on September 30. Prospects are good for a fine football team this year.

A number of new faculty members are on campus for the opening of the school year. Rev. Edwin Boardman, former missionary to the South American field and former Brethren pastor is teaching classes in Bible and religion. Meninda Guha, native of India, who has been in this country since 1919, is heading the chemistry department. He is a student, teacher and research chemist. Kenneth Nilsson, Ph.D. will head the education work. He received his advanced degree at the University of Minnesota. He had taught 16 years in the public schools and had studied extensively in Guidance and advisement.

Work continues on the remodeling of Founders and Allen Halls. At this time, the fireproof stairwells are about ready for use and the old stairways will be torn down within a few days. The rooms in both buildings are being used in as far as possible. Students and faculty members alike are accepting the conditions under which classes must be held for a few weeks. Stepping over lumber, steelwork, cement, machines and in some cases workmen, they are reaching their appointments and carrying on their college work.

The number of new students will be about 200. Of course, the great majority of these are just out of high school. There are fewer veterans in this class than in any since 1945. It is expected that the class next year will be almost all students who have never been in the armed forces.

To give yourself with the gift, to identify yourself with the sick, the needy, the orphaned, you MUST LOVE.

The Church must meet the acid test of its success in the world-wide proclamation of the Gospel.

Nothing will grow like a trouble that is nursed.

Wanna' See What You Bought?

Brethren Youth had 17 young people serving this past summer in 22 Brethren Churches. They traveled from Virginia to California to serve Christ through the Brethren Church.

Crusaders were young people who taught Bible School in the churches and conducted various other services.

Ambassadors were young men who visited the churches teaching the beliefs of the Bible and conducting other services. (These were called Crusaders but the official name is Ambassadors)

Here's What You Bought With The Money You Gave to Brethren Youth

Crusaders: Offerings received — $247.55; Expenses — $472.48*

Ambassadors: Offerings received—$729.89; Expenses—$515.58

Total Offerings 977.44; Total Expenses $988.06.

*Includes purchases of Bible School material for the schools and all travel expenses for thirteen young people.

Includes all materials used on tour and the expense of travel for four young men.

Brethren Youth Paid to Ashland College for:

Crusader and Ambassador scholarships (you did this) $1,095.00

Held in reserve for two Crusaders not in school yet 110.00

Total scholarships$1,205.00

Young people serving Brethren Youth during the summer receive $15.00 per week paid on their Ashland College tuition. This they receive for three weeks service or longer.

You Helped to Pay this Bill When You Gave to Brethren Youth

YOUNG MEN AND BOYS' BROTHERHOODS

In the 1949-1950 Goals you will note Goal 2 reads: 75% read a missionary book:

Junior Boys: "The Adventures of Jima," by Charles Ludwig.

Seniors: "David Livingstone," by Basil Miller.

These books may be ordered from The Brethren Publishing Company.

YOU MADE THIS POSSIBLE ALSO:

One Hundred and Forty-one youth delegates registered at the Youth Conference held in Ashland during General Conference week. Last year we had eighty-six at the end of the week.

During the week the young people were given instruction on what we believe as Brethren. There were discussions on Feet-washing, Baptism and others of our beliefs—then to climax the whole event we had a Youth Communion at the Park Street Brethren Church. This was a new experience, at least so far as Conference was concerned, but everything went so fine that it shall be continued.

In addition to the communion, we had missionaries, a special chapel speaker, special song leaders, a youth rally, missionary films and pictures, a track meet, a banquet, daily recreation, and a whole host of other things—brother, you should have been there.

YOU BOUGHT THAT FOR YOUR YOUNG PEOPLE!

Brethren, Aren't You Glad?

A CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM

(From the Berlin, Pennsylvania, Bulletin)

The pastor told me; they were members of his church—father, mother, and Tommy, nine years of age.

They were invited to the home of a relative for dinner. The grandfather was present. A friend had told him to take a "bottle of beer" to pep him up. He brought it to the table with him, and set it before him.

When the family was seated, Tommy, as usual, was asked to "say the blessing."

Tommy had never "said grace" over a bottle of beer before. He was on the spot. It troubled him.

All heads were bowed; Tommy's head was bowed too.

Finally he raised his head, looked over at his mother, and said, "Mom, I can't ask God to bless us with that beer bottle sittin' there!"

Grandfather moved with the alacrity of a nine-year-old boy, as he grabbed the bottle and started for the back door.

The beer and bottle were no more!

He resumed his seat at the dinner table and the meal was eaten in an old fashioned atmosphere.

"Out of the mouth of babes . . ."

One reason we have so many pennies in the church collection is because we have no smaller coins.

Recently Discovered Old Testament Manuscripts

OLD TESTAMENT MANUSCRIPTS more than 2,000 years old, which were accidentally discovered in a Palestine cave near the Dead Sea by wandering Arab Bedouins, will be published in photographic form with suitable transcription this Fall.

This announcement by the American Schools of Oriental Research at Yale University climaxes a scientific fortune hunt which has been conducted by Hebrew, American, French, and English archaeologists in the Holy Land despite continuous warfare during the past two years.

The oldest known copy of the Book of Isaiah, the most ancient complete Biblical document ever found, will be included in a volume now in preparation as well as the commentary on the book of Habakkuk, a minor Hebrew prophet.

Other volumes will follow soon thereafter, based on original animal-skin manuscripts now in the United States but not owned or held by The American Schools of Oriental Research. These documents are in this country in the possession of Metropolitan Anthanasius Yeshue Samuel, of the Syrian Orthodox Monastery of St. Mark in Jerusalem. Scholars of the American Schools have made photographic copies of these precious documents, which go back to the first and second centuries B. C., and the Syrian church leader has stored them in a safe place.

"The American Schools of Oriental Research are now using their good offices to make the material in the United States available to all scholars in Israel and England, or anywhere else, who have portions of these ancient Hebrew manuscripts at hand," said Prof. Carl H. Kraeling, Chairman of the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Literatures at Yale and President of the A. S. O. R.

"Scholars throughout the world regard the discovery of these Hebrew manuscripts and the many fragments which have been found also, as key links in completing our knowledge about an important period of Judaism," he said. "Their importance can be compared with the finding of the famous 'Codex Sinaiticus' by the scholar Tischendorf in the latter part of the nineteenth century. Tischendorf found in the Monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai a fourth century A. D. Greek manuscript of the Bible. The new findings, including the material in this country, are even more ancient than the famous Nash Papyrus, which heretofore was the oldest Biblical fragment."

Prof. Kraeling reported today that the manuscripts brought to the United States by the Syrian Orthodox clergyman will be placed on exhibition in the near future.

The volume to be published this year will be under the editorship of Prof. Millar Burrows, Winkley Professor of Biblical Theology at Yale and former president of The American Schools of Oriental Research, who was in Jerusalem at the time the scrolls were found. Permission to publish this material was received by the American Schools from the Syrian Metropolitan.

The romantic events leading up to discovery of the manuscripts had their setting in war-torn Jerusalem in 1947 and early 1948, when Bedouins brought a group of the parchment scrolls to St. Mark's Monastery in the Old City. They were not recognized as being very ancient Biblical manuscripts until many months later when they were examined by both Prof. Eliezer Sukenik, of the Hebrew University, and John C. Trever, Fellow of the American Schools and now Director of the Department of English Bible of the International Council of Religious Education in Chicago. Word of the discovery flashed through the scholarly world.

Meanwhile, some of the manuscripts came into possession of scholars at the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus. Eventually the manuscript cave was found by Jordan Government officials, in whose territory it is located, which excavated it and turned up many additional fragments.

The cave is located at Ain Fashka, above the northwestern shore of the Dead Sea in Palestine. As of now, there are three major collections of Biblical and Hebrew material in existence, as follows:

1. Four scrolls were brought to the United States in February by the Syrian Archbishop, Athanasius Y. Samuel, along with a group of manuscript fragments. The scrolls include the Isaiah manuscript, which has the distinction of being the oldest existing manuscript of a complete Book of the Bible in any language; the Commentary on Habakkuk; a manual of discipline of a minor Jewish sect which existed at some time in the first or second century B. C. (over two thousand years ago); and a fourth scroll, which is still something of a mystery, since it is still to be opened and read. This fourth manuscript, over the years, has become sealed at both ends by alternate softening and hardening of the skins on which the Hebrew letters are inscribed. Skilled technical assistance for opening the scroll has been obtained in the United States. In addition to these four manuscripts, the Syrian church leader has in his possession the fragments of two different copies of the Book of Daniel, one of the books of the Old Testament.

2. Scrolls obtained by Prof. Eliezer Sukenik, Professor of Palestinian Archaeology at the Hebrew University and a director of the Museum of Jewish Antiquities, have proved to be of first importance. They came from the same cave and include, according to information which has reached this country, the following: "The Scroll of Thanksgiving Songs," three manuscript documents of hymns of thanksgiving which were wholly unknown heretofore; a scroll of "The War Between the Children of Light and the Children of Darkness," in which there is an account of the battle formation used by the Jews in a period probably before the Maccabean priest-kings arose to govern the ancient Hebrews—it tells of stone-slingers, cavalymen and methods of celebrating victory; a part of the Book of Isaiah, which shows that the manuscript was identical in text and spelling with the Masoretic version, the standard Hebrew version of the Bible. Prof. Sukenik carried on his investigations during the bitter fighting in the Holy Land despite many handicaps.

3. Fragments of manuscripts which are now in London in the British Museum, where they were brought by Dr. G. Lankester Harding, Chief Curator of Antiquities of the Kingdom of Jordan, represent the latest finds in this cave near the Dead Sea. Many fragments were scraped from the hillside cave and are in ancient Hebrew—some of the original scrolls must have been as old as the third or fourth century B. C. This is all that remained after the major manuscripts—including those in America and the Hebrew University—had been removed from the cave by Bedouin Arabs earlier. Dr. Harding posted an Arab Legion guard at the site. The manuscript fragments found were from the book of Leviticus, the oldest document so far discovered from the cave; and from Genesis, Deuteronomy, Judges, and Jubilees, and Apocryphal book. Found in the cave were broken jars, in which the manuscripts had evidently been sealed, two Hellenistic lamps (333 to 63 B. C.), a Roman lamp, and a fragment of a Roman cooking pot. These archaeological remains help to confirm the age of the Hebrew manuscripts found and to establish their authenticity. A good deal of cloth was found, evidently the cloth in which the manuscripts had been wrapped before they were sealed. There was some conjecture by the Jordanian archaeologists that a Roman had entered the cave and removed some of the manuscripts several centuries ago since some of the breaks in the jars were very old.

Pere de Vaux, Dominican archaeologist of the Ecole Biblique et Archeologique in Jerusalem, aided in the excavations of the original cave and is deciphering some of the documents.

The amazing story of these finds has been appearing over a period of time in archaeological and biblical journals, but communication until recently was difficult because of the fighting going on in the Near East and it is only now that some sort of exchange of information can take place between those in America, England and Israel holding the source materials. Professor O. R. Sellers, who served as Director of the American Schools of Oriental Research in Jerusalem last Spring, accompanied the scientists and workmen who explored the cave once again.

Scholars of the Near East all over the world predict that it will take years to exhaust the implications of the materials which have thus far been found in the cave near the Dead Sea.

The manuscripts fared somewhat badly during their lifetime and contain numerous tears, gaps and missing sections. The Isaiah scroll shows a darkened center where many readers had held and rolled it while it was in use. The scribe who produced the scroll had a very regular hand and was skilled with his pen. Worms had gotten into many of the documents to add to the complications. On all manuscripts examined by staff members of The American Schools of Oriental Research, it was noted that the leather used had been specially treated and the Hebrew was easily read.

"These manuscripts tell us a good deal about the reliability of the traditional Hebrew text of the Bible," said Prof. Kraeling, in commenting on the discovery. "They show us that ancient variations do not significantly change the reading of the text."

"The material which has been found to be supplementary to the Biblical text—hymns, rules of discipline of a sect, and materials here and abroad—tells us a great deal we have not known heretofore about this of Jewish history.

We do have many Apocryphal books in existence but this new information supplements our information tremendously."

The period to which most of the manuscripts are assigned is that of the Maccabean Kings or of the Roman occupation of Palestine, the first century B. C.

Why were these manuscripts placed in a cave, in a location near the Dead Sea where there is nothing but barren wilderness in the surrounding area? Professor Kraeling says that some scholars have advanced the opinion that a political emergency arose several centuries ago, possibly the invasion of the Romans, and the material was stored here from a nearby synagogue.

Another theory which is being advanced is that the cave is actually what is known as a Genizah, a place where Hebrews were accustomed to storing sacred documents after they have outlived their usefulness. It was forbidden to destroy Holy Writ, so the ancient Jews would carefully gather up their worn out manuscripts and hide them away from destruction. The worn nature of many manuscripts lends some weight to this hypothesis.

Professor Kraeling reported that this is the first major archaeological discovery of manuscripts in the Palestine area. The climatic conditions, with a heavy annual rainfall, prevented indefinite storage of manuscripts. Neighboring Egypt, with light rainfall, became the natural repository for documents and many thousand have been found there.

LOOK IN THE MIRROR
H. A. Gossard

The poem under the caption, "Look In The Mirror," should not be interpreted to the point of crediting the author as being authority on child-training, although he had a part in rearing two sons to manhood and in putting them through university.

The poem was suggested on my observing a father correct or, should I say fail to correct his son, 10, by comparing his boyish ways as being in contract with those of men of note and individuality, saying, "I would not act like that!"—Of course he would not; but he probably acted worse at 10 or older . . . Therefore I suggest that parents, before chiding Youth too severely, go look in the Mirror instead of through the Lens.

Let's say you're 40 and your son is 10;
That you've been measuring him with men;
Go back 30 years in your mind, and then
Mirror yourself at that age with men . . .
30 years back is not far; but then
You'll see what you were at the age of 10.

Let's not chide a lad so much at 10;
Nor demand of him what we would of men;
Chide, if we will till we're red with rage,
YOUTH still will be MODERN in its AGE—
(That's why Youths' antics oft provoke
The age-fixed mind of older folk.)

Milledgeville, Ill. We note from Brother D. C. White's bulletin of September 11th that Rally Day will be observed in the Milledgeville Sunday School on Sunday, September 25th.

Huntington, Indiana. Brother C. Y. Gilmer, Huntington pastor, furnishes us with the following news items:

On August 21st Mrs. Gilmer was in charge of the services which were in observation of Youth Day, while Brother Gilmer was the Harvest Day speaker at the Pleasant View Church of the Brethren. The Men's Chorus sang at this Harvest Day service in the afternoon.

On Friday evening and Saturday, August 19 and 20, the men of the church really worked, doing painting at the parsonage, making four tables for the church dining rooms, and installing a door chime at the parsonage.

The Men's chorus of the Huntington church is gaining quite a reputation and is being called on more and more for appearance at various services in the city and outside its limits.

Brother and Sister Dale Roesch spoke in the Huntington church on Sunday evening, August 7th.

Pastoral Changes. We note that Brother Bert Hodge has resigned as pastor of the North Manchester, Indiana, Church to accept a position as principal of the Ossian Schools.

Brother E. J. Beekley has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Warsaw, Indiana, Brethren Church, and will move from Canton, Ohio, the last of this month.

Elkhart, Indiana. The Elkhart Congregation held their annual picnic at Lake Shipshewana on Sunday, August 21st. A unified service was held at the Elkhart church from 9:30 to 11:00 and then all those who could made the journey to Shipshewana where dinner was served at 12:30. The afternoon was spent as each desired and at 5:00 in the evening a Vesper service was held on the lake front, with a baptismal service following at which time one received the rite of baptism in beautiful Lake Shipshewana. Ice cream and cookies were served at 6:00 o'clock and a C. E. Rally for the fall program was held at 6:30.

Roann, Indiana. We received the following from Brother C. C. Grisso relative to the installation of a new pastor at Roann. "On Lord's Day morning, September 4th, Rev. J. F. Baldwin, a former pastor of the Church of the Brethren at Lincoln, Nebraska, was formally installed as pastor of the Roann, Indiana, Brethren Church by C. C. Grisso, who has been serving the church as supply pastor for the past ten months. Rev. and Mrs. Baldwin have moved into the parsonage and he preached his initial sermon on the above mentioned date." Brother Baldwin has already become a subscriber to the Evangelist.

St. James, Maryland. We note from the St. James bulletin that a new mimeograph machine is being purchased by the Church. The W. M. S. has already contributed the sum of $25.00 to the fund, and the Laymen $15.00, and the Brotherhood will supply the balance that is needed.

Mrs. Freeman Ankrum, wife of the St. James pastor, has accepted a position with the Downsville School as teacher of Grade one and a part of Grade two.

The Boys' Brotherhood has sponsored the building of a new wall to the front and side of the church.

Meyersdale, Penna. The Meyersdale Brethren Church and their pastor, Brother W. S. Benshoff, were featured recently in "The Church and Pastor of the Week," which was "news" in the Johnstown "Tribune" of August 27th. It carried a brief article and pictures of both church and pastor.

Stockton, Calif. The Holy Communion of the Stockton church was held on Friday evening, September 9th.

New Christian Endeavor officers were recently elected at Stockton. Joan Walters was elected President.

Ashland, Ohio. The Ashland church and Sunday School got off to a fine start for fall and winter activities following General Conference. September 11th saw most of the College students back in place in the church and Sunday School, the group being well augmented by a number of new faces, members of this year's Freshman class. The Sunday evening service was in charge of the young people, under the direction of Carl Mohler, Youth Director for the Ashland Church. Work of camps, the "Crusaders" and the Brethren Youth Conference were highlighted in this service. The youth are in charge of one evening service each month.

This year instead of having three prayer meeting groups, there will be four, the high school youth desiring a service of their own. Therefore the four groups meeting will be the children, the high school group, the college group and the adults. The Ashland church is looking forward to a fine attendance and interest in this particular part of the work.

Mansfield, Ohio. A card from Brother Elmer Carrithers announces an evangelistic meeting to be held at the church on Bowman Street, the first two weeks in October. Brother Floyd Sibert, pastor of the Pleasant Hill, Ohio, church will be the evangelist, with Sister Loretta Carrithers in charge of the music.

Vinco, Penna. A card from Brother W. B. Brant, who recently assumed the Vinco pastorate, says, "Arrived safely, found everything shipshape: house painted inside and out, new wall paper, new tub in bath room, just wonderful. Attendance has been good—158 yesterday morning (Sept. 11) and over 100 in the evening. The basement unit for the new Educational Building will be finished for use this winter. The Young Men's Brotherhood is buying a mimeograph for the church."

"Simply to be in the world, wherever you are, is to exert an influence, compared with which mere language and persuasion are feeble."—Horace Bushnell.

"I would rather walk in the dark with God, than go alone in the light;

I would rather walk with Him by faith than walk alone by sight."—Brainard.

THE FACE BEHIND THE WALL

Scripture II Samuel 14:25-33

I STOOD ONE EVENING, at the close of the evening service in the First Methodist Church in the city of Ashland, Ohio, chatting with an elderly lady who had approached to inquire my name and extend the welcome of the congregation to a visiting college student. After a few exchanges of pleasantries, I asked of her, "May I ask the name of the old gentleman who always sings in your choir, and stands at the end of the Basso section?" Back came the answer in eager tones, "That is my husband, and when I can no longer see that beloved face in the choir, in his accustomed place, I shall no longer care to worship here." It was the love in a loving spouse's heart that made that plain, rugged old face beautiful.

Upon infrequent occasions the King of England was wont to make a trip to visit his subjects in the land of India. Upon the occasion of one of these Durbars, as they are called, enterprising business folks thought to cash in on the visit of the monarch. Accordingly they had multitudes of pictures of the king, in all positions and attires, made for sale to the multitudes they knew would gather to watch the ruler pass in the street procession. The queen, having accompanied her husband upon the occasions, thousands purchased the pictures. But other thousands refused to buy, not because they were not interested, but because the vision of their beloved ruler was engraved upon their hearts. "Why should we have a picture?" they asked simply. "Have we not seen the king himself?"

In the Scripture of our lesson, Absalom had been banished from seeing his father's face for two years, and that was punishment of the severest sort, for he had been a favorite son. Finally the separation became unbearable and by an unscrupulous ruse Absalom secures audience with his father and receiver pardon and acceptance with him.

It was Absalom's wrong-doing that had called down the king's decree of banishment from the court, and two years of disfavor with his parent should have taught him obedience and respect—but it did not. By destruction of the property of his father's chief general he secured audience with the father and favor in the court again.

Someone has said that "The soul of man was made for God and will not rest until it rests in Him." Sin puts a sentence of banishment from God's presence upon the sinner. Like Absalom, who dwelt in the presence of the evidences of God's love and goodness, but cannot behold His face. And when the sinner sees His face he is satisfied, and peace comes to the soul. But the vision of His face must come first, and then comes the full and perfect disclosure of His kindness and tenderness. And the Word tells us that when we see Him we shall be like Him.

And we shall do more than see Him. The Indian may gaze upon his Emperor, but the Christian becomes one with his Lord. And when we realize the truth of this oneness with the Lord, then the darkness and fear and doubt all pass away forever, and a deep, abiding joy takes their place. It is not merely to behold Him and pass on, but to abide. That will be heaven.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

The most felicitous is my means of the imagination. Here soon the soul can be in Cathay or any other place it chooses. Here it goes on the wings of wild imagination to the uttermost corners of the earth. In the early days of youth most traveling is done by such means.

Most any longing boy becomes fevered with the sunset. It is such a glorious spectacle that it sets his soul on fire. He looks into that measureless concave immensity, in the rich splendors of its gorgeous coloring and dreams himself into heaven itself.

Gustave Dore with all his paint could not be so prodigal with color. Those airy chiffons and fleecy lawns, loop-swung and woven above the western horizon would fever the brow and imagination of any frenzied boy.

The boy knows what surprises await him and what treasures are in store and he is off. The gypsy in him is fully awakened and his eagerness knows no bounds. He looks at the bay, longs to board a ship and be sailing over the rolling blue. His fairy ship arrives and he is at the helm. Here he drives on, engulfed in the rich colors of the sunset.

Not long until he sees the sampans in the China sea, sees the harbor alive with strange people in strange dress. He sees the rickshaws in the narrow streets. Or he sees the wonders of London with its Westminster Abbey, and its Houses of Parliament with painted spires and faultless architecture. He sees its Big Ben clock with its ton-weight hands measuring out the time. He sees its majestic Thames winding under London Bridge, which he finds, is not falling down.

He crosses the snow-crammed Alps with Hannibal, he watches flow the storied Rhine, and from the bay of Naples he looks on ominous Vesuvius with a hoop of vaporous smoke around her brow. Here he may look on the blue Mediterranean over which Ulysses sailed, and where the Harpies attempted to lure him to destruction.

Or he walks through the Red Sea with the Israelites on their journey to the land of Canaan. He looks in awe-stricken wonder at the Sphinx and the Pyramids.

His wonder-thirst has wholly captured him and he is startled with the reality of his travels.

SHALL WE FOLLOW THE FASHIONS?

Scripture: Romans 12:1, 2; I Peter 1:13-21

For The Leader

AS CHRISTIAN YOUNG PEOPLE, if we are true to our convictions, we are bound to come in contact with fashions and practices which we cannot conscientiously follow. The question is, then, "What shall we do?" Which question is very easily answered by asking ourselves another question, "Should we please God or man?" On the other hand, decisions cannot always be as "cut and dried" as that. There are some fashions and customs which may seem all right, but in themselves would not be pleasing to God. The Christian young people will find a satisfactory answer to all doubts by seeking to please God and to glorify Him in all that we do, wear, or say. Certainly it is better to be out of style with the world today, than to be out of "style" with God.

DISCUSSION

1. THE POPULAR TREND TODAY. A study of amusements, literature, language, customs and dress will reveal that the popular trend is in the direction of lust, the sensual, vulgarness, etc. The truly Christian young people face a critical problem. But Paul says in Romans that we are to present our bodies a living sacrifice. We cannot drink, smoke, go to sinful amusements, engage in immoral acts, use vulgar language, or dress indecently, and still be a "living sacrifice" for God. In doing these things, even in mild forms, we are defiling the temple of God. We are to be obedient to God, and not follow the fashions when they tend toward lust.

2. DARE WE SMOKE AND DRINK? Perhaps we should separate these two and consider them separately. But we have grouped them to show you a dangerous trend. The present generation of Church people have more or less accepted smoking, but still frown upon drink. At the present rate, though, it won't be long until drinking will be commonly accepted as smoking. A recent Local Option campaign was lost to the wets because of the large number of young married people who turned out to the polls on the wet side. Don't be fooled, young people. Drink will drag you into Hell quicker than you can run into it. Drink spoils and curses and ruins all that is fine and Christian about you. STAY AWAY FROM THAT SOCIAL DRINK IN YOUR HIGH SCHOOL CLUB PARTIES. IF YOUR GANG DRINKS, YOU'RE IN THE WRONG GROUP. GET OUT AND SAVE YOUR SOUL. Likewise with smoking. You will live happier without it. Recently we found it necessary to eat in a restaurant. The food was good, the place was clean, and we were enjoying our meal immensely (name of restaurant on request), when in came a woman with two companions and entered the booth next to ours. At once she lit a cigarette, which was bad enough, except that every time she exhaled she headed it in our direction. She smoked three cigarettes before she started on her meal. We hope that's as close as we'll ever get to the fires and smoke of Hell. She was offensive in her actions, due largely to that "nerve" received from smoking the things. There was no beauty about her either in person or character. And say, did you notice that "Miss America 1949" neither smokes nor drinks. YOU'LL BE A BETTER CHRISTIAN, A FINER EXAMPLE IF YOU DO NOT SMOKE.

3. CONDUCT AND ATTITUDES. Present day trend is towards conduct which knows no restraint. We young people think it's smart to "get away" with things. So we do things we know are dangerous and not right. Popular attitudes trend away from church, home and God. What about it, young people, are you going to follow the fashions and think it's smart to quit coming to C. E. and other services? Are you going to follow the crowd which thinks it better to go to the movies on Sunday night than to church? Are you going to throw your influence toward bringing dancing, and other things into the church "to entertain the young people?" Better not! Popular attitudes today toward marriage are not God's attitudes. God has ordained one man for one woman as long as they both shall live. Popular ideas, which are evil, are: that if it doesn't work, we'll get a divorce; and, that we are not bound to be true to our mate. God has made the home, the Church, and marriage the sacred things they are. From our Bible, our pastor and good books, let us learn God's true ideals, and remain true to them.

4. MODESTY. It's a funny thing, but it seems that the word "modesty" became obsolete along with the last girl that ever blushed. For you never hear nor see either one any more. Yet that is the one word that will help us to decide as we should on these matters. Remember, there are great battles going on in your life. One, Satanic in origin, is striving to destroy your life, your character, and your Christian faith. If Satan had his way, you would be drinking, swearing, smoking; you would never be found in church, but rather in the dens of sin and ruin. In a greater or lesser degree, we must, through Christ, overcome these temptations every day of our lives. On the other hand, Christ is seeking to control our lives, that we might be beautiful, happy, pure, clean and modest. There is something fine and beautiful about a modest young man or woman that cannot be purchased with all the gold in the world. That "something" is Christian character. A Christian young person will always properly clothe themselves, giving no opportunity of being an object of lust to any evil minded person. Such a young person will guard their language, will think twice before expressing an attitude about the church, home and marriage which does not uphold these Christian ideals. Such a young person will not be found in the gaiety crowd, nor a partaker of their lusts and sins, but he or she will be found in the eternal courts of God. Such a young person will grow in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man. Isn't that the life that is worthwhile?

QUESTIONS

1. What dress fashions, both men's and woman's, would you consider indecent, or unbecoming to a Christian young man or woman? How would you design clothes for Christians?

2. "If we can't go to the movies, or can't dance, then what can we do?" Suppose you were asked such a question, how would you answer it, in the light of our scripture passages tonight?

PRAY

Be not afraid to pray—to pray is right,
Pray, if thou canst, with hope, but ever pray,
Though hope be weak, or sick with long delay;
Pray in the darkness if there be no light.
Far is the time, remote from human sight,
When war and discord on the earth shall cease;
Yet every prayer for universal peace
Avails the blessed time to expedite.
Whate'er is good to wish, ask that of Heaven,
Though it be what thou canst not hope to see;
Pray to be perfect, though material leaven
Forbid the spirit so on earth to be;
But if for any wish thou canst not pray,
Then pray to God to cast that wish away.

—Coleridge.

PRAY

Scripture: Hebrews 4:14-16

Hymn: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus"

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE CHRISTIANS in the early church continually maintained their prayer life (Acts 2:42). God speaks to us through His word. We commune with Him in prayer. Satan tempts the Christian but he "trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees." The Christian must resort to God for strength and wisdom, for his undertakings are miracle work. It takes God's power and the working of the Holy Spirit to win souls. It takes God's power to do God's work (John 15:5).

The Lord's Prayer requires daily praying (Matt. 6:11). Daniel gave priority to prayer three times a day (Dan. 6:10). Although he was prime minister of a great empire he was not too busy to pray regularly. King David also prayed three times daily (Psa. 55:17). The busier we become the more spiritual vitality we need. Regularity for meals, rest and work are imperative. It is just as imperative to seek God's face at set times. The early morning hour is one of the best times for this (Mark 1:35; Prov. 8:17).

But even set times are not enough for a praying Christian. He is commanded to pray continually (Luke 18:1; Rom. 12:12; Col. 4:2; Eph. 6:18; 1 Thes. 5:17). "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath," his second nature.

It is sweet to pray all the time. Speak personally to your own loving heavenly Father. Go to Him in the name of Christ for He is your Advocate (1 John 2:1), your Mediator (1 Tim. 2:5), your Intercessor (Heb. 7:25), your High Priest (Heb. 4:14). We are commanded to take every burden to the Lord and leave it with Him (1 Peter 5:7; Psa. 55:22). We are commanded to make our requests to God about everything (Phil. 4:6, 7; Mark 11:24; Psa. 37:4). As a child of God you are to acquaint yourself with His promises to you and claim them. To pray according to the will of God is to pray according to the Scriptures. Look for promises in God's word. Here are a very few: Jer. 33:3; John 14:13, 14; Mark 11:24; 9:23; James 4:2; Matt. 18:19; 21:22.

Be definite in prayer. Write down in a ledger your requests and the dates of their origin. Be able to recognize the answer and record on the opposite page the date of fulfillment. It is the Christian who is to "pray through" his burdens (Luke 18:1-8; Matt. 15:21-28; Luke 11:5-10).

In prayer we are to confess our sins for God is grieved by our sins (Psa. 78:40; Eph. 4:30). Be sure to forgive others first (Luke 11:4; Eph. 4:30-32; Mark 11:25).

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

by The Editor

Lesson for October 16, 1949

GOD AND THE NATIONS

Lesson: Isaiah 1:21-28; 19:19-25

HOW OFTEN WE PAUSE to wonder how God must feel as He looks down upon the nations of the earth, seeing there all the disorder, discord, greed, inhumanity, crime, petty politics and hatred that most surely exists! As we turn to the lesson for this particular period, we can see at least a fair picture of what has, for many hundreds of years, been the scales upon which God has weighed, and all too often found wanting, the nations of the world.

The words of the lesson text might well have been spoken in our generation, and even as of yesterday, for the nations of the world are in no manner different from those of Isaiah's time, except possibly, our present-day nations have a greater penalty in store for them, which they will be expected to pay, because of their multiplied knowledge of God and their manifold opportunities which are, in the main, neglected.

We should note as we study these lessons during this quarter that there is always a willingness on the part of God to forgive the transgressions of the people, if they will but turn from their evil and sinful ways. God calls their turning from the paths of righteousness, which He has marked out for them, sheer "rebelliousness" and studied "disobedience." Which attitude, as we all know, was that of the Israelites almost from its very inception.

But that is the way of man—he is seldom satisfied to live a life of obedience; he is irked by restraint which he considers as encroaching upon his "personal" liberties; he considers self above his neighbors. This, God tells him, is impossible. There must be obedience and a certain amount of selflessness with both individuals and nations.

In these prophetic utterances of Isaiah we find simply the setting forth of the things that are bound to happen being foretold. In fact, prophecy is simply God revealing to men, through a chosen individual, that which He knows will surely come to pass. It is merely the law of cause and effect being set forth in a manner which should be understandable to the one to which it is so revealed.

We can take our Golden Text and find in it that which should be the ruling passion of every Christian—a call to set forth the good news of salvation—the summons to “look” unto God “and be saved”—even those who are at the “ends of the earth,” and the sending forth of the truth of the might and power of God in behalf of men. How foolish are nations to think that they can pit their puny strength against that of God, the All-powerful. Yet that is exactly what they are doing day after day.

In this lesson we may find a definite call to missionary service. For it is the call to send the message to “the ends of the earth.” This is one of the definite cords which binds the nations to God and always brings about an opportunity, and an obligation for service in this field. The fact is self-evident that had we as Christians, sent forth missionaries as we should that the dread penalties of wars through which we have passed in the last thirty years might have been a far different story. After all, just how much of the responsibility, as far as the nations are concerned, is to be laid at the feet of Christendom? Can you find the answer?

CONTESTS OPENED FOR FIRST NATIONAL LEPROSY MISSIONS WEEK

National contests in observance of the first National Christian Leprosy Mission Week of Prayer, to be held October 9-16, will be open to all interested persons, according to an announcement made here by the American Mission to Lepers, sponsors of the Week.

An essay contest for young people living in the United States, between the ages of 12 and 21 inclusive is now open on the subject, “Five Reasons for Leprosy Missions,” with entries to be 1000-1500 words in length and post-marked not later than Thursday, October 13.

The winner of the first prize in this contest will receive a trip to the National Leprosarium in Carville, Louisiana, operated by the U. S. Public Health Service. This is the only institution of its kind in this country. Second and third awards in the essay contest will be announced at a later date.

Also recognized will be the creator of the best poster giving the significance of the Leprosy Missions Week. The poster must be sent or brought to the Mission's 42nd Annual Convention to be held in Boston, Mass., October 19 and 20.

In a statement on the “why” of a Leprosy Missions Week, Eugene R. Kellersberger, M.D., General Secretary of the Mission, said: “The Mission to lepers was born in a prayer meeting of five women in Dublin, Ireland. As someone said, ‘It has been cradled in prayer ever since.’ So it is very fitting that one entire week be proclaimed as the National Leprosy Missions Week of Prayer.”

According to an earlier announcement, the Mission is expending over $500,000 this year for materials and supplies for 125 leprosy stations in 29 countries on five continents.

Laid to Rest

JOBSON. David Jobson, son of Rev. and Mrs. Orville Jobson, missionaries in Africa, died in Rockhill, South Carolina, on July 24, 1949, as a result of an automobile accident, at the age of twenty-four years. When but a small child he was placed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Smoker of New Paris, Indiana, and made his home with them for eleven years. No son was ever loved and provided for more than he was in this Christian home. They loved him as their own son, and were always interested in his welfare wherever he was. When the sad news came that he had passed away, Mr. and Mrs. Smoker at once drove to South Carolina to bring the body back to New Paris for burial.

David was a fine young man and a member of the First Brethren Church in New Paris. He had worked in the Smoker factory in New Paris previous to his going to South Carolina. He was working in Rockhill for a funeral director at the time of his death. He had been with the firm for eleven months and was respected by them and had many friends there. They requested a service there before he was brought home. The service in New Paris was held in his home church, being in charge of the pastor, the undersigned, and assisted by Rev. Barnard and Alva McClain at Winona Lake, and L. S. Bauman of Washington, with burial made in the Violet Cemetery in Goshen, Indiana.

About one year ago he rededicated his life to his Lord and expressed his desire to go as a missionary to some foreign field, but had not definitely decided where he would like to go.

Besides the parents, who are in Africa, and his foster parents Mr. and Mrs. Max Smoker, he leaves one sister, Mrs. William Bellinger of Walkerton, Indiana, and one brother, Roger Jobson of Los Angeles, California. A great part of the responsibility for the funeral service rested upon the sister, Mrs. Kathryn Bellinger.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

We Travel Some More

"We" means three, though but two of us can vote. The third is our faithful automobile which has carried us far past the 100,000 mile mark in the last several years. It is getting advanced in years, but is still so faithful that I remain proud and satisfied with it. When one goes as far as nearly 1,500 miles a month and still is in love with a machine, there's reason; and while I'll not admit that it replaces any other love I have for wife or family or friends, as some try to argue, I will agree that it gave us uncommon service and faithfulness that commands and assures inexplicable requital—that means doubtless, in this case, good care from wear and soiling.

Where This Time?

None other place than Ashland, Ohio, and the National Conference. It is quite self-revealing to tell the places one goes. Few cars have gone so far as this one and I believe to so few wholly worldly places. How would all of us like to tell all the places our cars have taken us in the last several months? Yet, some time, we'll need to face that very fact (Romans 14:10, 11). How well has your money spent for gas served you? Has it always been for the Master's sake and cause? And, if not, are you one who is "not your own, ye are bought with a price" (I Cor. 6:20). And since we are thus purchased, Paul argues that we need "therefore (to) glorify God in your bodies." Bodies! What a revelation people are making of themselves with their bodies these days. Once, there were some parts of the body that remained secret to the other sex until marriage; but now! In the most sacred places such as Bible Conferences, Youth meetings and Camps, one thus trained in modesty a few decades ago, wonders where to look to avoid beholding what was once a shame to see.

Oh, My

What use is it to claim salvation from sin when one seems only to be tempting others to sin? What use to expose needlessly one's person when God calls it "the temple of the Holy Spirit!" (I Cor. 6:19). "The temple of God is holy," and "if any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy, which temple YE Are" (I Cor. 3:17). If any professing Christian believes that he will not need to give an account for the licentious exposure of the body (near nudity as possible), let such an one consider II Cor. 2:16, the Biblical background for the song:

"And He walks with me and He talks with me,
And He tells me I am His own."

Yea, yea, the Temple of God is Holy, which temple ye are. Nudity is hellishness. Gen. 9:18-23.

The Real Happiness

The happiness of such a week was because the Lord allowed so many of us to gather from West to East and from South to North to meet again and ask: "Now who are you?" and "Where did we meet?" or "How Glad I am to see you again." Or to say glibly (without apparent sincerity) "It has been nice to see you once more." To meet those who in the thirty-nine years of service I have rendered to my Brethren e'er they or we are called to the great beyond, is a great joy. To see young people filling, so well, the places of power and responsibility once held by those who have gone before and are "lost to us for a while"—only to our limited vision, but doubtless not to theirs—for "we are compassed by so great a cloud of witnesses" (Heb. 12:1) that we really need to "run with patience, the race set before us."

Moreover, we now have added reasons for our perambulations amid the scenes of thirteen years of our most active service for God, denomination and humanity—to traverse the holy places made so by relationships that will endure, we believe, beyond the confines of space and time. To recall memories of success and even to remember "light afflictions which were but for the moment" which enrich the sum total of life's treasures in the eternal world to come, and already begun in those who are His. (Rom. 8:1-10).

Home and Work

Ah, me! Isn't there something nice about home, "be it ever so humble?" To rest in one's own bed where there is no question about the covers or the drafts; where one needs not "put on style of discomfort; where the homely—or homespun—ways of Brethren are not challenged and where work awaits to continue the "work of the Lord" in the vineyard to which He has assigned us. "Home, Sweet Home!"

SPECIAL NOTICE

TO ALL PASTORS AND CHURCH SECRETARIES

SEPTEMBER 30th is set for the dead line for ALL changes of names and addresses which will appear in the Conference Annual edition of the Brethren Evangelist. It is the aim of the publishing house to get this number out much earlier than it has appeared in recent years. If changes do not reach the editor's desk by this date they cannot be guaranteed to be changed in the Evangelist. Such changes in address are important to an efficient annual number. So—DO IT NOW. Just say on a government post card: Name of church name of pastor and his address; name of secretary or clerk, with address. Then address the card as follows: Brethren Publishing Company, 524 College Avenue, Attention F. C. Vanator, Ashland, Ohio.

If we receive several cards from the same place, it will do no hurt, for then we will be sure to have your addresses correct.

BUT ABOVE ALL THINGS—Let someone do it.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT,
Fred C. Vanator, Editor.

DR. AND MRS. I. D. BOWMAN EXPRESS THEIR THANKS

Wife and I want to express our sincere thanks to our many friends who so kindly remembered us in money and other gifts at our seventieth wedding anniversary.

We received nearly one hundred cards and about the same amount of dollars in money, besides a numerous amount of other gifts.

We had two wedding feasts, one at Ashland on Sunday, August 28th, and another in our home church at Brighton, Indiana, on August 30th. Sunday, August 28th was the date of our wedding anniversary.

We not only appreciate the gifts, but above all the true heart expressions of hundreds of friends. We surely thank God for permitting us to live so long in wedlock.

Rev. and Mrs. Isaac D. Bowman,
Route 3, Howe, Indiana.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Meyersdale, Penna. We note that the Meyersdale Church observed "Loyalty Sunday" on September 11th, at which time Brother Benshoff spoke on the subject, "What Price Your Church?" Letters had been sent out to each member of the congregation and friends of the church urging attendance at the services as a "renewal of their pledge of faith and devotion to the church."

We also see that the Men's Bible Class enjoyed a "real evening of fellowship together" at the H. T. Staub cabin at Laurel Falls, where a bountiful supper and a short program was enjoyed.

Waterloo, Iowa. The choir of the Waterloo church and their families enjoyed a "choir supper" recently at the church.

Also "Family Night" was held on Thursday evening, September 22nd. After a pot-luck supper, and time of fellowship, an outstanding movie was shown.

Smithville, Ohio. In the absence of Brother Vernon Grisso, Smithville pastor, who was representing the General Missionary Board at the rededication services of the Cumberland, Maryland, church, which service was held on Sunday, September 4th, Brother L. E. Lindower of Ashland Theological Seminary was the morning speaker, and Brother A. E. Whitted, who now makes his home at Smithville, was the evening speaker.

We note by a recent Smithville bulletin that revival services are to be conducted at the Smithville church beginning October 17 and closing October 30th, with Brother E. J. Black, pastor of our Bryan, Ohio, church as evangelist, and "Bud" Hunter of North Manchester, Indiana, as song director. The Fall Communion will be observed on Sunday evening, November 6th.

Stockton, California. Brother Charles Johnson says in a recent bulletin, "Our attendance of young people at Prayer Meeting is excellent, but where are the adults?" We suspect that the above is the growing experience of many of our pastors.

Nappanee, Indiana. We note that Rev. Jesse Hoover is graciously supplying the Nappanee pulpit in the interim between the closing of Brother J. M. Bowman's pastorate and the coming of Brother V. E. Meyer to take over the work. Brother Meyer and his family are due to arrive in Nappanee shortly, if they have not already arrived as you read these lines.

In preparation for the arrival of their new pastor, a number of improvements are being made on the parsonage—such as new kitchen equipment and the regrading of the lawn.

"Harvest Home Cash Day" was observed in the Nappanee Church on Sunday, September 25th. A carry-in dinner followed the morning service.

Mexico, Indiana. Homecoming Day at the Mexico Church has been set for October 16th. Brother L. V. King, former Mexico pastor, and now the pastor of our Elkhart Church, will be the guest speaker at the afternoon service. Many special numbers have been scheduled. A basket dinner will be enjoyed at the noon hour.

The color sound film, "God is My Landlord," will be shown at the Mexico church on Friday evening, October 30th. This is the film which was shown to a magnificent audience at the Laymen's session of the recent General Conference.

Brother Austin Gable, Center Chapel pastor, was the speaker at Mexico on Sunday, September 18th, while Brother Higgins, Mexico pastor, was conducting the special evangelistic meetings at the Center Chapel Church.

Milledgeville, Illinois. We note by the Milledgeville bulletin that Brother D. C. White began the study of Revelation in their mid-week services recently.

Gatewood, West Virginia. We have received word that Rev. Cecil Bolton, Jr., has been installed as pastor of the Gatewood Brethren Church. We understand that he has come to us from the E. U. B. Church.

Cumberland, Maryland. Brother E. L. Miller informs us that he recently was one of three of our Brethren who had a part in the rededication services of the Cumberland church. Brother Vernon Grisso, and Brother James Ault were the other two. We will have a full story of the dedication services from the Cumberland folks for our readers in the near future we trust.

Oakville, Indiana. Promotion Day, with appropriate ceremonies, was held in the Oakville Sunday School on September 25th, the services being in charge of Pat Ball, Charlie Kern and Charles Holsinger.

We note from a circular letter which was sent to the membership of the Oakville Church that a new heating

THE INSPIRED WORD

AN EDITOR is constantly on the lookout for suggestions that will make the publication he is responsible for, better and more interesting to his readers. In fact his hand is ever reaching out to receive such suggestions, be they spoken or written. They are the materials which inspire the "thinking aloud" in this column. So when it was suggested that some of this space on page 3 be devoted to "thoughts" about some of the outstanding doctrines of the church

It set me to thinking in a different way!

It has always been my personal feeling that our thinking should be based on practical things and experience. And yet, there are some things which one has to think upon which he cannot grasp as a concrete thing that one can hold with his hands or experience physically. The "inspiration" of the Word of God is one of these. But, if we are to be sure of our ground for thinking at all in the realm of Christian experience, then we must have something upon which to stand—a solid foundation upon which to place our feet. This foundation, we are told in the Word, is Christ Jesus. Paul says, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

"But," someone may say, "that's in the Bible. How can we be sure of this as coming from God?" And that is where we meet the problem of "inspiration."

Of course we must, first of all, be willing to accept the fact that "God is," and that He is in control of His entire universe. This is essential before any argument can be made for His hand in the affairs of men. When this is admitted, then we may go on from there.

We read in II Timothy 3:16: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God . . ." (A. V.) The Revised Standard Version of the New Testament, the most recent translation, makes it even more emphatic, saying, "All scripture is inspired of God."

Even when we turn to the common dictionary we find a definite statement in the defining of the word "inspiration." Funk and Wagnalls' College Standard Dictionary defines the word as "Supernatural, divine influence exerted upon the sacred teachers and writers by the Spirit of God; by which divine authority was given to their writings."

Jesus says, when speaking to Satan in the time of His (Jesus') temptation, "Man does not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." (Matthew 4:4) Are there any words spoken that could more clearly and definitely set forth the fact of the inspiration of the words set forth within the Bible? For remember that Jesus quotes freely from the written Word, and so does Satan. They both believe that God inspired His writing, so, therefore, must we.

The writer of Hebrews begins his message by saying, "God at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets (Old Testament writers and their verbal messages), hath in these last days spoken unto us by his son . . ." (Hebrews 1:1-2). These messages were literally God-breathed.

Now take your concordance and note the great number of times you meet such expressions as these: "Thus saith the Lord"; "Keep My commandments"; "This is the will of God"; "According to the Will of God." Many others could be cited.

But to us, as Christians, the most satisfying words are found in John 1:12-13, where we read, "But as many as received him, to them gave he power (right or privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

That the Scriptures bear the divine stamp of approval of God can in no way be doubted. So we can begin to build our "thinking" on a safe and sure foundation. From time to time we will seek to "think" of the many phases of doctrine as we build on our "firm foundation."

In My Father's House

(John 14:2)

No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb;
Rather, in our Father's mansion,
Living, in another room.

Nearer than the youth whom fortune
Beckons where the strange lands loom;
Just behind the hanging curtain,
Serving, in another room.

Shall we doubt our Father's mercy?
Shall we think of death as doom,
Or the stepping o'er the threshold
To a bigger, brighter room?

Shall we blame our Father's wisdom?
Shall we sit enswathed in gloom,
When we know our love is happy
Waiting in another room?

Only a faith which can rejoice in the face of disaster is large enough to meet our need.

It is more important to make a life than to make a living.

Ashland College

And The Future of The Brethren Church

Prof. Delbert B. Flora

YEARS AGO while a boy was growing up on the farm in Wabash County, Indiana, he and the family of which he was a part were closely associated with a small country church, a Brethren church. The name Ashland was heard now and then. In fact the name seemed to be in the family tradition, for the father had been there during the winter of 1887-88 as a boy of eight to nine while his father was spending a school year in studying for the Brethren ministry in Ashland College. It was a pleasant name. It seemed to have about it an air of far off mystery and glamour. It had a romantic quality.

Now and then the name Ashland was heard at the church, and it always meant Ashland College. The family and the church people there seemed to think of the place as being just about the hub or heart of the Brethren Church. Then about 1918 another name came into the community, that of W. H. Beachler, and not long afterward the man himself came. That fine, big, affable, lovable Brethren minister talked nothing but Ashland College for a few days. Every Brethren family and home heard his cheerful voice make Ashland College really live. The future of the Brethren Church was bound up with the future of Ashland College. The College had not had sufficient support and needed improvements. She must have money. She must have Brethren young people. She must have candidates for the Brethren ministry. There could not be a real future for the Brethren Church otherwise.

When Dr. Beachler left Wabash County he carried with him quite a number of pledges for the College, and among them was one from a very young man who, some seven years later, entered her halls as a ministerial student, and who is now on the faculty of Ashland Theological Seminary and writing these lines.

Old A. C. is still intimately bound up with the future of the Brethren Church. She has been so all down through the years, even when she was "under fire." The Brethren Church and Ashland College have never been separated. And this is noteworthy: The section of the Brethren Church which, in proportion to its Brethren population has sent the least number of ministerial candidates to Ashland College within a decade, has established the least number of new Brethren churches during a long period of years. "Think it over."

October is College (Ashland College) Month in the Brethren churches. An offering is to be taken for the operating expenses of our institution of higher learning, for the tuition charged the students never covers those expenses, as is well known. This offering requires the prayers of Brethren people, and must come from very generous and liberal hands. Some can give but a small sum others can give much larger amounts. But let every one be honest with himself when he asks how much he should give. Do not temporize, compromise or excuse, but lay hold down deep and give as unto the Lord. Remember that this offering is separate and apart from the Emergency Fund. This one is for operation.

Come on Brethren, take a good long look at the future of the Brethren Church. What will it be? If candidates for the Brethren ministry and missionary work are not sent in, they certainly cannot be graduated. If your money does not come in, there certainly cannot be a Brethren College at the heart of the Brethren Church. The future of the Brethren Church will be just and only what we make it.

"Voted Out"

Rev. George H. Jones

AMONG THE PERPLEXING PROBLEMS of the Church at large, is the astonishing spectacle of a pastor voted out of his pastorate by a majority vote of his congregation, at its annual business meeting.

Our Custom

As most of our congregations of the Brethren Church call their pastors at an annual business meeting, it is customary to regard a call in the light of an annual contract. However, in some congregations, cautious pastors have tried to have a call made indefinite. That is, the first business meeting that can be managed, will pass a rule that from henceforth, while the present pastor is engaged, there will be no pastoral change discussed, until either the officials privately inform the pastor of a needed change or the pastor for personal reasons, desires a change. Such a situation seems the most desirable.

A Shock

Too often we have discovered one of our eminent pastors has been voted out unexpectedly, and has been unable to find another desirable pastorate in three months' time.

Such a situation has upset many of our most eminent leaders. Several such occasions have stirred the writer into making a personal appeal in behalf of a friend who has been the victim of such a circumstance. Trying to judge honestly, we have tried to analyze the condition, as we saw it. Was the fault in the congregation? As a rule an organized Christian Church would, or ought to be, ashamed to suddenly inform a pastor of his unpopularity and their desire for a change. Usually, one or two level-headed leaders inform their pastor of such a growing desire, before it becomes an embarrassing demand. Of course such leadership is sometimes lacking. However, where such is the case we usually have a pastor having foresight enough to sense the growing sentiment and find it wise to begin a search for another field, making the change normal and timely.

The Normal

Other pastors again have never been voted out. Instead, they find it rather hard to leave. Such men are recalled for a second and even a third pastorate. This raises the question—Is it a problem of a congregation hard to please? or A faction-split congregation? or A leadership that arrogates to itself the matter of being pleased and arrogantly dominating the less vocal membership? Congregational government faces these conditions.

Is it a pastor's fault? Has he grown careless and lazy? or Has he developed an obnoxious egotism or arrogance that offends, publicly and privately, the sensibilities of a congregation? or Has he been so obviously indiscreet in his contacts with the opposite sex? Not a bad man, but a thoughtless one. Or Has he been pulling wires to get accomplished what he has in mind, that would be opposed by too many members of his congregation?

Common Humanity

All denominations have egotistic pastors, or politically-minded ones, or arrogant domineering ones. These characteristics in a more or less pronounced degree have to be dealt with wisely or unwisely by stationing committees of other denominations. They have also the different types of congregations we have mentioned. It is a wise committee that successfully meets these possible conditions and plans to prevent an upheaval of this nature.

We wonder how long the damage that such a condition produces, continues in the minds and hearts of the broken pastorate thus violently severed. We wonder too, how long it takes for the pastor to recover his self-respect from the experience. Particularly in the light of the knowledge we have that few, if any, are altogether free from the taint of any of these weaknesses, and campaign within ourselves to conquer it?

Conclusion

If these problems, in a more or less pronounced degree, are responsible for a pastor being voted out, are we forced to admit that such unkind acts are really forced upon either pastor or congregation by our poor judgment? Recently, in a large congregation of many hundreds of members, an attendance of less than one hundred and fifty members turned out to the annual business meeting. Among the routine items of business was the pastoral call. The vote being taken, the chairman of the committee reported the pastor recalled with a total of twenty-six votes more or less. The embarrassment of the committee and the congregation may well be imagined. The pastor being present, doubtless made some resolutions in his mind. Shortly afterward he was called to a small congregation in a far distant city and accepted the call. The salary was lower and the congregation offered so much less opportunity for greater usefulness in the Kingdom that we marvelled.

Perhaps this too is a reason for some pastors being voted out. An inability to find as large a congregation and salary to equal the change? Preachers are human, so we suspect we must put up with some who have human weaknesses that may eventually be eradicated by experiences that, taken in the Christlike spirit, profit to the perfecting of the saints. Congregations, too, will change. And the boss whether man or woman, will pass on or be discredited. And out of the embarrassment a brighter day will dawn when both congregation and pastor is moved by the kindly and patient spirit of the Master.

Practical Church Methods

Rev. Henry Bates

Building The Sunday School

THE IMPORTANCE of the Sunday School within the church cannot be too greatly stressed, for without the Sunday School we would not long have a church. The Sunday School is the feeder of the church—religious education is the foundation of the church. Membership and attendance at Sunday School indicate the interest which people are showing in the church and its activities. The Sunday School is of vital importance first as a training center, both for the young people and for the adults, in which they are instructed in the commands and the Word of God and in their duties to God, to others, and to self; and second as a feeder for the church itself. In light of this twofold important mission of the Sunday School every church should be striving to develop and to build up this phase of its work.

But Sunday Schools do not grow "on their own." Somebody must put forth some effort; somebody must be willing to devote many hours to developing an attractive and worthwhile program. The following two or three suggestions have been tried in various schools and have proven very helpful in building up both attendance and enthusiasm; in one church raising the average attendance slightly over forty percent in a little less than a year.

One very practical, and usually successful plan is the formation of a class for young married people. Every pastor and Sunday School superintendent should keep in mind the fact that young married folks have a series of problems peculiarly their own, and should endeavor to have a class for them in which they can discuss their own problems in light of the Bible and the Sunday School lesson. To study a particular lesson merely with the intent or purpose of learning some historical fact or facts is of little value unless the lessons learned can be applied to problems which are present in our own lives. In such a class let the emphasis be placed upon the word "Young," for too often the young married people stay away because some of the "young married people" of the twenty-five year vintage insist upon running the class. Let this class be well organized and encourage them to have social meetings once a month for fellowship and work.

Another means of attracting some of those outside the fold is the organizing of a nursery department in the church. Many parents will not come to Sunday School because they are afraid that their babies will make too much noise. This can be overcome through the nursery which might meet in a well-prepared room under the supervision of several of the ladies of the church—perhaps the ladies of the young married peoples' class taking turns. In the rural church, where there might be only the main auditorium, perhaps a home nearby could be used for this purpose.

Still another method which has proven very successful in various churches is that of Sunday School visitation. The pastor and superintendent draw up a list of all of the children and grown-ups who do not attend Sunday School at any church, and also those who are new-comers in the community. Let us assume, for instance, that a family consists of a man and wife, two daughters aged seventeen and ten, and a son of thirteen or fourteen. The superintendent gives a card to each teacher whose class would be represented in this family and instructs them to call upon the family. This means that in the family mentioned there would be four or five calls made by four or five different teachers, thus demonstrating to the family that the church and the Sunday School are vitally interested in having them in their midst.

And remember, "Nothing succeeds like hard work."

October - Community Chest Month

It's All In The Family

THERE WAS A TIME in America when a man with a family could take most things for granted. Things like peace, a home to live in, an unbroken family circle, money in the bank. America's present was secure, her future seemed rosy. He had his mind, his hands, his faith, his dream and the sky was the limit. With his mind and hands he made the security of his present. Out of his faith in the future he fashioned his dream for his children, his children's children. That they should be born with the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,

That was the heritage of the American family.
But what has happened to that heritage? Today the American family is in danger. Not from anything so simple as the atomic bomb. The enemies of the American family are subtle, and as complex as the era in which we live. Selfishness, cynicism, ignorance, inertia breed the dark, death-bringing forces of divorce, delinquency, crime.
Why are these things happening? Probably because we have shirked our responsibilities. Undoubtedly because we have taken too much for granted. We have taken for granted the fact that someone will pick up the pieces of these broken families and put them back together again. We have pretended it wasn't our responsibility. But it is our responsibility. What affects the American family affects us all since all of us are—or have been—members of a family, and every family is a part of the larger family that makes up America.

The reasons which cause the break-up of families are many and varied. Marital maladjustments, parent-child conflicts, ignorance, illness, financial difficulties. But most of these problems could be solved, and many homes in danger could be safeguarded if helped in time. The Red Feather family services supported by your Community Chest help to prevent calamities before they happen, and provide financial aid, hospital care, day nurseries, foster homes, and skilled counselling for all family problems.

The benefits from the Community Chest family services are our benefits. In helping American families to help themselves the Community Chest is reaffirming the lost heritage of the American family. This is our job, too.

It's all in the family.

The Weight of a Feather

How much does a feather weigh? Not much—in ounces. In fact, words like "feather-weight" and "feather-brain" have crept into our language to denote the very essence of triviality.

But how much does a Red Feather weigh? That's something else again. For the Red Feather, symbol of the Community Chests of our country, isn't subject to ordinary laws of weights and measurements.

The Red Feather's weight has to be computed in human terms—the warm security of a good foster home for a scared youngster, the help a family gets in holding itself together when it comes perilously close to a break, the feeling a handicapped man has when he realizes at last he's learned how to earn a living again, the blessed relief of the sick person who knows he has begun to heal. These are human experiences that can be duplicated over and over in 1250 cities and towns in our country where 14,000 Red Feather services are at work day and night, available to everyone in the communities they serve.

This would seem a pretty heavy weight for one jaunty little Red Feather. What's the secret? It's because the Red Feather stands for something else. It stands for unity—the united conviction of 20 million people, who give each year to support these services for themselves and their neighbors. Years ago, following an old American pattern of living, community people decided it was best to work together for all and to give once for all. Since then, the Community Chest idea has spread far and wide over the country.

How much does a Red Feather weigh? Enough, to life sick and troubled folks in every state in the Union so they can get a grip on life again. It's the soundest sort of community insurance! If we all give enough for the Red Feather services, the Red Feather will weigh enough for all of us.

So give through your Community Chest, give enough for all the Red Feather services.

WITH THE LAYMEN

NORTHERN INDIANA LAYMEN MEET

THE FIFTY-FIRST Quarterly Meeting of the Northern Indiana Laymen's Brotherhood of the Brethren Church was held in the North Liberty Brethren Church on Monday evening, September 12th. The men were served as they arrived. The ladies are to be commended for the generous portions of a delicious meal.

Brother C. E. Hevel, president of the North Liberty Laymen, presided at the meeting. After extending a few words of welcome, he introduced Brother William Monroe of Teegarden, who led in group singing. Brother Hevel led in devotions, reading from Matthew 4. Brother Clem Mamerow offered prayer.

Brother Mamerow took great pleasure in presenting Rev. Harold Miller, missionary on furlough from Nigeria. He spoke briefly on the subject, "A Man of God," stressing the fact that this title really means something. It is different than many commonly used in the Christian realm today. The word "Christian" itself is too often regarded with a great degree of carelessness, and includes many different types of individuals. After the message, Rev. Miller showed colored slides of the work. The service was most interesting, and very inspiring. It truly presented a challenge to everyone present.

President Harold Hummel was in charge of the business session. He announced the next meeting would be held in the Elkhart Church on December 5th. The offering lifted was in support of the Shipshewana project. Some over one hundred answered roll call.

The Nominating committee was appointed as follows: Raymond Parcell, Nappanee; Charles Kurtz, Elkhart; C. E. Hevel, North Liberty.

Brother Hummel then introduced Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College. Dr. Clayton very capably presented the extreme emergency which faces Ashland College and Seminary at the present time. Rev. Charles Munson, National Youth Director, also of Ashland, accompanied Dr. Clayton.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. E. M. Riddle, Field Secretary of the Brethren Missionary Board.

Max Miller, Secretary-Treasurer.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT LAYMEN MEET

The Southern Indiana District Laymen met at the Center Chapel Brethren Church on Monday evening, August 15th, for their regular quarterly meeting. The ladies of the church served a very delicious baked ham supper, to which we all did justice.

The evening program was held in the main auditorium of the church. Lyman Ressler acted as program chairman and Harry Jones led us in song, with little Phil Thrush at the piano. Our first number in song was "Redeemed," after which a hearty welcome was given by Harry Jones. Lyman Ressler then led our devotions, reading Matthew 12:1-6 and offering prayer. Marvin Payne furnished us with an accordion number, after which we were favored with a reading entitled, "Building," written and given by Joe Thrush. Phil Thrush favored with a special piano number. It is remarkable to see and hear this small boy play the piano.

Lyman Ressler introduced Philip Eschew, Principal of the Wabash High School, as the speaker of the evening. He began by commending us on the singing of these old gospel songs, saying that in so many churches you never hear these old songs any more. He said if he were to give his message a subject he would call it "Murder in the Church." He stated that too often when talking with people, though they were also members of the church, they say, "The trouble with your church is thus and so,"—not "our" church. So many people today are criticizing the young people of our churches, when they would turn our churches inside out if we, the older people, would but give them the right guidance. If Jesus taught anything, it was simplicity. There wasn't any doubt about the Ten Commandments—they were so simple a child could understand them. "Are you proud of your church; your religion; your God?" If you are you will be enthusiastic about it. The church and its membership have the greatest thing to sell and doing the poorest job with it. We are mighty poor salesmen. We need an awakening in the churches today. If things aren't going in your church the way you want it to go, do just a little more yourself. Don't criticize; instead of tripping some one, get in at the head, and try to pull it the right way. If we were as much interested in our churches as we are in our business, we could change this old world over night. Thus spoke Mr. Eschew.

Mr. Eschew illustrated his message all the way through with stories which emphasized his points, making it very interesting.

In the absence of the President and Vice President, the business session was in charge of the Secretary. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and approved. The roll call of churches resulted in a count of eighty-eight being present. An explanation of the need of funds for the College Emergency fund was made by Rev. James Ault of Hagerstown, Maryland, a visitor. An offering of $76.08 was lifted for this fund.

Our closing song was "Onward Christian Soldiers," and Rev. Austin Gable, pastor of the host church, pronounced the benediction.

The Center Chapel Church is one of our smaller country churches and is to be commended on the fine job they did in entertaining us. Our next meeting will be at the Burlington Brethren Church.

Guy V. Purdy, Secretary.

"Who shares his life's pure pleasures,
And walks the honest road,
Who trades with heaping measures,
And lifts his brother's load,
Who turns the wrong down bluntly,
And lends the right a hand,
He dwells in God's own country,
He tills the Holy land."—Louis E. Benson.

A Word of Appreciation of the Brethren Home

(The following letter in appreciation of the Brethren Home was received by the Editor a few days ago. We pass it on to the readers of the Evangelist for we feel that it expresses the views of one who possibly had had no previous personal contact with the Home, and yet who sensed at once the fine spirit that we have found from long years of experience with that work, always prevails.

We might say, in connection with this report by Mrs. Pottenger, that we are pleased to be able to tell our readers that Brother and Sister James E. Scott have decided to remain in their places as Superintendent and Matron of the Home, at least until March 1st. Their little daughter Judy, has started her school work in Flora, and we trust that she will be able to continue through the winter. Will you not join your prayers with those of the Benevolent Board that the Lord will see fit to hear her little body and that the "Scotts" will be able to continue in the work at the Home, a work which they love so dearly and to which they feel called of the Lord. To this end may we unite our prayers.—Editor)

The letter follows:

Roann, Indiana

September 16, 1949

I have just experienced the recent privilege of spending eleven days in our Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana.

I went there in the capacity of Nurse for Miss Naomi, Wilson, who passed quietly to her reward on Sunday morning, September 11th.

But I do want to say a few words in behalf of, and in appreciation of our Brethren Home:

It was a great privilege to spend what time I did there. The moment I entered it I felt the "At Home" spirit which permeates it at all times. It was lovely to meet, to mingle with, and to learn to know our dear Brethren people who make this "Home" theirs.

Brother and Sister Scott are very lovely, consecrated folks and are doing "their job well." We can be justly proud of them and the manner in which everything is being cared for. The food is most excellent and plentiful, and the home is the picture of neatness and cleanliness throughout.

I wish more of our people would make an effort to go and visit our Home and its residents. You would come away with a feeling of eagerness to help support it, and you would enjoy a great blessing by contacting everyone there.

May God richly bless those who are there, and Brother and Sister Scott for all their loving kindness, willingness and ability to make it the real Home it is. May all of us over the Brotherhood always help support our Brethren Home, both spiritually and financially, and do it joyfully.

Very Sincerely,

Mrs. Edith W. Pottenger.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

The usual hurry and scurry of the opening of school is now somewhat past and the college is settling back into the routine necessary for a successful college year. The situation was somewhat more complicated this year by the repairs to the building, but a sense of tolerance on the part of both students and faculty made it possible to get off to a good start.

Although the final count is not in, it now appears that the total enrollment for regular students will reach the 550 estimated in August, but will not surpass it much. No enrollment statistics are possible yet so it is impossible to list the homes of the Brethren students.

Work is progressing on the building and it is hoped that by Homecoming on November 5, the repair work will have been completed on both Founder's Hall and Allen Hall. The new stairs are now usable in both buildings, but not ready for steady use. Plastering the walls of the new stairwells is next on the list. After that, the old stairways will be removed.

As a part of homecoming, tours of the buildings will be conducted. Whether an alumnus or a friend of the college, you should plan to visit the campus on the weekend of November 5 to see just what has been done in the past four months.

The faculty reception on September 15 was a great success. As usual, it was held in the Myers Music Home. This is always one of the fine formal parties in which the students have a chance to meet their teachers. Miss Lulu Wood, college librarian, was chairman of the party.

This year for the first time, the faculty of the college met in a period of orientation at the opening of school. The first annual faculty planning conference met in the Myers building on Saturday September 17. At that time, the faculty met to examine the ideals, opportunities and obligations of the college. Dr. George Hill of Ohio University, was on the campus as resource consultant for the conference.

Ashland College won her first football game of the season on September 17 by defeating Rio Grande College 38 to 0. This is one of the largest scores ever run up on their opponents by Ashland College.

plant is to be installed in the church with stoker attachment. This is to be done with an approximate cost of $1,000.00.

St. James, Maryland. In a letter from Brother Freeman Ankrum, the new pastor at St. James, he tells us of the many things that are requiring his attention. He has promised to write a number of Brethren Historical Sketches, but the heavy schedule which he has on hand will delay his first article until some time in December or possibly till the first of the new year. He says, "I start a meeting Sunday night, October 2 at Kim's Run for Brother Guy Ludwig, which meeting will close on Saturday night, October 8. I return to St. James that night and hold a service on Sunday, October 9. Then Go to Linwood where I give the night Homecoming address. Mr. McKeldin was to have been there at night, but he had to change his date to the afternoon. I am taking what would be his place at night. The St. James folks want me to hold the meeting here which starts November 6 and closes November 20. So thus it goes."

Brother Ankrum also says that the work there has started off in a fine way. The people are very fine and are constantly bringing in things to the parsonage, among them have been five chickens—famed as preachers' food.

The Fall Communion of the St. James Brethren Church will be held on Sunday evening, October 16th, at 7:00 o'clock. All of like faith are cordially invited to share this service with the Brethren there.

Berlin, Penna. Gleaned from the Berlin bulletin: "The W. M. S. will hold its public service on Sunday morning, October 16th. Rev. Joe Shultz, student at Ashland College and Seminary, and pastor of the Williamstown, Ohio, Brethren Church, was guest speaker at the Berlin Church on Sunday evening, September 11th. The Advance Training Class will begin on October 17th instead of the previously announced October 3rd date."

The Berlin Fall Communion will be held on Sunday evening, October 2.

A play, "Christian Love In Action," was given recently in the Berlin Church at a morning service. The Cradle Roll Graduation service was also held at that time.

The Rally Day offering at Berlin was designated as going to help pay for the schooling of Auzcena Martin in Argentina, who was recommended by Miss Kugler when she was in the States.

Peru, Indiana. We have received our first bulletins from Brother M. J. Bowman since he became the pastor of the Peru Church. They seem to have gotten off to a fine start. He reports, in a letter to the editor, that they had twenty-seven in prayer meeting last week, a very fine attendance. He is to begin an evangelistic meeting on Sunday, October 9th, closing on October 23rd. Mrs. Leona Wallace, of New Jersey, will assist in the music.

Dayton, Ohio. We note that Rev. Harold Bayless was guest speaker at the Dayton Church in the absence of Brother Whetstone who was at the Tiosa, Indiana, Brethren Church rededication services, as guest speaker.

Gratis, Ohio. The combined Annual Homecoming Day and Rededication celebration of the Gratis church is set for Sunday, October 16th. Regular morning services, followed by a basket dinner at the noon hour, with the rededication services at the afternoon hour.

The Gratis W. M. S. will entertain the Miami Valley societies in the Quarterly Rally on Wednesday, October 19th, when morning and afternoon sessions will be held.

The Gratis Church was presented with both a Christian Flag and a United States flag. The latter is the one which the Government presented to the W. E. Andrews family in connection with their son, Cpl. Clayton Andrews' death in Germany during the late war. These two flags were given by the Andrews family as a memorial for their son.

Ashland, Ohio. Rally Day in the Ashland Sunday School had a fine attendance. The return of the Ashland College Students always is a stimulation to the school each Sunday, for the students are very regular in their attendance.

The Prayer meeting attendance is still on the upgrade, between ninety and one hundred are attending each week.

Two were recently received into membership in the church by baptism.

OUR GOD OF LOVE

By Raymond Stoffer

Glorious is our God of love;
We see Him in the sky above,
In all the planets, great and small,
In shrubs and flowers and trees so tall.

We see Him in the golden grain,
In sunshine and the falling rain;
We see Him when the shadows fall,
This great and mighty God of all.

In His blessed Word we're told
Of miracles in days of old;
Of separated sea and land,
Of rocks and stone, black soil and sand.

By His great power weak were made strong,
Some, in prisons, sang their song;
Many of devils were possessed,
Who found contentment and sweet rest.

He will transform the human heart,
Forgiven sins will all depart,
And we will know, as we progress,
Our God will lead us to success.

All who will, of any race,
Prepared, will see His shining face,
Will sing His praise forevermore
In mansions on the other shore.

THE ROMANCE OF LIVING

Scripture: Hebrews 11:32--12:2

For The Leader

WHAT DOES LIFE MEAN to you? Is it just a means to an end, that end being uncertain? If life just one dull day after another? Have you soured on everything and everyone in general? Do we hear of people who are so miserable that they can't even enjoy their own company. Is life uncertain for you? Does it contain fears, fears of being found out, or fears of what lies ahead? Or, is your life full of joy, even in spite of hardships and adversities?

Two things primarily affect life's meaning to us. The first, our outlook, and second, our attitude. When Christ dwells in our hearts. He gives us the best outlook there is—guidance and protection through life, and the guarantee of a future home in glory. When Christ is our Master and Lord, our attitude is one of rejoicing in trouble, optimism, peace, serenity, and happiness. There is a problem of getting people to see in the Christian, the brighter side of life. Let's see if we can help someone, now down on life, to get a spark of joy in this great romance of living.

DISCUSSION

1. AT WHAT AGE DO YOU GROW OLD? We have made it somewhat of a hobby to discover how old people are. And it is a very interesting subject and adds a lot of zest to your contacts with other people. And when they speak, express their ideas, or show their actions, you can tell their age exactly. Oh, no, we don't mean their physical age in years, but what we could call, their "life age." Do you know that there are young people at 20 or 25 years of age who are, in their ideas, peevish, attitudes, etc., as old as a grandmother in her dotage and childishness. And we have also seen grandmothers and fathers who were as fresh and vibrant at 70 or 80 as any healthy young person at 20. Our point? Physical age means little in the romance of living. It's your mental age, your outlook age, your "life age." We never need to grow old.

2. THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH. An early American explorer spent much time seeking the fountain of youth. He wanted his physical years rolled back. You've found the fountain of youth when you can see the physical years pile up and still be happy and joyous and youthful in spirit and mind. Physical age we can not hold back. But spiritually and mentally? That is another matter. Our activities and interests will certainly change over the passing years, but we can, if we exercise self-control and self-improvement, remain mentally active to the end of our natural life. Sad it is that so many people, when they see the years pass, begin to get morose, demented, feeling sorry for themselves, which is the surest way to lose friends.

3. IN WHAT EVER STATION. Paul comes through with a brilliant bit of Christian philosophy in Phil. 4:11, that "in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Certainly if any had any room to complain, Paul did. There are times when we can better ourselves, in working conditions, etc. There are times when changes are best, that we might be happier and more contented in our work. The one who is on a working basis with God can understand these things, for such a person moves in the will of God. Thus if the situation is one which would normally sour a person on life, just knowing we are in God's will, is sufficient. We can be content—joyful, and happy, in the midst of trials. Look at the Bible heroes mentioned in our scripture tonight. The experience of their lives are thrilling, far more than any adventure stories today. New Testament days, and church history would provide equally thrilling stories. Read the great stories of great missionaries who learned to be content in the place God wanted them to be.

4. NOT AFRAID TO DIE. In the biography of a great missionary of the 20th century we read of his almost hopeless situation in seeking to pioneer a new mission point in the heart of the dark continent. Pestilence and disease, poverty, lack of medical and other supplies, hunger, discouragement on the part of some of the missionary group, all added up to heartbreak. As this great missionary said, though, he was not afraid to stay there, even unto death, for he believed it was God's will that many souls be won to Christ in that dark, heathen place. He finally was successful in opening the great work, laying down his life in so doing. Talk about romance in living, there you have it, even in our present century. Wouldn't you be glad for a record like that at your dying day? Then quit feeling sorry for yourself, yield yourself to God, and be used where He doth lead. You can bank on it that God never leads us where He does not want us, nor where there is not sufficient of His grace to keep us there.

5. NO GREATER WORK. There are a few who change their minds after entering Christian work. And often they should if they find they are not suited for it, or cannot be cheerful in it. But, ask the great majority of preachers, missionaries, and preacher's lives, and, if they are truly consecrated to the task, they will tell you some wonderful things in answer. For instance, concerning opposition within their church, and without, when it comes, they tell us that God puts a protecting shield in front of them, and they are not hurt. The one who persecutes God's servants is always the loser. Ask these Christian workers about how God provides. As one has said, "When normal means fail, God comes through." Also "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." Do you believe these things? Then you are on the road to enjoying the romance of living in Christian service.

QUESTIONS

1. Reviewing the lives of "romance" personalities in olden times, do you think their lives and experiences are being duplicated today?

2. Define the word "romance" as it pertains to the lesson of the evening.

Many things in 1949 will not be of our choosing because they are in the realm beyond our control.

THE BUILDER'S PLANS

I Corinthians 13:8-13

IT IS SAID that we never see all of any object that we gaze upon. Only half of the object is visible to us at a time. And so maybe it would help us in some of our doughty disputations if we could remember the story of the two knights, "in days of old, when knights were bold," who met upon a narrow causeway. A sign stood beside the way, and in the exchange of greetings one remarked upon the color of the sign-board, whereupon the other quickly corrected him with the information that the sign was of another color. Each held stoutly to his claim until they fell out and fell upon each other in combat. One coming by during the scuffle, asked the cause, and when told laughed at the "nit-wittedness" of the two and informed them that the board was white on one side and black on the other.

A stone-cutter, chiseling away at a block of stone was asked by one who watched him, what part of the building his work was intended for. "I do not know," he replied, "I have not seen the builder's plans." Another phase of the subject is suggested by a companion story to the first one, of the two men who were cutting stone for a building. One was asked what he was doing, meaning what part of the construction work he was doing. His reply was characteristic—"I am cutting stone, just cutting stone." A second stone-cutter, when asked the same question, replied, "I am building a cathedral." There was a plan and the latter knew it, and that in due time his little part should be united with all the other parts to complete a building of beauty and utility.

And yet we trust it comes from Thee,
We have but faith: we cannot know!
For knowledge is of things we see;
A beam in darkness: let it grow.

The story of the poor boy in London, orphaned and cared for by a terrible drunken woman, who met him with kicks and cuffs if his begging did not yield sufficient to satisfy her avarice, fits in here. He used to find pleasure in looking at the lead soldiers and toys in the store windows, but was always separated from them by the glass. Accidentally run over by a car, he was carried to a hospital and cared for by loving hands. A few days passed and then he was astonished to see other children playing with just such toys as he had longed for, but had always been separated from by the glass. Then one day they propped him up in bed and he saw by his side a box of lead soldiers he had so admired and longed for. Slowly he stretched out his hand until he touched the treasures and then cried out, "There is no glass between."

How will it be when in the glory we no longer know in part, or see through a glass darkly, but face to face, and shall "know as even also we are known?"

—Linwood, Maryland.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

He prayeth well who loveth well,
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

From The Ancient Mariner—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

The man who has no love in his heart is an outcast from universal sympathy. The Ancient Mariner found out this all-pervading truth through a series of experiences that stamped it indelibly on his heart. The argument throughout this most unusual and exciting poem is absolutely convincing.

The person who loves only feebly is of small account. He cannot pray well or work well or hate well. He is lukewarm and must be spewed out of the mouth, as he can well be counted on to make a failure of his life. His purpose is not dynamic and his course is aimless.

The one who really loves is the one who goes after the thing he loves. His life is guided by a star to which he has hitched his wagon.

In this poem, the Ancient Mariner, in which the author amplifies and proves the theme that the man without love is outside the pale of God and man, takes him on a journey to the south polar regions. This territory was unexplored in the time of the author, hence unknown.

Thus the Mariner, outside the limits of geographical knowledge, was alone. The incident that caused this was that he killed what love he had in his heart by shooting the albatross he had taught to trust him. The bird was betrayed and love violated. Now the ship plunged into the polar ice, but was driven north to hot tropical seas where the crewmen, two hundred of them, fell dead of thirst, one by one. Here the Ancient Mariner was alone surrounded by death on every side. He thirsted in his loneliness day and night. He mourned that there was water everywhere and not a drop to drink. He realized also that he was alone on a wide, wide sea where there was no living man but himself, and not even God seemed to be present.

He knew that he was the most absolute outcast that was ever born. At times he tried to pray but, possessing no love, no prayer came. His was a terrible fate brought about by an unnatural condition.

One night under the silent moon he watched the beautifully-colored water snakes and he loved them for their beauty and grace. In that selfsame moment he could pray. He prayed, felt comforted, and slept.

Things for the better began to happen fast. It rained from a great black cloud, his thirst was quenched, the albatross, which the crew had fastened to his neck in punishment, fell away, and the ship began to move swiftly homeward.

When he could love he could pray, and the very universe was glad to receive him back. He came back to God and humanity after his strange exile and became a devout advocate of the necessity for love in man's heart.

DOES YOUR LIGHT SHINE?

Has someone seen Christ in you today?
Christian, look to your heart, I pray;
The little things you have done and said,
Did they accord with the way you prayed?
Have your thoughts been pure and your words kind,
Have you sought to have the Saviour's mind?
The world with a criticizing view
Has watched, but did not see Christ in you?

Christian, look to your life, I pray;
There are aching hearts and blighted souls
Being lost in sin's destructive shoals,
And perhaps of Christ their only view
May be of what they see of Him in you.
Will they see enough to bring hope and cheer?
Look to your light! Does it shine out clear?

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

ALL ABOUT US IS an unrecognized host that is hungry-hearted for Jesus (John 4:35). Not being able to understand themselves they know not what they need. But Christian people with Christ's loving compassion (Matt. 9:36) should urge upon all the need of free salvation. The world's deep unrest, general unhappiness and fear of the future and the hereafter help men to cry out for heavenly peace and the joy of salvation. The so-called hardness of heart and indifference which Christian people alibi for not going after souls creates a great scarcity of laborers (Luke 10:2).

But Jesus knew the human heart (John 2:25). For this reason He sought people as well as having them seek Him for salvation. The uninvited sinful woman kneeled behind Jesus and washed His feet with her tears (Luke 7:36-50). Zacchaeus, the rich Publican, climbed into a tree to see Jesus (Luke 19:2-4). Zacchaeus found what his money could not give. None would regard the woman at the well of Sychar, a good gospel prospect. Though she was a Samaritan, and sinful, Jesus felt an urge to go through Samaria (John 4:4), and when she showed a desire for the Messiah, Jesus identified Himself (John 5:26). Her townspeople also wanted to see Jesus for salvation. People wanted to see Jesus because they needed Him. They had more than curiosity or selfish desires.

All that Cornelius needed was someone to tell Him of Christ (Acts 11:15; 10:43). Even the jailor who thrust Paul and Silas into prison could live no longer without peace of heart (Acts 16:30-32). Thus many a wicked heart is white harvest. People are ripe for God's saving grace in most unlikely places. The prodigal boy "came to himself" in the hog pen. The poor bleating sheep, alone in the wilds, surely must realize that he is lost. He is a good subject for rescue. Millions would gladly have peace and forgiveness in salvation if only they knew how to obtain it. Many see that the wages of sin is death, but they know not the way of escape. A Christian's good life helps, but without his direct testimony by word of mouth very few will ever be saved. It requires both "the life" and "the testimony."

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

by The Editor

Lesson for October 23, 1949

PUTTING OUR TRUST IN GOD

Lesson: Isaiah 12:2; 26:1-7; 30:1-2, 15-17.

IT HAS NOT BEEN so very long since we spent a lesson period on the idea of trust as set forth in the Psalms. We now turn to the same idea as set forth by the Prophet Isaiah.

In the Golden Text, found in Isaiah 12:2, we find the prophet saying, "I will trust, and not be afraid: for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and song." It would be well, in order to get the full significance of the above sentence, to turn at once to the Book of Isaiah and read the preceding chapter, the eleventh. This chapter deals with the prophecy concerning the restoration of Israel from bondage. In the prophecy which Isaiah here utters, he now finds much to bolster up his own trust and faith in God. So we find Isaiah really writing in this twelfth chapter, what might readily be considered a "Psalm or Trust."

Had the Israelites heeded the word of God's prophet and placed their trust in God, history surely would have been written with a far different ending for these chosen people. But the most potent comment which can be written on this thought can easily be contained in four words, "But they did not." Those same four words can far too often be written after events in the lives of our present day people.

We ought to think in practical terms when we study our Sunday School lessons. Of course it is always vital that we understand the events around which our lessons are built. But it is likewise important that we apply the theme or thought of the lesson to ourselves. So, for a moment, let us apply the thought conveyed to us in the lesson topic, "Putting Our Trust in God."

Let us begin with our prayers. When we pray, do we pray in faith that God will answer our prayers? Or do we just pray, thinking that maybe God will not be too busy to listen? James would seem to settle that matter when he says, in James 5:16, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." And John says, in John 9:31, "... if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." Note the important part of that sentence, "doeth his will." We must also have "trust in God" to be heard of Him.

Let's go a little further. There is a song which we sing that bears the message, "Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there." If we have faith enough to "tell God all about it," we should "trust" sufficiently to "leave it all in His hands."

Do we have problems? What is God's Word for if it is not the "Answer Book" to all of life's problems? If our Bible is to be used at all, it, first of all, should be a "trust" book to us. If we cannot put our trust in God, through His Holy Word, then we are most miserable creatures.

Take the lesson of trust in our study today. Appropriate it to your own life. And remember the words of Isaiah (26:3) "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee."

"Get The Business"

Bishop Wilbur E. Hammaker

Executive Vice-President of the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Church

THAT SLOGAN FITS the latest whiskey advertising exploration like a glove fits a hand. No matter what the cost, "Get the business."

Forget the proprieties and the promises. Put them away as outworn. "Get the business," no matter what usages of decency may be brushed aside.

Schenley's is setting the pace. They are, according to the New York TIMES and ADVERTISING AGE, negotiating with the broadcasting companies. Thirteen years ago, the Distilled Spirits Institute adopted a resolution declaring radio advertising to be "out of bounds" for the makers of distilled liquors. Schenley, although not a member of the Institute, has followed this policy.

But now comes Schenley, doing a "right about face." Reason: the need of more business. Decreasing sales has caused this large company to cast about desperately for new ways and means to jog the memory and imagination, to the end that more whiskey be consumed. A man's home is to be no longer his castle. He is to be cornered at his own fireside by the importunate pleaders for the use of more liquor. His children, too, must hear the high-pressure presentation of the values and virtues of Schenley's liquor.

It is an arrogant procedure. Senator Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado, Chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the Senate, recently wrote a vigorous letter to Honorable John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Department of the Treasury, concerning this new threat. As head of the Treasury Department, Mr. Snyder has general supervision of the Alcohol Tax Unit. The Senator asked for the exercise of authority by the Tax Unit to prevent this outrage, which he characterizes in different parts of his communication as "blind" and "selfish" and "vicious."

It is all three of these—also "stupid." "Whom the gods destroy, they first make mad," is an ancient saying. It is still true. Liquordom can go too far. Becoming mad (that is, insane) in its greed for gain, it can go beyond the long-suffering patience of the people. Far-seeing thinkers in the liquor group see this and sound forth intermittent warnings to their fellows. Their refrain is: "Do not tempt the American people to take drastic steps because of our excesses."

To advertise whiskey on the radio and by television involves jeopardy. Good advise is, "Better thing twice before such a dangerous step is taken." It will be the clear and complete repudiation of pledges and promises made by liquordom across the years, beginning with the days of "Repeal" agitation back in the late 20's and early 30's. Greed can over-reach itself.

A similar indirect caution to the broadcasting companies was voiced in a letter written by Senator Johnson to Honorable Paul Walker, Acting Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. In this communication, the Senator suggests that the Commission consider the total implications of the proposed whiskey radio advertisements and issue a warning. It would be as unseemly for the broadcasters to take the money as it would be for the distillers to give it. Common decency should restrain both crowds. If they are without self-imposed restraints, then it may be necessary for the people, through government, to take a hand. Distillers and broadcasters had better "stop, look, listen."

Misery is a heavy laden thing. Its water is wormwood; its very food is mixed with gall.

The right kind of man will keep right on growing in grace no matter what happens.

Wedding Announcement

LOWMAN-METCALFE. At the Brethren parsonage, at Linwood, Maryland, on August 20, 1949, occurred the marriage of Mr. Truman Kenneth Lowman and Miss Frances May Metcalfe. Both of the contracting parties are estimable young people, and the bride is a member of the Linwood Brethren church. The groom is a young farmer and will assist his father on the home farm near Linwood. The double ring ceremony was used. Both bride and bridesmaid carried corsages of roses and stephanotis, the bride's roses being red and the maid's yellow. Mr. Lowman had as his best man, Mr. John Means, while the bride had Miss Jean Cook as her attendant. A wedding trip took the happy young couple through the New England States and Canada, and they are now making their home in a furnished apartment in Westminster, where the bride is employed at the Carroll Gardens—a floral shop. The best wishes of their friends accompany these young people as they enter life's pathway together.

News From Our Churches

CERRO GORDO, ILLINOIS

Greetings from the Cerro Gordo Brethren Church!

We are very much alive and going, here at Cerro Gordo. We are sorry to have waited so long in preparing a report for all of you who are interested, but by this letter we will try and do so now.

It has been almost a year since we left the Roann, Indiana, pastorate. We enjoyed our two years and two months there very much. At the close of our pastorate there, we were able to see an average attendance of 124 in Sunday School for the last year, with a higher average for the last two quarters. A short time before our departure, the interior of the church was redecorated, including the lowering of the ceiling and the installation of fluorescent lights. This was a great asset to the looks and heating of the church. We feel that we spent a profitable time at Roann, regardless of some very trying times and circumstances. We left many dear friends whom we will long remember. May God bless and add to the work at Roann!

The Lord has richly blessed Mrs. Tinkel and myself this past year. We have had the privilege of doing a number of things. We thank Him for care and guidance at all times.

We have been here at Cerro Gordo for six months. We have greatly enjoyed our time here. The house was cleaned and very nicely redecorated. We are very thankful to the folk here who labored so diligently in this work. The house was completely furnished—ready to start living! There was a truck sent for our household goods and they certainly did a fine job of packing and moving. It has taken us some time to get our few things straightened around though, and we are just beginning to live again.

We certainly appreciate the work that former pastors have done, both for the upbuilding of the church and the grounds. Rev. Charles Johnson did a very excellent job of setting out berry plants—strawberry, red and black raspberries. Thanks a lot, Brother Johnson! May God bless you in your present work.

We find the folk here very responsive and willing to work. The cooperation has been fine and they have certainly shown appreciation for all we have done. The attendance has been good. The average is 66 in Sunday School as compared with 55 a year ago. The Sunday School offerings have had a small drop—$11.75 for this year's average as compared with $11.97 last year. We can take no credit whatever—we simply thank God and the people.

Prior to our coming, there had been some plans made concerning the redecorating of the church building, both inside and out. I am sure again Brother Johnson deserves a great big "Thank you" for getting this project under way. We now have a newly decorated church home. We certainly are very thankful for it. There is as yet much remaining to be done.

Immediately after our coming we took three of our girls and journeyed to Lanark for our Winter Camp. Both we and the girls enjoyed this camp. Then came the Summer Camp, with two girls and five boys journeying to our camp site. It was our desire that several go for this week.

We are making plans for the Central District Conference which is to be held here the first week of October. It has been a very pleasant and grateful time we have served for this group these first six months. They certainly have been loyal from the reception on. May God bless us as we work together. Pray for us that we may press forward for the kingdom of God.

Arthur J. Tinkel, pastor.

Laid to Rest

SENSENBAUGH. Daniel Thomas Sensenbaugh died at his home near St. James, Maryland, Monday morning, August 15, following a long illness, at the age of 74 years. He had been a life-long resident of Washington County and had been a member of the St. James Brethren Church for 53 years. He had served as Deacon for many years and as a teacher of the Men's Bible Class. Surviving are a daughter and a son: Mrs. Carson Metz, at home, and John W. Sensenbaugh, Hagerstown. Also surviving are the following brothers and sisters: John W., Hagerstown; B. Frank, Polo, Ill.; Mrs. Barbara Shifler, Frederick, and Mrs. G. C. Flook, Hagerstown. He was preceded in death by Rev. Charles Sensenbaugh (who was pastor at Ardmore, Indiana, at the time of his death, September 28, 1929), and Mrs. Dessie Sensenbaugh, who died at St. James November 30, 1944. Funeral service held at the St. James Brethren Church by the undersigned, assisted by Rev. J. Roland Reickard, a friend of the deceased for many years. Burial at Manor Cemetery.

Educational Offering
For Ashland College and Seminary
October 9, 1949

Do Not Confuse This Offering with the current Emergency Fund Drive

The Educational Day offering is the usual Annual offering for the College and Seminary for the "operating fund," which is used toward helping to pay the regular operating expenses of the school.

Unfortunately it is necessary for the College this year to ask for two offerings at the same time. However each is indispensable. The "Emergency Fund" Drive had to be made at this time if the College doors were to remain open for students this fall. Money is still very badly needed to help pay for that very large and unavoidable project. Do not delay or defer plans for the raising of a large amount to pay for your share of the $60,000 "Emergency Fund"!

At the same time, the regular Educational Day Offering to make possible the meeting of operational expenses of the College, is now due. As more Brethren students come to Ashland, the Church is called upon to contribute larger amounts to defray the extra expense of training such future leaders of our Denomination.

An Educational Day Offering at least equal to last year's is prayerfully requested of each and every church. Now is the time when we can move forward if we have the support of all our people. We shall be counting on this.

Please remember that there are two distinct offerings:

First, the "Emergency Fund" should be sent in at once. It is to be used exclusively to pay for the repairs to Founders and Allen Halls.

Second, the "Educational Day Offering" is your regular annual offering for the operation of Ashland College. It makes possible the meeting of ordinary expenses such as teacher salaries, fuel, light, and educational equipment. It also provides funds for religious emphasis on the campus. It is badly needed again this year because of crowded conditions and additional Brethren Seminary Students.

Huntington, Indiana. Brother C. Y. Gilmer is one of those fortunate pastors who get a fine "break" once in a while. We quote from the Huntington bulletin of September 25th, which gives the reason for this "fortunate" word: "The minister expresses his appreciation to this congregation for allowing Mrs. Gilmer and himself to accompany Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hendrix, former parishioners at Burlington, Indiana on a four weeks' trip to southwestern southeastern U. S., and perhaps to Mexico City, starting October 3rd." Brother Gilmer was in the editor's office one day last week and said that they were starting out early Monday morning and that he was billed to preach for Brother W. R. Deeter at Udell, Iowa, on Monday evening. The services at the Huntington church will be held as usual in the absence of the pastor, guest preachers and organizations of the church being responsible for the conduct of the services.

Rally Day was conducted on Sunday, October 2nd. The Men's Chorus of the Huntington Church sang at the 10:30 worship hour. This day was set apart as "Cash Day" for the parsonage fund.

Johnstown, Penna., Third. The Johnstown Third Rally Day is scheduled for Sunday, October 9th. The attendance goal is set at 225, with an offering goal of $150.00.

The Third Church Communion was held on Sunday evening, October 2nd. There was also a W. M. S. District Rally at the Third Church on October 6th, with sessions both afternoon and evening.

Pledges are being taken for the new carpet fund, which was recently purchased for the entire first floor at a cost of $2,400.00. Brother D. R. Wolfe, pastor, says that only about $1,000.00 remains to be paid to both carpet and building funds.

Meyersdale, Penna. "A Pattern for Christian Living," was the general subject of Brother W. S. Benshoff's pre-communion services, which were conducted on September 28-30, with communion held on Sunday, October 2nd.

Vinco, Penna. We received the following from Brother W. B. Brant, recently installed pastor at Vinco, dated September 27th: "Had a wonderful day Sunday (25th). We dedicated thirteen babies to the Lord. The church was full. We were all thrilled. Rally Day October 2nd and Communion on October 9th. Recently had three anointings. The people are really wonderful here."

Oakville, Indiana. Under the date of September 28th, Brother Henry Bates writes, "Thought you might be interested in knowing that the Furnace Fund reached approximately $800.00 by the end of the first day. We hope to finish it off this week." We venture the prediction that they did.

Johnstown, Penna., Second. Evangelistic meetings are in progress in the Johnstown Second Church with Brother Percy Miller, pastor of the Berlin, Penna., Church as evangelist. They began on Sunday, October 2nd, with Brother Leatherman in charge, and Brother Miller coming on the scene on Monday evening. Communion was held on Sunday evening, October 2nd, an appropriate way to begin the revival.

Brother Leatherman reports that the beginning Sunday evening services, after no services being held in the individual churches during the summer, showed a gratifying attendance of 43 and 51 at the first two services.

Washington, D. C. They are after their Cash Day offering of $1,250.00 again and as usual we predict that they will make it. They are holding this Building Fund offering in connection with Rally Day and they have a goal of 100% attendance in every class.

Bryan, Ohio. We note from Brother E. J. Black's bulletin that the evangelistic meetings of the Bryan church will be held beginning October 31st, and closing November 13th, with Brother E. L. Miller, pastor of our Maurertown, Virginia, Church, as evangelist.

Promotion Day and Annual Home Coming will be held jointly on October 9th, with a guest speaker.

MRS. C. A. STEWART PASSES AWAY

As we go to press word comes to us of the very sudden passing away of Mrs. C. A. Stewart, wife of Rev. C. A. Stewart, pastor of our New Paris, Indiana, Brethren Church. She passed away in her sleep in the early morning hours of Sunday, October 2nd. Funeral services conducted in the New Paris Church on Tuesday afternoon, October 4th, at 2:00 o'clock. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved husband.

READING THE WORD WITH PURPOSE

LAST WEEK WE THOUGHT about the "Inspired Word." We feel that it will not be amiss, therefore, to continue our thinking this week about what the "Word" can mean to us in our day by day reading.

In practically every organization within our brotherhood an emphasis is being placed on Bible Reading and Home Altars. Just what is being accomplished in these programs or goals depends largely on "how" we read our Bibles, and not "how much" we read at any one sitting, or in any one day; and, on whether we are reading merely to meet a goal, or whether we are reading to satisfy our soul's deep hunger, and to delve deeper into the Book of Books to increase our knowledge of its contents.

Remembering that our Bible is "God Breathed," and that it was given to us with one specific purpose—to show us the way of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ—to show us our obligation and opportunity to receive it—it is important that we have a genuine "purpose" in our reading. Therefore let us seek to acquaint ourselves with its entire content.

If we will accept the fact that, beginning at Genesis 1:1 and continuing on through Revelation 22:21, we have, in reality, just one book—a book of many scenes and many characters; filled with history and biography, poetry and drama, yet a book that is striking in its oneness and purpose—then our reading becomes more purposeful, our understanding of it simplified, and our knowledge more concrete and established. It is then that we read with at least a semblance of purpose and understanding.

How shall we read it, then? That is the question that seems to bother so many these days. Just when and where shall we begin, and how much of the book or chapter shall constitute a day's reading? Shall we read an entire chapter, whether it be long or short; or shall we read till we feel satisfied that we have the meaning in hand, be it one verse or ten chapters?

This question might be answered by asking another—just how much are you interested in the contents of the Bible, and just how well do you know what it contains?

All of us read secular literature, more or less, as the case may be. When we read this type of literature, do we have to ask anyone as to "where to begin?" Do we pick up a book and in a hap-hazard manner open it and begin to read the first thing that comes to our view? Not likely—especially if we have been struck by the title of the book. We begin where the author meant for us to begin—at Chapter One. We want, first of all, to become acquainted with the characters of the book and to learn to know them as we meet them further on in the book. Then we want to become acquainted with the purpose of the author in writing the book—to know why he wrote and to compare his thinking with ours on the subject upon which he is writing. We want to catch the theme of the writing so we can more easily follow the trend of the circumstances as they come into our view. If we read a book thus, we will have a knowledge of it when we have completed it. And, if it is interesting enough, well, we may go back and read many portions of it again and again, until at last it becomes a part of us and our thinking and acting.

What reason, therefore, is there that the Bible cannot be approached in the same manner, and with the same purpose? Fiction lives for a time and often dies in a few years; but God's Word endures forever. Jesus said, "Not one jot or tittle shall pass till all be fulfilled." It is a living "Book" which is full of vitality, helpful in its contents, furnishing the solution to every problem of life, and containing words of wisdom which will teach us all how to live and move and have our being in Him who came to die on the cross and to "give his life a ransom for many."

Consequently our reading should be purposeful—seeking, first of all to know it as "One Book," and then seeking to find in it those things which will fit into our personal problems and give us light on our daily pathway.

No one who consistently reads God's Word day by day, in the light of his own personal problems, can stray far from the pathway which God has set before his feet. The one thing we all ought to remember is that The Word of God was not left to us to be merely "glanced at" whenever fancy so directs, but to be used even as we would use a "Guide Book" or a well marked map on a long trip across the country, for we are truly on a long journey that leads to life eternal.

Think it over!

WE BOUGHT SOME BARGAINS

We Want You To Have The Benefit

Recently our Book Store bought some fine Bibles which we want to pass on to our readers at bargain prices. Some of these Bibles are marked down as much as 25% and they are all worth every cent of their original price. But since we bought these Bibles at a good discount, we want you to have the benefit of the saving.

These Bibles will make excellent Christmas presents and it is not too early to begin to think about that time, for it is only about two and one-half months away—seventy-eight days from the publishing date of this issue, to be specific.

We list a few of our choice selections herewith, and will, from time to time, list others. Since these are marked down as to price, we feel that we can give no further discount in these items. However, they will be mailed to you postpaid, if cash is sent with the order. Please order by number, and order early to avoid disappointment, for when these are gone we cannot duplicate the price. Make checks payable to The Brethren Publishing Company.

Preparing For The Revival

IN THE SEASON OF THE YEAR when churches are either just finishing the conducting of "Revival Services," or are just in the midst of such meetings, or are just preparing for the launching forth in such effort, the following short article is worth while for our reading.

A revival meeting is like unto a harvest which is made ready by the work of the farmer as he prepares the ground and sows the seed and cares for the growing crop until the time of reaping comes.

There are some careless farmers who expect a crop without proper preparation for it, and there are some careless pastors who expect accessions to the church without preparation for winning them. In each case disappointment follows. If there is to be an ingathering, there must first be a preparation.

What shall be done about it?

First of all—Remove the Hindrances. The farmer removes from his field the brush and stumps in order to make room for the grain. The pastor must try to clear his field of all jealousies and factions and hypocrisies. He must be in good repute with them who are without. Bad debts at the stores and other places on the part of the "members" will do more than one would believe toward hindering revival effort. It is folly to incur the expense of a meeting and then destroy its effectiveness by inconsistent living.

In some places the clearing of the land is the largest part of the work of farming, and in some places the most difficult task in winning souls is to get the members "right." But it must be done. One hypocrite in the church will furnish excuse to many sinners for remaining outside. It ought not be so, but sad, to say, it is so. Before the evangelist begins the meeting let there be a work done on the part of the members to have all the hindrances removed.

In the second place—There is a Work for the Lay Members to Do. It has been commonly thought that the success of a meeting depends upon the preacher. It depends more largely upon the other workers. There is a vast amount of work to do which the evangelist has no time to do. If he preaches as he should, he will need most of his strength in the public meetings and ought not to be expected to spend ALL of his time in making just one round of visitation, although some, and often much of this, is necessary, especially in this day of "personal evangelism." The evangelist is usually ready to do whatever is necessary for the good of the meeting, but the large part of the work of visitation should fall upon the pastor and his members.

It is within the realm of the lay members to invite their neighbors and friends to the meetings. They can be at the church early, to be a welcoming committee for strangers—for strangers do sometimes come into these evangelistic services, especially if they have recently moved into the community and are in search of a church home. These should never be neglected. For if they are, they may not come again.

The lay members can do personal work before the meetings have begun, in order that the pastor and evangelist may have a personal knowledge of the ones they are called upon to contact by this former visitation of the laity. Sometimes a word, spoken at just the right time to the one sitting next to you, may be the urge that will bring about the confession. However, it should never be made so evident that the one spoken to will be embarrassed. A tactful worker is a great asset to any evangelistic meeting.

Not everyone makes a tactful personal worker. Individuals should know their own abilities, and also their limitations. But the Holy Spirit will be present to lead and guide the worker if he is in the spirit of prayer for such leading.

Finally, this leads us to the place of prayer in such a meeting. PRAYER IS THE CHIEF FACTOR IN ANY REVIVAL EFFORT. If one expects to have a real season of revival and refreshing in such meetings, the spirit of fervent prayer must be manifest in the hearts and lives of the membership. Prayer should be "definite"—not a hap-hazard, generalized prayer, for something or anything that God will see fit to send. If you have someone who is a sinner, definitely on your heart, take that one by name to the Lord. Just remember God knows that person by name. And just because he does not respond at once, do not get discouraged in your prayers for him—but keep on praying continually that he may yet turn and accept the Savior you call your own. It is a proven fact that when once we pray for others, we will work for them also, and God will bless our efforts.

And then, too, the desire for souls should not cease when the last benediction of the special effort has been said. That desire should be kept uppermost in the mind, day after day, year in and year out. What other excuse has the church for existing?

- - - Love Feasts and Spirituality - - -

NEARLY, IF NOT ALL, of the churches are enjoying Love Feasts at this present season. The Love Feast is the one service of blessing. It follows, then, that the churches at this time should be in the best spiritual condition.

The Brethren, as a church, hold it as a part of their plea, that God's means are best to win His ends; that therefore, any deviation from the Commandments of the Word will be sure to result in corresponding loss to ourselves.

We see this truth abundantly exemplified in the physical world, where any neglect of the laws of health or violation

"Bones In De Chuch"

Last week Sambo, our minister, preached on "Bones in de Chuch," an' he sure stepped on lots of people's toes.

"Bones in de Chuch!" he says. "Well, what am dey all, boss?"

"Well, now," he says, "deys five diffunt kind o' bones in de average Chuch." Then he says as how they be some membahs what is like de "Wishbone." Deys always awish-in' foh better things, but dey neber gets down to work foh dem, and pray for dem. Dese here wishbone membahs ain't much account. Dey does altogeder too much talkin'. Dey is de gossipin' kind what usually make trubble foh eberybody. De Chuch doan need no "Jawbone" Christians.

Den dere is de "Funnybone" kind, lak dat crazy bone in yoah elbow, what am always agettin' deir feelings hurt; dey is too easy offended.

Den dey is de "Dry Bones"; some folks calls dem "Fossils." Dey is orthodox, many o' dem, but dead as a dodo and cold as de icehouse.

"Say, Uncle Ezery," interrupted Sambo, "ouah preacher ober at de oder culled Chuch say dat an icebox is O. K. foah dead chickens, but a might' poor place foah live ones."

"You're right, Sambo, too many o' us Chuch membahs be dead chickens, an' ef de live ones would warm things up, dey'd have soon to trow out de dead ones, cause dey'd be spoin worse. Well, as I was asayin', bout dese bones in de Chuch—De las' sort he mentioned wus de "Backbone" kind, and they be de spiritual support ob de Chuch, and he sez dey be all too few ob dem. It suh war a good sermon."

"But he doan mention my kind o' bone, boss."

"Yoah kind ob bone? What kind am dat?"

"Seems to me som ob us is like de 'Tailbone', always behind. We am behind in ouah donations; we am behind in ouah work fo' de Lord; in fact, we am perty slow all de way 'round when it comes to His work."

"Guess yo' am right at dat, Sambo. Let's pray dat dey will be many moah 'Backbone' Christians."

FROM THE FIRST BORN UNTIL NOW

J. E. Garrett

First brothers on earth were Abel and Cain—
They had a grievance, and Abel was slain.

God heard Abel's blood cry up from the ground,
And now we all suffer from that dreadful sound.

That cry has rung out from that day to this,
'Tis heard from a brother who would not resist.

That sound has been ringing for thousands of years,
And yet it is bringing its millions of tears.

Now what can be done in this hour of despair?
Seek God in forgiveness, while kneeling in prayer.

"Care" Offers Turkey Package

FOR HOLIDAY GIFTS ABROAD

To provide a festive Thanksgiving or Christmas treat for families in Europe, a special CARE Holiday Package containing a whole turkey and all the dinner trimmings has been announced by Paul Comly French, Executive Director of the non-profit agency.

Large enough to feed as many as 12 people, the turkeys in the package are the famous Beltsville Whites, bred through U. S. Department of Agriculture experiments for minimum bones and maximum meat. They average seven pounds, but furnish the meat equivalent of a normal 12 to 14 pound bird. Steam roasted in their own juices and canned under pressure, they can be served cold, just as they come in the CARE package, or heated and browned.

In addition to the turkey, the Holiday Package contains eight and a half pounds of other foods that have long been scarce in Europe. The other contents are: one pound each of plum pudding, Huyler's chocolates, orange marmalade, powdered sugar, raisins, rice, bacon and coffee (or a half-pound tea for Britain); a half-pound butter—and the crowning, practical touch of a can opener. Complete cost, including guaranteed delivery with a signed receipt returned to the donor, is $13.50.

Because of the overwhelming response to a similar CARE package last fall, 100,000 of the new Holiday Packages are being stockpiled abroad well in advance. They will be in CARE's European warehouses by October 30th, so that deliveries will be assured for the holidays. Orders marked for Thanksgiving gifts will be delivered in the early part of November. If not especially marked for this early delivery, the packages will be delivered during the latter part of November and December.

In order to avoid any disappointment to donors or their friends, CARE will accept no more than 100,000 orders for the Holiday Package, Mr. French stated. Donors whose orders cannot be delivered will have their money refunded promptly.

The countries to which the package may be sent are: Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, Germany (American, British, French Zones and all Berlin), Great Britain (England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland), Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and Poland. Delivery is guaranteed to designated friends and relatives, or to needy families and institutions—such as orphanages and hospitals—selected by CARE's member welfare agencies. Orders should be mailed to CARE headquarters, 20 Broad Street, New York, or to any CARE office in the country.

Besides the turkey package, CARE also has available for holiday gift delivery its regular $10 standard food, baby food, layette and textile packages, and its $5.50 Thrift Food parcel.

Work is what we do of ourselves, but fruit is what we do of God.

Bits of Brethren History

Information of Interest

By H. C. Funderburg

(These articles are printed just as they come from the pen of Brother Funderburg.)

"THE JOHN A. BOWMAN BRETHREN"

I AM NOT SURE as to the exact time, but I believe it was about 1858. I was present at Knob Creek Church when John A. Bowman was expelled from the church. He was charged with serving at law a member of the church who refused to pay a debt he owed an estate of which Bowman was executor, and who had to wind up the estate according to law.

Brother Bowman claimed that he was dealt with unjustly and went on preaching, and soon gathered around him a church of about one hundred and thirty members, holding Love Feasts, baptizing and ordaining a number to the ministry. He was quite influential during the rebellion. A Confederate soldier shot Bowman in his own stable, killing him instantly.

The Shepherd being smitten, many of the members desired to unite again with the mother church. This plea was embodied in a request to Annual Meeting. A committee of Elders was sent to east Tennessee to investigate the case. After spending several days among the members and those of the old church, the above committee of Elders decided that all the Bowman members could be received in full fellowship in the old church without rebaptism, if they would return by the first of the following October. No confession was to be required.

There were sub-committees sent to visit each and every member of the Bowman fraternity to inform them of their decision. I was on one of the committees. It had a salutary effect as nearly all the Bowman members united with the old church without rebaptism. The love of the cause of Christ permeated and influenced the whole transaction and many faces were bathed in tears and hearts leaped for joy.

(The above was written for Brother Funderburg by request by P. R. Wrightsman.)

There were two little sisters at the house, whom nobody could see without loving, for they were always so happy together. They had the same playthings, but never a quarrel sprang up between them—no cross words, no pouts, no slaps, no running away in a huff.

"You never seem to quarrel," I said to them one day. "How is it you are always happy together?"

They looked up and the elder answered: "Oh! you know, Addie lets me and I let Addie."

I thought a moment. "Ah! that is it," I said, "She lets you, and you let her; that's it."

Yes, that is it. The Bible says: "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God"; and His grace can enable even high-spirited boys and girls to do so. Don't forget the two lets.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"'Tis ye, 'tis your estranged faces,
That miss the many-splendored thing."

—Francis Thompson.

Our faces are estranged to the beauty and wonder of the familiar things all about us. On every side of every individual the world is teeming with splendor. But familiarity breeds indifference, hence they remain unnoticed and even unsuspected.

Take the housewife in her simple task of washing the dinner dishes. This task to her is often a drab drudgery. How seldom does she stop to consider or even notice the iridescent splendor of the soap bubble before her eyes. Beside their chameleon changes of color they involve principles of physics and chemistry that would keep a scientist entertained for days at a time. Yet to the average housewife they are only—soap bubbles. But their round and perfect lobes have always fascinated the curious. Bubbles, like worlds are round, and each is a universe within itself.

The song sparrow singing without the window delights the ear that listens. But the average person does not stop to consider the natural laws involved in bringing that song to the ear. There is an ecstasy in following that through, and for that purpose and ecstasy this is written. The delicate balance that tunes the ear to the note of the bird is next to a miracle. But our faces are estranged to the many-splendored things.

Another near miracle is the wondrous changes wrought by the simple occurrence of the rising of the sun. As its beams reach the waiting dewdrops on the grass blades and flowers, it changes them, like the alchemy of a magician, into pearls and rubies and diamonds. This involves the wondrous fairy tale of color and light, the full mystery of which has not been solved by our most devoted scientists. But our estranged faces and eyes regard it only casually and see no wonder in it. We have not received the thrills that are there.

This strange sunrise does far more. As it kisses the green leaves of waiting trees and plants it inspires them into action and turns their tiny wheels. These tiny wheels are chlorophyll cells that turn. With the aid of sunlight they produce all the fruit and grain on which man and beast subsist. Should we miss so significant a fact?

The air we breathe so thoughtlessly enriches and purifies the blood in a most miraculous way. It involves a process that Nature uses in a thousand ways in dealing with her children.

In fitting these and a myriad other things together we have a universe. It is to be regretted that our estranged faces miss so many things of splendor.

After all, it is not how much you have, but how you got it that counts.

New Organ Is Dedicated At the Mathias, W. Va. Brethren Church

Reported by the pastor, Guy F. Ludwig

THE MATHIAS BRETHREN are a very modest people, never desiring to parade their accomplishments or to impress the world with their achievements; yet we feel that we are obligated to inform the Brotherhood from time to time concerning the progress of the work of the kingdom.

The past year has been one of noteworthy activities. After the conclusion of a very successful meeting conducted by Rev. C. C. Grisso of Mexico, Indiana, the Brethren proceeded with a program of redecoration and modernization of the Church building.

These improvements on the physical plant include rock wool insulation, a complete new oil heating system, redecoration of the entire church auditorium, and the building of a furnace room.

On the last Sunday in July the climax of our improvement program was reached, when we dedicated the new Wurlitzer Electric Organ. The morning program consisted of special numbers by the choir, under the direction of Mrs. G. F. Ludwig; Organ selections by Mrs. Evelyn Grover of Moorefield, West Virginia, guest organist for the occasion; Dedication of Organ by the pastor with appropriate response from the congregation, followed by a very excellent sermon by the Rev. John F. Locke of Maurertown, Virginia, using as his subject, "God at the Organ."

A fellowship dinner was served on the Church grounds which was enjoyed by the congregation, friends, and visitors. After the period of visitation at the table the program was resumed in the Church auditorium.

After special numbers and congregational singing, a very impressive service of ordination was conducted by elders Ludwig and Locke at which time Mr. and Mrs. Turner Sandy were ordained as deacon and deaconess. The Church was also presented with a very beautiful pulpit Bible by the Senior Class of our Sunday school.

Also included in the year's program, which have likewise become an accomplished fact, came full participation by the pastor and young people in a very successful camp program at Camp Pinnacle which is located in the lovely Lost River Valley some nineteen miles from our church; the organization of a W. M. S. whose officers include Mrs. Vincent Moyers, President; Mrs. Turner Sandy, Secretary, and Mrs. Howard Tusing, Treasurer, also our fall revival and Communion service.

Our Revival started on Sunday night, September 11 under the leadership of Rev. John F. Locke and continued through the week, closing on Saturday night with the Communion service. This meeting was well attended from the start and the interest very gratifying. Brother Locke brought a series of very timely and spiritual messages. Baptismal services were held on Saturday afternoon at which time two new members were received into fellowship with the church, with prospects of more to follow in the immediate future.

The fellowship and cooperation of the pastor, Rev. Mason and Elder Mathias of the local Church of the Brethren, was much appreciated during the meeting, as well as excellent attendance and cooperation by the membership of that church. Another visiting pastor to occupy our pulpit during the year was Rev. Clarence Fairbanks of the Washington, D. C., church, who brought a message of inspiration during the month of July.

We are at this time looking forward to starting another meeting at our Church at Kinsey's Run on October 2 with Rev. Freeman Ankrum, pastor of the St. James, Maryland, church, conducting. Brother Ankrum is no stranger to this valley, having served in some five or six previous meetings here most acceptably.

So ends our year, which we feel has been one of success and blessings for which we humbly give thanks unto the Lord for all his mercies and goodness.

STRANGE PHILOSOPHY

H. A. Gossard

The strangest thoughts one can conceive
Are, that "I am alone;
That what I think I must believe;
That all I have I own."

May I inquire—if you don't care—
On what you base your thought?
Is it not true God's everywhere,
As we're divinely taught?

If what you think you must believe,
I pray you ponder this:
Don't be too sure thoughts can't deceive
And lead you far amiss.

If all you have you claim to own,
I ask from whom you bought?
If you asked bread and got a stone,
Is that the thing you sought?

I beg to say, "you're not alone";
That "thoughts have oft deceived";
That "nothing which you have you own";
God gave it . . . you received.

Spiritual Meditations

Rev. Dyoll Belote

GOD'S BESTOWALS

THE HUMAN HEART is always crying for "more" of the blessings which are the bestowals of Divine grace. The Bible tells us of some of these answers which the Divine gives to human cravings, such as these: "He giveth more grace." James 4:6; "He increaseth strength." Isaiah 40:29; "Mercy unto you, and peace, and love be multiplied." Jude 2. And in another verse promises us "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

The poet has taken this thought of the topic and given us this jewel in poetic setting: (The poet's name is unknown)

He Giveth More

He giveth more grace when the burdens grow greater,
He sendeth more strength when the labors increase;
To added affliction, He addeth His mercy,
To multiplied trials, His multiplied peace.

When we have exhausted our store of endurance,
When our strength has failed ere the day is half done,
When we reach the end of our hoarded resources—
Our Father's full giving is only begun.

His love has no limit, His grace has no measure;
His power no boundary known unto men;
For out of His infinite riches in Jesus
He giveth and giveth and giveth again.

"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out." Romans 11:33.

Brethren Youth

MIAMI VALLEY BRETHREN YOUTH ENTERTAINED
BY THE WILLIAMSTOWN, OHIO, CHURCH

The Williamstown, Ohio, Brethren Church was the proud host of the Miami Valley Brethren Youth Rally, on September 3rd. Representatives from seven Brethren Churches spent the afternoon in Recreation and a business meeting. This was followed by a "corn roast" with all the "trimmings," which was served on the rear lawn of the church by the young ladies of the church.

The main event of the evening was the presentation, by means of a colored film, of the missionary work in Puerto Rico, by Dale and Norma Roesch who were workers in this field for the past two years.

The Williamstown church is making some spiritual and physical improvements. A new oil furnace is being installed, and there is a general increase in interest and attendance.

Interesting Items

Brother Black reports the welcoming of a father and mother and three sons into the fellowship of the church by baptism.

Also in a note, later received by the editor, Brother Black says, "Had two baptisms lately, adding eleven new members, making a total received since I came to Bryan of fifty-nine."

Smithville, Ohio. Remember the Smithville revival in your prayers. It begins October 17th and closes October 30th. Brother E. J. Black is the evangelist. Brother "Bud" Hunter is the song leader.

Brother Vernon Grisso, Smithville pastor, says that they are now conducting three simultaneous meetings each Sunday evening, Juniors, Young people and Adults.

Stockton, Calif. We read the following in Brother Johnson's bulletin of September 25th: "On next Sunday the Building Committee will meet here at the church at 2:00 o'clock to discuss the matter of a new building." There is evidence of forward movement when such plans are necessary.

The Stockton Christian Endeavorers, who won the C. E. Rally banner last time, were headed for the C. E. Rally which was held at the East Side Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, September 25th, with a determination to win it again this time. Wonder if they did? Next report ought to tell us.

Gratis, Ohio. Brother W. S. Crick, Gratis pastor, says that the committees have been formulated for the Joint Homecoming and Rededication Day program, which will be held on Sunday, October 16th.

Under the caption, "Crew completes re-carpeting odds and ends," Brother Crick says, "Monday evening a 'crew' of non-union workers followed up the work of the floor-refinishers and carpet-layers in the auditorium. The remaining supports were set under the pews, one balcony stairway was carpeted (even with pads!) and some of the discarded green carpet was laid in the Sunday School rooms in the balcony, and the runner was relaid in the vestibule. Some of the workers did not get away till 11:00 P. M."

West Alexandria, Ohio. Brother H. R. Garland reports a baptismal service conducted on October 2nd, for those who recently made confession.

Communion will be observed in the West Alexandria church on Sunday evening, October 9th.

Loree, Indiana. The film "God is My Landlord" is to be viewed in the Loree church on Sunday evening, November 6th.

Southern District Sunday School Rally. The Annual Rally of the Southern District Sunday Schools will be held at our Peru Church on Sunday, October 30th. This is an all-day meeting with a basket dinner at the noon hour. Dean Russell Bolinger of North Manchester College will be the guest speaker.

Peru, Indiana. Brother J. Milton Bowman, recently installed pastor of the Peru Church, will begin an evangelistic service in the Peru church on Sunday, October 9th and closing on October 23rd. He will act as his own evangelist.

We like the slogan which the Peru Church has chosen. It goes like this: "The First Brethren Church—In the Heart of the City, with the Heart of the City at Heart."

Waterloo, Iowa. Rally Day was scheduled in the Waterloo church for Sunday, October 2nd. Rev Spencer Gentle of Ashland, Ohio, was the guest speaker at that service.

Milledgeville, Illinois. We note from Brother White's bulletin that they are combining Ashland College Day and Homecoming Day on Sunday, October 23rd. The music committee will have charge of the program. There will be a basket dinner at the noon hour. Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, Ashland College President, will be the morning speaker and there is a possibility that Gil Dodds will be the afternoon speaker.

New Lebanon, Ohio. We have the schedule of services for the New Lebanon Church, covering the next several weeks. We note some of the special services: October 2—Homecoming and Rally Day; basket dinner, with Brother C. C. Grisso as guest speaker. October 9—Pictures of Puerto Rico by Dale and Norma Roesch. October 30th—W. M. S. Public Service, with Mrs. Ruth Royer, Ohio District President, as guest speaker. November 6th—Communion. Saturday, November 12—Missionary Rally, sponsored by Sisterhoods, with Janet King as guest speaker. Sunday, November 13—Sisterhood Public Service with Janet King as speaker. Thursday, November 24—9:00 A. M., Thanksgiving service for the community.

Udell, Iowa. We note that Brother W. C. Berkshire, New Lebanon pastor, is to hold an evangelistic service for Brother W. R. Deeter during the Middle of October.

W. M. S. Fall Rally at North Georgetown, Ohio. The Northeastern Ohio W. M. S. Group will hold their Fall Rally at the North Georgetown Brethren Church on Thursday, October 13th.

Congratulations. To Wendell Smith, pressman in the printing plant of the Brethren Publishing Company, who was recently married to Miss Betty Foster.

Ashland, Ohio. Installation of the new Church and Sunday School officers, together with the committees for the new year, was conducted by Brother H. H. Rowsey at the morning worship service, on Sunday, October 2nd. At the evening hour the Fall Quarterly Communion was observed. While the attendance was not as large as usual, due largely to sickness among the members of the church, yet about one hundred and thirty partook of the sacred emblems and fellowshipped in the footwashing service and the supper of love.

The Youth participation in the Sunday evening services will be continued monthly during the coming months. In this monthly youth service the young people have entire charge of the program of the evening. Along with the opening worship program, usually a religious sound film is shown. Attendance at these services is very good at all times.

The work of enclosing one of the balcony Sunday School rooms as a sound-proof place where mothers of babies may take them, has been completed and the sound service is soon to be installed.

Louisville, Ohio. We note that Rally Day was held in the Louisville Sunday School and Church on Sunday, October 2nd.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

THE ENROLLMENT at Ashland College this fall has surpassed the expectations and estimates made earlier this year. When it became apparent early in the calendar year that a large number (110) students would graduate in June and August, the problem of replacing them led to an official estimate of 525 students for this year. Later this was raised to 550. The figures now released by Martha Holmes, college recorder shows that 564 students have enrolled in the day classes of the college. At the corresponding time last year, 591 had registered. Thus, while the national estimates showed a reduction of 6% in college enrollment this year, Ashland did not lose that many.

There are 77 people enrolled in the evening division. This is almost 50% above last year and is an encouraging sign that the evening division is meeting the needs of the Ashland-Mansfield community.

In the Seminary, a similar increase has been noted. In comparison with 11 in the Seminary last year, there are 15 this year.

Ashland won her second football game of the year by beating Ohio Northern University, a very good team, 12 to 0. Last week they met Cedarville but the score was not available at this writing.

The college band in which there are many Brethren young men and women has been doing a fine job at football games.

The a cappella choir under the direction of Dr. Louis E. Pete has begun rehearsals and tryouts. This very fine group which has appeared in more than a score of Brethren churches since the war is already planning its spring trip although the itinerary has not yet been set up.

In announcing his committees for the coming year, Lewis Smith of Elkhart Church, president of the student council said that Dana Hamel of Conemaugh, Pa. would head the council properties committee and that Bob Stoffer of North Georgetown, Ohio would supervise elections.

Young Men and Boys' Brotherhood

THE BERLIN, PENNA., BROTHERHOOD

On September 15th, twelve from our Brethren Brotherhood members journeyed to Cumberland, Maryland. We had charge of the evening program and organized a Brotherhood there with ten charter members. The names of the members are as follows: Wayne Rowlings, Jack Rowlings, Dick Parker, Harold Shriver, Johnny Cozad, Kenneth Shanholtz, Eddie Warner, David Baldwin, George Rowlings and Frank Coffman.

- They elected their officers as follows:
- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------|
| President | Harold Shriver |
| Vice President | Wayne Rowlings |
| Secretary | Kenneth Shanholtz |
| Treasurer | Dickie Parker |
| Advisor | William Baldwin |
| Assistant Advisor | Jack Williams |

We consider the above as fine a set-up as you will find anywhere. We feel that Cumberland is blessed in having such fine young men as the Advisor, William Baldwin, and the Assistant Advisor, Jack Williams .

Brethren, pray for this group. We have promised to give them any help we are able to give. Rev. Bruce Shanholtz will prove a real blessing to this group of Brotherhood Boys.

Any Brethren that are able to visit the Cumberland Brethren will receive a blessing in so doing. There is such a fine spirit manifested in this group.

THEY CAUGHT A VISION

Scripture: Acts 16:6-10; 26:19

For The Leader

THERE ARE TWO MAIN THINGS to consider this evening. First, how, when, and where do we receive the "vision" of service, and second, what is to be our reaction to that "vision?" The Christian world has been advanced through the efforts of people who have received "visions" of service. But, then on the other hand, people find it hard to tell when they have really been called to serve. Some may say they are willing to be servants of the Lord, but hesitate because the way isn't clear. Then others are slow to line up with the call of the Lord, and thus waste precious years, perhaps even a lifetime accomplishing nothing for the Lord. We will do well to heed His call and be obedient unto it.

DISCUSSION

1. RECOGNIZING THE "VISION." God does speak to people as plainly today as He did in the day of Paul. Paul, you know, received a vision in the night. A man was standing, speaking to him, saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." It was so plain and real that Paul knew it was the will of the Lord and he changed his plans and went to Macedonia. He was obedient unto the vision. As a result, Europe received the gospel story. Before that night, there was no vision, and after that night, there were no special signs. Only the night of the vision. But Paul acted. The point we want to make is that we must be alert to the definite callings of the Lord. It is our firm conviction that when God speaks to us, He does it in a way that there is no mistaking the call. Of course, it does not have to be in a "dream" at night—it can be in broad daylight, in the making of a new friend, a change of circumstances. Or it may be a blocked door, or an open door.

2. IN TUNE FOR A VISION. So many people will tell us that they feel God never speaks to them. They want to be used of Him, but it just seems He never tells them what to do. No, and never would Moses have become leader of Israel had he not turned aside to the burning bush. He gave heed to God, and God spoke to Him. Without doubt, Paul had been spending much time in prayer asking God to lead him in whatever path was best. God cannot speak to a heart that is filled with everything else. God cannot enter a heart that has no time for Him. We must have open, willing and yielded hearts for Him. Further, we must be alert for a sudden leading of God. All may be going along peacefully, and all of a sudden God speaks. If we are not alert, we'll miss it, and the opportunity is gone. We must, in this connection, recognize God's voice in the everyday incidents of life.

3. GOD ABIDES WITH YOU. Remember, if God speaks to you in a vision, He means business, and He means to go with you wherever He calls. Most always, a call to service involves a drastic change in plans, place of living, etc. But the world has heard the gospel by people who were not afraid to pull up stakes and go with God.

4. KNOWING FOR SURE. Most of us, at times, have wondered if when we thought we were in God's will, we actually were. In other words, can we know God's will for a certainty? That is a problem which has the experienced sympathy of every servant of God. The revelation of the will of God in any individual's life is a progressive thing. God does not show us the whole way at once. Yes, He may point in certain definite directions, but not all is revealed. Take Paul, for instance. God willed that Paul should be the carrier of the gospel to Europe. But God did not tell Paul that at Jerusalem. God showed Paul the way to make his missionary journey. He guided him to Troas and there Paul received the Macedonian call. Thus God calls us. Had Paul not gone on that missionary journey, had it looked dull and tame to him, he would not have been used of God to go to Europe. God does have a plan for our lives, and His plan is best. He does not dangle us on a string as a puppet, compelling us to conform to His will. But He is constantly giving us our choice to follow, or not to follow. He wants us to have the experience of learning to follow, and therewith to be content. Be patient. As long as you have the breath of life, God will use you, if you are willing.

5. "NOT DISOBEDIENT." Would you be willing to go anywhere, at any price, if you knew for sure it was in God's will? That is, to give up any job, any friends, and go for little or nothing, to a lonely outpost of civilization, or into a dangerous mission point! If you are, God has a great blessing in store for you. Too often, though, we are not willing to pay the price. Jesus said, "whosoever loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me." WE MUST BE OBEDIENT UNTO GOD REGARDLESS OF THE COST.

6. THE LORD NEEDS YOU. A lot of this discussion may sound like double talk because we go through the discussion, give the ideas, close our meeting and go about our work. The general impression appears to be that the people who hear and answer God's call are from other Societies: from ours, never. What we do here is apparently at once forgotten. Does it occur to you, that right here, now, in this Society, the Lord can speak? Yes, that He can speak and call forth into larger work for Him. Not one of us should brush this off as immaterial to us. We must give serious consideration to the fact that God could be calling us. Then let us listen, and heed, and answer. It gave Paul a lot of self-satisfaction to know that he had not been disobedient to the heavenly vision. What will the years show for us? God has a purpose in your life. God calls. Answer Him! and Go, as He leads!

QUESTIONS

1. What is the best way to seek God's will in our lives?
2. Must it be a special vision like Paul had?
3. How does God make it certain that He has called us—so that we can know for sure?

"BY GRACE YE ARE SAVED"

Eph. 2:8, 9

Are you resting in the Saviour?
Are you trusting in His blood?
Do you shun all human effort
As a ground for peace with God?
Is the Cross of Christ your glory?
Can you say, "For me He died?"
Is your only song and story
Jesus Christ, the Crucified?

Is the Rock your sure foundation
And is Christ your cornerstone?
Is He all your soul's salvation?
Do you rest on Him alone?
Can you sing the song of Heaven,
Of the Lamb that once was slain,
As a guilty one forgiven,
As a sinner "born again?"

Then if such is your condition,
If to Christ you now belong;
How exalted your position
And how glad should be your song.
He has found you—you have found Him.
Oh, then magnify His grace,
Till in Heaven you gather round Him
To behold His blessed face.

AN ALL-SUFFICIENT SAVIOUR

Scripture: Heb. 9:24-28

Hymns: "All That I Need"; "What a wonderful Saviour";
"Hallelujah! What a Saviour!"

Seed Thought Provokers:

OUR LORD made an all-sufficient atonement and eternal salvation (Heb. 10:5, 7, 10). It was a great sacrifice for Him to make (2 Cor. 8:9; Phil. 2:6-8). He was God incarnate (Isa. 9:6; John 1:14; 2 Cor. 5:19). He became our Kinsman Redeemer to take our place (Heb. 2:9, 14). He suffered extreme agony (Luke 22:44), and did not wish to cancel the plan of God for the redemption of the world (Matt. 26:54; Luke 18:31).

After His atoning death, His resurrection and ascension, He became our all-sufficient Mediator and faithful High Priest (Heb. 9:24; 10:12; Matt. 28:18; Phil. 2:9). He is in Heaven to give gifts to His children (Eph. 4:8). There He bears us on His loving heart and intercedes for us (Heb. 4:14-16). We are saved by His resurrected life (Rom. 5:10). His humanity is enthroned in glory (Heb. 2:14, 11), and He remembers His earthly experience (Heb. 2:17, 18). Through His suffering, being tempted, He was qualified to become our Mediator, Intercessor, and High Priest (Heb. 2:10; 5:8, 9). "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Come directly (1 Tim. 2:5). Consider Him (Heb. 3:1).

He is all-sufficient in His future coming and kingdom (Heb. 9:28; 10:37; John 14:3; Acts 1:11; 2 Thess. 1:7, 10; Jude 14; Rev. 1:7). Then those who sleep in Jesus shall be raised incorruptible (1 Thess. 4:15, 16; 1 Cor. 15:19, 20, 23, 25, 26, 54, 57). All creation will be renewed (Rev. 21:5; Rom. 8:21). We shall have a new abode (Rev. 21:2-4; Micah 4:3; Isa. 11:6, 9; Rev. 11:15; 22:20).

United petitions and praise.

COMMENTS

On The Sunday School Lesson

by The Editor

Lesson for October 30, 1949

THE PROPHETS PREACH SOCIAL RIGHTEOUSNESS

Lesson: Isaiah 5:1-12

THERE IS A VAST DIFFERENCE between "a social gospel" and "social righteousness." We say this immediately lest some one may conceive the idea that we are making a "brief" for a "social gospel." Let's note the difference.

By a "social gospel" is usually meant that the main emphasis is to be laid upon a premise that man can, by his own efforts in society, by means of reforms, good neighborly deeds, both to individuals and among nations, and by kindred programs, make the world better and better until finally everything will be carried on in what might be called, to them at least, "the Christlike spirit." Thus will the ultimate will of God be accomplished.

Now let us contrast the idea of "social righteousness." It might well be expressed in the words of Jesus, when He quoted the great commandments to the scribe, as recorded in Mark 12:28-33. He speaks thus, "And the second is like, namely, this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." But please note that Jesus gave as the "first" and "greater" commandment, that which deals with our relation to God, implying, yes, even demanding, that our relations to the Father must be complied with before we are in any position to put the latter command into effect. In other words, mere compliance with the "love your neighbor" attitude is not sufficient grounds to plead our own righteousness before God.

Therefore, we must first of all make ourselves right with God, through our Savior Jesus Christ, before we can expect to be able to receive his commendation for "deeds done in the body." Paul's statement in Phil. 3:9, where he says, "And be found in him (Christ), not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith."

In other words, it is not what we are or do in ourselves or our own strength, but what we are and do in the righteousness of Christ which we have "put on." In such an attitude we find the work which we are to do through "social righteousness."

In this attitude toward God and man is found the cause of the preaching of the prophet Isaiah, as set forth in our lesson text. These Israelites were not practicing "social righteousness." Note the words of condemnation which come from the lips of the prophet—"Woe to them . . ." (Verses 8 and 11) and the final estimate of those concerning whom he speaks—"but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operation of his hands" (Verse 12).

Then go back in the lesson and note what we find about God's attitude—"I will lay it waste . . . I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it" (Verse 6). Study the entire lesson text carefully.

God expects us to deal righteously with men, but he also expects and has the right to expect us first of all to deal righteously with Him.

Don't

W. G. Wolfe

When I leave this mortal shore
And walk upon the earth no more;
Don't weep, don't sigh, don't even sob—
I may have struck another job.

Don't go and buy a large bouquet
(For which it might be hard to pay);
Don't mope around and feel all blue—
I may be better off than you.

Don't tell the folks I was a saint,
Or anything you know I ain't.
If you have salve like that to spread—
Gee, hand it out before I'm dead.

If you have roses, bless your soul,
Just pin one in my button hole
While I'm alive and well, today—
Don't wait until I've passed away.

THE BURDENS

If all the days were fair
And every dream came true,
There'd be no need for prayer
Or faith to guide us through.

If trouble never came
To test us or affright,
Courage would be a name,
Success, a cheap delight.

If every day brought mirth
To mortals as they plod,
If Heaven could be on earth—
There'd be no need of God.

'Tis when the storms assail
And when we're sorely tried,
When all resources fail
Then God is at our side.

Through darkness and through pain,
When other aid has flown
And all our strength seems vain,
He makes His presence known.

And so from hurts that grieve
From anguish and despair,
Come courage to achieve
And faith to conquer care.

We rise to greater heights
Beneath the lash and rod,
Those troubled days and nights
Nearer draw us to God.

—Edgar A. Guest.

Tops

I spun a top and watched it go,
Through all the motions fast and slow,
That men go through with hopes and fears,
While passing through this vale of tears.

At first it hovered to the ground,
While gyroscoping 'round and 'round,
Then straightened up and hummed with power
Like mankind in a busy hour.

Then hovered slowly to the ground,
And staggered as it circled 'round,
That once a man I'm twice a boy.
Reminding me with little joy,

At last it fell, a helpless thing,
And hurried madly from the ring.
Its course was run, but who can say,
That top won't spin again some day.—Eli Wright.

News From Our Churches

MATTESON, MICHIGAN, MISSION

As the curtain falls we close our first year's work here at Matteson. One year ago, October 3, 1948, we began holding evangelistic services with Rev. C. E. Johnson as our evangelist. It is with somewhat mixed emotions that we look back over the year.

Our "beachhead" still holds! We are small in number. In fact it has been a constant effort to get the adults out. Although it is hard to believe it possible in the United States, we here at Matteson are fighting for principle as well as numbers. Once the principle of the church is established, we can look forward to some encouraging results.

During the past year we had a total of 1,125 persons in Sunday School or an average of twenty-four. The total offering was $182.33. For church, the combined total of all present at all meetings was 1,481, with total offerings from all sources of $506.73. Our highest attendance at any one meeting was sixty-five, and the lowest was six.

Our work has been carried on by faith, volunteers, and the help of mission boards. We are still looking to God to send in co-workers, and praying that God will deeply convict some pastor to come to this neglected mission field.

During May, Rev. S. E. Christiansen labored with us in the Lord's vineyard. While he was with us we completed a survey of this small field we are trying to serve. We find here some over six hundred folks with only about 5% attending Protestant churches. I must add that if ever a community needed the preaching and teaching of God's Holy Word, it is here. If ever a people needed "heart medicine" as found in Jesus Christ, it is here. Many who have come here to visit and assist in the work will testify to the same.

Another thing I notice is that experience opens new doors! We had only hoped to work a little section, and we are yet confining our efforts to the Matteson community. How shameful! How narrow minded are we? Where does the mission field begin and where does it leave off? It begins in your heart; the world is the field and it ends only when the WORLD is evangelized.

In closing this partial report I wish to extend our heartfelt appreciation and sincere thanks to God and the host of loved ones who have labored with us during the past year.

Yours in Christ,
Fred Pippen.

HARVESTHOME AT JONES MILLS

Announcement was made that Harvest Home Day would be observed at Jones Mills, Sunday, September 25th. We go to Mt. Pleasant and have our morning service from 9:30 A. M. to 10:30. This gives us one-half hour to greet the Brethren at the close of the service and to drive to the congregation at Jones Mills, which is around 13 miles away, and be present for the morning service which is from 11:00 A. M. to 12.

When we entered the church last Sunday morning at Jones Mills, we could see the arrangement of fruit, vegetables, flour, two roosters well tied, with just their heads out of the sack, and many other gifts which had been brought in. At the time of the announcements, the moderator on behalf of the congregation presented the gifts to the pastor and his family.

We were very glad to receive these gifts as we came here in the middle of July and we could not have a garden (the first time in 20 years), and as yet we are living in three rooms until we get a 5 room house. We will have one as soon as the man who is building himself a new house moves into it. We hope that this will be soon for it is rather cool in the summer house which is our kitchen, dining and living room, all in one. And while we have been here we have been trying to get some furniture together in place of that which we lost in the fire at Lost Creek in January. Pray for the work here. We covet your prayers.

Elmer M. Keck, pastor.

WITH THE LAYMEN

ASHLAND LAYMEN HOLD ANNUAL "CORN ROAST"

THE ANNUAL "corn roast" of the Ashland Laymen's Organization was held this year on the Park Street Church lawn, on Tuesday evening, September 26th. The large out-door furnace was used for the roasting of the accompanying "weiners," while the corn was "boiled" and the coffee made in the church kitchen. A little late for the corn at its best, yet sufficient "good corn" was obtained by the committee in charge to satisfy the appetites of these hungry men.

For many years this affair has been held in the gardens of Dr. R. R. Teeter on Edgehill Avenue, but this year it was moved to the church lawn.

About thirty-five men were present, including a number of the college students, who are always made to feel welcome at these "Corn Roasts."

No business was transacted at this meeting. However, the fellowship was of the finest order.

Meetings will be conducted monthly through the coming winter and spring, and appropriate programs are being arranged by the program committee.

Our love for God is to find its expression in our love for our fellow men.

Laid to Rest

YARIAN. Mrs. Bertha Tombaugh Yarian, wife of David Yarian of Roann, Indiana, passed away at Dukes Memorial Hospital, Peru, Indiana, August 25, 1949. Services were conducted at the Grandstaff Funeral Home in Roann, by the undersigned.

Until Next Conference - 1950

To Support A Much Needed

Brethren Bible Training School

WHOSE PROJECT IS IT?

1. Sunday School class.
5. All Brethren everywhere.
4. Local Youth groups.
2. Christian Endeavor.
3. District Youth groups.

FACTS

South America needs a Brethren Bible Training School in which to train our own workers. At present we do not have such a school and it is necessary to send our students to other seminaries. It is hoped by Dr. Yoder and other leaders in Argentina that soon we may be able to have a school of our own.

At our Brethren Youth business meeting held at General Conference it was decided to start a project this year to help support such a school when it is started. Our goal of $999.99 will aid greatly the establishment of such a school. We plan to hold the money in trust until the work is begun.

AMOR is the Spanish name for LOVE. Out of AMOR for our South American Mission, Brethren Youth voted to sponsor this project.

AMOR therefore is the official name.

BRETHREN YOUTH OBJECTIVES 1949-1950

September, October, November. READ BIBLE AND PRAY DAILY.

December, January, February. TITHE INCOME SINCERELY.

March, April, May.

SERVE CHURCH LOYALLY.

June, July, August.

WITNESS FOR CHRIST EARNESTLY.

HOW TO START THE FIRST QUARTER OBJECTIVE

1. In your own youth group vote upon a definite date to start.
2. Try to enlist every member if possible; if you don't have an evening youth group work it through your S. S.
3. Decide in your group what shall be read and how much each day, your pastor will help you.
4. Plan to follow the Worldwide Bible Reading Passages for 1949. (These will be printed here next month.)

HOW TO KEEP GOING

1. Have a weekly report in your youth group on each individual's reading. (This could be done in a Sunday School class.)
2. Plan a definite effort to "keep them reading." Use cards or the telephone.
3. Sponsor a Bible reading program, perhaps for a public service in church some time.
4. Place an exhibit about the Bible in your church—gather old Bibles from members, new translations, maps, and Bible reading reference books. Many of these would be available in your own congregation.

The Brethren Evangelist

OD Reserved A Part

Life can only become a whole, a total experience as we allow God to make our own lives whole and to fill them with meaning. We discover life's deepest meaning; we find God's will for our lives; we cease to drift; we find fellowship with God only by surrendering to God who has given us life. God has not only created us, but he has personally revealed himself in love to us in Jesus Christ. This is the deepest truth of the New Testament.

We live in a revolutionary time. The call is for a giving of ourselves far beyond the path of duty. The imperative of our time is that we dare not retrench on any field where our witness is being felt, nor can we be satisfied by merely "holding our own." We must advance!

A proper observance of the law of the "tithe" would bountifully finance a world-wide program for Christ. It would remove distrust, inspire confidence in and admiration for the church of the living God. If proportionate giving were really practiced by Christians, every part of the earth could be amply supplied with Bibles, missionaries, educational institutions, hospitals, asylums, nurses and other things required to give expression to God's wonderful love for lost world.

But, the work of the church is being sustained by only a fraction of those who have given it their pledge of allegiance; even-so, many who do support the work of the church average a pitifully small fraction of their income. Statistics tell us that two-thirds of our people are not "givers of record." We must all discover that our church and its world mission is the greatest thing to which we can possibly give ourselves.

The tithe of the annual income of the professed Christians of America exceeds a billion dollars. Such an amount would send people everywhere preaching, teaching, and healing, making the earth resonant with the musical works and doctrines of the sinless Son of God.

All earthly investments are subject to changing conditions and hazards, hence unstable and insecure. Heaven is the only saving bank in which earnings can be deposited that is solvent, secure and dependable, as there is no defaulting or failure there.

God's challenge—"Prove me now herewith," . . ., followed by his positive statement—"I will pour you out a blessing" . . .; God's word could not stand inviolate with this promise unredeemed.

The Christian cannot escape the responsibility he has in sharing in the world mission of the church.

Field Secretary

Travels

Nearly two weeks were required after conference to wade through the minutes of the missionary sessions, with the letters and business attendant thereto.

After this a few days vacation was declared. We landed at the old home church at Tiosa, Indiana, and solemnized the double ring ceremony for a niece, Dorcas Riddle, the older daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Charles E. Riddle, and Fredrick Van Duyne of Rochester, Indiana. The pastor, Reverend G. L. Maus, assisted in the ceremony.

The day following we travelled to Flora and the Brethren Home for some business and friendly calls. The evening of the same day, it was a distinct pleasure to attend the Northern Indiana Laymen's meeting at North Liberty.

After a business call in Plymouth Sept. 13th, we finally declared that the vacation could now begin at 11:00 A. M. The next two days and a half were spent roaming about in Michigan.

After Friday in the office, the secretary went back to Indiana to share in the rededicatory services at the Tiosa Brethren Church where I was baptized, called and ordained to the ministry.

This was an eventful day for this church. Perhaps it was the greatest since the original dedication in 1883, with 17 charter members. In the remodelling program—an oil-heater was installed, two Sunday School rooms, choir platform moved, new carpets, new pews with all new pulpit furniture, lights and redecorated walls.

During the afternoon service a most unusual history of the church was presented by Mrs. Oscar Scott. She mentioned that Mr. Jacob Miller was the builder of the original church and furnished a great amount of the material. (While in California last spring, we called in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Milo Wolfe, of Lathrop. This, however, was not known until it was revealed in the conversation.)

The committee with the pastor had a fine program arranged. A dinner at noon was served which could hardly be surpassed. (One item noted was 20 platters of fried chicken.) The three preachers had plenty of help.

The Reverend & Mrs. S. M. Whetstone of Dayton were present, he being the main speaker of the day. This was the place of his beginning as a pastor.

The church was re-dedicated by the Secretary, free of debt. The congregation was very happy with their accomplishments. The speaker stressed the greater responsibility that now confronts them.

The Firestone Brethren Church at Akron launches out anew by assuming the loan by the Missionary Board on a land contract plan with a $500 down payment. A trip to their church Sept. 23 completed the transaction.

The final word is that the Wheeler building in Kentucky is nearing completion. Plastering, plumbing and heating are yet to be done. Like most buildings these days, it is costing more than was first calculated. There has been a goodly number of gifts for this building but most of them were small. The Wheeler Fund is exhausted now. Your immediate help will be appreciated.

STATION WAGON MOVED

After many months of waiting for a permit to ship the Plymouth Station Wagon, purchased by the Laymen's organization as a missionary project for the Bylers in Argentina, the Board gave permission to move it from the Neptune Forwarding Company in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Wilson of Stockton, New Jersey, are now sheltering the car and a bicycle for Superintendent Zeche. The Reverend J. J. Margush, pastor at Sergeantsville and Calvary, with a garageman friend, went to the city and delivered them to Stockton.

Every clue, plan and suggestion to secure a permit from this position as well as in Argentina has failed. Now—let that man who thinks he has a solution, that will secure a permit, please come forth. We welcome your suggestions. The service of the above named people are surely appreciated.

Missions Re-Examined

By Dr. Louis G. Locke

Occasionally the necessity arises for people to re-examine even the most familiar concepts, just as it is necessary for governments to make periodic reviews of their foreign policies, or for corporations to evaluate their current sales campaigns before embarking upon plans for new promotion and expansion. Sometimes the very familiarity of a term blinds us to its hidden potentialities because we know it so well that by force of long habit our thought falls automatically into certain well-worn forms and patterns. Thus new ideas, approaches, and techniques are often choked off by the heavy weight of the thought-forms of the past.

One might be so bold as to venture that this is true of much of our thinking about Missions. All Brethren who have grown up in our denomination are quite familiar with our programs in South America, Africa, Kentucky, and with the long-established practice of The Missionary Board in assisting the foundation of new Churches in the United States. Now all of these works are meritorious and admirable, and I do not speak to their disparagement. The question I should like to raise is whether or not our thinking is circumscribed and limited by our familiarity with these fine projects. When a member of our Church thinks about Missions, is he not so likely to think about these specific missionary endeavors that he overlooks other possibilities with tremendous potentialities?

From time to time we need to take inventory not only of what we are accomplishing in missionary work—as indeed we do—but also there is an even greater need to weigh this solid achievement against what we might possibly accomplish if we would try. When we think of politics, business, or international relations, we are all well aware of the fact that the world in which we now live is a different world from the one we knew as recently as twenty years ago. For one thing, this is preeminently an age of advertising and propaganda. (Of course the term “propaganda” has acquired a somewhat disreputable connotation, but we need to recall its origin in the phrase, congregatio de propaganda fide, or “congregation for propagating the faith.”) Why cannot the whole membership of the Brethren Church be turned into one large congregation for propagating the faith, i. e., the whole Gospel? And why shouldn't The Missionary Board regard itself as the Board of Directors serving to master-mind a great propaganda campaign of evangelizing, or carrying the Gospel to the unsaved by every means of communication?

We live in a terribly confused, desperate, despairing world, yet a world of many marvellous inventions which facilitate the communication of ideas as never before in history. We might as well recognize the fact (though our coins declare otherwise) that we live in a predominantly atheistic, materialistic, and secular civilization. And when we have recognized this fact, we need to orient our missionary efforts accordingly. Yet our missionary thinking, I suggest, is nineteenth century. It is understandable that it should be, for that was the greatest missionary century of modern times. Thus our missionary thinking tends to follow nineteenth-century forms, now long outmoded. In the last century, America and the other nations of the Western World were much more homogeneously Christian than at present, so it was perfectly natural for missionary activity to be directed toward some far-off, heathen land, darkest Africa or the South Sea Islands for example. Now I do not mean to imply that such works should be curtailed in the least. But I do believe that if these activities are to be greatly expanded, it is imperative that we adopt contemporary techniques in order to Christianize our own environment. Today we find ourselves almost in the position of the early Christians who lived in a pagan Roman Empire. We need to leaven this lump before we can hope to cope effectively with Asiatic paganism. But unlike the Christians of the Roman Empire, we have marvellous resources and techniques at hand, if we care to use them.

Who can honestly say that we have begun to use twentieth-century methods in our missionary work? To be specific, what are the Brethren doing with the wonderful Christian potentiality of radio? It is hard to find people to go as missionaries to India and Africa—we habitually lament this fact—but has there been any concerted, large-scale attempt to reach white American pagans by this easy means so readily available and so mightily effective? We all know of the success of The Lutheran Hour; why is there not a Brethren Hour? Or if we cannot afford national hook-ups just now, why can we not get some work started that could grow into the great networks a little later? We have capable pulpit orators and the Brethren have always supported missionary enterprises with the necessary funds.

Evangelizing Chinese In North America

How can fifty thousand Chinese in North America be evangelized? Interest in this question brought eighteen Chinese Christian students from various denominational and independent groups to Des Plaines, Ill., July 2 and 4, for the first conference of its kind to be held in the United States. They came from colleges, seminaries, and Bible schools in five states—California, Colorado, Illinois, Minnesota, Pennsylvania; two were recently from Hawaii and China.

What opportunities exist on this side of the Pacific to preach the Gospel to Chinese? Will American-born Chinese students accept the challenge and prepare to minister to their own people? Sherman Fung and Jacob Wong wanted answers to these questions. Fung, an American-born Chinese with a degree from the University of California and doing graduate work at Wheaton College, had collaborated with Wong, a Presbyterian seminary student from Dubuque, Iowa, in preparing survey questionnaires. Forty-two churches in nine principal Chinese population areas in the States and Canada were queried. Missionary representatives from the China Inland Mission, the Evangelical Alliance, and the Worldwide Evangelization Crusade participated in the study of the Fung-Wong survey results.

From nineteen replies, which Fung maintains is a good response for the first attempt at a survey to be completed later, thirteen are from organized Chinese churches and six from Caucasian churches maintaining work among Chinese. Seventeen are affiliated with the major denominations that brought them into existence. Two churches are independent. Average active membership is seventy-nine, with average church attendance of sixty-three. One-third of the groups are engaged in building programs.

The survey indicates that there are at least sixty Chinese Christian churches and missions in North America. Fung and Wong have reasons to believe the actual number is nearer one hundred.

All groups have active Sunday Schools. The Sunday School was named the biggest factor in drawing Chinese into the churches. Seventeen use denominational Sunday School literature; two use Scripture Press material.

"House to house" is the mode of evangelism with practically no evangelistic campaigns. Street meetings and tract distribution are almost unknown. Fung and Wong interpret the reports to indicate that most Chinese churches in this country are traditionally conservative and evangelical and wish to continue in that trend.

The majority are striving to be self-supporting churches. All indicate the need for additional trained pastors, assistants, and lay-workers who can speak Cantonese and English, and who understand Chinese life in America. Workers speaking Mandarin could evangelize among new students coming from China. The number one immediate need was instruction classes for new converts.

The Pacific Coast area has roughly forty-seven thousand, or the bulk of the Chinese population (these figures may need revision on the basis of Government statistics), according to the survey. San Francisco leads with between twenty thousand and twenty-three thousand within the city limits. Los Angeles totals around eight thousand. The East, Midwest, and Canadian centers show around seven thousand in smaller groupings.

Impressed and showing intense interest in evangelizing their own race in North America, the student group appointed a steering committee of six with Sherman Fung chairman, to set a late fall date for another conference. This time a larger representation is expected. And with this key committee working on ways and means, the group is determined to find God's plan to bring the Gospel to the yet unevangelized Chinese on this continent.—S. S. Times.

THE FRONT LINE IN THE BATTLE OF THE CENTURY

The American nation is today marked by a great hope, shadowed by a great fear. The hope is that we may be able to keep our promise of what a free and just life in the modern world might be; the fear is that we may become so bogged down by our own complacency, our self-righteousness, and our moral confusion that the promise cannot be kept. The tragedy of an America in which we have magnificent resources and opportunities but in which the whole enterprise is undermined by inner human failure, is a tragedy of almost inconceivable proportions. The problem of our time is the problem of whether we shall be able to develop resources before it is too late. This is a problem for our youth more than for anyone else, because it is they who might best be caught by a great and flaming faith that would change both them and their world. I see no way in which this faith can become a fact except by a recovery of basic Christianity. Anyone who gives his nights and days to the spiritual undergirding of American youth is struggling on the front line in the battle of the century.—Methodist Laymen.

CAMERON, W. VA PASTORATE

Pastor Arthur R. Baer writes the missionary office that work has started on their new pews. This delay has already been many months and they must yet wait until near Christmas. New pews are planned for the remodeled church at Quiet Dell as well as for the new church at Cameron. A special series of meetings will begin October 17th with Reverend W. S. Crick of Gratis, Ohio, in charge at Quiet Dell. Special meetings are also planned to follow the dedication at Cameron. This event will be determined by the delivery of the pews.

Home Missions

by J. Garber Drushal

Again it is my privilege to set before you some of the facts concerning the home mission program of your Missionary Board. There is nothing subtle in this report. It is clear that you as the supporters of the church program have a right to know what your Board is doing. It is clear that once you know, you can support the program, pray for it, and counsel in its improvement wholeheartedly.

As the Thanksgiving season approaches, you will be reminded by your pastor of the offerings which are connected with that season. The Missionary Board is the steward of these offerings, and therefore comes to you again to invite your participation in the expansion of the church.

Funds contributed at Thanksgiving time go chiefly to three different channels: (1) To the support of the Board office; (2) specified gifts to special projects; and (3) to the support of local churches.

The first item is the smallest. The salary of the office secretary and the executive secretary, the publicity, travel expenses, and the usual items for operating an office fall in this category. Naturally half of this expense comes from the Easter offering, and half from the Thanksgiving offering.

Under item two, specified gifts, come offerings marked for special fields and types of work such as Kentucky buildings, other special projects, money which can be spent only as specified. These are always significant contributions making the work of the church grow and prosper.

Under item three, support of churches, goes by far the largest percentage, as a rule. Local churches received help from your Board both in bolstering weak congregations and in the church expansion program. It is interesting to note some facts in this connection.

Ten years ago the denomination as a whole, through your offerings, contributed to the support of eight local churches. The figure rose to nine in 1943, dropped to seven in 1945, and now in 1949 has jumped to fourteen. There has been an increase of four in 1949 over 1948. TWICE AS MANY CHURCHES RECEIVE SUPPORT FROM THE DENOMINATION THIS YEAR AS IN EITHER 1941 OR 1945.

Looking at these figures another way, you will discover that almost twenty percent of the organized congregations listed in the 1947-48 annual received support from the denomination through your Board.

It should be made clear that no one of these churches is permanently on the list of those receiving support. The policy for a number of years has been that when a church grows to where it can support itself, or the project at hand is completed, the support is withdrawn. Often it is returned by the church and used elsewhere to build or bolster another congregation. The Board has helped different congregations with their problems, and stands ready to serve wherever possible.

In terms of monthly budget, you may enquire, what does this cost the denomination?

Not including foreign missions—

Not including specified gifts and special projects—

Not including Board office expenses—

The monthly budget for these home mission projects is $1,000.00.

The total Thanksgiving offering must be twelve times this monthly budget, plus items one and

The Jew And His Bible

by Harold Weisberg

The Jews have not been called the "people of the Book," without reason. The Torah* (a word which corresponds roughly to Scripture) is viewed by Jews as the teaching of God to man, presenting him with the divine plan for the noblest and finest ways of living.

A simple prayer, recited daily by religious Jews for centuries, gives a clear insight into this attitude. "O Father, merciful Father, ever compassionate, have mercy upon us. O put it into our hearts to understand and to discern, to mark, learn and teach, to heed, to fulfill in love, all the words of instruction in thy Torah. Enlighten our eyes in the Torah, and let our hearts cleave to thy commandments, and unify our hearts to love and reverence thy name . . ." To the Jew, the Torah is the repository of the divine commandments concerning the correct approach to life's manifold activities. It is looked upon as a way of life, a direction for living applicable to all situations, extending religious sanctification to both the noblest and most mundane of human actions, and trying up the patterns of experience into a grand and cosmic vision.

An Earnest Search

The concern for a deep study of the Scriptures has occupied an important place in Jewish history. Such study meant the search of the Book of Life for correct living and the drive for a greater awareness of God. In the Book of Joshua we note the early command to the Hebrews: "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein . . ." (Josh. 1:8). In a tone that is more than one of obedience, the Psalmist sang: "O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day" (Ps. 119:97). Nor did he stop there. He continues: "Mine eyes prevent the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word" (Ps. 119:148).

This concern is echoed throughout later Jewish history. The ideal goal of every Jewish scholar was "torah l'shma"—the study of Torah for new meanings and directions of life. The study of Torah was viewed as a further extension of the principles of that Scripture to new and expanding situations. In fact the Talmud (the great body of Jewish law, wisdom, and ethics, produced from about the third century B. C. until the fifth century A. D.) was viewed as a continuation of Torah. Hence we may note the basic and fundamental role of Torah in Jewish life summed up in the rabbinic opinion that the study of Torah transcends all other duties of the pious man (Mishna Pea 1:1). Jesus rebuked those who showed ignorance of the Scriptures when he said, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God" (Matt. 22:29).

What Has Been Found

The Jews have found, in this deep study and reverent feeling, the power to live on amidst a history which has been singularly oppressive and despairing. The visions of Micah, Isaiah, and Jeremiah, with the expressed prophecy of a return to Zion, were looked upon with hope and faith by Jews uprooted from their own soil. The final judgment of God, as preached and taught in the books of these prophets, was regarded by them as the redemption of Israel from its long enslavement and exile. The Book of Psalms became (outside of the Pentateuch, perhaps) the most beloved book of their Scriptures to them, giving inner strength to its readers. The anguished cries of David, the beautiful hymns of praise of the chorus of Levites, and the wondrous descriptions of nature which fill the Book of Psalms have had an almost universal appeal to Jews. In fact the Jewish prayer book was made the repository of such passages, an anthology of their Scriptures, so that every Jew, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, could have access to them, giving him inspiration and direction in his life.

In his Second Letter to Timothy, Paul admonishes: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed . . ." (2 Tim. 2:15). Then he assures him that "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction . . ." (2 Tim. 3:16).

Many Approaches—One Reverence

The modern Jew is no less concerned with his Bible than were his ancestors. Recent scholarship has given him fresh instructions and new views concerning the places, dates, and authors of various books of the Scripture, but his Scriptures still remain his source of great strength and the generator of his life's ideals. Still fresh in his mind is the Psalmist's description of the man who is blessed, whose " . . . delight is in the law of the Lord . . ." (Ps. 1:2).

The Jewish community, like most religious communities in the United States, certainly is not of one mind and one approach in matters religious. As with other denominations and sects, there are degrees of piety and divergent emphases and theological tones. Yet throughout, the respect for their Scriptures is shared by all schools of thought and practice from the most orthodox to the most reformed. In fact the Jewish community at present is attempting to extend the study and influence of their Scriptures in accordance both with modern scholarship and in response to contemporary problems. Let us look into some of the attitudes which modern Jews hold toward their Scripture and the role it plays in their lives.

The study of the Torah is still a paramount concern of Jews. The public Scriptural readings are continued in the synagogue—for the orthodox thrice weekly, for other groups, in the main, on the Sabbath. There are hundreds of schools throughout the land giving religious instruction to Jews, of which study of their Scriptures forms an integral part of their curricula. There are scores of "Yeshivas,"—academies—devoted to more advanced study of the Hebrew Bible and Talmud. Adult courses and extension courses are well attended at the leading seminaries. The care and concern for such study waxes strong in the heart and mind of the modern Jew as he seeks to make the messages of the Hebrew Scriptures clearer, more accurate, and more meaningful for his living. He sings, even now, with David: "Let the words of my mouth and

The Demand For Leadership In The Misssionary Program Of The Local Church

By Mrs. Russell Rodkey

If the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is to be preached unto the uttermost part of the earth, men and women will have to receive an inspiration and a desire to evangelize. Where shall this be done? What part is the Home playing in influencing those within its realm to a missionary outlook? I am sorry to say that not many parents are teaching their children to pray and read God's word, let alone inspiring them to carry the torch of evangelism to the dark corners of the world. Again the Church must shoulder another great responsibility of a challenging Missionary Program. We will not be able to do this unless the program of the local Church is spiritually vigorous and expanding.

In God's word we find the COMMAND to evangelize (Acts 1:8) "And ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth." The Church is mobilized for propaganda which is destined to culminate in the Kingdom of God. This propaganda began when Jesus bade His disciples farewell on the Mount of Ascension, saying, "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth; go ye therefore and evangelize." This message is also for us today. Our attitude toward missions and relief could easily be affected by the tendency of the world to say, "What will I get out of it? Am I my brother's keeper?" It is possible to give to a local church program out of a feeling of duty to make some payment for a value received or hoped for. The mission program of the church is not likely to appeal to such a motive. Such a motive suggests selfishness and you will find this class of people pointing out the half-truth that there is enough sin and suffering right here at home without sending our money and ministers to the end of the earth. The judgment scene warns that it is not so much WHAT you do or give, but WHY that matters. It should be clear that the telling of the good news and the feeding and clothing of the needy are important fruits which logically come as expressions of the Christ-motive. The Christian knows that Jesus said, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

As there is today in every Church throughout our Brotherhood the demand for Sunday School Superintendents, Teachers, consecrated laymen, Deacons and Deaconesses — so there is the DEMAND for leadership in the Missionary Program. So often the vision and leadership of the missionary program is largely the responsibility of the minister. Surely there is not anyone more capable or better informed than he, but this should put the men and women of the Church to shame when the minister has so many other responsibilities. Our churches are blessed with laymen and laywomen capable of leadership of the Missionary Program.

In some Churches the Missionary offerings are announced only a week in advance. Can we expect great results from such a plan? Any organization today that goes forward is due largely to capable leadership. Why cannot our Church appoint such a one to keep the Missionary Program of the Brethren Church before its members?

For the past few years the work of the Women's Missionary Societies has gone forward with great strides. Our offerings have increased by the year. This has been due mostly because of the organized groups in the local Churches which have capable leaders who have kept the work of the W. M. S. before its members. These local groups have encouraged and strengthened the grand organization.

Our National Laymen's Organization is going forward. Why? Because of the strength of the groups that are being organized in the local Churches throughout the Brotherhood. It seems to me that the needs and objectives of the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church should constantly be kept before the members at large. Thus this is one of the reasons that I feel there is a DEMAND for Leadership in the Missionary Program of the Local Church.

Just a word concerning the leadership. We have many people in our churches who are capable as far as leadership is concerned, but their interest is divided between the church and the organizations outside the Church. This leader should be an active member of the Sunday School and Church and should be vitally interested in the saving of souls. In short Jesus has the answer in Matthew 7:16, "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

Another reason why we need this leadership is because of the urgent need for missions. I think of the words of a familiar song "Look all around you'll find some one in need"—yes, in need of the gospel. We must work for the night is coming. Luke 10:2, "The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few." Throughout the world there are multitudes in need of salvation, dying without the gospel. It is only through the Churches and their giving that the lost world will be reached. Money is greatly needed. The work is enlarging, the unentered fields are calling.

I pray that the challenge of the local Church will be so great that young couples will feel impelled to go into some of our declining rural Churches, there to bring the light of life which will unify a whole community around a wide-awake Church. Also that new fields will be opened throughout our Brotherhood.

Our inspirations and good intentions must be put to work or we lose our motive. It is easy to want to be God's pet rather than his partners in making His kingdom and His will be done on earth. If the motive of the Christian is love like Christ's, the method of the Christian is unselfish. Like Him. Missions and relief are neither cheap nor easy today. Christ's redemptive cross has never been easy. "Must Jesus bear the cross alone?" Whether a LEADER or a FOLLOWER there is a cross for you and for me.

The hungry millions wait
The coming of the Light
That maketh all things new.
Christ also waits,
But men are slow and late;
Have we done all we could?
Have I? Have you?

the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord . . . " (Ps. 19:14).

The translation of their Scripture has been an important activity for Jewish scholars. Increased activity in this direction has made it available to all Jews whether acquainted with Hebrew or not. It is present in the overwhelming majority of Jewish homes either in the Hebrew text or in one of the many excellent translations.

The recent barbarisms of Nazism and Fascism and the rise of anti-Semitism throughout the West have again placed the Jewish people in a difficult position. But as they read the stories of their ancestors' rescue from Egyptian slavery, of the defeat of the evil Haman, of the ever-rescuing God of history, they can gain hope and faith in ultimate succor. His Scripture unifies the contemporary Jew not only with all his people scattered throughout a rapidly shrinking world, but also with a hundred generations of Jews who shared similar difficulties.

The modern world, rife with injustices in the industrial economy, is viewed by many Jews with the social zeal and two, plus whatever the church wants to use to enlarge its borders.

It is of concern to you to know also that the Board attempts to be as conservative and as efficient as possible in the expenditure of the funds. You should know that economies of about $500 are being put into effect for office expense for next year. More than $1,000 is being "saved" in other activities to make funds available for church expansion. Economies have been projected for 1950-51 of between $1,000 and $1,500, so that these funds may be used in church expansion.

Where then is the challenge of the Thanksgiving offering?

On more than one occasion various preachers and laymen with vision for the work of the church have come to members of the Board urging upon us church expansion, and new projects of various kinds. More than anything else we appreciate this prayerful interest and stimulus, and now we pass it on to the entire denomination.

If the church is to grow and expand, the Thanksgiving offering must uphold the hands of the servants of the church who labor in these fields. It is not necessary to prolong a plea here. Rather, it has been our purpose to give you facts as concisely as possible, and let your own concern be the plea.

People often enquire, "Shall the Brethren church grow and expand?" Who has the answer but you?

passion of Amos and Hosea which motivates their sensitive social consciousness and their desire for social justice. The modern Jew, seeking to gain a life of righteousness and justice, finds in his Scripture that which instills in him the love of God and his commandments, so that life becomes the highest and finest expression of the divine.—New Century Leader.

A NEW MISSIONARY IN S. A.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Byler of Cordoba, Argentina, wish to announce the arrival of David Allen Byler on September 6, 1949. Both mother and baby doing fine.

Hearty congratulations to the proud parents!

Cheyenne Brethren Church

History and Dedication

The first meeting of the Church was held on August 25, 1944, at which time it was decided to call the organization the Cheyenne Brethren Church. It was also decided to hold a business meeting the first of the following month to complete the organization.

At the first meeting there were nine members: Frank Garber, Grace Garber, Kenneth J. White, Albert Curtright, Viola Curtright, J. K. White, Florence White, Walter Garber, and Mary Garber, with four more names being added the following meeting.

Sunday School was organized soon after and the first public service was held on December 2, 1944, with 25 in attendance.

For the first year the church held their services in the J. K. White home and the Christian Endeavor society held their meetings at the Albert Curtright home.

On December 3, 1945, all services were moved to the basement of the parsonage, where a room had been made into a meeting place.

They had expected to build in 1946, but between scarcity of materials and labor and the difficulty of obtaining a permit, the work was greatly delayed. However, in December, 1947, a half block of land was purchased on East 12th Street, where on a cold windy December evening the faithful group gathered for the ground breaking service. From that time the building was pushed rapidly ahead to the point where the basement could be used.

On Easter Day, March 28, 1947, the happy group held their first service in the basement of the new building. There were 82 in attendance. By March of 1949, the building had advanced to the point that they were able to hold the Easter service on the ground floor.

The building is not completed, but has advanced to the stage that it can be dedicated to the service of the Lord.

The small band of nine original members has steadily grown to a church membership of forty. Two have volunteered for life service for the Lord and will soon start their training for that work. They are Kenneth White and Donald Garber. There has been three deaths and two have transferred membership to other churches. Much credit is due the National Mission Board with headquarters in Ashland, Ohio. Also the District Mission Board for their fine support of the work here, both financially and morally, for without their fine cooperation we would not have this beautiful building. Also to the Ladies Aid Society and the Laymen's organization and to those individuals who sent their contributions for the work here. Much credit goes to the designer and contractor, and those who donated their time and labor so that we might enjoy this new church.

The Secretary of the Missionary Board was the morning and afternoon speaker. He also conducted the dedicatory service with Reverend H. E. Eppley of Falls City giving the dedicatory prayer.

The day was beautiful, the attendance very good. A bountiful dinner was served at noon. Delegates from most of the churches of the District arrived in due time for dedication services. It was an eventful day for the Brethren in this great country, where we ought to have a half dozen more such groups.

The Mid-West District conference opened at the evening session with Dr. L. E. Lindower of Ashland as speaker.

Reverend Frank W. Garber is the honored and loved pastor.

P. S. This report has been rushed air-mail for this issue of the missionary number.

NEWS

From the Christian World

The Africa Inland Mission is planning to pioneer in the Torit and Kapoeta districts of the Eastern Sudan just north of Uganda and west of the White Nile. It is an area about two thousand feet above the sea with mountain ranges from five to ten thousand feet above the sea. The Latukas, a tribe of 53,000 are strong, virile, and cheerful, with excellent moral standards. A reconnoitering party has found satisfactory locations, and the government of Equatoria is urging their settlement. The report of the "spies" is: "An exceeding good land. Let us go up at once and possess it."—S. S. Times.

The University of Chicago was established by Baptists to be a great Christian university in the Middle West. It has been anything but that; rather has it been a hearth of unbelief. Now it is discovered in another light. The Rev. Raphael Simon, a Jew converted to Romanism, attributes his conversion to studies made at the University of Chicago under Professors Ader and McKeen and President Hutchins!

More than eighty per cent of the cases of serious juvenile delinquency handled by the New York City police department show no religious affiliation of the offender or his parents. This statement was made by James B. Nolan, a deputy commissioner of the department, to a meeting of the sheriffs' association of New York state. Mr. Nolan went on to say that religious training gave the child his moral content.

The prevalence of blindness among South African natives has been brought to light by recent studies. The official figures show that one out of every eighty-four non-white Africans is blind. However, private medical survey show blindness to be much more common than these figures imply. The chief cause of this condition is malnutrition.

The mayor of the little French city of Niemours was recently laid to rest with exceptional attendance, not merely of public bodies. Chamber of Commerce, local societies, and children from all schools, but of an unexampled multitude of the common people. All business was suspended.

M. Gaston Darley was known for his goodness, sympathy, helpfulness to those in distress, wisdom in advice, and general usefulness. At the funeral service in the cemetery loud speakers had to be placed at many points to serve all that would hear. In his obituary in Le Christianisme it is noted that in 1902, when the mayor was a little boy, La Bonne Nouvelle (Good News), the missionary river boat of the McAll Mission, stopped at Nemours, and one of the first converts was little Gaston. It was a fruitful conversion for himself and others.

A report from United Stewardship Secretary — The Evangelical Lutheran Church reports that in 1948, their congregations reported an increase of 37,661 baptized members and 25,665 confirmed members. This includes churches in the United States and Canada. A survey of giving for the first six months of 1949, as compared with the first six months of 1948, shows an increase of $2,409,721 from eleven communions. In addition to this, contributions for a year showed an increase of $5,057,998, a total of $7,467,719. While these are for varying periods, the communions each reported for the same period. The communions in this group were: Evangelical United Brethren; Lutheran, Finnish Evangelical; Methodist; Presbyterian, U. S.; Lutheran, United; Baptist General Association. In other words, when the annual report is made in November it will show an increase in benevolent contributions from these communions. All of the figures reported were for benevolences and some could only report a part of the benevolences. The upward trend still continues.

The Church of the Brethren makes this report concerning their field in India.

The unreached areas. We have already mentioned the 1,467 villages within the areas of our churches in India. In addition, Rajpipla state has 30,000 people in it and 700 towns and villages. We are the only church in this area and are touching just a few places. Dharampur state has 125,000 people in it. This state has just opened up to Christianity. This is our territory.

b. Pastors, evangelists, and teachers must be supported for the building of the Church. Although the giving of the Indian Christians is increasing, help will be needed for years to come. Many of our members live on a very low economic income. Our churches are located in a Hindu and Parsi area and the position of the Church in the community, and the service of the Church to the people, requires pastors with reasonable training. A vital church in the new India must have an educated leadership.

c. Reasonable support is necessary to challenge the best talent in our churches to give their full time to Church service. The government is offering our most talented young people attractive financial offers.

Building the Church in India, teaching the children, evangelizing the unreached territories, providing churches with shepherds, call for our continued support and prayers.

The Bible was translated into two new languages during 1947. This brings the total to 1,090, according to the report of the American Bible Society.

By The Light Of The Gospel

by Rev. George Hagenbuch

Ever since the Lord Jesus walked upon this earth mankind can be thankful for the many blessings heaped upon it. These blessings have come to man through one main source and that by the Light of the Gospel. Let us look at the tremendous force which that Light possesses. It floods into the soul of mankind such a power and motivating force that man is eager, yes, even anxious to travel to the most remote regions of the world in order to carry to others the story or good news of Salvation. No matter how much one would like to reach the remote spots of the world, they would never care to remain there, except for one thing; they have caught the vision given man, "By the light of the Gospel."

This Light enables man to forsake all the desires of one's heart for the things of this world, and to steadfastly win others to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Just recently we have sent young people down to South America. There in Argentina they are laboring among those who hunger for the Word of God. You may say, "Well, why did they go anywhere, especially when our need is so great here in this country?" Remember beloved they went because the Light of the Gospel compelled them to go and seek others for Christ. They were enlightened to the needs of the people in South America. There is no glory in it for them, but rather it is a difficult and dangerous mission; and yet in that mission there is a guide always before them for they are led by the Power of the Holy Spirit.

And so for these many hundreds of years the Light of the Gospel has literally compelled man to trudge to these far away places; sacrificing separation from loved ones, even willing to offer their own lives in order that these other souls be reached for Jesus Christ. Now more than ever before, the world is crying out to men and women of God for aid, yes even to our own church. They need someone to bring them the good news of Salvation. Who else is better able and capable to do this? Why none other than we born again soldiers of the Lord Jesus.

They are the ones who have the Light to guide them for it is able to dispell the shadows of doubts and perplexities which constantly seem to oppress and suppress the militant forces of the church of Jesus Christ.

I believe that this factor is the greatest hindrance to the work and progress of the Foreign and Home Missionary work of our own Church. We have given a number of our young people to this great work, but I am certain that if more of us would pray and be willing to give our children to the Lord to be used in this great field of service, the blessings of the Lord would be far greater than anything or experience we could anticipate. Remember, I have just said, "Be willing to give our children." Oh! so many of us are willing to pray that God will raise up workers for the foreign mission field, but when God lays His hand upon our own Children, we are very reluctant to allow them to prepare for such a blessed work. It may be that you are such a parent, and if you are please be careful lest you fight against the power of the Holy Spirit as it works in the soul of your child. I recall a true case of this nature, in which the parents of a young girl would not permit their only child the privilege of preparing for the mission field. The girl had a definite call of God, she had seen the light and wanted to take definite steps in that manner, but the parents interfered in her desires to do the Lord's will. She, therefore, ~~never~~ answered the call of God, and to this day she has regretted the attitude of her parents, even becoming somewhat embittered in her love for them. You may say, "This can never happen to me." Listen parents and children, heed the call and leading of God lest you shut the door of your heart to the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Let this light and understanding permeate your whole being, if you do so you will never for one moment regret the step you take in shedding this light to the millions of hungry souls living and dying in darkness each day.

Oh! that our young people would catch the vision of these millions of people that are crying for the peace which these young people can offer them, if they would yield to the will of the Lord and prepare to carry the good news to them. Our church needs young people and ~~and~~ uses young people. A great future awaits them in the service of the Lord, but it is absolutely necessary that we older folk encourage these youngsters. Let them know that we are thankful for their sincerity and earnestness in their desire to serve the Lord.

The next important thing in the life of a person who had a zeal to serve the Lord is ENCOURAGEMENT. So do your part and encourage these young people of ours.

If you believe in missions and yet are unable to serve on the mission field you still have a very important part to do. God needs people at home who are able to support this work financially, and that is where you are able to serve on the mission field. If you support this work of the Lord to its fullest degree then you too are able to say, "I have done it all because of the Light of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Will you start in to do your share today?"

IS CREMATION CHRISTIAN?

by Dr. Charles G. Trumbull

Cremation is not an unusual method of disposing of the human body after death, and one often reads earnest argument in its favor. But is cremation Christian? The Sunday School Times discussed this question briefly in its issue of September 15, 1934, and was surprised at the large number of letters that then poured in from readers in every part of North America. Many of these strongly decried cremation. Others express the belief of the Times, that cremation is not God's will for His children. Still others are in honest doubt, and desire light. A few of the many letters follow:

Since I have an argument in favor of cremation, I would like the information you have on the subject. At present I have no expectation of using either burial or cremation, for I am expecting the soon return of the Lord Jesus Christ; but as pastor of three churches, I feel I ought to be informed on this subject, and also I am interested personally.—A Wisconsin pastor.

As a member of our Men's Bible society I am greatly interested because there is a question in regard to cremation in the hands of one of the members. Would you be pleased to give us some information in regard to this matter? It would greatly help us.—A Michigan reader.

As to cremation being Christian, I refer you to 1 Samuel 31:12; also Joshua 7:25. Cremation seems to have been the almost universal custom of the Aryan races, of the Aryan settlers in India, of Greeks, Romans, Slavs, Celts, and Teutons, in disposing of their dead. It is practiced by numerous peoples of Asia and America, and a return to the practice is strongly advocated in the leading nations of today.—A Washington Reader.

The whole testimony of Scripture is against cremation except as a penalty or an intentional pollution, or an emergency measure, as in time of pestilence.

It is surprising that those who defend cremation should cite the scriptures they do. Thus Joshua 7:25 tells us that, after Achan had brought defeat to Israel by sinning against God in taking "the accursed thing" that God had forbidden, God directed that "he that is taken with the accursed thing shall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath." Joshua and Israel obeyed God: "And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire after they had stoned them with stones." Does this passage commend cremation to Christians as a reverent disposal of the body?

The other passage cited by the Washington reader, 1 Samuel 31:12, 13, certainly does not show, as he says, that cremation is Christian. King Saul, having flagrantly disobeyed God, had been defeated in battle by heathen enemies and had died a shameful death that was practically suicide. His three sons died with him, and Israel forsook them and fled. The Philistines stripped the dead bodies of Saul and his sons, cut off the head of the king, hung his armor in the temple of a heathen goddess, and "fastened his body to the wall of Beth-shan."

Then the men of Jabesh-gilead, hearing of the indignity, went to Beth-shan by night and took the bodies of Saul and his sons "and came to Jabesh, and burnt them there.

And they took their bones and buried them under a tree at Jabesh." This is the Scripture quoted by the Washington reader as in favor of cremation as an honoring and usual form of Jewish custom! The whole narrative shows that it was an extraordinary and desperate measure. As the Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary notes: "This was not a Hebrew custom. It was probably resorted to on this occasion to prevent all risk of the Bethsanites coming to disinter the royal remains for further insult." The same commentary says elsewhere: "Burial was the usual Hebrew mode of disposing of their dead."

The True Meaning of Resurrection

Other arguments are urged in favor of cremation. Thus a California reader quotes the president of a Liberal theological seminary in America as saying:

I am heartily in favor of cremation: not only is it sanitary and scientific, but I believe it has a distinct religious value in emphasizing the fact that it is the spirit, and not the garment of flesh which the spirit wears, which is immortal.

By the act of cremation, the strongest possible emphasis is laid on the truth that the soul has been set free from the body.

But this statement is sharply in disagreement with God's Work in 1 Cor. 15, where we are told that the body, "the garment of flesh," is to be given immortality in the resurrection. The death of the believer separates the soul or spirit from the body only temporarily; spirit and body, as the New Testament plainly shows, are to be reunited when Christ comes again and the dead are raised. "It"—that is, the body—"is sown in corruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." So it is with the body, as well as the spirit, of every believer that will be given immortality by the redemption wrought out for us by the death and resurrection of Christ.

Another letter in defense of cremation, from a Detroit reader, makes the same mistake as it says of cremationists:

Their reverence of God, the Creator, exceeds that of the majority of the so-called Christians, as they feel that the Creator of the glorious works of creation would never return their spiritual body to inhabit the old, worn-out house in which it lived during its stay on this earth.

But that is exactly what Christ's victory over sin and death does accomplish, by changing "the old, worn-out house," or "body of our humiliation," into the likeness of His glorious body, in the resurrection (Phil. 3:21). Our Lord's own body, in which He lived "during its stay on this earth," was raised from the dead as it was reunited with His spirit; and so Paul could declare triumphantly that "now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept . . . So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

A great deal of handsomely printed literature in favor of cremation has been sent to The Sunday School Times, and some of this gives the statements of prominent people; but it is significant that many of these are from religious Liberals, humanitarians, and such writers as Jack London, Frank Crane, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Christian conviction and the whole testimony of the Bible are against cremation, which is pagan and heathen in its origin.

In an extended brochure, "Why Mankind is Returning to Cremation, the author unconsciously gives facts against cremation rather than for it. Thus Isaiah 30:33 is quoted as "indicating that cremation was a common practice at different periods of Jewish history. A magnificent funeral pyre was accorded beloved kings—those in disfavor were interred." But Isaiah, cited in defense of cremation, tells us of God's wrath against Assyria, and declares: "For Tophet is ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large; the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the Lord, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it." The word Tophet means "place of fire," and is a symbolic reference to the lake of fire and the doom of the beast. Christian people would hardly wish to take this as a reason for cremating the bodies of their loved ones who have gone to be with the Lord.

Another Scripture noted is 2 Cor. 16:14, recording of King Asa that "they burned him in his own sepulchres . . . and laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odors and divers kinds of spices prepared by the apothecaries' art: and they made a very great burning for him." While some understand this as meaning the cremation of the corpse, most Bible students take it as a great burning of spices and perfumes. Thus in Jeremiah 34 King Zedekiah of Judah was told: "Thus saith the Lord of thee . . . thou shalt die in peace: and with the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn odours for thee."

Amos 6:10 is cited as though in favor of cremation. The passage tells of God's judgments coming upon Israel, and we read: "And it shall come to pass, if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die. And a man's uncle shall take him up, and he that burneth him, to bring out the bones out of the house." The International Bible Commentary comments on this: "This probably means that the mortality (of pestilence following famine) will be so great as to throw the care of the dead upon their more distant relatives; who, to prevent infection, will burn the bodies instead of burying them." The Expositor's Bible comment: "But the death of even so large a household as ten . . . the disposal of the bodies by burning instead of the burial customary among the Hebrews—sufficiently reflect the kind of calamity."

Cremation as Pollution

The burning of human bones was even done as a deliberate act of pollution, to indicate God's judgment upon men who had turned away from Him. Thus Josiah, one of the most righteous kings in Judah's history, broke down a false altar and "took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the Lord" (2 Kings 23:16). But when Josiah saw the sepulcher of a man of God, he commanded: "Let him alone; let no man move his bones."

The booklet mentioned cannot, of course, bring forward a single Scriptural reason for cremation as the reverent or Christian method of disposal of the dead body of a believer. But readers of the Times have called attention to Scriptures that are against it. A Pennsylvania reader writes:

In regard to the question of cremation, the example our God made in the disposal of the body of Moses (Deut. 34:5, 6) should be the answer of every believer.

This passage tells us that, when "Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord," then "he (God) buried him in a valley in the land of Moab . . . but no man knoweth of his sepulchre." God's method was burial, not cremation.

A New Jersey reader writes:

You may have overlooked the following Scripture on cremation. In First Cor. 15:42-44 we have the words, "It is sown," four times. Evidently the Lord expected our practice of the burial of the body rather than cremation. There is no doubt that it is the Lord's will to "sow."

These inspired words of Paul follow his statement that grain or wheat (a type of the burial and resurrection of believers) is sown in the ground before it rises out of the ground—it is not burned.

God's Condemnation of Cremation

Not only is there no approval of cremation in the Bible, but God's condemnation is plain. An Oregon reader writes:

God gave a definite reason for His judgment falling on Moab: "Thus saith the Lord: For three transgressions of Moab, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime" (Amos 2:1).

This seems to me to show a definite disapproval by God. My reason for feeling sure of this is because, if we are to have our bodies again, glorified bodies, we are to do nothing to destroy them even after the life has left them. Of course, the God who made them in the first place when He made Adam and Eve from the dust and the God who can bring again the body which has been eaten by a fish or burned in a fire by an accident, can just as easily remake a body which is turned to ashes; but we are not to be the ones to destroy such a sacred temple of His Spirit.

Let us never forget that the body is just as real and eternal a part of man as his spirit. That is why the resurrection of the body is an inseparable part of our salvation: Christ could be no Saviour unless He were "able to save to the uttermost" and undo all the consequences of sin, not only in our spirits but also in our bodies. Therefore we have the inspired prayer: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Thess. 5:23). It is not for us to destroy any human body by fire. Death brings corruption to the body; that is part of "the wages of sin," which is death. But that corruption will be replaced by incorruption, in the resurrection of the body at the Lord's return.

Finally, as our Lord Jesus Christ Himself died, then rose from the dead, and is "become the firstfruits of them that slept," so that "in Christ shall all be made alive," surely the divine precedent of our Lord in the burial—not the burning—of His body is final and authoritative precedent for us. The Heavenly Father saw to it that, when His Son had died for our sins, a believer "named Joseph," who "was a good man, and a just," in loving reverence took the body of his Lord "and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre" (Luke 23:53).

The body of the Son of God was buried, not burned. Do Christians need any other reason for burial instead of cremation?

WANTED: CHRISTIANITY

Scripture: John 12:20-26

For The Leader

EMPHASIS IS BEING PLACED upon the Christian Evangelization of Japan this year, and so it is fitting that we devote several topics to that work. Japan has always presented problems, and even more so, in a world which is now so closely knit together. Had the proper emphasis been placed in our dealing with Japan, a lot of the tragic results of the past war could have been prevented. We have not by any means won the battle of Japan. Grave problems still exist, which, if not taken care of in the right way, will bring even greater sorrow to us and to them. Out of the rubble of the years there stands Christ as the One who can solve these problems. It is our job to Christianize Japan, so that power can be controlled with Christian love. We young people can play a definite part in it, too.

DISCUSSION

1. MECHANIZATION AHEAD OF CONTROL. Any average history student can tell you the high points of Japan's history. With the exception of a short period of time around 1624, when the Portuguese made an effort to "modernize" Japan, it has remained a secret self-sustained dynasty until the time of Admiral Perry in 1853. That's just about 100 years ago. And we may well ask ourselves about all that has happened in that century. From a country self-sufficient, minding its own business, not hurting anyone, it has been forced to take its place among the nations. The country was exploited by American men interested only in the money end of things. Great trade agreements were worked out. Modern machinery, ideas, and methods were introduced. And Japan began to wake up. Machinery meant power. But little was done to show the proper human relations in the use of it.

2. POWER WITHOUT CONTROL. So, Japan was mechanized. (Only those who witnessed or listened to the terrible tragedies of Japanese warfare can tell how greatly Japan was mechanized. Where was the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in that 100 years? The number of mission parties could be counted almost on one hand. So, the Japanese were taught how to run machines, to save time and energy. They were given ship loads of scrap iron from the U. S., in trade for their cheap manufactured products and silk. (And then they "gratefully" (?) gave it all back at Pearl Harbor and afterwards. Who is to blame? We are, in stirring up a country for commercialization without also Christianizing at the same time. We gave them power, but did not tell them how to love their fellowmen, and thus to control that power.

3. CHRIST THE ANSWER. This highly mechanized age in Japan was encouraged in a people who had very little love for others. Their God was the exaltation of self.

So, the defeat of the Japanese at the end of the war, not alone destroyed their armies, but their faith in their religion. Today, they have no religion. Their own has failed them. That is why General MacArthur has sent out the emergency cry for missionaries, and more missionaries. If we can take Christ to them, they will understand the simplicity and the sincerity of the Gospel, and will accept it in surprising numbers. Reports of the missionaries already there indicate that to be true. With the increased threat of Communism, it makes the situation even more critical. Which do you want to control Japan during your life-time, Christianity or Communism? They will hear about Communism, for that is inspired by the Devil, and he has plenty of people working for him. It's a question in our mind if they will hear about Christianity, for, so few of us seem to be the least bit interested. Yes, Christ is the answer, but Christ can be presented unto them only as we take Him to them.

4. WHY CHRISTIANITY IS THE ANSWER TO JAPAN. We mentioned earlier that the Japanese had lost faith in their religion. Christianity, if taken to them, will give them a faith in God. It will show them a hope of eternal life. It will show them the danger of sin. It will present to them the living Christ as their Saviour. It will teach them Christian love, good living habits regarding morals. It will off-set the tide of commercialization, plundering and poor trade relations. It will give the people more vital things concerning their lives than what emanates from Hollywood. And we feel that it will be better to have Japan as a Christianized nation as our neighbor, rather than a nation of communists.

5. FAITHFUL CARRIERS. Japan is eager to hear the gospel. That's hard for us to understand because we live in a land where there is so little response to the gospel. And so we say again that it is hard for us to believe that there is a people on the earth that is eager to hear the gospel. But it is true. Truly they say, "We would see Jesus." How can they see, except one goes to them? Simple reasoning isn't it? But who's to go? We can't go, you can't go, nobody wants to go. So, we are failing the greatest missionary opportunity ever given to the church. Not for food, clothing, etc., alone, but for spiritual food in Christ, is their plea. We can send them food and clothing, but we must also give to them the gospel. Blessed are those missionaries who today, are laboring under great disadvantages in Japan to preach the gospel to a disillusioned, disappointed people.

6. A FAMILY PROPOSITION. We have heard recently of wives and children joining their husbands and fathers in Japan and making their home there. The father having been assigned to some technical project in that country. But have you heard very much about families going there as missionaries? Must the gospel always take a back seat in the reconversion of a nation? If that happens with Japan, may God be merciful unto us, for Pearl Harbor will echo as a fire-cracker. Unless Christianized soon, Japan (a defeated country always rises anew with the old resentment flaming anew—look at Germany after World War I,) will rise with renewed vengeance and wrath upon the nation that caused them to "lose face." Don't forget these words. Japan wants Christianity; Japan needs Christianity; Japan must have Christianity now! What are you going to do about it?

WOULD I BE CALLED A CHRISTIAN?

Would I be called a Christian,
If everybody knew
My secret thoughts and feelings,
And everything I do?
Oh, could they see the likeness
Of Christ in me each day?
Oh, could they hear Him speaking,
In every word I say?

Would I be called a Christian
If everyone could know
That I am found in places
Where Jesus would not go?
Oh, could they hear His echo
In every song I sing?
In eating, drinking, dressing,
Could they see Christ, my King?

Would I be called a Christian
If judged by what I read,
By all my recreations
And every thought and deed?
Could I be counted Christ-like
As I now work and play,
Unselfish, kind, forgiving
To others every day?

SCRIPTURAL STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

Scripture: Romans 12

Select hymns on Christian living such as "I Would Be True."

Volunteer Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

"For even Christ pleased not Himself" (Rom. 15:3). Why? Some say that we should avoid "negative preaching." Such certainly ignore Biblical instruction and preaching. Certainly there are some things to avoid (Eph. 4:28-5:4; 6:1; Col. 3). Borderline Christians need not be in a state of confusion (Rom. 12, 13, 14; 1 Cor. 8).

We are not to "conform to this world" (Rom. 12:1, 2; 1 John 2:15-17). John Wesley said, "Whatever cools my affection toward Christ is of this world." We are to have convictions, and they are to be based on God's Word (Rom. 14:4-9). It is most unkind to be a stumbling block to some weak soul (Rom. 14:10-13). Our practice must be consistent with our Christian testimony and conscience (Rom. 14:14-17).

Let us beware of a condemnatory attitude (Rom. 14:1-3; let us be constructive rather than cantankerous with pride (Rom. 14:18, 19; 1 Cor. 8:1; Gal. 6:1, 2). Let us be sure that our faith or confidence that our own conduct is correct, be according to God's standard in His Word (Rom. 14:20-23). A minister was puzzled about wearing a collar that had been used. He asked his wife to look at the collar. She said, "If there is any doubt, it is dirty." Let us not offend our own conscience, nor the conscience of others in what we allow (1 Cor. 8:9-12). Is our conduct Christ-like (Rom. 15:1-7)? What would Jesus do if He were in our place? Let us pray about such matters, and decide for the happiness of a good conscience.

GOD COMFORTS HIS PEOPLE

Lesson: Isaiah 40:27-31; 41:10-13; 61:1-3

WRITING TO THE Corinthians, (II Cor. 1:3-4) has this to say, "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." And in the first verse of Isaiah 40, from which chapter the first section of our lesson is taken, we find these words, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," saith the Lord."

It is interesting to note how often we are told in the Word to turn to God for comfort and strength; for "comfort" at its roots really means the "renewal of strength." When we remember that because of disobedience on the part of the Children of Israel, Isaiah was compelled to prophesy dire penalties for their stubbornness, we feel that there must have been much joy in the heart of Isaiah when he could speak words of cheer to this people—even as he does in our lesson texts today.

Note his words of encouragement: "The everlasting God . . . fainteth not"; "They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength"; "For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand . . . I will help thee"; and then there is that great scripture which Jesus used in His message in His home town, and which He ceased to read before He came to the phrase, "the day of vengeance of our God . . .," choosing rather to stop upon a note of comfort than one of vengeance.

How appreciative we should be that we are able to receive God's comfort. He does not ask much of us. John says (I John 5:3)—"For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." He never asks anything of us we cannot do, and He stands ready at all times to "Comfort His People."

'Tis heaven alone that is given away

'Tis only God may be had for the asking."

—James Russell Lowell.

INTERESTING ITEMS

St. James, Maryland. Rally Day was held in the St. James Church on Sunday, October 16th, and the Holy Communion was observed on the evening of the same day.

Brother Freeman Ankrum, St. James pastor, was the guest speaker at the Linwood, Maryland, Homecoming on October 9th.

The Revival at St. James will be held from November 6 to 20, with Brother Ankrum acting as his own evangelist.

College Corner, Indiana. Word comes to the editor from Dr. Bame, pastor of the College Corner church, that the evangelistic meetings which were to have been held October 2 to 16 were postponed on account of the passing of the wife of Brother C. A. Stewart. Brother Stewart was scheduled to be the evangelist. These meetings will be held later, some time in November, we understand.

Brother Bame says, "Everything is going along fine here." The Homecoming at College Corner was held on October 9th.

Bryan, Ohio. Rally Day and Homecoming was observed in the Bryan Church on Sunday, October 9th. The goal of 300 was set for the Sunday School. We have not heard whether they made it or not.

Evangelistic services will be held at Bryan beginning on Monday, October 31, with Brother E. L. Miller of Maurertown, Virginia, as the evangelist.

Milledgeville, Illinois. Homecoming and Ashland College Day will be observed in the Milledgeville church on Sunday, October 23, with Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, Ashland College President and Rev. Charles Munson, National Youth Director, as the guest speakers. The drive for $1,000.00 for the emergency fund for the college will be made on that day.

We note that the average attendance in the Sunday School for July, August and September was 145, and the average offering $25.35.

Elkhart, Indiana. We note that the goal set for the Rally Day attendance of the Elkhart Sunday School was 600. Wonder if they made it?

We learn that a Boy Scout Troop has been organized in the Elkhart Brethren Church.

Miss Janet King, daughter of Brother King, Elkhart pastor, who visited Argentina this past summer, is showing her picture slides in many of the Brethren churches throughout the Brotherhood. She recently took time off to show them in her own church at Elkhart.

We note that at a recent business meeting the church voted to give $150.00 to the Shipshewana Canal project.

New Paris, Indiana. Brother C. A. Stewart writes expressing appreciation for all the kindnesses shown him during the time following the passing of his wife.

Oakville, Indiana. Brother Henry Bates writes that Homecoming in the Oakville church was well attended, and that approximately 125 were served at the fellowship dinner at the noon hour. The afternoon guest speaker was Brother S. C. Henderson, pastor of the Roanoke, Indiana, church, who was a former pastor at Oakville.

Brother Bates says, "We went well over the $1,000.00 goal for the emergency furnace fund by the close of the services on Homecoming day."

November 6th has been set as Harvest Home Day. Contributions of food stuff will be made, same to be donated either to the Brethren Home or the Kentucky Mission workers at Lost Creek.

The monthly parish paper, "The Guidepost," which came to the editor's desk a few days ago, is, as usual, full to overflowing with news and announcements pertinent to the work of the Oakville church. We always enjoy receiving this monthly paper.

Peru, Indiana. Brother J. Milton Bowman, Peru pastor, is now in the closing days of the evangelistic effort at Peru, as you read these lines. He began on Sunday, October 9th and the closing service is on Sunday evening, October 23rd. Many diversified types of music have been in evidence in the meetings. The music is under the direction of Mrs. Leona Wallace of South River, New Jersey.

Flora, Indiana. Brother J. E. Berkshire, pastor of the Flora Church, reports a good meeting with Brother J. G. Dodds, pastor of our Akron, Ohio, Firestone Park church, as evangelist. He says there was a constant increase in attendance from the first of the meetings. We will expect to have a full report of the meeting soon.

The observance of the Holy Communion was held in the Flora Church on Monday evening, October 17th.

The Editor Thinks Aloud

Fred C. Vanator

"A SECOND TOWER OF BABEL . . . ?"

IN THE CURRENT ISSUE of "The Reader's Digest," under the title, "May All Hear The Timeless Voice!" the quotation of a news item is given. It runs like this:

"The Chapel of Prayer in the new United Nations headquarters will have no altar or windows. A shaft of sunlight will come through the roof. A huge marble slab, memorializing the war dead, will be the only object in the simple, cylindrical structure."

The article goes on to say that this is to become the "prayer room of all Races, Creeds and Sects." It tells how Christians, Jews, Confucianists, Buddhists and Mohammedans "may know the mysteries of faith; see the holy of holies; and seek the inspiration and guidance desired by all men."

It intimates that here the Christian may see the Babe of Bethlehem; the Jew may commune with Moses; the Turk find Mohammed, and others the god of their own especial choice.

Reading this set me to thinking!

Early in biblical history a people decided that they would build a tower that would reach to heaven. They thought they would, in this way, be able to "make a name for themselves." They said, "Let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the earth."

As we follow the story we see that God in His infinite wisdom, saw what it would lead to—a forgetfulness of the need of Him by the people—and He acted accordingly.

Upon the west bank of the East River in the City of New York, there is arising a great building, which will, when completed, house the Assembly of The United Nations. Within that building is the above described "Chapel of Prayer." But prayer to what? To God, to Allah, to heathen deities—in fact to anything which may represent the thinking of each individual touched by this mass representation. Yet no prayer opens any session of this Assembly of Nations; no time is given for spiritual meditation. Can God honor such an attitude?

Prayers are said, no doubt. But how? It seems to me that our Bible is quite definite as to the manner of prayer. Jesus said, "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." In "My Name," not in any other name—but in "Jesus' Name."

How symbolic, it seems to me, is the opening for the "shaft of sunlight," and the lack of "windows." What hope arises when the sun does not break through the clouds; when no windows are there to let in the light? "Only darkness," must be the answer.

Are the tongues "confused" that speak of peace there? Can it be possible that they even know or think of the meaning of "that peace which passeth human understanding?" Is this "Chapel of Prayer" simply another Tower of Babel, with which God cannot be pleased? What is the answer?

We are not seeking to criticize the effort that is being put forth to unite nations in the bond of peace. But we do deplore the manner of approach. The hope of the nations is not found in a material peace, but in a spiritual unity with the Father in heaven.

Think it over!

ance on Rally Day was 140. The day was also set apart as Homecoming Day. The date was October 2nd. A diversified program was carried out in both morning and evening services.

The laymen still continue to work around the church and parsonage. A list of seventeen is given who worked with Brother Dodds in putting in steps and finishing installing the lighting fixtures. Blessed is the pastor whose men are alive to the work needed around the church.

Brother E. M. Riddle was guest speaker at the Firestone Park church on Sunday morning, October 9th. He reports an attendance of 103. The evening service of that day was in charge of the Woman's Missionary Society. They presented their public service. Mrs. Lora Joy gave the address of the evening.

The evangelistic meetings of the church will be held from October 30th to November 13th. Brother Dodds will act as his own evangelist, we assume.

Dayton, Ohio. The Dayton Communion was held on Sunday evening, October 2nd.

The Dayton Laymen's Organization have set the second Monday night of each month for their regular meeting time. Their next meeting will be on November 14th.

Gratis, Ohio. We note that recently the pupils of the Junior and Intermediate Sunday School classes enjoyed a party at the church, under the direction of the Intermediate teacher, Mrs. Roy Brubaker. There were thirty-two present.

Brother Crick says that it was recently voted to send the Community Vacation School offering of $29.63 to the local Polio Fund and to add enough from the Gratis Church Council's treasury to make the sum $50.00.

The church has released Brother Crick to hold an evangelistic campaign for Brother A. R. Baer at Quiet Dell, Pa., the meetings being held from October 17 to 30.

A display of "old pictures" of the Gratis church, Sunday School, W. M. S., Choir groups and the like, is to be made soon in the Gratis church. Now there is an idea that might be carried out in many of our churches. It would be interesting to everyone.

Quiet Dell, Penna. Homecoming and Rally Day were observed in the Quiet Dell church on Sunday, October 16th.

The Importance of Sound Doctrine

Dr. Charles F. Yoder

Since we are more and more seeking to indoctrinate our people, and give them a sound foundation upon which to place their feet, we feel that an article which was written by Dr. C. F. Yoder, while he was editor of The Brethren Evangelist, and read, but no doubt forgotten, by many of the older members of the Brethren Church, will make "sound" reading for us of this generation. Therefore we present it with the purpose of making it introductory to other articles which will deal with definite doctrine as set forth in the Word of God. Read it and ponder.

* * * * *

IT IS A TEMPTATION to churches to make their conditions of entrance easy in order to secure accessions. Some denominations have yielded to this temptation and their ministers therefore teach that the matter of forms and ordinances is of little importance.

The Brethren, on the other hand, plead that obedience to the spirit of God's commands is essential to the best life. Truth must not be compromised.

Let us note first that Jesus did not make the way of life appear easy. He taught men to strive to enter in at the straight gate. He said, "If any man come after me and renounceth not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." The standard must be high or the world will not be lifted up. It is right to seek to have large numbers in the church, but not for the mere sake of boasting. It is better to have good members than many members.

In the second place, let us remember that true doctrine is fundamental to true life.

There would be no virtue in making the terms of admission to the church hard in an arbitrary way. The Hindoo "holy men" and Mohammedan dervishes simply make fools of themselves in torturing the body as a means of holiness. Obedience to the Gospel ordinances is like obedience to the laws of nature. Newton did not manufacture the law of gravitation; he discovered it. It is not a mere whim of the parent to seek to provide the child with shelter and food and exercise. These things are essential to its life. Right doctrine is essential to spiritual life.

Third. Even our best temporal welfare is dependent upon sound doctrine. "All things work together for good to them that love God." He who disregards truth and right finds himself sooner or later attacked by disease or condemned by the law. There is no place where disobedience to God brings blessing.

Fourth. Sound doctrine is necessary to spiritual life. Jesus said, "Except ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your sins. If faith had no effect upon character it would matter little what we might believe; but a man's life is the reflex of his faith and every error in his ethics will appear also in his conduct.

Therefore Jesus was profoundly right when He said, "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom God hath sent."

Fifth. The Gospel ordinances represent the fundamental truths of the Christian life. If they stood for nothing there might be little worth in their observance. But because they stand for vital truths it is a serious thing to ignore or change them.

Our attitude toward the symbols is our attitude toward the truths for which they stand and our attitude toward these truths reveal our attitude toward God. What God has given as means of grace, let no man despise. What He has instituted as symbols of truth, let no man say is of small importance.

Sixth. God insists upon faithfulness to these commands which He has given. "See," He said to Moses, "that thou make all things according to the pattern which I showed thee in the mount." Why? Because that pattern revealed in symbols, the things which Israel was to learn, and foreshadowed in the type the things which were to come.

Nadab and Abihu thought the details of the form amounted to nothing: therefore they offered strange fire upon the altar. Why did the fire of God consume them if it were not to teach all generations not to trifle with God's commands? Uzzah thought that if his heart were right he might touch the ark of God. Why did he fall dead, if reverence for God and His commands is not important? Nay—"These things happen unto them for examples and are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the ages are come." I Corinthians 10:11.

Therefore, beloved brethren, "Be no longer children tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine," but "Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." "And though we or an angel from heaven preach any other doctrine, let him be anathema."

Beware indeed of the leaven of the Pharisees which is hypocrisy, for they depend upon the formal observance of ordinances for salvation and neglect the weightier matters of the law giving and forgiving and right living. But beware also lest you sit down on the seat of the scornful and eat the leaven of the unbelieving and disobedient, whose end is with the hypocrites.

Practical Church Methods

Rev. Henry Bates

"Preach The Gospel"

AFTER LISTENING to a number of sermons within the past few months—in person, and over the air—this writer feels that perhaps the most "practical" contribution he can make to the "Practical Church Methods" column is the submitting of the following poem.

As we have often remarked in previous articles in the Evangelist, the chief task of the church—it seems to us—is the winning of unsaved to the Lord Jesus Christ, and this, through the preaching of the Gospel of Salvation. And since the overall program of the church is usually no more evangelistic in nature than is the preached Word, it would behoove every church to consider the message which she is giving to the community. Book reviews, art lectures, philosophical discourses and so on, are very interesting—but certainly out of place in the church's pulpit. When a pastor preaches, and the congregation appreciates and heeds, real Gospel messages, then the work of that church will be fired with the power of the Holy Spirit.

Now the poem which is referred to above, goes like this:

LAST SUNDAY'S SERMON

The Minister

"That sermon I preached on Sunday . . .
I think I never worked harder
On any sermon in all my life,
Than I worked on that one.
There is a lot of food for thought in that subject . . .
'Religion in Democracy and Democracy in Religion' . . .
I must have spent twelve hours in research,
Not counting the experiences of the past,
Which have given strength to my convictions.
I like the statement by Dr. Throckmorton of Beercrest
From which I quoted . . .
' . . . democracy has no future without religion
And religion must be democratic
Or it soon becomes mere cant.'
A real thinker, this Throckmorton!
My notes contained references from
The Atlantic, Harper's, Time, American Mercury,
And the Yale Review . . .
A lot of work for one sermon,
But I think it was worth it and more.
There was many a person in that crowd
Whose only contact with the better thinking of today
Is that which comes through a sermon
Like the one I preached on Sunday.

"I wonder what old Prof. Wilton thought?
Sitting there beneath the transept window . . .
Maybe he'll have a new slant on democracy
When he meets his class in world governments
Tomorrow morning at the college . . .
If he didn't like it,
I'll be hearing from him in a day or two.
He never lets me slip upon what he calls
His 'Pragmatic concept of religion in democracy' . . .
I think I gave him a thing or two to think about.
And Joe McDaniels, our Congressman,
Who always drops in
When the House is in recess . . .
I think he'll remember a few things I said.
It does these fellows good
To jar them loose once in a while . . .
If he'd only take some of my thoughts back to Congress . . .
"Hang it all! I don't know what's wrong with people . . .
A man spends hours and hours going over his sermon
Trying to put together something
That will make people think,
And yet, it doesn't make much difference
How much a fellow works,
The crowd never seems any larger . . .
Always the same faithful few.
Well, even so . . .
• It won't hurt them to know
What's going on in the world . . .
If I'd had time I'd have told them a little more
Of what went on
At the London and Washington Conferences . . .
That's the trouble with the people . . .
They don't know what it's all about.
Well, I've done the best I can . . .
I've tried to tell them."

* * * *

The Parishioner:

"About that sermon which you preached on Sunday . . .
I know you must have worked very, very hard on it.
It showed great preparation, and polish, and learning.
I know Professor Wilton enjoyed it.
He said on the way out of church
That you are a smart fellow . . .
'Great thinker,' was the way he put it.
And I noticed Joe McDaniels
Slipped a ten spot on the plate.

I don't think
You can attribute that to sheer generosity,
Nor to politics either, as far as that goes . . .
You must have impressed him.

"But you know . . .
Sitting across from me was old man Greggs.
He's losing his eyesight.
'Cataracts' the doctors say. 'No hope.'
Life looks pretty dark for him these days.
And that Mrs. Simons whose boy was lost
When the convoy was attacked in the North Atlantic . . .
She was in church, too, on Sunday.
The neighbors say she acts awful queer
Ever since she got that word
Through the mail a few weeks ago.
You know everybody used to look forward
To the postman's visit,
But today a person
Is almost half glad if he passes by . . .
You know, 'No news is good news' . . .
Or something like that.

"I suppose you noticed that Mr. Whitson was there.
He hasn't been out since his wife died last month.
I bet it was hard for him,
Sitting alone down there in front
Where every Sunday she used to sit beside him.
Helping him to hold a hymnal . . .
I guess he goes out to Forest Memorial Park every day
Rain or shine, and they say that his light burns Far into the morning hours . . . Poor fellow!

"That young Williamson girl was there too, on Sunday.
I guess life looks pretty empty to her
Since Bill let her down.
You know the kind of a girl she was . . .
Decent, and clean, and straight as they come . . .
And she thought Bill was that way too.
But when she found out that he had been chasing around
With that girl over on the other side of town,
All the while she was wearing his engagement ring,
Well, I guess the bottom just dropped out of life for her.
But her mother finally ding-donged her until
She went to church on Sunday.
Her mother said maybe she'd hear something
That would do her good.
What was it you preached on, now . . . ?

Oh yes, 'religion in democracy!'—
That was a good sermon.

"And did you notice that Effie Sloan was out, too?
I don't see how she does it,
What with that man of hers
Drinking and carrying on the way he does.
She must have a lot of grit
To start out every Sunday morning
To church, when she knows
That every one else knows
That she is just being a brave little soul,
And that her heart inside is red and raw
From the hurt she carries.
Those two Grimes boys were there, I noticed.
They inherited something like half a million dollars
When old man Grimes, that's their grandfather, Died last March.
They say that Bill, he's the younger one,
Is spending his share like water.
Just throwing it away—gambling and drinking,
And running around . . .
It's a shame that someone can't get hold of him.
I guess he goes to church to keep up a front.

"Mr. and Mrs. Calver were there.
Yes, and six of their kids, too.
I guess the oldest one stayed at home
With the other two babies that are sick.
Hard pull for those people.
He never did make much, you know.
But they never miss church.
She maintains, 'Even if you don't get anything out of What the preacher says, it sort of does you good
Just singing and saying hello to the people,
And listening to the organ.'
What was it again, you preached about on Sunday? . . .
Oh, yes . . . 'religion and democracy.'

"Professor Wilton sure liked your sermon.
And so did McDaniels. You must have spent lots of time
Reading and studying upon that sermon . . .
But some Sunday, Reverend,
For old man Greggs, and Mrs. Simons, and Mr. Whitson,
And May Williamson, and Effie Sloan,
Will you preach a sermon for them?
One on, 'Come unto me all ye that labor' . . .
Or, 'Blessed are they that mourn' . . .
Or, "Take up your cross and follow me.'"

Minutes of the Central District Conference

HELD AT CERRO GORDO, ILLINOIS OCTOBER 5, 6 and 7

Conference Text: "Upon this rock will I build my church." Matt. 16:18.

Conference Theme: "Onward for Christ and the Church."

The Central District Conference of Brethren Churches convened at Cerro Gordo, Illinois, on Wednesday evening, October 5th, with Moderator W. R. Deeter in charge, and Mrs. John Fulk acting as conference pianist, and Rev. Arthur J. Tinkel, pastor of the host church, as song leader. Following the opening song service, the devotions were led by Simeon Stogsdill. Rev. Tinkel welcomed the delegate to the Cerro Gordo Church, and response was given by delegates from the various churches.

The following committees were appointed: Credential—Lawrence Powell, Mr. Peterson, Earl Wilkin; Nominating—Rev. D. C. White, Dr. L. O. McCartneysmith, Rev. V. E. Meyer.

A duet was rendered by Rev. and Mrs. Tinkel.

In the absence of the Vice Moderator, L. L. RuLon, Rev. V. E. Meyer presented his sermon which had regularly been scheduled for Thursday. Following the message Rev. Meyer pronounced the benediction.

Thursday morning

The business session was called to order at 9:45. After the singing of "Love Divine," Brother Meyer conducted the devotions and led in prayer.

The Credential Committee reported six ministerial and twenty-one lay delegates approved.

The Nominating Committee presented a list of candidates for the District Board. While awaiting the result of the voting on these candidates, other business was transacted.

The Ministerial Examining Board reported the examination, acceptance and ordination of Clarence Stogsdill of Cerro Gordo, Illinois.

Since there were no opposing candidates for the conference officers, the following were declared elected by unanimous vote:

Moderator	Dr. G. T. Ronk
Vice Moderator	Rev. D. C. White
Secretary	Mrs. Don Dietz
Treasurer	Mrs. Helen Jordan
Statistician	Earl Wilkin

Two additional committees were appointed: Resolution—Mrs. Lenora Snoke, Mrs. D. C. White, Mrs. Chas. Derr; Moderator's Address—Mr. Peterson, Mrs. McCartney-smith, Mrs. Metzger.

Dr. G. T. Ronk reported as College Trustee on the financial emergency facing the college due to remodeling to meet the State Fire Code.

Rev. White reported for the District Mission Board, and Mr. Wilkin read the financial report as prepared by H. B. Puterbaugh, Treasurer:

Rev. Deeter spoke for the District Board of Evangelists and Rev. White for the National Conference Executive Board.

The following report of the earlier voting was reported as follows:

District Mission Board—D. C. White, H. B. Puterbaugh; District Board of Trustees—Henry Raun; Ministerial Examining Board—G. T. Ronk; General Conference Executive Committee—D. C. White; Nominees for Ashtland College Trustee—Glade Miller, Harry Bushman; District Board of Evangelists—L. O. McCartneysmith, 3 years, G. T. Ronk, 1 year; District Church School Board—Mrs. Evelyn Hanna.

The business session was declared closed.

Brother D. C. White, appointed to act as Vice Moderator for the session, then introduced Brother W. R. Deeter, who gave his Moderator's message, "Will Excuses Excuse?" Following a solo by Lawrence Powell of Udell, Brother E. M. Riddle pronounced the benediction.

Thursday afternoon—1:30

After the opening song service, Mrs. Helen Jordan led in prayer. Accompanied by Mrs. Tinkel, Rev. Tinkel rendered a vocal solo. The sermon of the afternoon was brought by D. C. White, pastor of the Milledgeville Church.

Brother Virgil Meyer reported on the National Youth Conference and on Youth Camps. He paid special tribute to Rev. and Mrs. White for their efforts in our camp. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. Deeter.

Thursday evening

The devotions of the evening were led by Mt. Peterson. Special music was rendered by Charles Snoke, who played a horn solo, accompanied by his daughter Shirley.

The sermon of the evening was brought by Dr. G. T. Ronk.

Following the message E. M. Riddle, General Missionary Board Secretary, showed a film on South American mission work and commented on the work and needs of Lost Creek, Kentucky.

An offering to defray conference expenses was lifted, after which the benediction was pronounced by Brother Riddle.

Friday morning

Following the opening song service, Brother McCartneysmith led in the devotions. Miss Jane Martin of Cerro Gordo, Illinois, gave a reading.

Brother Meyer was asked to preside in the Moderator's place. The minutes through Thursday evening were read and approved after corrections. Upon motion a copy of the certification and ordination of Clarence Stogsdill was placed on the minutes.

The report of the District Treasurer was read and accepted as follows:

Mr. Wilkins gave his usual very detailed and fine statistical report, which was accepted. He thanked all the local secretaries who sent in their reports so promptly.

Motion prevailed to send the following telegram to Dr. W. S. Bell, Milledgeville, "Central District Conference remembers your labor of love and prayer, and sends Christian greetings." Signed, W. R. Deeter, Moderator.

Rev. McCartneysmith read the following report on amendments to the District Constitution:

Art. 4, Sec. 2—Elders and Evangelists

The calling, examination and commissioning of Elders, Evangelists and Ministerial students shall be governed by the authority given in Chapter 1, sections 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the Manual of Procedure of the Brethren Church adopted as of 1915.

Art. 5—Officers; Section 9—Trustees

These Trustees shall be responsible to look after the real estate and trust funds belonging to this corporation and shall have power to hold in trust real estate and trust funds, and the name "The Brethren Church" in Iowa or any state for the use of this corporation.

Motion prevailed that these items be received and become the first item of unfinished business at our conference in 1950.

The following recommendations of the Ministerium were received. These were taken up and acted upon singly:

No. 1—"The Ministerium recommends that we use the regular 40 cents per member for District Missions." Motion prevailed to adopt the recommendation.

No. 2—"The Ministerium recommends that the unpaid assessment for Decatur for the past two years be completed, and that money be held in District Mission Board awaiting final decision of District Conference." By motion this recommendation was also adopted.

Brother Earl Wilkins was appointed to serve on the committee of constitutional amendment, taking the place of V. E. Meyer who is leaving the District.

The invitation to hold the 1950 conference at Waterloo, Iowa, was accepted, the date of conference to be decided by the Moderator.

The Committee on Moderator's address recommended that Brother Deeter's message be published in the Evangelist. The recommendation was approved.

Reports on Publications and Benevolences were brought by E. M. Riddle.

The final sermon of the conference was brought by Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College.

The final minutes were read and accepted.

Rev. Meyer, in leaving the district, expressed his appreciation for the associations of the past years. Response by Rev. White.

The 1949 Conference was closed by prayer by Rev. Deeter.

Mrs. Don Dietz, Conference Secretary.

Want a Men's Gospel Team?

To the Ministers and Members of the Brethren Church:
Dear Folks:

The Men's Gospel Team is once again ready to go! This year we are looking forward to a great year in the service of Christ in the churches of the Brethren denomination. As in the past, our services are twofold in nature: 1. A Gospel Team will take complete charge of a worship service, or, 2. A Gospel Team will take charge of any particular part of a service.

Members of the Gospel Team are, for the most part, the young men who are pre-seminary or seminary students. These fellows are zealous in the work of the Lord. Therefore, we urge all Brethren ministers to avail themselves and their church of the opportunity to have these consecrated young men in their pulpits. All we ask is that we receive the loose offering when we hold a complete service, or, that we receive a small amount when we conduct a particular phase of this service. This amount will be determined by the church in which we are serving.

Just a note to you ministers. If you desire a Gospel Team for a particular season of the year, GET YOUR REQUESTS IN EARLY. Also we prefer that you do not request certain individuals as a part of a team coming into your church. This makes it difficult for us to give each member of the Team an equal opportunity to serve.

During this year the Men's Gospel Team hopes to be of great service to you Brethren folks. We are waiting for your calls. Get them in now! Address your requests to the Men's Gospel Team, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio.

Yours in His service,

Grant Carothers, President.

Bryan, Ohio, First Brethren Church On The Air

"The hymns are of the more familiar type. Sermons by Rev. Black are strictly non-denominational, simple, and with evangelistic appeal. Anyone desiring to have a hymn dedicated to a friend or relative may do so, and the names will be read on the air.

"The station charges are paid by individual gifts and donations by the several classes of the Sunday School. During the first six months of the broadcast Sunday School and church attendance increased between thirty-five and forty percent.

"This broadcast is heard by people as far away as Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio; Detroit and Battle Creek, Michigan, and Warsaw, Indiana. Listeners from these cities and many other tri-state area communities often "Thirty members of the First Brethren Church of Bryan are presenting the oldest regular program at radio station WONW, Defiance. They are developing an audience of many hundreds of listeners in the tri-state (Ohio-Indiana-Michigan) area at their weekly religious broadcast, which is conducted by the Rev. E. J. Black, church pastor, and heard every Sunday morning.

"The program is known as the 'Gospel Radio Hour,' and it has the honor of being the first religious broadcast to be aired by the neighborhood station.

"Operated by the Bryan-Defiance-Paulding Broadcasting Company, station WONW began broadcasting on February 11, 1949. Two days later, on Sunday, the First Brethren Church put on the first religious service—a feature that has continued weekly.

"From seventeen to twenty-five members of the congregation and their pastor participate every Sunday, some of them driving miles to meet at the church at 7:30 A. M. Then four or five cars make the drive to Defiance, a distance of eighteen miles.

"The program is on the air from 8:30 to 9:00. The theme song, 'Till the Whole World Knows,' is used in introducing and in closing the broadcast. The talent includes a girls' trio, several soloists, an accordionist, pianist, and marimba players. The entire group sings in the mixed chorus.

An Impressive Ordination Service

A VERY BEAUTIFUL and impressive service was held in the Fort Scott Brethren Church, Fort Scott, Kansas, on the evening of August 14th, at eight o'clock, at which time Spencer Gentle was ordained to the Christian ministry and Mrs. Gentle consecrated to the work with her husband.

The pastor of the Fort Scott Church, Rev. Cecil H. Johnson, presided. Following the prelude and invocation, the congregation joined in the singing of "Have Thine Own Way Lord."

The following words of St. Paul to Timothy were read: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." Brother Johnson followed this reading with prayer. A vocal solo, "Take My Life and Let It Be," was sung by Miss Loretta Cowan.

The ordination sermon was preached by Dr. L. E. Lindower, of Ashland Theological Seminary. Following this message, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wissinger, formerly of Falls City, Nebraska, but now of Ashland, Ohio, sang a beautiful duet.

In the ordination ceremony Dr. Lindower gave the charge to Brother Gentle, and Rev. Johnson the charge to Mrs. Gentle. The congregation then joined in singing, "Jesus Calls Us," and the benediction followed.

The ushers for the service were Harold Russell and Ralph Barnum, and Mrs. Nellie Schamaun was the pianist.

The church was beautifully decorated and a large crowd, which filled the seating capacity of the church, was present to witness and enjoy the service.

Brother Gentle is a Fort Scott boy who heard the call of the Master to the larger service of the ministry, and four years ago, upon returning from Camp at Clay Center, Kansas, they sold their household goods and packed up and left for Ashland, where he enrolled in the College and Seminary. He will finish his Seminary work this year. He has been serving as student pastor of the North Georgetown, Ohio, Brethren Church for the past several years. He is also Office Secretary of the National Sunday School Association and has done much work in the Summer Camps for the past two years.

His home church, his many friends and his pastor desire for him and his wife a happy and fruitful ministry.

—Cecil H. Johnson.

Since receiving the above report from Brother Johnson, we are informed by Brother Gentle that he received, as of Monday evening, October 10th, a unanimous call to become the pastor of the Waterloo, Iowa, Brethren Church. He and his family will move from Ashland to Waterloo about February 1, 1950. We will miss his genial personality around Ashland, and especially around the publishing house, where he calls frequently. May God richly bless the Gentles in their resident work in the ministry.—Editor.

Interesting Items

Following the Homecoming, the evangelistic services will begin with Brother W. S. Crick, pastor of the Gratis, Ohio, Brethren Church, as evangelist.

Recently, the Cameron and Quiet Dell Woman's Missionary Societies were the guests of Mrs. George Headley at Waynesboro, and twenty-five women had a delightful time of fellowship together.

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff says that there was a fine increase in attendance over the spring attendance at the Holy Communion which was held on Sunday evening, October 2nd.

The Women's Class of the Meyersdale Sunday School are sponsoring a Church Birthday Calendar for 1950.

We note that Oscar Robarge, Vice President of the National Laymen's Organization, of Bryan, Ohio, was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Meyersdale Laymen at the church October 3rd. The meeting was sponsored by the Berlin Laymen, under the direction of Brother Fred Brant. A group of Berlin laymen were in attendance.

Brother W. S. Benshoff, Meyersdale pastor, was guest speaker for the Sergeantsville, New Jersey, Brethren Church Homecoming on Sunday, October 9th. In his absence Brother Arthur Petit of Ashland College was guest speaker at Meyersdale.

Goshen, Indiana. The annual Homecoming of the Goshen Church was held on Sunday, October 9th. Dr. L. E. Lindower of Ashland Theological Seminary, was the guest speaker at both the morning and afternoon services. A basket dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour.

The revival services of the Goshen church will be held from November 21 to December 4, with Rev. and Mrs. Harry Richer in charge of the music.

Waterloo, Iowa. We note that Rev. Dan Lichty, who was forty years a missionary in India, was a recent guest speaker at the Waterloo church on Sunday evening, October 16th.

Stockton, Calif. Brother Johnson and wife took a short vacation trip in the northern part of California, leaving on Monday, October 10th and being away over the next Sunday.

The Woman's Missionary Society held a "Family Night Social" recently. It was in the nature of a "Hobo" party, with those assembling themselves dressed accordingly.

Calvary, New Jersey. Homecoming will be held in the Calvary church on Sunday, October 23rd. Brother Margush, pastor, announces the guest speaker as Rev. William Wadsworth of Plainfield, N. J.

Loree, Indiana. Brother R. K. Higgins reports an attendance of 159 in Sunday School on Sunday, October 9th. He says the average attendance for the last quarter is 133.

The Fall Communion of the Loree church has been set as of Monday evening, November 7th.

New sidewalks were laid at the Loree parsonage on Saturday, October 8th.

The Loree Homecoming is scheduled—for October 23rd with a guest speaker for the afternoon service.

TOWARD A CHRISTIAN JAPAN

Scripture: Acts 2:37-47; Prov. 14:34

For The Leader

IF YOU WERE CALLED to become a missionary, where would you like to go? The answer to that question, of course, is wrapped up in two things. First your ability and training in a particular language. Secondly, and by far the more important, the leading of the Spirit of God. It may be that this evening the Holy Spirit has a message for your heart. Let's listen. This may be the "vision," the call to go to Japan. Who knows the power and leading of small things? A word spoken, an idea presented, a picture, a thought, to lead us into the center of God's will. It will be to our advantage to have an open mind and humble heart tonight, praying that God will direct our thoughts. Not nearly all of us will ever be called to be missionaries. But we should be ready to listen if we should be the one the Lord wants. It takes just one person to be a Torrey, Moody, Sunday, Patton, Yoder, Byler, Drushal. But think of the work they have done and are doing. Japan needs Christian missionaries. Don't be surprised if God does lay His hands upon you. Go!

DISCUSSION

1. HOW TO CHRISTIANIZE A NATION. We learned last week that Japan had a religion in which self was glorified. Material possessions and indulgence were the chief deities. But now that has all been ruined for them. Japan has lost its religious faith. How can we Christianize them? There is only one way. That is to preach unto them Christ, and Him crucified. We must reach their hearts with the gospel. To give them food, clothing, supplies and hospitals alone, will never make them Christian. Only as they are confronted with the message of the Gospel, and yield themselves in faith and obedience unto the crucified and risen Lord, will they become a Christian nation. All other efforts become as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. Read about it in 1 Corinthians 13. Paul strikes the key note in showing that love is the answer. And, we ask you, can there be real, genuine love of man for man outside the Christian faith?

2. GETTING THE GOSPEL ACROSS TO THE JAPANESE. Have you ever talked to a Japanese, or a German, young person, who, throughout the war was living in the land of our "enemies?" It is quite an interesting experience. To be talking face to face with some one who, just a few years ago, if they had been following the orders of their government, would have killed you. Delving into their background you will discover that they did not really hate you. They didn't want to kill you. They had their homes, their loved ones, their jobs, their dreams. War has changed all that, and yet they don't seem to talk of hate, but only of a desire to live happily, minding their own business. So, in getting the gospel across to the Japanese, we must remember first of all, that they are not devils, but are human beings like as we are. They have souls, like we have. Our Christ died for them, as He died for us. As we have overcome barriers in gospel preaching in America, so we must cross this one great barrier of inbred fear, suspicion and ignorance of our Japanese friends. (That is, if we want to get the gospel across to them. If we don't, then we can continue our hatreds, memories, etc.) If we can't forget and forgive, then we will never Christianize Japan.

3. ONLY AS GOD LEADS. Except the Spirit leads, our work is in vain. The Book of the Acts is crammed full of the workings of the Holy Spirit. Every successful venture of the apostles was the direct result of their cooperation with the Spirit. As we anticipate missionary efforts in Japan, we must be very conscious of the fact that unless we follow the Holy Spirit, we will gain nothing. God must lead, we must follow. That is why we insist that we must first be submitted to the will of God. Then He can tell us whether we should anticipate going to Japan, as an individual or a Church. And, if God does lead, and we do follow, there will be a missionary work so great that its impact will be felt throughout the whole world. The advance of the gospel is hindered only by our unwillingness to be yielded to God's will.

4. THE GOSPEL, ALWAYS THE GOSPEL. Because of the interest focused on Japan this fall, you will be called upon from every direction of the wind to contribute financial support toward church efforts in Japan. This agency, and that society will be after you. All in the name of Church work. But, be a little careful to whom you give your tithe money and offerings. Investigate, to be sure that the money you give will be used to buy Bibles, supplies and support missionaries who are dedicated to preaching the true gospel. So much goes on in the name of religion which we Christians have no business supporting with our money. Cannot you see how foolish it would be for you to give your money to buy text books for a school in Japan, for instance, if those text-books gave a poisoned picture about Christ? There are enough good, fundamental, true gospel preaching missions located in Japan, through whom we can give our money, that we had best avoid promiscuous gifts through agencies whose policies we do not know. If we give, we want people to hear the gospel through our gifts, so be careful—investigate!

QUESTIONS

1. Do you think Japan could become a leading Christian nation of the world, surpassing even the United States?

2. Do you think if we try to make Japan a Democratic nation we will be going far enough? Consider the fact that democracy is founded in Christian ethics. Consider also that unless we teach Christ for the heart, we have not taught democracy.

3. What do you think is the possibility of our own Mission Board establishing a mission work in Japan?

Whatever truth we possess is the same as God's truth, only there is not so much of it.

IN A QUIET PLACE

Out of the peace and quiet of an hour
Alone with God, may come a wealth so great
That any heart can find a hidden power
Undreamed of hitherto: the power to wait
His blessed will, or power to rise and go
Into a hard-pressed battle for the right,
Or it can give the impetus to grow
Out of the hindering darkness into light.

As Christ Himself felt deep and vital need
Of many a quiet waiting while alone
With God the Father Who has food to feed
All hunger that men's souls have ever known,
So would I seek Him in some place apart;
Some quiet spot where I can hear Him speak
His words of wisdom to my waiting heart,
And there find strength and comfort which I seek.

STICKING CLOSE TO THE LORD

Select hymns of devotion and love to the Lord

Scripture: Acts 11:22, 23

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE FATHERLY Barnabas was sent by the Jerusalem Church to investigate the new Gentile Church established at Antioch. When he saw the evidences of God's saving grace and power among the Gentiles he exhorted the saved that with purpose of heart they should cleave (adhere or stick) to the Lord. Conversion is not the end, but the beginning of Christian experience. After the new birth we are but babes in Christ with healthy appetites for growth (1 Peter 2:2). The nurture of a babe requires proper care, food, cleansing and fresh air. This care is provided by the Christian Church and the Christian home. Naturally, we are to advance beyond immaturity (Heb. 5:11-14).

Apart from the Word there can be no new birth (1 Peter 1:23-25). The Holy Spirit uses God's Word to convict us of sin and of our dire need of a Saviour. Now that we have taken Christ as our personal Saviour (John 1:12, 13), let us put forward every effort to glorify our Redeemer (Col. 3:17; 1 Cor. 10:31). We have to lay aside and put off our former ways before we can put on spiritual nourishment and upbuilding (1 Peter 2:1, 2; 2 Cor. 5:17; Col. 3:8-10, 12-14). No progress will be made as long as our Bible is neglected. Over our open Bible let us lift our eyes to Him Who wrote it (2 Peter 1:21). In no other way can success be made of a Christian life (Josh. 1:3). By natural understanding we may not comprehend much (Isa. 55:9; 1 Cor. 2:14). But the God Who wrote the Bible has given us the Holy Spirit (Eph. 1:13). Our minds and bodies are now the temples of the Holy Spirit Who delights to show us the things of Christ (John 14:26; 1 Cor. 2:9, 10). Read to understand because you are in love with the Author!

We can cleave to the Lord through prayer (Phil. 4:6). Without a prayer life there can be no Christian growth and usefulness. With purpose of heart cleave unto the Lord in prayer (Gen. 32:26). Take time to pray (Dan. 6:10, 13). Pray the meaning of the Lord's prayer until you can pray at liberty in the Spirit (Jude 20). Pray aloud in secret, and you will get liberty to pray in public. Continue in private and public prayer and the Holy Spirit will teach you to pray.

Once we did as we pleased and went where we liked with no thought of God. But now we belong to Another Who bought us in love at the price of His own death (1 Cor. 6:19, 20; 7:23; Rom. 12:1, 2). Do not be discouraged but constantly grow (2 Peter 3:18). Come to know Christ better, love Him more, and to serve Him more truly. Be faithful in attendance at public worship (Heb. 10:24, 25; Col. 3:16). With the Bible, prayer, and the Holy Spirit as your Guide you can walk in the light (1 John 1:7). Finally, "set your affections on things above" (Col. 3:1-4).

Lesson for November 13, 1949

PERFECTED THROUGH SUFFERING

Lesson: Isaiah 53:1-12

WHY WAS IT that we could not have salvation without the necessity of our Lord suffering to perfect it? Simply because it was in the plan of God. And who are we to question how or what God plans?

Paul, as he talked to the people after the miraculous healing of the lame man at the gate called Beautiful, said, "But those things which God before had shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer . . ." And here in our lesson, are the words of one of those prophets concerning this very thing. Of the Messiah Isaiah says, "He was despised, rejected, a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief." Wounded, bruised, chastised, beaten with rods—in other words, a "suffering Messiah." The only way it could be done was according to God's plan.

Was this plan perfected through the suffering of Jesus? Let us see!

Let us walk with the two men as they journeyed from Jerusalem to Emmaus following the crucifixion and burial of Jesus. They talk and they are sad as they walk. The question in their minds is the ever-present "Why?" Why did He have to suffer? What had He done to deserve this? Why did He have to die? Suddenly there walks One beside them. He hears their words: He questions them; then He, the suffering Messiah, speaks: "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things of himself." (Luke 24:25-27.)

Let us change the scene and assemble ourselves with the disciples in that closed room where they had shut the door "for fear of the Jews." The two men who had walked to Emmaus were back with the exciting news that they "had seen the Lord." They were telling their experience in a breath-taking manner. Then suddenly Jesus stands in their presence. How He got there, none could tell. They were terrified, but His words soon brought quiet to them. Note how He speaks:

"These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me. Then he opened their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures. And he said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things."

The plan of salvation as set forth in the Word is the Perfect Plan. There is no other. Paul says, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." No other name—but Jesus; no other plan—save that which God has set forth. The author of Hebrews says, "For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified." (Hebrews 10:14). Or as the Revised Standard Version has it, "For by a single offering he has perfected for all time those who are consecrated." But He had to suffer to perfect the plan.

Let us remember that the cardinal principal of the plan is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin." He had to suffer and die that we might have the privilege of entering into life eternal. He perfected the plan through His suffering.

come to the services and tell of hearing the 'Gospel Radio Hour' on the air. The pastor also receives many calls to visit those who listen in, and, as a result, many have been turned from false religions and cults.

"The Bryan Church receives many comments from business men, folks of other faiths, and from the WONW management. These friendly messages are very heartening, and are helping to assure the future of the popular program. Some listeners report that they use the 'Gospel Radio Hour' broadcast for their alarm clock. Others turn it on to keep Junior quiet. One rural listener declares he has a radio in his barn so he can hear the religious services while he is doing his chores and that his cows give more milk since he started to tune in on this feature.

"So well has the weekly feature been received in this vicinity that station WONW has invited the Bryan Church to renew its contract for another year."

Funerals

While a crowded audience from many churches was at the funeral of sister C. A. Stewart at New Paris, Ind., another was packed to the limit at the last scene in the life of a reckless young man at Nappanee. On the morrow while I was "officiating" in the funeral of Marion Tilman at North Manchester, at the same hour only a few squares away, another was being held in another church. We traveled a goodly number of miles for these meetings and it left an impression I wish to picture to you who read.

Different Customs

Great changes have transpired in the span of years since I began to attend such occasions. One of them was tremendously expensive to me and doubtless had much to do with my choosing the ministry as a life work. It was in the Fall of the year, just prior to the opening of the schools; I had to earn—and did—the money for books and the harvesting of the corn gave me the best income in that rather distant day; for it was more like piece work than almost anything for that time—the harder one "cut" the more he earned; the more "shocks" he set up, the more pay he received. Indeed, I believe it was almost the only "piece work" I ever did. But alas! One slip of the "corn cutter," a blade about two feet long and I was bleeding at the foot. I had cut a small gash in the top side of my foot. That day or the next I attended a funeral wearing a new pair of shoes and with the scant knowledge we had of infections in those days, I was soon to be laid on my back for seven weeks with "blood poisoning" which almost cost my life and left me a cripple of which few of my friends are conscious.

Crying and Weeping

One of the customs of that day in our community was to—dare I say it?—to work up a good loud cry. Fainting was not uncommon and kissing the dead body, almost an assured happening; all of which is so repulsive and unchristian that I presume this is more a protest than a censure.

Now, I do not protest weeping or crying. Crying releases pent up tensions and is good. It is the first thing the doctor wanted to hear when we came into this "vale of tears" and even "Jesus wept" at the grave of one He loved. This weeping was not for what was to become of the beloved Lazarus—but perhaps his humanity never was more fully demonstrated than here. He "wept with those who wept." No tender heart ever was untouched at the passing of friends and loved ones. We came crying into the world and we leave crying friends and relatives when we are laid to rest. Crying demonstrates our sympathy, love, tenderness and regard for separation, loss; it expresses the last tragedy of separation and the regret for the necessity for grave or crematory. "Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning."

"Weeping and Gnashing of Teeth"

At least four times Jesus tells of the terrific pain, anguish and grief of those who disdained the proper course and use of life. Matt. 8:12; 13:42, 50; 20:13; 24:51; 25:30; Luke 13:28. Should any unchristian person, or any careless, indifferent professor, or any baseless hypocrite be reading this message, I commend the reading and consideration for such terrific experiences with human frailty coming only to such negligent sinners. Every pictured background of these excruciating experiences is that of a misspent or misused life. Missing the mark by sinning; missing the road by neglect; missing the happiness of the redeemed by selfishness, greed and presumed superiority, or imagined goodness too meager to gain the Promised Land—where sit "Abraham, Isaac and Jacob" in "the Kingdom of God." Weeping, but too late! "Too late, will be the cry; Jesus of Nazareth has passed by." What a tragedy are such tears!

Crying or Rejoicing

Shakespeare makes Mark Anthony say in his funeral oration: "I came to bury Caesar, not to praise him!" But he did not know life. He might have known; but he did not seek the source. But he did not bury Caesar. No one is buried, only the body is buried; David said of his child: "He is dead"; then, "I can go to him, but he shall not return to me." After all, the "dead" as we say of them, are not dead in the manner of ceasing to exist. Do not say of the departed, "he is in the coffin of the grave." It is only the body. He has gone. Gone to the realities of the only real existence. Jesus said of Lazarus, "He is not dead, but sleepeth."

The Dead are Not Dead

The rich man and Lazarus were "dead" in the sense of being done with this body; each of them being in a different place, separated by a "great gulf fixed," so that neither could pass from one to the other; but one happy and the other in remorse; one saved the other lost, seen as they had been in life; one right with Jesus and his pattern for life and happiness, the other wrong because of his selfishness and greed; one "comforted" and the other "tormented." Ah, me! What a loss for so short a time of imagined happiness!

A great saint was passing and all knew it. There was weeping and expressions of grief and sorrow. But the saint said, "I have been dying for the last twenty years; now I shall begin to live." Even though he did not have the knowledge of science we now have, he knew the real truth; for science says we begin to die at thirty years of age and doubtless any sensible person past two score and ten will believe it and measure his work to that end or else he will surely pay the penalty. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

A Natural Body and A Spiritual Body

"There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:44. Or as Weymouth translates it, "There is an animal body and there is a spiritual body." There is life, and also a "more abundant life." Believe it and be happy.

News From Our Churches

LOST CREEK, KY. TO JONES MILLS, PA.

Mrs. Keck and I greatly enjoyed being at Riverside this past year, being in charge of the Boys' dormitory, teaching in the High School and working with a fine group of young people, 75 or more, at Leatherwood. When the writer entered Ashland College in the fall of 1920, Howard Leslie, a senior, was his roommate. Howard had taught at Riverside in 1917. He showed me pictures of the buildings and told me about the effectiveness of the work of Brother and Sister Drushal. When Brother Drushal first went to Lost Creek very few people could read and write. And until the present date I suppose that several thousand people have come under the influence of Riverside. Almost all these people came to know the Lord. I suppose that during this last school year that around 50 were baptized.

When Brother Drushal invited us in June of 1948 to come to Riverside for an indefinite period, this greatly interested us for I have closely followed this work for the last thirty years. I thought this would give us an opportunity to make friends for Riverside so that the work might go forward in the way that the Lord might lead. We prayed that if the Lord wanted us at Riverside that He would open the door to that work. He did. We were accepted for the work. We moved from the parsonage at Linwood to a six room house at Union Bridge two miles away. Mrs. Keck resigned as Postmaster at Linwood and was checked out. Our goods left for Riverside on Friday, August 13 and we left on Monday, August 16, arriving there on the 17th.

While at Riverside we wrote many letters telling not only Brethren, but other interested people, about the work. It seemed to us that Brethren people as well as others were greatly interested in this work. We trust that this interest will continue. This past year our daughter Grace, aged eleven, roomed at the Girls' dormitory. We thought it best for Grace to be with us and under the influence of her mother. If there had been a cottage for us to live in we would have been glad to have remained at Riverside. Perhaps some time a cottage can be built and we can return for we are still interested in the work.

When we left Riverside on June 1, we told Brother Drushal that we would return to teach if no church gave us a call this summer. We drove to Teegarden, Indiana, where my people live, then to Ashland, Ohio, and on to Linwood, Maryland, for the Southeast District Conference. We came back to Ashland for a few weeks. Here we received word that the Brethren of the Jones Mills and Mt. Pleasant churches wanted us to accept their pastorates. We came here Saturday, July 9th.

Since there is no parsonage and empty houses are so scarce we were fortunate to find a place where we could have three furnished rooms. A small summer house about 12 feet square became our kitchen, dining and living room—all in one. We will have a small five room house about the middle of October.

The Valley Brethren church is located about one-half mile from Jones Mills, which is about 50 miles east of Pittsburgh. We are two miles from Donegal where we can get on the super highway. The mountains rise about 1400 feet to the east of us. It is five miles to the top. A fine parking lot for cars has been made, a furnace has been installed and the church has been redecorated inside since we saw it last which was twenty-one years ago. This was the writer's first pastorate.

The church at Mt. Pleasant was redecorated inside prior to our coming and the basement has been cemented since we came. The plan is to repaint the outside of the church next summer. It was too late to do it this fall.

We have our morning worship service at Mt. Pleasant at 9:30 A. M. to 10:30. This gives us a little time to speak to the Brethren at the close of the service and to drive about twelve miles to Jones Mills. The next service is from 11 to 12 o'clock.

The work at both churches is going forward as both congregations have good and capable leaders. We have a prayer meeting service at Mt. Pleasant and an evening service on Sunday at Jones Mills.

On August 1, nine of us drove to Lost Creek. Jack Stahl and his wife drove truck through to get our personal belongings, three pieces of furniture consisting of a studio couch, a dresser and a desk and a typewriter. Again we do wish to thank all those who helped us financially and in other ways so that we could get some things in place of those we lost by the fire, and more now as soon as we move into a larger house.

Seven went in our car: Bertha Drach from Linwood, Maryland, Lorraine and Rebecca Lessman of the Mt. Pleasant church, and our family. Grace our daughter sat on a stool all the way there and back a distance of over 1,000 miles. A repair on the truck delayed us a little so that we got into Riverside at about 12:00 P. M. our time, but 10:00 P. M. their time. We do wish to thank Brother and Sister Drushal for their kind hospitality to us as a group. The Boys' Brotherhood from the Third Brethren church at Johnstown brought over two bells which were taken along to Lost Creek. We spent about one-half day in placing the engine bell up as a dinner bell. The large school bell was taken to Stacy to be used as the chapel bell.

We were glad to see the progress of the work on the Wheeler Home (Boys' dorm), under the leadership of Brother Hunter. Two corners of the building were laid while we were there. We came back by the way of Ashland, Ohio, so that those with us might see our college.

The Harvest Home Day service at Jones Mills has been observed and reported. Pray for the work that we might do His will. We covet your prayers.

Elmer M. Keck.

The faultless folk are all dead. There never was but one "altogether lovely," and others crucified Him.

Laid to Rest

STEWART. Mrs. C. A. Stewart, wife of Rev. C. A. Stewart of New Paris, Indiana, went home to be with her Lord, quietly and unexpectedly in her sleep, on October 2, 1949, at about five o'clock in the morning. She had been in failing health for over a year, but had not been bed-fast, and was active and doing all her work at home. Her passing was sudden and she had slipped away a few minutes before being discovered by her husband.

She was sixty-eight years of age and a native of Nappanee, Indiana. She was very active in the work with her husband, and interested in the work of the church wherever they served. Until recently she worked with the children and was active in all of their programs. She had a great host of friends as was manifested by the hundreds who came to see her from great distances, or in some way extended sympathy.

"Her suffering ended with the day;
Yet lived she at its close
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.

But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
She passed through glory's morning gate,
And walked in paradise."

—James Aldrich.

Services were in the First Brethren Church in New Paris on Tuesday, October 4th at two o'clock. Rev. W. I. Duker, pastor of our Milford Church, and Rev. Willis E. Ronk, pastor of our Goshen Church, were in charge. Burial was made in the Union Center Cemetery west of New Paris.

TILLMAN. Marion A. Tillman—Born 1867, passed to the Beyond, Nov. 11, 1949 aged 81 years. Married twice: first to Mary Ellen Stair, who bore him two daughters, Pearl and Gladys. His second wife was Lillian M. Johnson and both of them preceded him to the other World. Three grandchildren also survive. Both he and his daughters were baptized by the writer. Farmer, he lived close to nature and to his Savior, loving and being loved. Smiling, he brought cheer to all who met him. Sorely afflicted, he longed for the passing which came easily as he breathed his last. Funeral service at the Bender Funeral Home at North Manchester, Indiana, conducted by his former pastor. INTERESTING ITEMS

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff says "Attendance and interest are picking up at both of our Wednesday evening hours—prayer meeting and Bible Study."

St. James, Maryland. Brother Freeman Ankrum, who recently assumed the St. James pastorate, says that he is getting a great deal of assistance from some of his new parishioners who are acting as "guides" in his get-acquainted calling. Brother Ankrum has taken over the task of editing and producing the weekly bulletin, a task that has been so well handled by Miss Thelma Baker, assisted by Mrs. Isabelle Baker. Mrs. Baker will continue to assist in collecting the bulletin material.

St. James reports that as of October 9th the offering for the Ashland College Emergency Fund had reached the sum of $545.00.

The Men's Bible Class held a family dinner in the Sunday School room for the members of the class and their families on October 23rd, immediately following the morning services.

Brother Ankrum, who recently held a meeting at Kimsy's Run, twelve miles from Mathias, West Virginia, for Brother Ludwig, reports one baptized and received into the church.

Uniontown, Penna., Second. Brother Ralph Mills, who recently became the pastor of the Uniontown church, reports that at a recent business meeting it was voted to purchase a new bulletin board and a motion picture projector, in order that they might better serve the community.

Oakville, Indiana. Brother Henry Bates, Oakville pastor, says, "The church owes a word of thanks to the Junior W. M. S. and also to the Sunday School for their generous gifts of $100.00 and $50.00 respectively, which were given to the Church Furnace Fund."

Elkhart, Indiana. We note that thirty-eight pupils of the Children's Division of the Sunday School had a perfect attendance record for the last quarter.

Brother L. V. King, Elkhart pastor, was the guest speaker at the County Line, Indiana, Homecoming on Sunday, October 9th.

Waterloo, Iowa. The Senior Sisterhood of Mary and Martha had a Father-Daughter party at the church on Monday evening, October 17th.

At a recent Laymen's meeting, held at the Waterloo Church, the special feature of the evening was the furnishing of both the entertainment and refreshments by the Young Men's and Boys' Brotherhood.

A farewell party was planned by the Official Board of the Waterloo Church for Brother V. E. Meyer and family, it being held on Tuesday evening, October 25th. Brother Meyer will soon take over the pastorate of the Nappanee, Brethren Church.

Warsaw, Indiana. Brother E. J. Beekley, recently installed as pastor of the Warsaw church, announces the revival services of the church as of October 30 to November 13. Brother Beekley will act as his own evangelist.

At the recent Homecoming of the Warsaw church we note that the attendance was 175, with over 100 remaining for the dinner and the installation services for the new pastor in the afternoon.

Brother Beekley was the guest speaker at the Dutchtown, Indiana, Homecoming in the afternoon of October 9th.

Brother Beekley reports that fourteen of the Warsaw young people attended the Youth Rally which was held at Goshen, Indiana, on Tuesday, October 18th.

The Warsaw church always raises its coal offering on Rally Day, and this year was no exception. The amount raised this year was $341.60.

A Hallowe'en party was given by the Warsaw Senior Sisterhood, with the Woman's Missionary Society and the Junior Sisterhood as guests, on Tuesday evening, October 25th.

New Lebanon, Ohio. The New Lebanon Woman's Missionary Society will hold their Public Service on Sunday, October 30th, with Mrs. Ruth Royer, of Louisville, Ohio, Ohio District W. M. S. President, as the guest speaker.

Brother W. C. Berkshire, New Lebanon pastor, is closing a revival meeting for Brother W. R. Deeter at Udell, Iowa, on Sunday, October 30th. This meeting began on Monday, October 17th. No doubt we will shortly receive a full report of this meeting.

The New Lebanon church recently voted to continue as a 100% church for "The Brethren Evangelist." The cost of the subscriptions will be taken from the church treasury.

HARMONY OUT OF DISCORD

LAST NIGHT (Sunday, October 23) as our group at Ashland sat in the Intercessory prayer room, where we had met for prayer as usual on these stated nights, there came through the walls of this room a mingled sound of three other groups—the three Christian Endeavor societies—each singing a different song at the same time. The discord (or maybe we should call it “disharmony”) that resulted, fell upon our ears with grating tones. Some of the words were distinguishable, but they lacked the sense of comprehension because they were of different hymns; sometimes the strains of these various hymns seemed to fit one into the other, but all in all it became but a jumble of sounds that jarred upon one’s musical sensibilities and left no impression either of unity of melody or of thought.

Of course it could not help but set me to thinking!

How like the sounds of the world today as they fall upon our ears—sounds that might have an understandable melody if they were not intermingled with others of like nature. But they are sounds that come forth with differing tempos, each seeking to be heard above the others. Differing groups have differing “panaceas” which they are trying to shout into being, each seeking to outdo the others in getting their propaganda out before the people. So confusing has it become that very few people, indeed, seem to be listening any more, but are seeking to go forward in their own way, regardless of how their way may affect others who are around them.

But that is the way of the world. We might liken it to the static which come so often to ruin the reception of the programs on our radios. Unable to make sense out of the program because of interference, we are likely to simply turn off the radio, and thus miss what might have been a very educational or entertaining program. After all, isn’t it because we stop our ears and turn our minds from the program set forth by the church, that we fail to become the helpers we should be in the forward movement of our Brotherhood? We are letting the jumble of world interference take the place of the simple melody of God’s love and our own opportunities in the work.

But back to the “jumble of sound that came through the walls of the prayer room.” As we sat with bowed heads, the thought came to me that we were merely hearing with human ears. That we were not able to separate each melody from the other. And then as I listened more closely, I found that I could, by concentration, establish in my own mind all three of the hymns that were being sung. Why? Simply because I was familiar with each of them. And then I thought, “Well, even if the sounds that are coming to our ears seem to be meaningless, nevertheless God in heaven is able to incline His ear to hear and separate each separate melody into its harmonious parts and these songs ascend unto Him as a perfect song, making harmony to Him as they send forth His praises. Why? Because He is familiar with the lives of those that sing.

So, many times, what is but a jumble of sound, and a grating on the sensitive ear of man, becomes a “paeon of praise” to the Father in heaven. He hears “the melody” that is made “in the heart,” not merely the sounds of the vocal cords of the individual. The closest of harmony from a person brought about by the singing of a hymn, may not ascend above the rafters of the church building, while the off-key singing of another may go up to the very throne of God. The difference is in the relationship of the person and His God. Yes, even out of discord, God can make the richest tones of harmony, if we will permit Him to.

Think it over!

DODD’S TESTIMONY FOLLOWS EXHIBITION RACE

Brother L. O. McCartneysmith sends us the following clipping from the October number of “Moody Monthly.”

“Because he consented to run an exhibition race in Stockholm, Sweden, Gil Dodds was able to speak for fifteen minutes to a crowd of 5,000 this summer about the things of Christ.

“While on the Youth for Christ tour in the Scandinavian countries, he was asked to run a race with Arne Anderson, one of Sweden’s great athletes. Dodds consented on condition that he be permitted to talk to the crowd afterward.

“Accompanying Dodds on the tour were Orval Butcher, youth pastor of the First Covenant Church of Minneapolis, and Mel Larson. The trio left the United States for Europe in mid-July, spending a month in Sweden and Norway.

“Dodds is holder of the world indoor record for the mile.”

DEATH CLAIMS CASSEL JACOBS

Word comes to us as we are about to go to press, that Cassel Jacobs, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Jacobs, formerly of Ashland, Ohio, but now residing at Kingsbury, California, passed away in a sanitarium at Kingsbury, where he had been a patient for a short time. He was an attorney-at-law in Los Angeles, California.

He was born on May 19, 1908 and was a graduate of Ashland, Ohio, High School and Ashland College. He received his jurist’s doctor’s degree from the University of Michigan. He served in World War II in the air division of the Navy. Here he arose to be a Lieutenant Commander, specializing in anti-submarine warfare. He served for three years with the Pacific fleet.

Besides his parents he is survived by two brothers—Edwin, Jr., of Kingsbury, California, and Dr. John B., of New York City.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

Three Steps To Salvation

Edward L. Yanchus

(Evangelist and Bible Teacher)

"For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Mark 8:36

SALVATION is the deliverance from sin and eternal damnation that God has provided through Christ: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Romans 6:23).

There are three steps to salvation: The first step is the realization of sin; the second, repentance; the third, faith in Christ.

The First Step

The first step to salvation is the realization of sin. Sin is disobedience to the commands of God. All men are guilty of sin: "Both Jews and Gentiles . . . are all under sin: There is none righteous, no, not one . . . for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." (Romans 3:9, 10, 23). Therefore all men need a Saviour to deliver them from sin and eternal damnation. "And she shall bring forth a Son; and thou shalt call his name Jesus (Saviour), for he shall save his people from their sins. (Matthew 1:21). ". . . even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." (1 Thess. 1:10).

The self-righteous man shuts the door to salvation in his own face; "for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." (Matthew 9:13). "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." (Luke 16:15). In His holy eyes "all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." (Isaiah 64:6). A Pharisee and a publican "went up into the Temple to pray." The Pharisee told God how good he was, and thanked Him that he was not wicked "as other men . . . even as this publican." God did not hear his self-righteous prayer. But the publican, realizing his sinfulness, cried out, "God be merciful to me, a sinner." And God heard his humble prayer. "I tell you, this man went down to his house justified, rather than the other. For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." (Luke 18:9-14). A man must first climb down the ladder of self-righteousness before he can climb up the ladder of true righteousness, "even the righteousness of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe." (Romans 3:22).

The Second Step

The second step to salvation is repentance. Repentance is remorse for sin, followed by a turning from sin and a turning to God through Christ. "Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." (Matthew 4:17). "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found: call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way: and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." (Isaiah 55:6, 7).

Heaven rejoices when one sinner repents: "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:10). "A certain man had two sons . . ." The younger son received his inheritance from his father; and went "into a far country," where he spent it all in "riotous living." A famine arose, and he began to suffer. In desperation he took a job feeding swine. He became so hungry that he would have eaten "the husks that the swine did eat, and no man gave unto him." With hunger, came memories of happier days in his father's house. And with memories came remorse for his sins. A penitent son returned to his father. "But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him and had compassion on him; and ran, and fell on his neck and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand and shoes on his feet. And bring hither the fatted calf and kill it, and let us eat and be merry. For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found. And they began to be merry." (Luke 15:11-24).

This is how God receives a penitent sinner who comes to Him through Christ—with forgiveness and great joy. "For Thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plentiful in mercy unto all them that call upon Thee." (Psalm 86:5).

The reconciliation of a sinner with God is a divine miracle. The sinner reaches up for God's hand, and God reaches down for the sinner's hand. But there is a great gulf between a sinful man and a Holy God. And there is only One who can bridge it—the Lord Jesus Christ: "Who being in the form of God . . . was made in the likeness of men." (Phil. 2:6, 7). He, alone, can reach down low enough; and He, alone, can reach high enough to join a sinner with God. He reaches down and grasps the sinner's hand with His left hand; He reaches up and grasps God's hand with His right hand. Then lovingly drawing them together, He places the sinner's hand in God's hand—a sinner is reconciled with God. "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ . . ." (2 Cor. 5:18). There is no other way to God: "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life: no man cometh unto the Father but by Me." (John 14:6). There is no other name upon whom we might call, "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12).

The Third Step

The third step to salvation is faith in Christ. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." (Eph. 2:8, 9). God requires a two-fold expression of faith—belief and baptism: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16:16).

When believers die, their souls go to be with Christ in Paradise (Luke 23:42, 43) until He returns with them. Their bodies will then be resurrected and joined with their souls. All who "are Christ's at His coming" (both "the dead in Christ" and "we which are alive and remain") will be changed, glorified, and lifted up "to meet the Lord in the air." (John 14:1-3; Acts 1:9-11; Rev. 1:7; Luke 21:25-28; and many others). They will live and reign with Him on earth for a thousand years (Isa. 65:9; Matt. 8:11; Jude 14, 15, etc.), and with God and Christ in the new Jerusalem throughout all eternity.

When unbelievers die, their souls go to dwell in Hades, or Hell (Rev. 20:13), until "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Peter 3:7). Their bodies will then be resurrected, joined with their souls, and lifted up to stand judgment before the "Great White Throne" of God (Acts 24:14, 15; Dan. 12:2; Rev. 20:11). They will be judged "according to their works" (2 Peter 3:7; 1 Peter 4:5; Rev. 11:18; 20:12, 13) and "cast into the lake of Fire . . . which is the second death" (2 Thess. 1:8, 9; Rev. 14:9-11; Matt. 3:12; Rev. 20:15; 21:8).

Belief in Christ must be openly confessed: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth, confession is made unto salvation." (Romans 10:9). "Whosoever, therefore, shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 10:32, 33). Jesus asked His disciples, "But whom say ye that I am?" Peter replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." (Matthew 16:15, 16). Jesus spoke these words to Martha (before He raised her brother, Lazarus, from the dead): "I am the Resurrection and the Life: He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" Martha answered, "Yea, Lord, I believe that Thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world." (John 11:25-27). The Ethiopian eunuch asked Philip, "What doth hinder me to be baptized?" Philip replied, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." The eunuch then confessed, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." (Acts 8:36, 37).

In the Greek New Testament, the verb that is translated "baptize" is always "baptizo" which means "to dip repeatedly." It is never "cheo," which means "to pour"; and it is never "rantizo," which means "to sprinkle." Scriptural baptism,* therefore, is by triune immersion "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." (Matthew 28:19). John baptized in a certain district "because there was much water there." (John 3:23). When Jesus was baptized, He "went up straightway out of the water." (Matthew 3:16). After the eunuch had confessed Christ to Philip, "they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip that the eunuch saw him no more; and he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8:38, 39).

*Infant baptism is unscriptural and invalid. (Consider the utter impossibility of a baby taking the three steps to salvation.) To be valid, baptism must be preceded by a confession of faith. Furthermore, there is no need for baptism until a child reaches the age of accountability (about six to nine years) and knows the difference between right and wrong. At that time, sin enters his life; and he needs a Saviour. Fortunately, when a child reaches the age of accountability, he can understand God's plan of salvation and make an intelligent confession of faith. He is then ready for baptism, but not until then.

A baby is innocent and sinless. Jesus never taught that innocent babies should be baptized. On the contrary, He taught that we must "become as little children" if we would be saved: "Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." (Matthew 18:3). Adults would do well to worry a little less about the salvation of innocent babies and a little more about their own salvation.

God's plan of salvation works: It removes sin; it gives eternal life. God made it possible to be saved through faith in Christ by sacrificing "His Only Begotten Son" on the cross of Calvary for the sins of the world: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16). God's atoning sacrifice was a twofold one: the Father gave His Son, and the Son gave Himself: "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto; but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Mark 10:45).

There are many man-made plans of salvation, but none of them will work: not one will remove sin or give eternal life. All of them are as inferior to God's plan as the creature is to the Creator. Will you accept a God-made plan or a man-made plan of salvation? Will you place your trust in God's reasoning? "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isaiah 55:8, 9). Don't reason against God; reason with Him. He wants you to reason with Him. Listen to Him as He says, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord. Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." (Isaiah 1:18). As you reason with Him, yield your mind to His mind; reason yourself into the Kingdom of God.

Report of the Mid-West District Conference

The Mid-West District Conference convened at Cheyenne, Wyoming, on Sunday evening, October 2, 1949, following the dedicatory services for the new Cheyenne Brethren Church, which were held during the afternoon.

Rev. E. M. Riddle, Secretary of the General Missionary Board of the Brethren Church, had charge of the dedication services. They have a newly built church which will be one to be proud of when it is completed.

Sunday evening, Rev. Wilbur L. Thomas, the Moderator of the Conference, of Mulvane, Kansas, had charge. Rev. Frank W. Garber, pastor of the Cheyenne Church, gave the welcome address. Responses were made by delegates from Falls City, Nebraska, Fort Scott, Kansas, Mulvane, Kansas, Brother D. G. Lemon of Portis, Kansas and Rev. E. M. Riddle of Ashland, Ohio.

The Credential committee was appointed as follows: Rev. H. M. Oberholtzer, O. A. Curtright and Rev. H. E. Eppley. The Resolution committee was named as Rev. Cecil H. Johnson, D. G. Lemon and Kenneth White. The committee on Time and Place: Rev. Frank Garber and James Rieger.

Dr. L. E. Lindower of Ashland Ohio, brought the message of the evening.

Monday Morning

The first business session was called at 9:25 o'clock on Monday morning. The Credential committee reported eight lay and five ministerial delegates. The election of officers resulted as follows:

ModeratorH. E. Eppley, Falls City, Nebr.
Vice ModeratorF. M. Garber, Cheyenne, Wyo.

The office of Secretary-Treasurer-Statistician has always been held by the same person. An amendment to our constitution made this into three offices, with the following elected:

SecretaryMary E. Rieger, Falls City, Nebr.
Treasurer ..Mrs. Clarence Oldfield, 1726 Colorado Street, Manhattan, Kansas
StatisticianKenneth White, Cheyenne, Wyo.

Reports were given from all auxiliary organizations of the District, which showed an improvement over last year.

On account of distance the idea of two camps in the district was discussed. It was agreed that a camp near Cheyenne should be held, as well as Camp Wyandotte.

The Moderator gave his address at this time. This address will be printed in The Evangelist.

This was the smallest District Conference for several years, largely because of the distance from other churches, but the spirit of Christian fellowship was quite pronounced all through the program.

Our next Conference will be at Fort Scott, Kansas, the first full week in October, 1950.

Mary E. Rieger, District Secretary.

THE MINISTRY OF THE OBSCURE

Scripture: Luke 8:1-3

DID YOU EVER SEE a tombstone with an epitaph upon it; without even the initials of the one who slept beneath it? Well, here in our lesson portion is something like that. Certain women are mentioned by name because they ministered to Jesus: Mary Magdalene, Joanna and Susanna. These have an honored place in history. They will not be forgotten—because they ministered to Jesus.

We are reminded of Mary's loving gift, valuable in itself and given immeasurably greater value by the Master's commendation of her use of it. We hear Him saying, "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her." Oh to be memorialized thus by the Lord!

But note with me as we continue our reading of this passage—"and many others which ministered unto Him." Who were these nameless ones? Only God knows that: But He does know. The great mass of Christians can never hope to be historical saints—but who cares?

Thomas Gray, in his poem, "Elegy in a Country Church Yard," has given some very pertinent lines on the thought we are trying to express. He draws a picture of a country Church Yard, and says in verse three:

"Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-trees' shade,
Where heaves the turf in many a mouldering heap,
Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

"Let not ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure!
Nor Grandeur hear with disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.

"To boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Awaits like the inevitable hour,—
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

"Their lot forbade: not circumscribed alone
Their growing virtues, but their crimes confined;
Forbade to wade through slaughter to a throne,
And shut the gate of mercy on mankind.

"Far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife
Their sober wishes never learned to stray;
Along the cool, sequestered vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

"No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode,
(There they alike in trembling hope repose)
The bosom of his Father and his God."

Abraham Lincoln said, "God must love the common people; He made so many of them." We have much comment concerning the common people, but I like to think that they are never out of God's thought. And I am glad that the Lord Jesus made an appeal to the common people, that is, they became aware of the best things as they fellow-shipped with Him. The Word tells us that "The common people heard Him gladly." And that suggests that He thought for and with them.

So He Who notes the sparrow's fall, Who clothes the lilies of the valley, so that a king's greatness and glory are dimmed in comparison with the beauty with which the Creator adorns them, Who numbers the very hairs of our heads, will not forget us, and no place we can occupy, no task we can ever be assigned, will be forgotten by Him. What matters then, the place we occupy, so it be in the service of the Lord, and that we are faithful?

—Linwood, Maryland.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

"In The Fog"

It was a foggy morning, Indeed. The radio warned of it and gave the reason for it. I had a trip to make—one of those one could miss easily, save for the possibility of meeting many friends—one of those gatherings that come as seldom as once a year. To miss it was to miss more than an ordinary meeting. The "outstanding preacher" on the program was so busy—or something—that he was flying and the fog was so dense that the pilot was unwilling to risk trying to "land" at Ft. Wayne and so, because of the diminishing supply of gasoline, after circling three hours, it was said, he flew on to Cleveland with the preachers, and neither he nor the presiding officer ever got to the meeting, and here I am reporting before I know what became of him or them! Well, won't you agree that that was some fog? It was even too foggy for my traveling companion, Lady Bame.

"Other Fog"

All the time of the trip I was thinking of the other fog in which we mortals dwell all the time. The Light of the World hath shined in the darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not. John 1:5. He shines all the time, just as our sun, made to "rule the day," shines all the time; but we spend half of the day in darkness. How well it would be if all humans knew of that Light and walked in it, even half of our 24 hour day. Or even if they'd get out of the fog of sin all the days of their human life-day.

Why Fog?

Fog comes when cold strikes warmth. And that is what happens in most cases when warm-hearted Christians try to bring the Light of the Gospel to cold, careless worldly people both in and out of the church. That "Satan blinds" is the sure message of heaven. Satan authors sin and none else does. Forget not that! Any yielding of ourselves to the offense of his teachings and commandments will be transgression and "sin is transgression"; disobedience is rebellion, iniquity is neglect and trespass, is selfishness, and all take away the light and bring fog or complete darkness.

Fog and Danger

Measured by the fine mist of the morning falling softly, easily, noiselessly, watering the earth, dampening the dust, it might have been and was a blessing, but for the dangers of driving in our swift and swifter cars. I was made to wonder what one will say facing the judge of all the earth, however sober one may be or have been, meeting death suddenly and swiftly in many of our accidents, pyramided by the fog. Life shortened, opportunity cut off, sacrifice for the cause and generosity stopped, the plan of God for a life ended all because we hurry to get there and wonder why, when we arrive.

"What will you say, In the Judgment Day?" if your life is shortened by needless accident?

More Than 100 Preachers

This was one of those meetings I like to attend because of life-time friendships. Of course, I'll aver that I can get good out of any service that points or leads to God in worship. But I worship God on the road, in the woods, during waking hours of the night and at work during the day.

In the morning I see his Face,
In the evening His steps I trace,
In the darkness His voice I know,
I see Jesus everywhere I go."

To this meeting I go most of all to meet and greet friends of more than forty years association and begin new ones. I began meeting this group of preachers 30 years ago and most of that group have gone to their reward or are awaiting the call in more seclusion than at a convention. Perhaps two-thirds of this group knew me only passingly, or as that "Charley Bame that 'went Progressive.'" Many of them now more progressive in another way than I ever wished to be, they do not know nor ever will, perhaps, what a part I played in the liberty they now enjoy. A fine group of talented, educated and trained preachers have succeeded a ministry that once was committed to opposition of much these now hold necessary to the sacred calling.

Only Two Beards!

Once, one of the good qualifications was to be able to wear a beard. In my pastorate among these people, I once tried to foster one; but when it was six weeks old, I was so disgusted with it that it came off and Oh, My, What a lot of shaving it has taken to keep it off in that long time since! Once, almost every preacher had a tonsorial decoration, or maybe that is too nice a characterization for many of them; for surely as time has flown into eternity, what is left of beards have become much more a decoration than at that day. "Time marches on" and with it, beards have again all but disappeared.

And Bonnets!

Then, a sister with a hat was heretic. Indeed, doubtless history has not recorded the fact that my ministry was all but taken from me because I would not promise

Mrs. M. A. Stuckey Reports On The Travels of Dean Stuckey (As reported in "Sem-News")

On September 3rd Mr. Stuckey sailed from New York for Southampton, England, on the RMS Queen Elizabeth. The voyage took 5 days. The steamer is the world's largest liner, having gross tonnage of 83,673. The length is 1031 ft., breadth, 118 ft., carrying 2,000 passengers. He was delighted with the fine service and complete enjoyment this ship afforded.

There are 29 adults in the party which is being conducted by very efficient guides trained by the American Express Co. They travel in a chartered bus for the shorter trips, and by rail for the distant points. The majority of the personnel in the party consist of professional men and women. Mr. Stuckey writes that "the best kind of people are in our party, cultured and refined."

While in England headquarters were in London with trips to the colleges at Oxford, Eton College, Windsor Castle, Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, Anne Hathaway's Cottage, etc. The last few hours he spent in London at City Lane, the Church and home of John Wesley.

From England the next stop was Amsterdam. Holland was quaint and he found the people making a remarkable "come-back" after the devastating war years. After leaving Holland two days were spent in Brussels, Belgium. They visited the Battlefield of Waterloo and the Royal Palace and many other places of interest.

Luxembourg was the only city visited enroute to Switzerland. Lucerne and Interlaken were the two beauty spots where they saw the many wonderful sights that are characteristic of this land. The weather has been ideal and they were privileged to see the sunset glow on the beautiful Jungfrau's snow-covered cap, a sight that all tourists cherish. Of the Swiss people Mr. Stuckey stated: "They are the best folks we have met in Europe. They are industrious, hardy, unaffected and sincere."

With reluctance they left this Swiss country and journeyed to the land of Italy. Here they are visiting Milan, Venice, Florence Siena, Perugia and the Eternal City of Rome. As this is being written the party is in Rome and 5 days will be all too brief in which to see the many interesting art galleries, museums, cathedrals, catacombs, Vatican and historical sites in that city.

From Rome they will travel to Naples, Isle of Capri, Genoa, Nice, Avignon and finally to Paris for the last 5 days of sight-seeing. He will sail from Cherbourg, France on Oct. 22nd via RMS Queen Mary for New York.

All hotel reservations, rail and bus transportation are arranged in advance for the party by well trained guides which the American Express Co. supplies.

Mr. Stuckey is very appreciative of the opportunity to spend part of his leave in this worthwhile manner and hopes to share with you the joy and knowledge he has experienced when he returns to the College and Seminary next semester.

Finding The Dividing Line

HAVE YOU NOTICED how simple and how direct the Bible is in its classification and analysis of men and things? There is a dividing line between the good and the bad; the wise and the foolish; the saved and the lost, and there is no such thing as mistaking the location of this line.

We, on the contrary, are so given to making divisions and subdivisions that we sometimes lose sight of the line altogether. In the parables of Jesus there are seldom more than two persons or classes of persons introduced. There were the two builders. One built his house upon the rock; the other built his house upon the sand. There is nothing said about the man whose house was built upon a mixture of sand and rock, whose house was partly defective and partly safe. We, if we were telling the story, would have thought it necessary to have introduced a few intermediate characters. Yet when we realize that the picture is to represent the man who has founded his hope upon the Rock, Christ Jesus, and the one who has not, we realize that there could not be more than two classes.

Then, there are the wise and foolish virgins. No doubt there were degrees of wisdom among the wise, and degrees of foolishness among the unwise, but in the matter of meeting the bridegroom when he came, they were either ready or they were not ready. Their lamps either had oil in them or they had not.

We have a parable of the sheep that were in the fold, and of the one that was outside of it. It is true that a sheep may have been only a few leagues from the fold, or it may have been miles away upon the mountains. But upon one point there was no difference: neither were safely inside the fold.

In conclusion from this, we are forced to the acknowledgment that there is no intermediate state between being saved and being lost. It is true that we may divide up those who are not saved into good, bad and indifferent. We may also divide up those on the other side into many classes. But on this one point there can be but one dividing-line.

While it does not lie within our province, usually, to decide just where others belong, we must, if we would live our lives sincerely, find out our own dividing-line. There are times when it would be a relief from responsibility if we could be on neither side of a dividing-line. Christ spoke deeply and with a steady voice when He said, "He that is not for me is against me." It is easy for the average person to answer the last part of this and to say, "I am not against Him." The real problem, however, lies in the positive side, "Are we for Him?"

The best time to attend to your neighbors' affairs is in your sleep.

Blaming your faults on your nature will not change the nature of your faults.

Good talkers have little trouble in getting jobs, but only good DOERS keep them.

The Conference Annual Number

Containing the 1949 Conference Minutes

The Annual General Conference Number of The Evangelist will be sent out under the date of November 5th. Because of the fact that this number is much larger than the regular issues, and that it takes much longer to print it (there being about three or four times as many impressions to be made and four times the stock to be printed, together with the printing and folding of the cover and extra folding and gathering of the sections) to say nothing of the extra time taken to mail it (for it must be mailed in different than the regular wrappers)—we ask your indulgence if you do not receive this issue as early as you would expect to receive the regular issue.

We are endeavoring to make this issue of the Annual as practical and as useful as it is possible to make it. Of course, even before it is off the press, there may be changes of address in the ministry, due to changes in pastorates. Also there may be found in the lists of Church Secretaries the names and addresses of other than the present officials. This is due to the fact that we received so few returns of the names and addresses of the present Church secretaries. Of such errors occur, we will be glad to make corrections in a special column of the Evangelist in such a way that these corrections may be clipped and pasted in your regular number.

According to the action of General Conference, the Financial reports which are printed each year in booklet form for distribution to the delegates of conference, are printed in this Annual number. We believe we have as complete a publication this year as we have ever had, and we trust it will be of value to many of our readers.

The names and addresses of Church Secretaries and the church membership of the churches, were taken from the Statistical report of our National Statistician, Brother William S. Crick. If there are errors in the membership rating, we will be glad also to make correction as above if the correction is sent to the Editor.

Brother Crick was able to report both the workers and the membership of our South American missions. This is interesting in the extreme.

Read your Annual—don't just take it from the mail box and say, "Well, another Annual Number." For this number shows the progress and the plans of the church and its auxiliaries as set forth in the late General Conference. If you read it and get into the full significance of it, it will lead you into a better understanding of that which you, yourself, should do to forward the work of The Brethren Church in the coming year.

No interests are so vital as those of Bible salvation and none should move us so deeply.

It is better to have a church all fair and glorious than the most glorious fair.

Ashland College News Letter

By Arthur Petit

At this time of the year, the spotlight at Ashland College is focussed on Homecoming. This year, it is set somewhat later than usual. November 5 will find the alumni and friends of the college returning to renew acquaintances and to reinspect the college. Each year the college, its faculty and student body look forward to the return of the former students.

This year, more than ever, those who hold pleasant memories of Ashland, whether former students or just good friends of the college should make a little more effort to be here for homecoming. The changes which have taken place since National Conference have been great. It is hard to say just how much of the remodeling will have been completed. We are sure of this, that there is not nearly as much completed as we would like. However, what has been done, is beautiful and I am sure that we will all be glad that it has been done. Plan to see it on November 5.

But there are other reasons why the alumni, both official and unofficial, should return. Not the least of these is the football game with Taylor University of Upland, Indiana. This will be the first meeting between the schools and it is hoped that it will lead to a long and happy relationship.

Before the football game, Miss Marilyn Ekey, a senior from the city of Ashland will be installed as Queen of the Homecoming. Miss Ekey is a very attractive senior majoring in English. This will be at 1:45 P. M.

One of the features of homecoming this year will be the massing of four high school bands along with the Ashland College band in a pre-game and a half-time show. Rittman, Doylestown, Loudonville and Mansfield Madison will send their bands to the college for that day. It should be very colorful and worth seeing.

Another feature of homecoming which you will not want to miss will be the tours of the campus beginning at 11:00 A. M. Your favorite campus personality will be in his office or classroom to greet you. In fact they will be there by 10:00 A. M. and will be willing to talk over old times. This will be worth all the effort to get here.

This is not all there is to Homecoming. The student council has planned to decorate the campus again this year. Various gates and buildings will receive attention. The week end officially opens on Friday night when the freshmen and upperclassmen will hold their tug of war followed by a pep rally. On Saturday morning at ten, the girls hockey game will start. On Saturday evening at 8:00 in the McDowell Auditorium, the footlighters will present their Homecoming play. The Homecoming of 1949 will officially end with the Sunday morning services in the First Brethren Church at 10:30.

Plan to be here. The date is November 4-5-6.

Saved souls should be soul savers.

ury, with the privilege of reimbursement by the various members if they wish.

On October 16th Brother Berkshire reported that the sum of $1,294.63 was sent to Ashland College to apply on the Emergency Fund.

Milledgeville, Illinois. Brother D. C. White, Milledgeville pastor, reports that the goal for the College Emergency Fund was set for $1,000.00. The offering was taken on October 23, at their Homecoming and Ashland College Day services.

Oak Hill, West Virginia. Brother Willis E. Ronk, pastor of the Goshen, Indiana, Brethren Church, is closing an evangelistic meeting at Oak Hill on Sunday evening, October 30th. The meeting began on Monday evening, October 17th. Brother Smith F. Rose is the Oak Hill pastor. Special prayer services were held each evening before the regular services.

We note that Brother Ronk spoke each morning—October 24 to 28—over Radio Station WOAY, on the Morning Devotions Program.

On Sunday, October 9th, a Gideon representative was guest speaker at the Oak Hill church.

Mexico, Indiana. We note from the Mexico bulletin of October 2nd that a new pulpit light, the gift of the Signal Light group, sponsored by Mrs. Joe Berkheiser and Mrs. James Donaldson, has been installed and Brother Higgins expresses his deep appreciation of the gift.

Brother Robert Higgins, Mexico pastor, announces the Mexico Fall Communion for Sunday evening, November 13th. Neighboring brethren are cordially invited to enjoy this service with the Mexico Brethren.

Johnstown, Penna., Third. Brother Richard D. Wolfe, Third Church pastor, reports that they will join with the Church of the Brethren in the observance of "Brethren Week" some time in November. The exact date has not been set.

The Rally Day Program of the Third Church was a fine, varied one. The financial goal for the day was set at $150.00, which sum was to be given to missions.

Dayton, Ohio. Brother S. M. Whetstone, Dayton pastor, reports "two splendid meetings" on Sunday evening, October 9th and Monday evening, the 10th. On Sunday evening fifty-two young people turned out for that meeting and on Monday evening twenty laymen had a splendid time at their meeting, with Oden Hartzell giving a good talk. The next laymen's meeting will be held on November 14th.

The Bethlehem-Mt. Olive, Virginia, Circuit. Brother John F. Locke, pastor of these two churches, in a note to the editor says, "A revival meeting is being held at the Bethlehem church, October 16th through the 30th, with Rev. Murray L. Wagner as minister, and Philip Trout of Bridgewater College as music director. Rev. Wagner was recently named 'Rural Preacher of the Year' in Virginia. He has been twice honored before for sermons on Rural themes. This is a community project. On October 31st we begin a revival at Mt. Olive with Brother Clarence S. Fairbanks, pastor of our Washington, D. C. church as evangelist, the meetings to continue for two weeks. These services will be followed with a Community Leadership Training School."

Vinco, Penna. Brother W. B. Brant, Vinco pastor, writes, "Had the largest communion I ever conducted last Sunday—150 communicants. We will be in our new Sunday School rooms soon. The roof is now sealed and the floor cemented."

Mansfield, Ohio. A card from Brother Elmer Carrithers, Mansfield pastor, says, "The First Brethren Church of Mansfield has purchased a parsonage. It is situated at 508 North Bowman Street." Brother Carrithers promises a full report of the Mansfield work soon.

Flora, Indiana. Brother J. G. Dodds, pastor of our Akron, Ohio, Firestone Park, church, who recently concluded an evangelistic meeting at Flora, reports a good meeting which began October 3 and closed with a communion on Monday, October 17th. He says a full report will be forthcoming later.

Brighton, Indiana. A card from Brother Walter Lichtenberger of Elkhart, Indiana, who has been serving the Brighton church as Lay Pastor, since illness compelled Brother Harry Gilbert to relinquish the work, says that he has received a call to continue to act in this capacity for another year.

Sergeantsville, New Jersey. The Fall Communion was held on Sunday, October 16th. Homecoming on October 9th, with Brother W. S. Benshoff as guest speaker, at the afternoon service. Brother J. J. Margush, pastor, was the morning speaker, and Rev. William Wadsworth the evening speaker.

Johnstown, Penna., Second. Brother Leatherman, pastor, says that eighty-four communicants were seated around the Communion table on Sunday evening, October 2nd—forty-eight sisters and thirty-six brothers..

Brother Leatherman has a word of appreciation to say about the janitor of the church. By the way, it would not hurt any for us to tell the janitor about some of the "good things" we see in his work, as well as "crabbing" about some of the things we see that he has not done. Not so?

We Visit a Revival. Brother and Sister E. M. Riddle invited the editor and his wife to accompany them to the revival services at Smithville, Ohio, on Thursday evening, October 19th, where Brother E. J. Black of Bryan, Ohio is evangelist and Brother "Bud" Hunter of North Manchester, Indiana, is the song director. It was a fine service and was climaxed by the coming forward of a fine young man to dedicate his life to the Brethren ministry. Brother Grisso, Smithville pastor, will, no doubt, have something to say about this when he makes his report of the meeting. It will make interesting reading.

Brother and Sister A. B. Cover in California. A note from Sister Cover says, "We have made our final trek across the country and are now located at 1100 West 57th Street, Los Angeles, California." They have been living at Somerset, Penna.

a delegation of high authority and absolute power from the Annual Meeting, never to baptize another woman without evoking a promise from her to wear a bonnet, while half the women of my congregation were not doing so at the time! And here, after 30 years, never a bonnet and too many (hats?) too "foxy" for this conservative Progressive to admire in this convention.

What Is Fog?

Now rid of such unscriptural encumbrances, is it wrong to have beards and bonnets? No! It never was wrong and it were better to have them now than to have no sign of separation from the world, when women spend more for style than for stability; more to beauticians than for world betterment.

Curls

It was Samson's long hair (curls?) that got him into trouble; and if I can read my Bible right, women will have trouble with the same violations as did he; for God as always demanded separation from the world. "Love not the world neither the things that are in the world; if any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him." (I John 2:15). That statement engulfs a large area. "This is the condemnation that light is come into the world and men love" fog, said Jesus. John 3:19. If one has this world's goods and does not hear the cry of the needy, says John (1 John 3:17), "how dwelleth the love of God in him?" The world smears the Christian with ugly spots. James 1:27; 1:10; 2:9; 3:5-8, 12; 4:4; 5:9, 13-16. 1 Tim. 2:9; 1 Peter 3:3; Rom. 1:24. Of all peoples in the world, Brethren should be the least "worldly"; it's in their blood, but it is getting very thin and the Devil laughs.

A NEW DEPARTURE FOR AMERICAN MISSION TO LEPERS

Dr. Marinus Van Weele of Sayville, New York, first missionary doctor, to receive his full salary from the American Mission to Lepers, sailed from Hoboken, New Jersey, on September 23rd, to start his leprosy career. He will spend a year in Paris studying tropical medicine. When his education is completed, he will supervise five Protestant Leprosy colonies in the Camerouns, Africa.

Dr. Van Weele completed his internship at St. John's Hospital in Brooklyn last Spring and spent the summer observing modern treatment methods in the National Leprosarium at Carville, La., a government institution. He is a graduate of Long Island College of Medicine.

The American Mission to Lepers, founded in 1907, provides medicine, supplies, and other equipment for 125 leprosy mission stations in 29 countries on five continents. It cooperates with 43 Protestant foreign mission boards in giving medical and spiritual care to leprosy patients.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"If it's heaven for climate, it's hell for company." From The Little Minister.—James M. Barrie.

Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to heaven, according to the Scriptures, and few there be that enter. And likewise broad is the way that leads to destruction and many there are who travel thereon.

Let us examine this universal fact and see why it is true. It seems that human nature shuns the exact and difficult but glories in the way of little or no resistance. It takes toll and sacrifice to walk on the straight and narrow path. But on a broad and downhill road one can go with ease and rapidity. These two trails of human nature make the difference between heaven and hell. Each group has its reward. The difference in the number of groups traveling these two roads speaks for itself.

The average person and all below him are naturally lazy. They have no urge from within, no native ambition. They must be directed and supervised and watched in order that they do an ordinary day's work. These take no initiative and do no more than they must to get by. This is the natural inclination, and their name is legion. They travel the broad and easy way. And they need a broad way and a wide gate in order that all may be accommodated.

This group is happy-go-lucky in its attitude and makes lively company for all fellow travelers. Theirs is the short range view. They are happy and content as they are. They have no real goal in sight and really do not know they are going down hill. Their satisfaction consists in living with the least effort, from day to day, heedless of what the next day or the next week may bring. There are joy and companionship in the great throng, and this is compensation. What else matters?

But for climate heaven is the place! Here the long range view stretches out before the eager traveler. One must walk circumspectly to pass through the gate on the narrow golden walk. It takes alertness, ambition and persistence to toil up the grade. It takes long hours of labor and self-sacrifice. It requires the use of all one's best abilities. The view as one travels along is magnificent and the air unsoiled and refreshing. The reason is that there are so few people to taint it.

Instead of the throng on the broad, hilarious road here the company is sparse, but choice. Often the traveler finds himself alone for long stretches of the way. His compensation is in this ethereal climate.

The burning truth is that only a few are willing to achieve and produce on their own. The remainder are content to grope. This illustrates the comparative characteristics of men.

Adversity may lead us to greater faith and dependence upon God.

WHAT DOES "WORLD ORDER" MEAN?

Scripture: Mark 12:13-17; Micah 4:1-5

For The Leader

HOW WOULD YOU GO ABOUT creating a "world order?" This is a pretty big question, but one for which nations would give much. We who are Christians, are convinced that only as Christ rules in the hearts of men, can there be any semblance of world order. Theoretically, it is a good idea. Practically it runs into grief. And the chief reason is that men will not submit themselves to Christ. They will not let His peace control their aims and ambitions. So, our theory finds tough going. But today we find strikingly opposing thoughts. The first, that men must work out the solution to the world order problem themselves, some of them feeling we have gained a lot of ground. Others feel that we cannot expect a genuine world order until the kingdom of Christ is established upon earth. All we have to say on this point is that with trends the way they are, we are in a critical period of the world's history. Let us give serious consideration to the possibilities of world order, the benefits to be derived therefrom, and how we are to feel towards a world order system.

DISCUSSION

1. MICAH'S WONDERFUL PROPHECY. Did you read the scripture carefully? Micah tells of a time when men shall turn their war instruments into implements of farming, and everyone shall have his or her own vine and fig tree. Was he dreaming, or telling the truth? Let it be here now understood: he was not dreaming. He was foretelling, under the inspiration of God, the coming of an era of peace and righteousness upon this earth. The ideal of every heart has its promised fulfillment in the word of God. Read that passage again, and discover that when the house of the Lord shall be established in Jerusalem, then will peace and world order be here.

2. THE ONE BIG FAULT OF WORLD ORDER SYSTEMS NOW. Certainly after thousands of years of pacts, treaties, armistices, constitutions, world order courts, etc., mankind would have learned a few permanent lessons. But the number of such pacts and treaties since time began which have not to this moment been broken can be counted on the fingers of two hands. The fault lies not so much in the pact or treaty, but the lack of integrity and honesty of the people who make them. Selfishness, lust and greed constitute the primary motives in men which cause wars. There has never been a peace treaty made that was fair to all parties. A treaty gives the victor the spoils, the loser is suppressed. A pact of nations has never been devised which gave equality to all signers. Somewhere in that group is a nation which hopes to profit at the expense of its co-signers. One reason the United Nations in three or four years of work, has, as a mountain, labored and brought forth a mouse of results, is that the "co-operating" nations are not willing to make concessions. A seventeen billion dollar program for the U. S. this coming year is mute testimony to the failure of our "world order" efforts since the war.

4. ABOVE THE DIN AND ROAR. That seventeen billion dollar figure stopped us for awhile. We cannot hardly conceive of such an amount being used to make guns, planes, detection devices and new machines to kill when we've just gone through such a terrible siege of bloodshed. Consider for a moment what that amount given to Missions would do. That seventeen billion dollars, if figured on a cost per person basis on approximately 140,000,000 Americans, brings the cost to almost $122.00 per person. Few people would ever give that much to missions in one year. Yet, above the din and roar of cannon and planes stands Christ, the Prince of Peace. What does He have to offer? He can replace sin with righteousness. He can bring peace of heart where once was greed and hate.

5. THE ONE TRUE WORLD ORDER. There is a "world order" today that goes beyond the bounds of race, language or color. It is the world order of those who have come to Christ, acknowledged their sin, and sought salvation through faith and obedience to Him. In this, they have been born into the family of God. At once they are opposed to the world's sin and hatreds. At once they are set apart. If they have failed to witness, to live, to preach, to give, then that is a charge which they must give reason for to God. But the system is there. It is certainly no credit to God's children in Christ that so little seems to have been done to improve world conditions. God knows the weaknesses of man and He knows also the power of Satan to dominate men's hearts, so He predicts in His Word the coming of severe wars, tribulation and destruction. For the Christian, there need be no fear, for we shall not see the days of tribulation. Being taken out of this old world before that time, we shall return with Christ to establish the reign of lasting peace. Sounds fantastic, but it's true. However, the fact that we shall be caught up e'er the worst begins, is no cause for us to throw up our hands and cry that there is no use working for better government and world order. We must be ever more zealous and determined that the principles of Christ shall permeate the laws and rulers of our land, and the nations of the earth. As we said, it would be a great thing if people would spend their armament money for missions in the name of Christ. But to do that, we must, through Christ's message, conquer the evil hearts that are filled with sin and hate and greed. What are we living for? That's our purpose and business.

QUESTIONS

1. What actual good do you think the United Nations Organization has actually accomplished?
2. What do you think has hindered its work?
3. Wherein do you think the Church failed in its work which might have led to the outbreak of the last war?
4. What do you think we can do to ward off the "next war?"

When will we learn that only as we give abundantly shall we receive abundantly?

THE FEET OF JUDAS

Ruth B. Statler

If I could learn forgiveness great enough
To wash the feet of Judas as Christ did;
If I could in humility bow down
And wash those feet, my proud self hid
On Calvary's hill, I then could know
A deep eternal peace.

If all men everywhere could learn
To wash the feet of Judas, white
Or black, all wrongs would be forgotten;
Love would rule the earth in might,
Conquered and conqueror brothers be,
And wars would quickly cease.

Prayer

Seed Thought Provokers:

"Ye have heard that it hath been said (Ex. 21:23-25; Lev. 24:19, 20; Deut. 19:21), an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth"—that is, whatever penalty was regarded as a proper equivalent for these. This law of retribution was designed to take the vengeance out of the hands of private persons and commit it to the civil magistrate. But it was abused in the opposite way in that private individuals took redress into their own hands away from civil and judicial authority (Prov. 20:22, 24, 29).

Instead of personal retaliation one is to be prepared, after one indignity, not to invite but to submit meekly to another (John 18:22, 23). The second mile religion is to submit to unreasonable demands, rather than to raise quarrels with all their evil consequences. "Ye have heard that it hath been said (Lev. 19:18), Thou shalt love thy neighbor . . ." But to this the corrupt traditionists added a cursed maxim—"and hate thine enemy," which they considered a proper treatment for the Gentiles. Little wonder the Romans charged the Jews with hatred of the human race! Let us not credit the prophet Moses with the twistings of God's Word by the traditionists to suit their sinful conveniences.

Jesus, Who is greater than Moses, made no provision for cities of refuge. He issued a new commandment: "This is My commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." Forgiveness "blesses him that gives and him that takes." It is far better to forgive and forget than to hate and remember. "To err is human; to forgive, divine."

Horrible and sordid stories of revenge cover Bible pages such as the terrible revenge of Levi and Simeon against Hamor; Samson against the Philistines; Haman against Mordecai; Absalom against Ammon; Saul against David; Herodias against John the Baptist; James and John against the Samaritan villagers who would not receive them, and the Jews pledged to kill Paul. But listen to Jesus: Mark 11:25; Luke 6:36; 9:55; Matt. 6:11; 18:21, 35. Saul of Tarsus with revengeful spirit consented to the death of Stephen, and breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of Jesus, haling them into prison. But Paul the Christian wrote the following wonderful passages on Christian forgiveness: Rom. 12:19-21; Eph. 4:32; Col. 3:13; I Cor. 13:4-7. The same remarkable change came over the Apostle John formerly a fiery, impetuous "Son of Thunder" (I John 3:10, 14).

The way of love and forgiveness is the way the Master went. "Should not the servant tread it it still?" Our need of forgiveness should teach us to forgive: "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." "Be ye merciful, even as your Father is merciful." Is it possible to forgive our fellowmen wrongs done and injuries received? "What man has done man may do." Joseph did (Gen. 45:5; 50:16-21). David spared Saul when he could have speared him. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, said, "Lord lay not this sin to their charge." Our greatest Example said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." By the grace of God I, too, can forgive if I will only yield myself to Him Who is my gracious Forgiver!

Lesson for November 20, 1949

THE GREAT INVITATION

Lesson: Isaiah 55:1-11

THERE IS NO GREATER INVITATION that can be issued than that which invites the sinner to come and partake of the good things of the Lord. This invitation is constantly issued throughout the entire Word of God. In fact that is the entire purpose of the coming of Jesus Christ into the world. He says, about Himself, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

His invitations are expressed in His every word and action; He is constantly calling men and women to "Come, follow Me." He says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, daily, and follow me" (Luke 9:23). Of course there is a necessity of an acceptance of the entire content of the invitation—even to the matter of "taking up the cross, daily." He stood up in the temple at the close of one of the feasts and cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink" (John 7:37). How well this verse fits into the lesson from Isaiah which we are studying today. Note what it says:

"Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

In the giving of ourselves we find it is a very small price to pay for all that He is ready to give. He put no price on His sacrifice. He "emptied himself of all of his glory," we are told, to come down and become our supreme sacrifice. And now He invites us to "come unto him."

How gracious is His invitation in Matthew 11:28-30, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

And in Jesus' parable of the wedding feast as found in Matthew 22. He issues a gracious invitation—"All things are ready, Come . . ." Then we read that they began to make excuses. How this fits into the second verse of our lesson: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? harken diligently unto me, and eat up that which is good, and let your soul delight in fatness."

When we receive an invitation we, many times, find the letters R.S.V.P. at the bottom. We are then supposed to either send our acceptance of the invitation or to tender our regrets at not being able to attend. Jesus has virtually put these same letters at the bottom of the invitation, but with a far different meaning. He will brook no "excuse"; He expects us to "Come."

Isaiah says, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near; let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." But Jesus says that the Holy Spirit will "not always strive with man," but there will come a time when the "door is shut" and the "invitation no longer sent out."

NOTICE TO ALL SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT LAYMEN

(The editor received this notice from Brother Purdy on Friday morning, October 21. He asked that it be run in the Evangelist about two weeks ahead of the date of the meeting. But since the issue of November 5th will be the Annual Conference Number, and that of the 12th the regular Missionary Number, we are running it in this issue in order that the notice may have ample coverage.)

THE NOTICE

The regular Quarterly Meeting of the Southern Indiana District Laymen will be held at the Burlington Brethren Church, Burlington, Indiana, on Monday evening, November 21st.

Burlington is located on State Route 29, south of Logansport. In Burlington turn right at the bank. All members are urged to be present.

PETE'S BIRTHDAY AND OTHER EVENTS MARK FIRST LEPROSY MISSIONS WEEK

THE THIRTY-SEVENTH BIRTHDAY of Pete, the plastic pig that has raised $2,000,000 for leprosy missions, was celebrated the week of October 9-16, when Protestant churches throughout the country observed the first National Leprosy Missions Week of Prayer.

"When Pete, the live pig, was sold on the market for $25.00 in 1912 by Wilbur Chapman, a ten-year-old White Cloud, Kansas, boy and the proceeds were sent to support Ai Sam, another ten-year-old boy in Chiangmai Leprosy Colony, Siam, no one knew that the pig would become wooden, castiron, and even varicolored plastic—to live for decades with no signs of failing health," Dr. Eugene R. Kellersberger, general secretary of the American Mission to Lepers, said, "Pete has been well-fed with coins in offices, homes and churches around the country."

"In the same manner," he added, "when the American Mission to Lepers was founded by a small committee in 1907 contributing some $4000 through the Mission to Lepers of London, the parent body founded 31 years earlier, few people expected that in less than a half-century, it would be expending over $500,000 a year for medicine, building equipment, chapels, worship materials, and other supplies.

"Pete has grown with the Mission. As we celebrated his birthday and held meetings for consecrated prayer, we remembered that we have as great a mission today in correcting common misconceptions about leprosy, as the early Christians had in 'loving the leper' and the small group of women in Dublin, Ireland, had in founding the London Mission."

In addition to Pete's birthday parties, special prayer meetings, radio programs, and sermons on "The Christian Approach to Leprosy" were featured during the Week. Members of local churches served as "Minute Men" dedicated to spend "a minute" each day to tell someone new something about leprosy. Various groups, such as women's clubs, youth groups, etc., each adopted a Christian leprosy colony and provided part or all of its support.

An essay contest for young people between the ages of 12 and 21 on the subject, "Five Reasons for Leprosy Missions," was held. First prize in the contest, which ended at midnight, October 12, is a visit to the U. S. Marine Hospital, Carville, La., a government leprosarium.

A poster contest open to all age groups was also conducted during the Week. Entries were submitted to the Mission's annual convention in Boston, Mass., which was held October 19-20.

"When we read of leprosy patients walking 28 miles and sleeping outdoors because no one would take them in, so that they might obtain supplies that were rightfully theirs, we have cause to rededicate ourselves to the task of spreading God's Kingdom through salvation of these souls," Dr. Kellersberger said.

"Ten million people suffer the disease today and only about one percent receive medical aid, not to mention the millions who have not found the love of Christ which they sorely need in their hour of trial," he said.

A life crowded with unselfish deeds has no place for selfishness.

The divine supply of cleansing, peace and power is ready and waiting for us.

Trouble to be overcome, must be met by a faith already firmly established.

News From Our Churches

ROANN, INDIANA

Greetings from the Roann Brethren Church:

I am writing to give you a few items of interest from our church.

We have been without a minister on the field for quite some time, but the pulpit has been very ably taken care of by Rev. C. C. Grisso of Mexico, Indiana. We have enjoyed having him with us very much. Speaking for myself, and I am sure for many others, I will say that we have been helped very much by Rev. Grisso.

Starting September first, Rev. C. F. Baldwin took over as a full time pastor of our church. He came from the Church of the Brethren. Prior to coming here, he spent seven years at Lincoln, Nebraska.

A new oil heating system and electric hot water heater has been installed at the parsonage. It has also been re-decorated. The kitchen has been equipped with an electric stove and refrigerator, also a new sink. The sink was given by the Loyal Workers Sunday School Class.

On September fifteenth we had a fellowship supper in the church basement. It was as a farewell for Rev. Grisso and a welcome to Rev. Baldwin. Each was presented with a lamp. A good time was had by all.

Rev. and Mrs. Baldwin have been working with Young People for quite some time. They have already organized a Youth Group here. The Baldwins are taking an active ing forward toward a great year together.

October the ninth was our Homecoming and Rally Day. interest in all phases of our church work. We are looking forward to a great year together. There were one hundred and seventy in attendance at Sunday School. There were several more for church. A basket lunch was enjoyed at the noon hour.

Rev. J. Milton Bowman, pastor of the Peru Church, was the afternoon speaker. Special music was enjoyed throughout the day.

Betty Meyer, Cor. Sec.

REVIVAL AT CENTER CHAPEL, INDIANA

I thought I should give the Evangelist readers a short report of the Center Chapel Revival, which was held from September 11 to 25.

This is a fine rural church and deserves a hearty "Thank You" for their attendance throughout the two weeks. Several families of four or more were in attendance at every service. The Center Chapel pastor, Brother Austin Gable, led our song service each evening, and also sang many beautiful special numbers. This pastor and his people have been doing a fine job in their community. It is probably the strongest "Camping Church" in the Southern Indiana District. Rarely did we find a family who were not members of some church. The Sunday morning attendance on each Sunday of the meetings was 112, which was a fine increase over their average attendance.

A schedule of noon-time and evening entertainment was worked out by the ladies of the church. The pastor and I certainly did not lose any weight during this two weeks.

Delegations from nearly all of the neighboring churches attended once or twice during the meetings. More than sixty-five of our Loree people came in two school buses on the first Friday evening of the meeting. The Loree choir and quartet came on the closing Sunday evening to help close the services. Visiting ministers were: Rev. Goldie Killion, Peru; Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Bowman, Peru; Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Baldwin, Roann; Rev. and Mrs. Garner, Erie E. U. B.; Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Grisso, Mexico; and Rev. J. E. Berkshire and family, Flora. A fine spirit of fellowship and cooperation was shown by these visiting brethren and their delegations.

The old custom of visiting between congregations during such meetings should be revived, for it certainly has great inspirational value.

I wish to express my heartfelt appreciation for the fine gift in payment for our services, and all the other considerations shown during these two weeks. Even though there were no immediate confessions, only God can measure the results of our work together. May God continue to bless both pastor and people as they labor in this fine rural church. Again we say "Thank you" for the opportunity of service.

R. K. Higgins.

FROM CANTON, OHIO TO WARSAW, INDIANA

Sunday, September 25, we closed our work with the Brethren Church of Canton, Ohio. In our four years of work and worship with these people, many advances for the church and for the Lord were made, many problems solved: a church building bought and paid for with the help of the Mission Boards; improvements and redecorating done; 52 members added to the church, and finally, a parsonage purchased.

The Canton congregation is made up of fine people who are now ready to go forward. We enjoyed our work with them and pray God's blessing upon them as they call another minister to their field. We made many friends in and out of the church and thank them all for their splendid cooperation in promoting this church from a room in the Y. M. C. A. to their present fine church building.

On our arrival here at Warsaw, Indiana, we were greeted by a Homecoming and Rally Day with a reception in the afternoon, with Dr. R. F. Porte, a former pastor, speaking. Also we found that the men had worked in cutting down three trees and sawing it into furnace size pieces at the parsonage, while the women prepared the inside of the house.

We are beginning to get acquainted with the town, the church people and the necessary work that needs to be done here in this church, that has had such an active past and has made many lasting contributions to our denomination.

In November we will hold a two week revival meeting beginning Sunday, November 6, and closing with Holy Communion Sunday, November 20.

Pray for us that the Lord may lead us on to success in saving souls and promoting His visible church here on the earth.

E. J. Beekley, pastor.

MEETINGS AT MATHIAS, WEST VIRGINIA

It was my good fortune to be invited to Mathias, West Virginia, in September, to preach for a week. Since I cherish the friendship of the pastor and his flock very greatly, this was a most pleasant visit. The Brethren came in encouraging numbers to the services and listened with serious attention. The meeting seemed entirely too short to me. And yet the Lord gave many blessings. Two precious souls made the great confession and were baptized on the closing afternoon of the meeting. The closing service of the week was the Holy Communion.

My home was with the pastor, Guy F. Ludwig and Mrs. Ludwig. Here, and in the homes of the people, I enjoyed the finest hospitality. This is a beautiful and wonderful region to visit. The kindness and cordiality of the people and their lovely country are always memorable. I want to assure the Brethren of the Mathias church and community that all their generosity will continue to be remembered by me with gratitude. May God's choicest blessings be theirs always.

John F. Locke.

BRIGHTON, INDIANA

There has been no report from the Brighton, Brethren Church for a long time. However, the church has been fairly active and has been making some progress. Because of the illness of our former pastor, Rev. Harry Gilbert of Elkhart, a layman, Walter Lichtenberger, was called to fill the pulpit. Brother Gilbert preached good sermons and was well liked by the church and the community.

At our last business meeting, held the first week in October, Brother Lichtenberger of Elkhart, who has been serving us since Brother Gilbert was forced to quit, was given a unanimous call for a year of service. He was elected by ballot and every member voted for him.

We are very fortunate to receive such a good man for pastor. Although he is a layman, he preaches better sermons than many of our ordained ministers. He is a Bible student and gives us the real gospel.

On October ninth we had a Homecoming service, with programs both morning and afternoon. We had a good program and a sumptuous basket dinner. The church was well filled.

On October 13th, the Woman's Missionary Group Rally was held in our church with meetings at 10:00 A. M. and 1:30 P. M. We had an overflow house. Many extra chairs were used. Delegates were present from Nappanee, Goshen, Dutchtown, Warsaw, New Paris and Milford. Brother E. J. Black and more than thirty of his members were visitors from Bryan, Ohio. A sumptuous dinner was served in the High School building.

We have a good parsonage and ought to have a pastor living here, but as that is impossible now, we are pleased to have such a good and able man to serve us.

Isaac D. Bowman, Route 3, Howe, Indiana.

Laid to Rest

KOHNE. Mrs. Sarah Virginia Kohne died suddenly October 12, 1949. In 1900 she was united in marriage to Rosser B. Kohne. She was the mother of five daughters and three sons. She made her home in the Mathias, West Virginia, community throughout her entire life. She was a member of the Mathias Brethren Church, where the funeral services were held on October 15, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Guy F. Ludwig, assisted by the undersigned.

John F. Locke.

WILKINSON. R. R. Wilkinson went to be with the Lord on August 17, 1949. He had in the months previous endured great suffering. This he bore quietly and heroically. While he was a member of the Methodist Church, his two sons and a daughter are members of the Bethlehem Brethren Church. In the days of his intense suffering, he prepared his soul for the meeting beyond with God, and he asked the writer to conduct his funeral. Assisting me was Rev. W. F. Flory, his near neighbor and friend. The body was laid to rest in the Bridgewater Cemetery. The services were held in the Bethlehem Church.

Wedding Announcement

WENGER-MYERS. The Bethlehem Brethren Church was completely filled, with many standing, for the beautiful wedding of George Logan Wenger, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Wenger, to Miss Honora Maxine Myers, daughter of Mrs. Honora Myers Baber. Miss Ruth Weybright of the music faculty of Bridgewater College, was pianist. Professor Nelson Huffman, Mayor of Bridgewater, and head of the music department of the college, sang. Officiating at the double ring ceremony were the pastors of both the bride and the groom, the Rev. Harold Skelton of the New Hope Methodist Church, and the pastor of the Bethlehem Brethren Church, John F. Locke.

Mr. and Mrs. Wenger are both 1947 graduates of the Linville-Edom High school. The groom also attended Bridgewater College and is now engaged in farming with his father. The happy couple will reside at Linville, Virginia.

Thanksgiving Meditation

"FATHER, I THANK THEE THAT THOU HAST HEARD ME"—

This—the reverse from the usual procedure—resurrection had not yet occurred. Lazarus is still in the grave. The prayer of Thanksgiving precedes the miracle. One ordinarily expects the thanksgiving to have risen after the great deed had been wrought. Lazarus was not yet restored. As Mrs. Cowan says—"The gratitude breaks forth before the bounty has arrived, in the assurance that it is on the way. The song of victory is sung before the battle is fought, it is the sower who is singing the song of the harvest home. It is thanksgiving before the miracle."

Yes, the Psalmist was right. "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

So glorious is our God, that He is worthy of our highest homage, and most ardent praise. He will not be mocked with mere formal services. Sacrifices, the most costly and splendid; offerings, the most pompous, presented to him without the heart, are an abomination in his sight. In Praise and Thanksgiving the heart is demanded.

"Jesus, Master, have mercy on us!" cried ten outcast lepers, who had heard of Jesus' cures and relief. A short time later, Jesus pained by their thanklessness, says, "Where are the nine who were cleansed?" All but one had forgotten Him completely. Today, we often wonder if His great merciful heart sorrows at American ungratefulness. Where is Thankful America? Where the grateful homes for His mercies? Where are the young and old, who on bended knee, will recognize the Almighty who has blessed us as the citizens of no other country have been? "Offer unto God Thanksgiving," for our existence, for our preservation, our deliverances; for civil and Christian privileges. Thank God, for the Mission of Christ to this world, that we were born in a land of Gospel light, for our conversion.

We should be thankful for the consciousness of His presence we feel in our lives. He has dwelt in our hearts by faith and gives us all things freely to enjoy. We are the recipients of uncounted mercies, and as children are dependent upon their earthly parent, so we can thrive only as His compassionate love abounds toward us. We acknowledge ourselves as debtors, not only of mercy and grace, but in all temporal benefits. God's provision for us has been above our just deserts. None other could so adequately supply our needs.

We must fight the thankless tendency of our day, by doing everything we can to lead America to a repentant knowledge of its unspeakable indebtedness to God. Our missionary forces should be multiplied many times to warn our countrymen against the lawfulness of ingratitude.

May we never become cold-hearted and ungrateful. Rather, may we have the spirit of gratitude, that we may be instruments in His hands to show forth His great compassion to a lost world.

In the words of Thomas Fuller—"Many favors which God giveth us ravel out for want of hemming, through our own unthankfulness; for though prayer purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them." E M R

Travels

The last report from this traveling pen was made at Cheyenne, Wyoming, where the report of the dedication of the new church was made. The Mid-west District Conference opened on Sunday evening of dedication day. The conference was not large, yet in spite of a distance of 600 miles and over for the churches of the district, no one could complain. There was a good spirit in the group and a rich fellowship. The pastor, Frank Garber, and his people did their part in excellent fashion. The conference has been reported in the Evangelist columns.

In order to arrive at the Cerro Gordo conference on time, the secretary took the St. Louis streamliner via Denver and Kansas City to St. Louis, where a change was made for Decatur, Illinois, near Cerro Gordo. The conference had been in session ten minutes when I arrived.

This Central District Conference was well attended and every department of the church was well presented. The Cerro Gordo Church building was nicely decorated and in good condition for the conference. Adjournment was declared at 12:00 noon on Friday. Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Shively were in attendance at the conference, she being the speaker for the women's sessions. They most graciously transported the traveler to Rochester, Indiana, (almost 180 miles) where a direct rail route into Ashland could be had. It was a delightful trip across wonderful country in the most beautiful time of the year, or so it seemed to me.

Sunday morning—I spent in Akron, since the Pastor Dodds was in a special meeting at Flora, Indiana. The wide-awake and spirit-filled group is an inspiration to any preacher.

During the few days at the office, I was privileged to attend the District Laymen's meeting at Louisville, and also to speak for the college prayer meeting group at the Park Street Church.

Sunday, the 23rd, in Columbus Brethren pulpit with the Murrays in one of the hardest fields that I know. Conditions have changed so completely in this section of the city over a period of years. However, a few most loyal folks representing both the Brethren and Church of the Brethren love to attend and serve here. During the afternoon we went to Washington C. H. Church and conducted a communion service. Services are held here only three or four times a year. Even so, this church, under the direction of Brother Murray, sends money into every channel of our work, including district missions.

Sunday, the 30th, in Gretna, near Bellefontaine, Ohio, where our young folks from the seminary, the Stogsdills, go every Sunday. A very fine fellowship was enjoyed throughout the day.

Will you pray with me for the largest Home Missionary Offering at Thanksgiving? We Need It.

E. M. R.

GIVE WHILE YOU LIVE!

A rich man said to his minister, "Why is it everybody is always criticizing me for being miserly, when everyone knows that I have made provision to leave everything I possess to charity when I die?"

"Well," said the minister, "let me tell you about the pig and the cow. The pig was lamenting to the cow one day about how unpopular he was. 'People are always talking about your gentleness and your kindness,' said the pig. 'You give milk and cream, but I give even more. I give bacon and ham—I give bristles and they even pickle my feet! Still nobody likes me. I'm just a pig. Why is this?' 'The cow thought a minute, and then said, 'Well, maybe it's because I give while I'm still living.'"—Grace and Glory.

The Influence Of Mission Study

In The Church

by Mrs. U. J. Shively
National W. M. S. President

For many years the Woman's Missionary Society have as one of their goals a "Mission Study Class," using one of the books recommended by the Council of Women for Home Missions; or by the Central Committee of the United States of Foreign Missions; or by the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada.

Relative to Foreign Missions, the women have used several books dealing with nearly every foreign country and with many islands of the sea. As these places are visited through books, we learn of the manner of living of each group or nation: their home life, their social activities, their educational and religious background and opportunity. Each clan or tribe or nation will have a religion, but do they know of the Lord Jesus Christ, or do they know Him?

If they have never heard that there is a Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Saviour of the World, who is to blame?

One year the Mission Study book will be what is known as a "Home Book." The study will introduce the class to different groups of people in our own United States. They may be Indians, migrant workers, colored people, aliens, they may be in rural settlements or in urban communities, but wherever or whoever, they all need to know of this wonderful Gospel which is found only in Jesus Christ.

But what has all this to do with the subject—The Influence of Mission Study in the Church?"

Just this. A Church will go only as far as it sees a NEED. Let a physical disaster come to a nation or any part of that nation, so that a great need is apparent, people will open their hearts, their homes, their purses. The answer to the call is wholehearted for this is service.

We have often been told, and we know it is true that "To see a need, and to recognize it as a need, is a call to service."

Knowledge of NEEDS come to us in two ways, by personal contact, or from the printed page, books or magazines. The important thing is that we KNOW of the need. Having learned this we will go into action. Where there is no knowledge, there is no action. Action is now what we are seeking, and this is a call to service.

The disciple of our Lord may serve in many ways both at home and abroad. There is a definite need today in the Brethren Church for consecrated men and women to answer the call to the Christian ministry, to serve as missionaries, Christian laity, etc. The Brethren Church should pray much and earnestly for those who will answer this call of God—"Who will go for us?" Shall we meet the challenge with surrendered life and money?

Mission study in the Brethren Church has been one of the big factors in molding our thinking; and knowledge has impelled action.

Witness the increase in the giving of life and substance in many local congregations. Witness, also, the increased offerings to ALL Boards and organizations of the denomination.

The theme of our last General Conference—"Forward Together with Christ in Church Expansion" should be the objective of every member, young or old, man or woman.

Yes, Mission Study has influenced the church membership in many ways that we know nothing about.

Take my life, and let it be,
Consecrated Lord to Thee.

Take my silver and my gold.
Not a mite would I with-hold.

Take my will and make it Thine,
It shall be no longer mine.

Take my heart, it is Thine own,
It shall be Thy royal throne.

Nappanee, Indiana.

TESTIMONIALS FOR HOME MISSIONS

It is with great pleasure that we, the Official Board of the Cheyenne Brethren Church, on behalf of the membership of this church, extend to the Mission Board our deepest appreciation for the fine response given to our financial needs during the time of organizing and building. Also for the fine moral support extended at a time when we were so much in need.

It has been a pleasure to work and fellowship with a board which is so understanding and willing to assist without domination.

Also, to the Ladies Missionary Society, the midwest district conference, the laymen's organization, to the churches at large, as well as many individuals who contributed liberally to the work here. To all of you we wish to say THANK YOU and God bless you.

Official Board of Cheyenne Brethren Church.

Dear Brother Riddle,

I want to tell you how deeply I appreciate the assistance which your Board has rendered to the Brethren at Canton, Ohio.

The generosity and vision of your Board has made it possible for us to have a church in which to worship and work. Your help also solved our problem of buying a parsonage for the use of our minister.

May God continue to use you in this constructive work.

Fraternally yours,

F. E. Clapper, Canton Brethren Church.

We of the First Brethren Church of Peru, Indiana, desire to express our hearty appreciation for the wonderful support of the National Missionary Board over a period of approximately twenty-five years. Under the leadership of Reverend J. Milton Bowman we have decided to try and go along without the support of the Board. This is quite a step for us because we have only a small membership, but we feel that with the Lord's help, it can be done. Again, let us express our sincere appreciation for this splendid support during the past years.—Rose Mary Hassett—Clerk—Peru Church.

The Washington Church is deeply grateful for the generous help received from the Mission Board. Without it, our building project would certainly have been considerably delayed—perhaps impossible. With the building you have made possible, we are in a position to go forward in the Lord's work, NOW. Thoburn C. Lyon—Moderator Washington, D. C. Church.

Words cannot express the appreciation of the Cameron Church for the support given by the Mission Board. The nearly completed new church here stands as a testimony to the helpfulness of the Mission Board. Without that help this work could not have continued. Generous offerings are needed that other points may be opened and expanded.

Arthur Baer, Pastor, Cameron, W. Va.

In sincere gratitude we thank our Mission Board for the encouragement from the Board for financial assistance in a $7,000 loan on the parsonage, and a $5,000 gift on the church building. This willingness to help brought new courage, increased zeal, inspiration, and a determination to go forward in the Lord's work in Akron, Ohio. Thanking you again with continued appreciation, we are

Sincerely yours,
Firestone Park Church.
J. G. Dodds, Pastor

The old pipes that were in use for some forty years had become clogged with rust and metal deposits. This had gotten so bad that at times water was very hard to get. When the committee from the Mission Board made that very pleasant visit last April, they too saw the situation for water here.

They decided to have a new water line put in. The water is pumped by electricity from a very good well out on the hillside to a tank high up on the mountain side, and thence flows by gravity to the different buildings. At the spring meeting it was decided to put in three inch pipe from the tank to the bottom of the hill, two inch pipe to girl's dormitory and also to the Wheeler Home, and an inch and a quarter to the Meyers Hall and the parsonage. This new line was laid in July.

In short, the new pipe line is working just fine, and the workers are mighty thankful to our God and Mission Board for having it installed. It is a splendid improvement, and also a much needed one. WE THANK YOU ONE AND ALL.

The Need For Missionary Intelligence On The Part Of The Local Minister

by W. Clayton Berkshire

Nothing is more widely recognized as a need in avowedly missionary circles, than the "Need for Missionary Intelligence on the Part of the local Minister."

Why is the need so emphatic? Because it is specified responsibility. God says that he "has given to US the ministry of reconciliation," telling us how he has reconciled man to Himself through His Son, Jesus Christ; then, we who are reconciled, become Ambassadors for Christ. Our business henceforth is to get this message to the whole world. This we find so clearly stated in the latter part of II Corinthians 5, and, elsewhere in the Word it is repeatedly given.

Missionary intelligence needed on the part of the local minister? It might be more correct to say, it is required of each of God's servants, for the basis of their ministry is the missionary imperative.

The minister is entrusted with the "Eternal Word." He must meet the demands of this office and "study to show himself approved of God"—a man of missionary intelligence.

Missionary intelligence of both a practical and spiritual nature is an urgent need. The need is urgent because—

1. Local Interest in Missionary Endeavor Depends upon the Local Minister.

As the minister is, so is the congregation (the spiritual constituency). The spiritually minded follow their spiritual leader. They receive instruction well and accept the counsel of the Holy Spirit. The local pastor cannot lead in this direction of obedience to God's will and Word if he is not informed. Rather, he must have the mind of Christ in these matters. Missionary interest in the local Church is largely a matter of intelligent and informed leadership.

2. The Local Minister is the Logical One to Major in Recruiting New Missionaries in the Church.

Quite frequently young people in the church are made conscious of God's call to service through the missionary intelligence of the local minister. Through an intelligent approach the minister can help young people face the question—"What does God want me to do or to be?" Every young person should settle this question early in life. Through prayer and counsel the minister may bring many young men and women to the place where they yield their lives to the Lord for service wherever He directs.

Many missionaries bear testimony to the strong influence of the missionary fire which burned in the heart of their loving pastor, as the strongest single factor in their becoming missionaries.

3. The Local Minister is the "Key Man" to Guide and Counsel Missionary Recruits.

Those contemplating missionary work should begin immediate preparation for this high calling. Guidance and counsel for this initial preparation should be assumed by the local minister. Habits in conformity with the future work should be recommended. Qualities of soul and personality should be cultivated. Realizing an understanding and an appreciation of the vast scope of a missionary's responsibility, should be undertaken. The prayer and devotional life, likewise, should be emphasized. In all of this the pastor must bear the responsibility.

Here, may I inject a parenthetical paragraph to say that it is most disheartening to pastors who seek to know the will of the Lord in these aforementioned matters, only to have those who are unqualified, to give contradictory counsel to young missionary recruits. This something happens when such recruits move into a higher bracket of education. It is the feeling of many ministers, that those who are not vitally concerned, and have not sought the mind of Christ in matters of missions and missionary recruits, would do well to remain in their own fields and give counsel there. The matter of counselling in the field of missions should be relegated to the "missionary intelligent."

4. The Local Minister Should Be a Major Factor In Stimulating Missionary Giving.

Along with the appeal for missionary recruits must go the companion appeal for those at home to contribute their purses and thus help fulfill the great commission. Sending out missionaries is a costly business. The pastor should understand this and share such information with the congregation. His appeal for financial support must be made on the stewardship basis in order to get the best results and the greatest blessing. In this area lives, time must be consecrated to the cause of world-evangelization, as well as in the area of missionary recruits. Where this is not done we may find young men and women giving and preparing themselves for missionary service while the Church is financially unprepared to send them. This has happened many times to well-qualified young people. Certainly, this is not pleasing to the Lord.

Someone has said that "where the Holy Spirit has His way, whenever He calls recruits to go, those who hold the keys to drawers in the King's treasury will as His faithful stewards be moved to release the funds to send and support them." This has been amply proven by the many Churches and individuals that have possessed the missionary vision and risen to the task.

5. The Local Minister Can Enhance, Greatly, the Practical Side of Missionary Work.

If he is informed by the Spirit and through the avenue of common knowledge, there is no end to what the local minister may do to encourage the local Church to become a practical help in Missionary work.

He may be able to foresee some of the physical needs of the missionaries if he knows the fields. He can make a careful check and present to the local group projects whereby they might supply needed articles.

In knowing the mission fields, the local minister may know some of the distinct handicaps and obstacles of these fields. To be of distinct help he can lead his people in persistent prayer that these specific obstacles may be overcome.

The horizon lengthens as we think on this subject. Our personal privilege and responsibility also increases before our very eyes. We can hear the Lord calling out to his ministers. It is an invitation to sit at His feet and learn of Him. It is an invitation to become informed, to become intelligent in the way of winning the lost for Him.

New Lebanon, Ohio.

A Perfect Steward

by W. B. Selah

A Three Minute Address to Laymen

"Today hath this scripture been fulfilled in your ears."

It is my purpose to speak to you on the subject "The Perfect Steward." Only One can measure up to such a standard, Jesus Christ our Lord and Master.

He Went to Church

"He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up, and as his custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day."

Jesus went to church. He probably did not approve of everything that was said and done by the synagogue but He did approve of its main purpose which was to lead men to God and the good life. So He went. Do you stay away from church because you do not like something that is done there? How about the main purpose of the Church—can't you lend your support to that?

Jesus read a passage from Isaiah, the passage that describes the work of God's servant. He is to preach good tidings to the poor, to heal the broken hearted, to give sight to the blind, to set the captives free and to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord. Then, closing the book, Jesus said, "Today hath this scripture been fulfilled to your ears."

He Had Compassion

For almost three years Jesus went about doing good, healing broken bodies and hearts and freeing men from sin and fear and hate and leading them to God. In the course of His work He incurred the hatred of the rulers of His people. They opposed Him because He was too big for their little hearts.

He Challenged Their Belief, Practices and Prejudices

He challenged their prejudices and exploded the idea that they were the favorites of God.

He made a despised Samaritan the hero of one of his parables.

He drove the money changers out of the temple and denounced their graft. He flayed their shoddy and inhumane methods of making money and wielding power.

He refused to fit into their petty ecclesiastical patterns. He refused to bow to their narrow nationalism and said that men of all nations were His brethren.

He lifted up higher standards than some of their revered leaders had taught. "Ye have heard it said by them of oldtime—but I say unto you."

He Went to a Cross

Finally they accused Him of blasphemy to God and treason to Rome, and persuaded Pilate, the Roman Governor, to crucify Him. His ministry cost Him a Cross. That should teach us that God does not plan for life to be easy; He plans for us to make it great.

They nailed Him to a cross but He transformed that cross into a throne from which He rules the hearts and consciences of millions of men even after these many centuries. We look at Him today and see the light of the knowledge of God shining in His face. We think of Him and our minds are lifted toward the Unseen. We try to forget Him and behold He stands at the door of our hearts knocking and seeking to come in. He would come in not to rob but to enrich, not to limit but to liberate. He would come in that He might give the abundant life, the life that is hidden with God.

When they nailed Him to the Cross, they thought He was through. But He is more influential today than He was when He drove the grafters out of the temple. Did He not say to His disciples, "Lo, I am with you always?"

He Is Among Us

He is here now in minds made better by His presence. He is here now inspiring men to deeds of rectitude and mercy. He is here now, healing the broken-hearted and giving sight to the morally blind. He is here now cleansing motives and putting joy into human hearts.

The best minds are seeing that the only solution of our problems is the way of good will which He taught. Charles Elwood, a sociologist, says in one of his books, "In the long run a Christian world is not only practicable. In the long run it will be found that no other kind of world is practicable." Now we have but one choice—Christ's way or destruction by atomic power.

When Christ was on earth He expressed His ideas and purposes through His body. It must have been a vigorous body. He walked all over Palestine and lived out of doors. Surely the pictures spun from the imaginations of medieval artists that show Him weak and emaciated are not true to fact. His body must have been a perfect instrument for the expression of a perfect mind. But that body is no longer on earth.

Today, as of old, Christ stands among us, saying, "Take up your cross and follow me." Are we able to follow in His train? Are we willing? He calls us. We have been redeemed by His Cross. He loved us and gave Himself for us. He needs good stewards. What shall our answer be?

A Letter of Thanksgiving

by Dr. L. E. Lindower

Phil. 1:3—"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you."

How do you begin a letter? Do you say, "I must tell you about Aunt Lizzie's latest operation," or "The awfulest thing has happened?" We are told that a good letter should always begin with a reference to "you," the person who is receiving it. How beautifully Paul passed this test!

It was from prison that Paul wrote, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you." How many of us would have substituted a detailed account of prison privations, and they were severe in those days. Instead of that he could say (4:18) "But I have all and abound: I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God." How much better to use this means to express his thanks for their gifts!

People get sick just thinking of themselves. The medicine for such ailment is the thought of others. Did you write a sincere "thank you" note to anyone lately? Have you sat down and thought of all those who are worse off than you? Maybe you could help someone like that! Such thanksgiving is practical.

Paul was thankful for remembrances of:—

I. Fellowship in the Gospel. (1:5)

The Gospel makes Christians different from the world—not so much in the things they do or refuse to do, as in the contrast of ideals, ambitions, satisfactions, principles, etc. Let us be careful, Brethren, lest we become like the Pharisees, who substituted a whole list of traditions for the all-important "thus saith the Lord." We might have our own version of distinguishing between swearing by the altar or by the gift on it!

The fact remains that the Christian feels a vital difference between himself and the world. This very difference draws us closer together in a spiritual family relationship. There is a fellowship in the Gospel, for which we can give thanks. Imprisonment and persecution has brought out the importance of this, even in modern days, in the concentration camps, etc. The greater the opposition of the world to Christ, the sweeter this fellowship. Witness the melting away of denominational differences in Christian fellowship on the mission fields where the major cause of the Gospel is the real issue.

The prayer of the Lord was answered when He said, "That they may be one as we are." We don't need a unity of organization to enjoy a oneness with all God's people. Why can't we rejoice in and work with such unity, while still being faithful to our individual interpretations. If we are BIG enough we can.

II. The Fruits of Righteousness. (1:11)

These were ordinary people, yet Paul could have confidence in them:—"that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." (1:10) His confidence was not based on human nature, but on the working of the righteousness of Christ in men. There are many disappointments, because of the weaknesses of the human flesh, in the work of Christian leaders, yet you may find much for which to give thanks. There is perhaps some life which you have helped to introduce to the fruits of righteousness. Where would such a life be now, without it? Can you find such satisfaction in your life?

III. Furtherance of the Gospel. (1:12)

How nearly like this "prisoner of the Lord" are we? He could be thankful for the furtherance of the Gospel, even though it meant his suffering in jail. He could even rejoice that his enemies were taking advantage of it to keep him bound. Personal comfort or selfish enjoyment had no place for him! The Gospel of Christ was advancing, and that was enough for him! Ask yourself, "How much of selfishness have I put aside for my faith in Christ?"

Paul gives us the essence of such unselfishness in 2:4-11. Read it again carefully. It is the implication of the "mind of Christ" for every one of His believers. We can be sure that the great apostle's thanksgiving could stem from his own willingness to follow the "mind of Christ" in looking "on the things of others." How thankful can you and I be on this point?

IV. Fruit of his Labor. (1:22)

"For me to live is Christ." (1:21) Christ could point to merely eleven faithful disciples, as the evident fruit of the labor of His earthly life. Yet, in the power of God, look at the enormous results! Paul could look back on the churches begun in his ministry, and in spite of his present difficulty, and innumerable disappointments in his ministry, he could already see much fruit.

The Christian servant has a good portion of his reward already in this life. The work of the Gospel pays the highest wages—of course not in money—but in satisfactions with which temporal riches cannot compare. Let us take time at this season to find the fruits of Christian labor for which we can offer our thanks.

V. Far Better Hope. (1:23)

Jesus said, "Fear not him that is able to destroy the body." The Christian's death is a victory. The only thing that made Paul willing to stay here was his duty. Such a hope could give him calmness and fearlessness in the face of death. Can't Christians be lessons to this world of calm faith in the face of physical dangers? Such would be a practical thanksgiving.

VI. Finally. (4:8)

The final exhortation is first to "think" high things, then do them (4:9). The higher level on which we live gives the greater thanksgiving. To this we might add the Revised Version rendering of 4:6—"In nothing be anxious, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth understanding, shall guard your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." Read Philippians again as your Thanksgiving letter.

STATISTICS OF INTEREST FROM UNITED STEWARDSHIP COUNCIL

The General Stewardship report for the past year shows a loss for Benevolent giving during the past year. However, the total for Congregational Expenses is $62,612,394 more than reported the preceding year. The Total Contributions are more than the year before.

Those religious bodies that reported last year and also this show a gain also in Total Contributions. The Total Contributions of the fifty-two communions reporting this year is $802,370,689. In addition to this, The Anglicans of Canada report a total of a $4,915,785, The Mormons $18,919,501, The Evangelical Free Church $272,823, The Universalists $50,241, The American Baptist Association $128,500. These added to the total above make $887,257,439. If to this we would discover and add the contributions from living donors of the Roman Catholic, and the other 200 Protestant bodies not listed here, the total would of course be at least $1,200,000,000, probably several millions more.

IMPLICATIONS

Whenever one goes to the market to purchase food, or clothes, or household necessities, he is conscious of inflation, no matter what he calls it. This report shows that our local churches are conscious of this increase in the cost of living, as shown by the increase in the giving to Congregational Expenses. The churches, however, are not conscious, apparently, that inflation also affects the benevolent work for that amount shows a decrease. Inflation in eastern and southern Asia is much greater than in the Western Continent. It costs more to support a mission station in that area than it did five years ago by a very large per cent. In other words, contributions to benevolences must greatly increase just to let us stand still. The opportunity for work in mission fields was never so great as today.

There are a few simple things that need to be done by Christians to insure Christian Stewardship:

1. Discover from the Bible the true basis of Christian Stewardship. II Corinthians 8:10 et seq.
2. Give according to New Testament motives. John 3:16; I John 5:19.
3. Use Christian methods in giving. To do this some of us must revolutionize our practices. I Corinthians 16:1-2.

MATCH THIS GIVING!

Today, October 26th, a short letter came from Brother J. G. Dodds of Akron, Ohio, with a check for $13.40 enclosed. He said, "This is a gift from a little girl, almost blind and six years of age. Her mother is blind and the father almost so." The pastor said further, "She emptied her bank of 134 dimes and asked me to send the money to help the poor orphans in the Wheeler Home at Lost Creek."

It was a joy to write this little girl and commend her for such giving. It reminded us of the "Widow's Mite," concerning what Jesus wrote. His words have become a record never to be forgotten.

The new Wheeler Home will soon be paid for if more Brethren people will manifest a spirit of giving, in some such measure.

This little girl's gift is the second unusual and outstanding gift for missionary service within the two and a half years, received in this office.

A Business Man's Interest In Missions

by Ray Yount

This is a subject which should interest almost every person because all of us are Business men, or women, in one way or another, and our interest in Missions grows as we become more involved. Our interest in Missionary Work is incited and stimulated by others assigning to us some specific job or duty in which we may be of service to others who are not so fortunate as ourselves. If these assignments are such that they are along the line of activities with which we have had some experience or of which we feel that we are familiar, we can immediately see that we can be of service to others, can make others happy and we begin to receive the same pleasure from it that we do when we do kindness to members of our own families and friends. By these acts we receive such a feeling of satisfaction that we want to do more whenever we have the opportunity, and the more we do, the more we want to do.

As we go about our daily work and business, we notice, that we receive the greatest pleasure when we are doing some acts of kindness toward others around us, doing something to make them happy and this in turn makes more friends for us. There is nothing which does us so much good as having a large host of real friends, those who will stand by us at all times and when we really need help, they are always ready to assist.

These acts of kindness may be toward persons of our own neighborhood, of our own state or nation, or may be toward persons living in foreign lands from which we may receive almost the same feeling of satisfaction, especially if we receive frequent reports as to the results of our efforts. These reports are the things which give us the thrill of feeling that we are really doing something that is worthwhile. People of all countries and nationalities have the same reactions from our acts of kindness, because all persons are basically the same in their human nature and all really appreciate all acts of kindness and mercy and all show it in about the same way.

The business man who has been successful realizes that he has an obligation to help others who are not so fortunate as himself, because it is through his contacts and associations with others about him in an unselfish way that he has been successful. Those who have accumulated wealth in a selfish manner are not successful because they are not happy, even though they may appear to be happy, but under those circumstances they can never attain happiness. It is only through our attempt to serve others that we attain happiness and success.

My personal interest in Missionary Work has been stimulated by hearing and seeing needs of assistance by people in communities away from home, particularly in Kentucky, Tennessee and foreign lands. I realize how anxious those people are to hear and learn the Word of God, and to see how education has changed their lives so that they all are so desirous of helping those persons around them. When given an opportunity to help other churches where they need new church buildings, and ~~some my profession~~ as an architect in the designing of buildings, I find that I may, in many instances, be of personal service to these congregations by assisting them in a professional way by helping to plan their House of Worship and make it possible for them to secure their objective without costing them much financially and also by a little personal work on my part, which I am glad to furnish as my contribution.

Also, when given an opportunity to be of service in the Lost Creek, Kentucky Mission, I found upon my visit to their school, that where such a wonderful project is being carried on by such consecrated people, there is no reason why I should not help, if possible, to improve their facilities so that their efforts may bring results much broader and sincere in the spread of the Gospel and in teaching those children in the proper ways of life.

Already I have received my reward in feeling that the Missionary Board may be concentrating their efforts in a way that will be everlasting and that I will have had a part in it. If for any reason, it should not continue to grow in the years to come, I feel that at least we have done what we consider best and it has all the possibilities of spreading its effect over the entire country.

It is surely a pleasure and gives us a thrill to watch those children enter into their chapel services, to see their enthusiasm and sincerity. That training cannot but have its everlasting effect on their lives and they in turn will spread it wherever they go. Our prayers are for them always, that they may continue to receive Divine Guidance in their work there.

We find that the little expense we have in assisting in this Missionary Work is never missed in our daily life and when we consider the blessings received from it, we can truthfully say that it is well worth the effort and we pray that we may be guided in further activities of these kinds.

THE REFLEX OF MISSIONS UPON THE CHURCH

by J. Milton Bowman

In obedience to Christ's marching orders for Christians to go into all the world and preach the Gospel, Paul the apostle, left home and friends to set forth on a world tour that did not end until he had seen his Master face to face. He heard God's call to the regions beyond, and could not rest until they had heard the precious Gospel. Without modern means of communication, but on foot and horseback plus sail boats, he was largely responsible for sparking a tremendous missionary movement which took the Gospel to the then known world in approximately forty years.

The Brethren Church, after a long sleep, is beginning to awaken to its responsibility in spreading the Gospel of good news to the world. Young people are beginning to give themselves in full time service as never before. Brethren Youth is to a large degree responsible for this awakened interest in missionary work. New churches are being built, new fields of service are being investigated. The Mission Board has pledged itself to help send qualified young people to any field to which they may be called. Louisa Kugler's tour last year made a great impression upon many people and churches. The reawakening of interest in Kentucky missions is vitally helpful. All of this activity unconsciously reacts upon the local churches for untold good. It is a real forward movement and the Lord is blessing wonderfully.

However, we are very weak in two phases of the missionary effort. One is prayer and the other is in missionary giving. "Pray ye the Lord of the Harvest that He may send forth laborers." We can never be a going or a growing church until we stoke the fires of spiritual dynamics through the medium of prayer. Thousands of prayer warriors would be enlisted. Brethren doctrines are good, but we can talk doctrine until the sands of time run out and have only the letter and not the spirit, if these Brethren doctrines are not vitalized by unceasing earnest prayer. We can set goals by the carload and push programs until we are weary, but it will all amount to very little until we as individuals, as societies and churches, get on our faces before God. Programs will never evangelize the world.

Our second important weakness is in missionary giving. Christian Digest had the following interesting story under the heading, "The Dying Church": "An artist was once asked to paint a picture of a dying church. Instead of putting on the canvas, a small, feeble, poor congregation in an old building, he painted a stately, modern edifice, through the open portals of which could be seen a richly carved pulpit, a magnificent organ, beautifully stained glass windows, ornate frescoes and perfect seating facilities.

Just within the entrance and guarded on either side by a "pillar" of the church in spotless apparel was a contribution plate of goodly workmanship for the offerings of fashionable worshippers.

And right above the plate, suspended from a nail in the wall, there hung a small box bearing the inscription, "Collection for Foreign Missions," and over the slot through which the contributions should have gone he painted a huge cobweb. Are cobwebs over our mission boxes?

How can we ever spread the Gospel of Good News to a lost and dying world if we give less than a half cent postage stamp a day per member? This is a day of marvelous opportunity; this is a day when the government is taxing heavily for funds to be sent for relief. But where does the Church of the living God come in with its postage stamp budget? The need is great! We should give to the spreading of the Gospel abroad not less than dollar-for-dollar of what we give for current expenses. Has your church a five thousand or ten thousand dollar budget for current expenses? Then match that for missions! Dare to do it! It will set your church on fire for the Lord. The reflex action will be tremendous. The Lord will open the windows of Heaven and pour out His blessings upon you until it will be impossible for you to contain them. As a denomination we have not begun to scratch the surface when it comes to missionary giving.

There are many single local churches which give more to missions than our entire denomination. Take one for example, Dr. Oswald Smith's People's Church of Toronto, Canada. This one local church gave last year over $200,000.00 dollars for foreign missions and is supporting better than 250 missionaries. Think of it! We should hang our heads in shame in the face of such contrast. Brethren, we are living in critical times. We need to take positive action. Christ cannot save the world with piecemeal Christians. Men who profess faith in Christ should live the Christ life. That includes sacrifice; that includes stewardship; that includes opening our pocketbooks and giving on the first day of the week as the Lord has prospered us.

Let us step out on faith. We are making some real progress. As young people continue to volunteer for the greatest service in the world, let us back them up with fervent prayer and dollar-for-dollar in missionary giving. Then watch the reflex action of such giving and praying on the spiritual lives of the members of your local church. Watch the Brethren Church grow in the process. Christ is calling! God is waiting to bless. We have already taken our first wobbly steps like a baby learning to walk. Soldiers of Christ arise! Let us take and send the precious Gospel to the uttermost parts of the world. "Now is the hour!" Tomorrow may be too late! Satan's first, greatest and most successful effort against the Church is to kill the prayermeeting, a prayerless Church is a dead Church. Let us brush the cobwebs from the mission box. Let us cast our bread upon the waters; it will come back to us again, many fold.

The Message

by S. M. Whetstone

The text assigned to me for this article is recorded in Acts 16:31, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." These words were given by Paul and Silas in reply to a question asked by the keeper of the jail, following what he took to be an earthquake, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" The jailor felt his familiar world being rocked beneath him. In his fright, he might have thought it to be the end of the world, certainly the end of his job, and possibly the end of his life, if the prisoners escaped,—and the doors were standing open at that very minute. Anyway, he began to think as he had never thought before,—think of his soul salvation.

Paul and Silas, whose bodies were in chains and stocks, answered their abuses with prayer and songs of praise, even at the midnight hour,—till the other prisoners—no it does not say "other" prisoners for these two regardless of their stripes and chains and guards, were not prisoners. We shall never be prisoners so long as we can pray and praise! The earthquake, the release, and the cry for mercy, all came as heaven's answer to the prayers of Paul and Silas. Before day break, not only were the apostles out of jail, but the jailer and his house were the Lord's captives. The jailer had asked the question, and the two mistreated apostles gave him the answer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."

No one needs to be told today that ours is a shaken world. The secular foundations are trembling; things once counted good and secure are shifting. We seem to be on volcanic ground, and an eruption is possible at any time. The disturbance simply cannot be settled by singing "Happy Days are Here Again." Obviously happy days are not here yet, even the economic seismograph may record less violent disturbance. Paul's prescription was good for that long ago day, and it is still good in our own day—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." "There is none other name given among men whereby we must be saved." Every day's attempt to find it in some other manner makes that increasingly clear. Hope must come from more enduring sources than the gadgets of a secular civilization. It must come by the way of the cross, where our Lord gave his all to make it possible.

Let us take another look at our text, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." You may say, "Believe," I have heard that word until I am sick of it. You may say, "I want to know how to believe." Some may say, "We all believe that Christ came to seek and to save the lost." Remember the devils believe, and they are not saved. They only tremble! You must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ—not merely about Him. Let us take another verse which may help you, "He came unto His own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them he gave the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his name." There you have it. They "received him." It is a Person that we must receive. Many of us want the power before we receive Christ.

Let us not get too far away from our text, and that which follows it: "And they (Paul and Silas) spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house." Ah, there it is! Blessed is that one who knows how to deal with troubled souls, and who is able to give the word of the Lord as the way of salvation. We have no way of knowing all that was included in what Paul and Silas said so late that night, but we do have the record of some wonderful results. The very next verse says, "He took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes." Now we know that he believed. He shows evidence of it. He washes their stripes, makes the wrongs which had been done them a bit easier. Something must have been said along this line as they "spake unto him the word of the Lord." Perhaps this same act would help a lot today,—washing some stripes. Correcting some wrongs. Making some amends. Getting right with each other, before we attempt to get right with God. Making some confessions, and asking for forgiveness. There is a great need right here, and until that is done there is not much to gain. I admire the individual who has enough of the grace of God to wash stripes.

This record, however, does not end here. We read, and do notice it was after the stripe washing, "He and all his were straightway baptized." That too, must have been included when "they spake unto him the word of the Lord." That man really meant business. No hesitating.—"straight-

Cure for Delinquency—The “branding” of children as “juvenile delinquents” should be stopped, according to a delegate to the conference on care for children in state and private institutions. He said, “There is a shame, embarrassment, and quality of social branding involved in the label of delinquency.” Then he concluded with the thought that is gaining popularity in all realms of wrongdoing, i. e., that the offender is not “bad” but “ill.” Call him what you will, an “ill” boy is often cured by one or two shots of PANT-i-cillin!—The War Cry.

Jewish Evangelism Group to Expand—Winona Lake, Indiana—Although only five years old, the American Association for Jewish Evangelism, is now at work in four countries—Hungary, Mexico, Canada and America—it was revealed here during the fifth annual convention of the organization.

Plans for the expansion of work were outlined for each nation, particularly Hungary and Mexico. The Good Shepherd Foundation at Budapest now has accommodation for twenty-five boys, it was reported, and plans to house twenty-five girls are under way.

It is expected to soon double the work in Mexico, with headquarters in Mexico City.

Southern Baptists Give $7,080,852 to Missions—August Co-operative Program receipts totaled $4771,832.51 and designations totaled $90,303.47, giving a grand total of $4,968,135.98, according to Dr. Duke K. McCall, executive secretary-treasurer of the Executive Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Co-operative Program receipts are $271,112.39 higher than last year at the close of business. Designations are $204,790.18 higher. So far this year Southern Baptists have given a total of $7,080,852 to their mission and benevolent causes. All Co-operative Program funds contributed the last four and one-half months of the year will be used for capital improvements of missions and other properties.

Needy—There are hundreds of refugee farm families who are being settled upon tracts of land in western Germany. These are people who have been expelled from Eastern Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and the surrounding countries because of their German ancestry and unfriendly governments. are not eligible for aid from I. R. O. or for resettlement in this country under Displaced Persons Act. Many of the above named shipments go to such deserving people.

Says 40% of Buffalo Negroes are Unchurched—William H. Homer, pastor of Lincoln Memorial Methodist Church of Buffalo, says that negro folk songs have created the impression that negroes are one of the most religious groups in America, but that this is no longer true. He estimated that 40% of the 30,000 colored people in Buffalo area are unchurched. The blame, he asserts, can be traced directly to the door of the church, which too often follows the accepted secular pattern of racial discrimination instead of expressing the principles of Christianity. The Lincoln Memorial Church is the only Negro congregation in Buffalo which is both free from and self-supporting.

Twenty-four Danish farm trainees arrived in New York on June 24; sixteen more arrived on July 1. These two groups are the first of an expected one hundred young Danish farmers who will come to the States for training during 1949. This program has been undertaken at the request of the Danish embassy and is sponsored by the State Department and other organizations. Each young Dane will be rotated on three or four farms so that he can study general farming techniques used by the leading farmers of the U. S. Plans are being developed for a selected group of young Americans to go to Denmark on the reciprocal phase of the program.

way." Such is the result of believing the "words of the Lord Jesus Christ." There is no hesitating, no delays, no doubts, no questioning. Rather, such action is quite natural when once one is willing to let the Lord Jesus come in and take possession. "Trust and Obey, for there is no other way," is more than a mere song to be sung. It is really the way to live by. Paul expressed all this in such a beautiful way in his writings: "I know Him that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." There it is expressed in words that one can understand. "I know Him." That comes first. "He is Able to Keep,"—that is, I trust Him. "That which I have committed unto Him." There is another word for faith, "I have committed (my all) unto him."

Little wonder that this man, changed as he was, took the apostles home with him, and set meat before them. His act was something more than common hospitality. It went deeper. It means more. Here it is, "He rejoiced, believing God." Until we find rejoicing in our religious faith—something is lacking.

A SMEAR THAT WON'T STICK

How the "liberals" hate Walter Maier!

Ever since this courageous and effective preacher of righteousness took to the air waves all the forces of atheism, secularism, modernism, ecumenical ecclesiasticism, socialism and communism have been moving heaven and earth to force him off.

Now Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who has championed many of these causes at various times comes out with a smear attack on Dr. Maier. Her charges of fanaticism, fundamentalism and fascism are wholly unfounded.

Dr. Maier's Lutheran Hour has grown to be the greatest religious broadcast in the world in spite of those who would destroy him. He and his message continue to be recommended by the fact that his enemies do not like his sound evangelical doctrine, his uncompromising stand for the Word of God, his championship of sterling thrift and honesty in business and politics, his bold demands for purity in private and public life, his fighting challenges to evolution, secularism, communism, paganism, atheism and liberalism. He dares to move against the tides which threaten to engulf all that best is in our traditional American way of life.

Whether or not Mrs. Roosevelt chooses to retract her miserable misrepresentations we predict that Dr. Maier and the Lutheran Hour will go on to even greater accomplishment by the grace of God and the continual support of the people of God.—United Evangelical Action.

They judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them (Isa. 1:23). My missionary friends in Asyut, Egypt, took me to visit the Asyut Orphanage, which was then caring for hundreds of boys and girls, widows, and blind. Some of the children were toddlers. From the first the orphanage has been operated on a faith basis. God has proved Himself as the God who hears prayer and cares for the widows and fatherless. "Miss Lillian," or "Mama," as she is called, told me many wonderful stories of answers to prayer.

Now, ten years after that visit, a worker in that orphanage tells of God's continued wonder-working. In 1944, funds were gone, food was nearly gone, and Lillian Thrasher asked all her assistants to call their groups together after the evening meal on Monday, to pray and to continue to pray as long as they wished. Some of the four hundred and fifty in the girls' dormitory prayed until 2:30 A. M.

Prayer continued through Tuesday and Tuesday night. The eighty widows gathered in the church and prayed. On Wednesday Miss Thrasher received an urgent request to appear in Cairo at once. She took the midnight train and found on her arrival an invitation to have lunch Thursday with the American Ambassador in his home. He told her a Red Cross ship had been on the way to carry relief supplies to Greece, had nearly reached the harbor of Piraeus when Headquarters had radioed it that Greece had capitulated to the Axis Powers, and ordered the ship to go to Alexandria, Egypt, instead. The local Red Cross official was authorized to dispose of the supplies. He knew that the Asyut Orphanage had harbored many refugees from war-bombed areas, and he asked her if she could use any of the supplies. She surely could!

The Ambassador took her and the official to where the ship's cargo was stored and she sorted out what was needed for the hundreds of her orphanage family. The Ambassador ordered trucks to haul all her supplies to Asyut, about two hundred and fifty miles from there, and paid the freight. The writer adds, When God answers prayer He does not even charge for the freight.—S. S. Times.

WHAT PRICE "ONE WORLD?"

Scripture: Phil. 2:1-11; Matt. 25:31-46

For The Leader

A FEW YEARS AGO everybody was hearing the phrase "one world." A beautiful, idyllic, super-dream was cooked up in which everyone would be a loving neighbor of everyone else. We would all be peaceful innocent children; no fights, no squabbles, no wars. Perhaps the content of the affair was satisfying to the one who thought it up, but had the man spent just one-fourth of his thinking time in reading God's Holy Word, he might have gotten a little nearer the truth. Russia, and our own allied self-centered, selfish diplomats have really ruined the hope of one world in this generation, and many to come. Yet because the idea is implanted in the heart of man, there must be the possibility of one world. Yes, there is. It is found in the first verse of our Matthew passage: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, etc." Then we shall have one world. In the meantime, we can do much by preaching the gospel of Christ to men lost in sin and thus hasten the day when prophecy can be fulfilled and this real unified world can come to pass.

DISCUSSION

1. THE FALLACY OF TODAY'S ONE WORLD SCHEMES. Since time began, man has been trying to bring peace to the world. Since time began, man has failed. Christ is the answer to man's dream of peace, and Christ has been left out of every plan of peace. Did you know that at the beginning of the United Nations some doubtless, fearless disciple of Christ made an effort to have negotiations conducted with the thought of Christ in mind? Prayer was to be made, and God's divine will sought as blessing on the proceedings. Such courage will doubtless be well rewarded in that day. You know what happened. Not only is there no such thing as prayer in the meetings, they recognize no god at all. It is all man's power and might. And that's why man's efforts at peace always fails. The United Nations will do no more good than did the League of Nations, or any other peace organization of man. Better pin your faith on God rather than the United Nations, for God is in your faith in Him, and He isn't in the United Nations.

2. THE TOWER OF BABEL. A writer recently likened the United Nations to the tower of Babel. If you will refer back to Genesis 11:4. There it reads that the people said, "Let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth." Here we see man's confidence in his own power. He built a city and tower by his own might that he might live for himself. It displeased God, so God destroyed it. Nevertheless it was an effort at "one world." To this writer referred to, the United Nations reminded him of Babel. Certainly it is an effort to unite all peoples, to build a tower of man's power to the skies. But, like Babel it is a tower to man's glory and not to God's. We predict the same result as that which happened to Babel.

3. THE REJECTED CORNER STONE. When Solomon was building his temple unto the Lord all the wood and stone were fashioned miles from the site, so that there would be no sound of hammer or ax at the temple. One stone, in particular, shipped in, seemed to have no place. It seemed not to fit. So in the course of the building of the temple, it was cast aside, and lay unheeded in the weeds and brush. At the very peak of the arch, the workmen discovered they yet needed one stone of particular shape. It could not be found. Suddenly someone remembered the cast-off stone. It was sought, and put in place and made the completed temple. Christ is the rejected chief stone today in the world's plan for peace. He was kicked out of the United Nations. But the day will come when He shall reign, and His enemies shall be made His footstool. All of man's proud peace efforts, buildings and monuments shall be trampled to dust under His mighty triumph of righteousness.

4. WHAT CAN WE DO? As we see these things taking place there is much we can do. First, God answers the prayers of His righteous believers. Every prayer you send to heaven in Jesus' name is honored by God. In those prayers you must always include the welfare of your beloved nation. There is no question in our mind but what God answered Christian prayers in ending the last war as He did. While we as a nation plunged ourselves eternally in debt and lost many precious lives, yet our homes, our factories, our railroads, our highways, etc., were not blown to bits. Nor did we become "displaced persons." And Christian prayers will hold back the forces of evil which threaten us. So PRAY AND PRAY AND PRAY. We can work to win others to Christ. We can share our faith with others. We can seek to enlighten them about the false doctrines of peace that are being sent our way. Above all, don't be duped by anyone into thinking we've just about solved all the problems of one world. With your men out on strike, at this writing, with famine threatening multitudes of the earth's population while we have the greatest crop we've ever had. With mercenary spirits still controlling our economy, don't talk about one world. The advocates of one world have got to get a lot smarter in their thinking and propaganda to fool all the thinking people of America. Remember, Christ is the answer to the soul's problems; He is the answer to the world's problems. But as long as men reject Him, the problems will grow worse and worse. Christ is the answer, accept Him, follow Him.

God shines on thee to make thee fit for life's desert places; for its Gethsemanes, for its Calvaries.

If I have little things to do today help me Lord to do them in a great way with a great spirit.

There can be no fruitful life apart from the prayerful spirit.

"COMFORT YE MY PEOPLE"

By Grace Noll Crowell

If I could lift the burden from one heart
Bowed down with care, or crushed with bitter grief,
If through some word of mine quick tears could start
In eyes long dry; if I could bring relief
To one who knows no surcease from his pain,
My heart, long burdened, would be glad again.

God keep me silent if it would be best;
Be I Thy mouthpiece should I speak today
To any troubled one in need of rest.
Give me Thy own sure wisdom, Lord, I pray,
Help me pass on the words that have been said
Wherewith my own hurt heart was comforted.

"COMFORT YE MY PEOPLE"

Scripture: Isa. 40:1; 2 Cor. 1:3-11

AS CHRISTIANS we are commanded to bring comfort to God's people (Heb. 12:12; Isa. 61:1-3; Eph. 6:22; Col. 4:8). We are to comfort the sorrowing with the comfortable Word of God (1 Thess. 4:18). God comforts us that we may comfort others (2 Cor. 1:4). Use God's word as a help to those who have financial worries (Phil. 4:5-7; Matt. 6:25-34). Get the afflicted to read the Word of God (Psa. 119:50) for comfort. Teach them to walk in the comfort of the Holy Ghost (Acts 9:31; John 14:16). If Paul and Silas, bruised and sore, could comfort the brethren, surely we can always be comforting wherever comfort is needed (Acts 16:40). We can comfort by our Christian visitations (2 Cor. 7:6). We are to comfort the feeble-minded and support the weak (1 Thes. 5:11). We are to point out the Christ as our Comfort (2 Thes. 2:17), and the Holy Spirit as "another Comforter" (John 14:16).

The greatest source of comfort is Christian faith, and it needs to be strengthened (1 Thess. 3:2-5). Remember that affliction is but for a season at the most (1 Peter 1:3-9; Rom. 8:18). Nothing can work against the Christian for he will be compensated for all reverses (Rom. 8:28; 2 Cor. 4:17-18). Let us with purpose benefit by affliction (Psa. 119:71; Rom. 15:4; Psa. 119:92, 93). To suffer well is a powerful virtue (1 Peter 4:16). God has us in mind when we are in trouble (Psa. 27:5; 142:3). To omit prayer is to fall out of God's testing into the Devil's temptation (Psa. 27:14; Isa. 26:3; Phil. 4:7; 2 Cor. 12:9). "In the world ye have tribulation" (John 16:33). With the Lord's help we can be "more than conquerors" (Rom. 8:35-39).

Suggested hymns: "A Little Bit of Love"; "Help Somebody Today"; "How Firm a Foundation"; "What a Friend We Have In Jesus"; "All That I Need."

Pray for all who need God's comfort through you.

JEREMIAH—SPOKESMAN FOR GOD

Lesson: Jeremiah 1:1-10, 18-19; 22:1-2, 13-14; 37:15-17

WE, FIRST OF ALL, need to note the similarity of expression as found in the call of Jeremiah and Isaiah. Isaiah says, "I am undone, for I am a man of unclean lips . . ." Then follows the ceremony of cleansing by the touching of his lips with the coal from off the altar. In our very first verse today we find Jeremiah saying, "The Lord put forth His hand and touched my mouth."

In these two callings we find similarity, yet there is a dissimilarity. There is a touching of the mouth in each case, indicative of the fact that these two men were being called to prophetic utterance. In Isaiah's call, however, there seemed to be a necessity to first cleanse the life of the man himself before he was ready to receive the call to service. Then, having been cleansed, he was ready for the call that came from God, and to answer, "Here am I, send me."

But as we study the verses in Chapter 1 of Jeremiah (the verses just preceding our printed text) we find that Jeremiah has been set apart, even before birth, to become a prophet of the Lord. Note the words of the Lord in Jeremiah 1:5—"Before thou camest forth out of the womb, I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations."

Jeremiah does not express a need for cleansing as did Isaiah, but only a fear that he will not be able to set forth the message of God as it should be given out. It is here that the "hand of God" reaches forth and touches his mouth and God says, "Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth."

What an obligation is placed upon him! For if we study verse 10 closely we see the greatness of the task; the opportunity for service; the responsibility for rightly stating and judging the truth. Not only is he charged with the task of clearing out the rubble of sinful disobedience to God's commands, but upon him is laid the responsibility of building new and planting the seed of the return of the people to God's plan and purpose. Further study will reveal how seriously Jeremiah took the work assigned to him. When God gave him the call, he answered it with a complete surrender to His will.

What a lesson can be gained for us in this day. For God still calls "spokesmen" to His service. The need to "root out, pull down, destroy and throw down" the forces of iniquity is as great now as it was then—no doubt, greater. And how about the need "to build and to plant" in our communities and our nation? Is it not true that our so-called Christian nation has every element of the sins of the Israelites? Do not many follow after false gods? Do we not, too often, flaunt sinful actions in the very face of God?

Today the need of "spokesmen" whose lips have been "touched" by God's hand, is self-evident. Have your lips been so touched?

We are sorry. Several announcements came to us that we were not able to commit to these columns to be effective as announcements because of the fact that the issue of November 5th was that of the Annual Conference Minute number, and that of the 12th was the regular Missionary issue, in which we have only two pages—14 and 15—which are devoted to the C. E. topic, the Prayer Meeting study and the Editor's Comments on the Sunday School lesson. Two of the announcements were for communions—one from Brother H. M. Oberholtzer of Carleton, Nebraska, and the other from Brother Elmer Carrithers of Mansfield, Ohio, each of these being for the date of November 13th. A third came from Brother W. L. Thomas of Mulvane, Kansas, announcing the Mid-West Laymen's District Rally, which was held at Morrill, Kansas, on November 18th, with supper at 6:00 o'clock and an evening service following. We are especially sorry concerning the latter announcement, for we always desire to make such announcements as effective as possible.

The First Correction for Your Annual. Try as we may, there always seems to slip into the annual number, either an error or an omission. This time it seems that the name of our good brother, A. E. Whitted of Smithville, Ohio, was omitted from the list of ministers. So if you desire to clip this out and add it to the list under "Ministers without churches," you may do so:

WHITTED, A. E., Smithville, Ohio—membership: Smithville.

We humbly beg Brother Whitted's pardon for this omission. If there are others—either omissions or errors, we will be glad to make correction.

Waterloo, Iowa. We note that a committee has been appointed to be responsible for the arrangements of the tentative program of the Waterloo church in the three months' interim between the closing of the pastorate of Brother V. E. Meyer and the opening of the pastorate of Brother Spencer Genetle.

Our church at Waterloo cooperated with the Church of the Brethren in a special program of sacred music by Mr. Brightville, internationally known song director, recently.

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff, Meyersdale pastor, announces the organization of a brand new Sisterhood. Miss Ida Kimmel, Pennsylvania District Patroness of Berlin, and a group of Berlin S. M. M. girls, helped with the organization.

A special soul-winning campaign has been scheduled for the Meyersdale work, same to be continued through the Thanksgiving week-end. An Ashland College Gospel Team will be present during the Thanksgiving period, November 23-25, and will also participate in the services of November 27th.

The Sunday School sponsored a Hallowe'en party for the children recently in the church basement. A fine time is reported.

The Meyersdale church was host to the Rodeheaver-Ackley musical party, which gave a program under the sponsorship of the Somerset County C. E. Union recently. Brother Benshoff says, "A good program, with 375 present, in spite of a cold, windy rain."

Stockton, Calif. We note that the Stockton Church observed Homecoming and Rally Day on Sunday, November 6th. Brother C. E. Johnson says, "There was a pot-luck dinner at noon and during the afternoon an installation service was held for the newly elected members. Rev. George Anderson, pastor of the Lathrop church, was the guest speaker.

The church took action on the revision of their constitution and by-laws, recently.

We note that an Ashland College Alumni Rally, put on by The Scholarship League, under the direction of the Northern California District Conference, was held not long ago. Brother Johnson does not say "where" it was held.

Berlin, Penna. We note that the Berlin Sunday School held a real "Graduation" for their Cradle Roll, when an even dozen children were "graduated from babyhood" to the Beginners work of the school. The superintendent, Mrs. Merle Lehman, was in charge.

Brother Percy Miller, Berlin pastor, reports that 112 were served at their recent Father and Son banquet. Brother Woodrow Brant, Vinco pastor, was the guest speaker.

We note also that Brother Joseph H. Shultz, of Ashland College and Seminary, who is pastor of the Williamstown, Ohio, Brethren Church, is to be ordained to the full gospel ministry at Berlin on Sunday, November 20th. Brother Shultz is a Berlin boy. The service will be conducted at the evening hour.

The Leadership Training Course in the Berlin church was begun on November 7th. This is a six-weeks course.

DOES IT MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE?

WHILE STANDING in a local store a few weeks ago, waiting for a clerk to complete a purchase I had made, I (with no intention of eavesdropping) heard two people talking. One sentence struck upon my ear—"After all," said the one, "I am not responsible to anyone for what I do." I continued to listen more closely after that. "It really does not make any difference to anyone what I do or say," the speaker continued. "I live my own life as I please regardless of what anyone may say or think. What I do is my own business." Just then the clerk came up with my purchase and I left the store. But what I had heard Set me to thinking!

Isn't that exactly the way Satan wants us to react to the realities of life? Such thinking and its resulting activities brings about the whole issue of the problem of sin as it strikes the individual. Does it really make any difference how I speak or act? Am I really free to do just as I please? Is that what is meant by "being free" and being "set at liberty" as we read these words in the Holy Scriptures?

Let's look at that word "free" and its companion word, "liberty," for a moment.

Get down your Bible and turn to Mark 7, and begin reading. When you come to the 11th verse, begin to go a little slower. By the time you have finished Jesus' words in verse 13, I think you will realize that "free" does not mean that one can do just as he likes regardless of anyone.

This is further shown in Paul's words, written to the Corinthian Church, in I Corinthians 8:9-11. How definite is the word found in verse 12—"But when ye sin so against brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ." No freedom to do as you please, there.

There is a way that one may do as he pleases. But that way is only found in the individual who has submerged his will in the will of God. Note how Paul puts it in Galatians 2:20—"I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

When one is Christ-possessed, then he will do as He pleases, for Christ is the possessor and the guide to all thinking and action. It is only in such a life that "freedom" and "liberty" of action will not harm or mislead any of those around us.

Does it make any difference what I do? or what you do? Is there any influence spread abroad by your actions or mine? Even on the surface this is a rather foolish question. But when brought up from below the surface into the realities of much of our present-day thinking, it becomes a real problem—one which needs much prayer and much more example from those who profess to be followers of the Risen and Living Lord.

Think it over!

ANNOUNCING

NEW CHILDREN'S BIBLE STORYTIME RECORDS

Two new volumes of children's Bible Storytime Records have been released by The Standard Publishing Co., featuring stories of the Old and New Testaments.

The total available now is four volumes of three records each.

Unique in design and construction, the records are unbreakable—6½-inch size, plastic coated on a cardboard base—and ideal for any child to use without danger of breaking. Bright, full-color pictures on each record have extra appeal and identify the story for the young child who is unable to read. Child appeal and child size—any youngster will delight in playing these records over and over again.

Volume 3 features reverently-told Bible stories of Jacob's Dream, Ruth, Good-Night Song, Joseph and His Brothers, and Daniel in Lions' Den (2 sides). Stories in Volume 4 are The Shepherds of Bethlehem, Shepherds Worship Baby Jesus, The Good Samaritan, and A Gift for Jesus. Third record of the latter set features a group of children singing "Praise Him" and "Jesus Loves Me." Background of music can be heard of the trumpet, vibraharp, and the piano. Special sound effects add to the appeal for children. Price is only $1.05 for each volume of six recordings.

Order from The Brethren Publishing Co., Ashland, Ohio.

Baptism with the Spirit

Rev. Delbert B. Flora

THE FULFILLMENT

The event in Acts 2:1-4: "When the day of Pentecost had come, they were all together in one place. And suddenly a sound came from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared to them tongues as of fire, distributed and resting on each one of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

Peter's opinion as stated in Acts 2:16-18 and 38-39: "... this is what was spoken by the prophet Joel: 'And in the last days it shall be, God declares, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; yea, and on my menservants and my maidservants in those days I will pour out my Spirit, and they shall prophesy.' ... And Peter said to them, 'Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For the promise is to you and to your children and to all that are afar off, every one whom the Lord our God calls to him.'"

A like event in the home of a Gentile as described in Acts 10:44-48: "... the Holy Spirit fell on all who heard the word. And the believers from among the circumcised who came with Peter were amazed, because the gift of the Holy Spirit had been poured out even on the Gentiles. For they heard them speaking in tongues and extolling God. Then Peter declared, 'Can any one forbid water for baptizing these people who have received the Holy Spirit just as we have?' And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ ..."

Peter's explanation to the church in Jerusalem, Acts 11:15-18: "... 'And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, 'John baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.' If then God gave the same gift to them as he gave to us when we believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I that I could withstand God?' When they heard this they were silenced. And they glorified God, saying, 'Then to the Gentiles also God has granted repentance unto life.'"

EXPOSITION

I. The Scripture Passages Compared.

The lengthy quotation of Scripture passages above becomes necessary in order to bring together for easier study the similarities of expression. John prophesied that Christ

QUITE SOME TIME AGO, while the writer was engaged in pulpit supply work, he was asked about the baptism of the Spirit. A Wednesday evening service was then devoted to a discussion of the question. The procedure was somewhat as follows.

THE PROMISE

I. John the Baptist's Promise.

In Matthew 3:11: "I baptize you with water for repentance, but he who is coming after me is mightier than I, whose sandals I am not worthy to carry; he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire."

In Mark 1:8: "After me comes he who is mightier than I, the thong of whose sandals I am not worthy to stoop down and untie. I have baptized you with water; but he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit."

In Luke 3:16: "I baptize you with water; but he who is mightier than I, the thong of whose sandals I am not worthy to untie; he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire."

In John 1:26, 27: "I baptize you with water; but among you stands one whom you do not know, even he who comes after me, the thong of whose sandal I am not worthy to untie." In this passage the promise is not stated, but in the light of the other statements of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, it must have been in the mind of the Apostle John as he wrote these words.

II. The Promise of the Lord Jesus.

In Luke 24:49: "And behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but stay in the city, until you are clothed with power from on high."

In Acts 1:4, 5, 8: "And while staying with them he charged them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father, which, he said, 'you heard from me, for John baptized with water, but before many days you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.' ... But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria and to the end of the earth."

would "baptize with the Holy Spirit and with fire." Jesus promised just before His ascension, "before many days you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit." On the day of Pentecost there was the sound like that of the rush of a mighty wind (compare John 3:8), there were (apparently) tongues of fire resting on them, and they were filled with the Spirit and they spoke in other tongues. Peter said, "This was what was spoken by the prophet Joel . . . the promise is to you." In the house of Cornelius the Holy Spirit fell on the whole group, the Holy Spirit was poured out even on the Gentiles. Peter later explained to the Jewish church in Jerusalem that this was what the Lord had promised.

In other words John Baptist prophesied the baptism with (note that it is not of) the Spirit and fire, Jesus promised the same baptism, and Peter stated that the fulfillment had come about on Pentecost. It is well to notice just here that what happened in the home of Cornelius was not a new or separate thing from that on the day of Pentecost, but was rather the same thing for the Gentiles. It was then really the Gentile Pentecost. Now please note that in no other instance of special manifestation of the Spirit's power or presence is it stated in the Scriptures that that is what was promised by Christ as the baptism with the Spirit. There is recorded no other baptism with the Spirit than that in Jerusalem on Pentecost and in the house of the Roman army officer in Caesarea.

II. The Word Baptize.

The word "baptize" was used by the Greeks in a number of ways and meanings. It primarily means to dip or to immerse. It was used of a ship that was submerged. It was used of drawing water by dipping a vessel into another, or drawing wine by dipping the cup into the bowl. It was used of being overwhelmed with questions and of being flooded with trouble. George Milligan quotes from a letter written (in Greek) about 153 B. C., one line which says, "just then we are immersed in trouble."

Therefore we would conclude that the baptism with the Spirit would be the immersion, the overwhelming, the flooding of the human soul and personality in the person and power of the Holy Spirit. For the church it would mean that God's power had been provided and His Spirit had come to lead for the great work of the church.

III. The Significance and the Purpose of this Baptism

The coming of the Spirit on Pentecost was the realization of the promise. The disciples had the Spirit even before Pentecost just as all the saints of the Old Testament. No saving faith was ever possible without the Spirit. But on Pentecost the Spirit came to dwell permanently in the hearts of those who make up the Christian church. Since that time He has filled the church with His powers and His gifts.

Upon the occasion of Pentecost there was the miraculous manifestation of tongues of fire and that was followed by speaking in foreign tongues. Thousands were persuaded on that day. The disciples and converts continued speaking everywhere for Christ, just as he had said, "You shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be my witnesses . . ." It must not be overlooked, therefore, that the baptism with the Spirit has a special relation to world wide evangelism.

Is the Christian to pray for the baptism with the Spirit? Is this something to be sought out? This writer cannot at present think so. Remember that the whole church was baptized with the Spirit on Pentecost, not certain individuals but the whole community that was gathered in obedience to the command of Christ. They all saw and felt the same manifestations at once and the same time. When one accepts Christ and becomes a Christian he is at that moment in position to use the power of the church.

It is to be noticed in this immediate connection that, as Paul says in 1 Corinthians 12:3, "No one can say, 'Jesus is Lord' except by the Holy Spirit." That is he cannot make such an acknowledgment except in union with the Holy Spirit. Moreover, "by one Spirit we were all baptized into one body (the church) . . . and all were made to drink of one Spirit," verse 13. We become Christian by the power of the Holy Spirit, and we become part of the body of the church by the power of the Holy Spirit, so that out of us shall flow rivers of living water to the thirsty world (compare John 7:37-39).

The baptism with the Spirit was for the church. The individual believer may be filled with the power of the Spirit and may enjoy the blessings of the baptism in greater or lesser degree as he is more or less consecrated and yielded to the blessed Spirit whom our resurrected Lord sent in His place into the church at work in the world.

New Pastor Installed At Pittsburgh, Penna.

On Sunday morning, November 6th, Rev. William Rumel, a Church of the Brethren pastor, concluded his supply pastorate of the First Brethren Church of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and the newly called pastor, Rev. Alvin H. Grumbling was formally installed in a fitting ceremony. At the morning worship hour the new pastor preached his first sermon before the congregation of this new charge.

Brother Grumbling thus fills the vacancy in this pulpit which occurred last June. He is a native of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and a graduate of the Johnstown High School. He was also graduated from Ashland College and was entering the Ashland Seminary when he was called to the Pittsburgh church by the congregation. While in Ashland Brother Grumbling worked with the A Cappella Choir and the Gospel Teams.

The new minister and his wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Gilmer, daughter of Brother and Sister C. Y. Gilmer, pastor of our Huntington, Indiana, church, are now at home in the Pittsburgh parsonage, 5002 Dearborn Street.

The Need For Ministers

By Myron S. Kem

HOW MANY STUDENTS HAS YOUR CHURCH SENT TO ASHLAND COLLEGE FOR TRAINING IN THE MINISTRY?

THE ASHLAND COLLEGE "Emergency Fund Appeal" points to another situation that needs the attention of the Brethren people and which should receive consideration.

The Brethren Church needs Ministers. Ashland College is equipped to educate them for this important position if they are qualified. The Ministry is a difficult position to fill. It requires men of exceptional ability.

Not all of the men starting an education for the Ministry can meet the grade or fill the requirements. Every student sent to Ashland College who enters the pre-seminary field will not become a Minister. Some of them are unable to finance the expenditure involved. Others are unable to meet the scholastic requirements, including sufficient grades, and others are not properly suited for the Ministry and find it out before it is too late. This is true in all professions that are difficult. The mortality among the students preparing for Medicine, Law, and the Ministry is great.

Ashland has been criticized because it is not providing more Ministers. I believe this criticism is unjust. The people who are making this criticism are not tolerant and understanding of the problems involved in preparing a young man or woman for the Ministry or Mission Field.

The responsibility for sending young men and women who are qualified for this important field of work to Ashland College should be accepted by each local congregation as their responsibility. It is the responsibility of we, the members of the Brethren Church, to send Brethren students to Ashland for this training. If we do not send qualified students to Ashland who can complete this work, Ashland cannot be criticized for not sending into the Churches sufficient Ministers to fill our need. It is the responsibility of we, the individual members of the Brethren Church.

How many young men and young women has your church sent to Ashland College and Seminary for training in the Ministry? What are you doing in your church to promote the inspiration for young people to enter this important field of work?

Yes, Brethren, we cannot criticize Ashland College if the supply of Ministers is not sufficient to meet the needs. It is our responsibility to send these young people to Ashland for this training and if we do not send them there will continue to be a need for Brethren Ministers.

If and when you hear this type of criticism directed to Ashland, ask yourself and your congregation, "What are we doing?" How many students has your church sent for training in this important field of work?

Brethren, the responsibility of filling the pulpits and of sending young men for this training to Ashland College and Seminary is the responsibility of we, the people of the Brethren Church.

The future of the Brethren Church is the responsibility of We, The Brethren People. The Brethren Church will not advance beyond the spiritual scholastic level of its leaders. We should recognize this problem and take what action is necessary to meet it. Something must be done now, tomorrow may be too late.

The immediate future is discouraging in aspect because of the dearth of material now in training at Ashland for both lay and ministerial leadership. Unless something is done by we, the people of each Brethren Church, to re-awaken ourselves to a zealous consciousness to the value of higher education and of a high degree of intellectual perception in the Brethren Church, we are in danger of actual retrogression in years to come.

The purpose of this article is to present what, in the writer's opinion, is the most challenging problem to us, the people in the Brethren Church today.

It is my firm conviction that when we, the people, have this problem properly presented to us, that we will realize the seriousness of the situation and assume our responsibility with the spirit and faith of our forefathers.

A Liturgical Hymn Service for Thanksgiving

By E. J. Beekley

Pastor of The Warsaw, Indiana, Brethren Church

(Some time ago we asked Brother E. J. Beekley, then of Canton, Ohio, but now pastor of the Warsaw, Indiana, Brethren Church, to share with our readers some of the fine things he is doing in the way of special services, hints for programs, suggestions for posters, etc., which has become more than just a "hobby" with him, although he has spent much time and energy in the selecting of materials and correlating them for use in various ways. He sends us the first of these suggestions, a timely Thanksgiving program. We trust that more of these suggestive materials will find their way to us in the near future. He says, "I adapted it from the Ministers' Idea Kit."—Editor)

THE SERVICE

The first American Thanksgiving service was held by the Pilgrims on the shores of New England, when, in thanksgiving for delivery from perils of the sea and arrival in a land of freedom, they offered their thanksgiving Proclamation, commencing with the words, "In the Name of God, Amen."

These Pilgrims had come to these shores seeking freedom to practice their faith unhampered. And, as they hewed their homes out of the native forests and year after year, overcame the tremendous obstacles which faced them daily, harvesting their lives from the bountiful soil of the new land, it became their custom to meet after each year's harvest to give thanks to God for all His goodness toward them. But strong in their memory was their spiritual blessings, as well as the material things with which God had blessed them.

More than three centuries have passed since the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers; but the custom which was theirs is ours also, today, except that we modern Christians are too prone to think of Thanksgiving as a time of thanks for the material rather than for those far greater gifts—the spiritual.

We ask you to worship with us as we join in offering praise to God:

* * * * *

Minister: For the Christ who suffered and died upon the cross that we, through Him, might receive everlasting life, we give thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Beneath The Cross of Jesus" (One verse)

Minister: For the call of Christ, which comes to us today, calling us to serve Him and our fellowmen, calling us to lives of purity and selflessness, we thank Thee, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult." (One verse)

Minister: For those who landed on these shores, in search of freedom of faith; for our fathers who honored God; for those who established this church; and for the faith which has been handed down from generation to generation, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Faith of Our Fathers." (Three verses)

Minister: For the church of Christ, triumphant, of which this church is a part, and for the opportunity that is ours to serve within and without the church, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "I Love To Tell the Story." (One verse)

Minister: For the privilege of meeting in this House, and of worshipping Thee in mutual ties that bind us one to another, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." (One verse)

Minister: For the Christian Sabbath, this day of holy rest and worship, for the Word of God, speaking to us today in living tones, guiding us when we are in danger of being lost, comforting us when we are in sorrow, directing us onward in the path of truth, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Wonderful Words of Life." (One verse)

Minister: For the privilege of prayer; for the strength, comfort and wisdom that comes to us through our approach to the Throne of Grace, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "Sweet Hour of Prayer." (One verse)

Minister: For the far-flung world-enterprise of the Church; for Thy missionaries at home and abroad; for our part in having a share in their work, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing "If Jesus Goes With Me." (One verse)

Minister: For all the material gifts which Thou hast showered upon us—for life, for health, for homes and families, and for the rich harvest, for our nation, and the wondrous way in which Thou hast directed us and blest us; for the opportunity that is ours, as a nation, to rightly influence the nations of the world, and for the opportunity that each one of us has, as citizens of this nation, to make it better, a more worthy, a truly Christian nation, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir: Sing: "My Country 'Tis of Thee." (One verse)

Minister: Thus, humbly and devoutly, for all of these and untold other blessings, we give Thee thanks, O Lord.

Choir and Congregation: Join in "Revive Us Again." (Four verses)

To work and not worry; to be energetic and not fussy, is a high type of life.

We cannot do everything everywhere; but we can all do something somewhere.

The Tiosa, Indiana, Brethren Hold Rededication

As reported by Mrs. Frank B. Lee, Cor. Sec.

Outside view of the Tiosa Church

ON SEPTEMBER 18th we held our Annual Homecoming Day and Rededication service. We had a happy day together with many of our old friends and members coming back to observe the occasion with us. There were one hundred and twenty-seven in Sunday School, with many more coming for the later services, and for the fine basket dinner which was served in the church basement.

Rev. S. M. Whetstone, pastor of the Dayton Hillcrest Brethren Church, Dayton, Ohio, a former pastor, and Mrs. Whetstone enjoyed the day with us, Brother Whetstone bringing both the morning sermon and the rededictory address.

Rev. E. M. Riddle, Secretary of the General Missionary Board of the Brethren Church, conducted the rededication service. Brother Earl was called into the ministry by this church, and was ordained to the full gospel ministry here. He is still called "our boy" here because he grew up among us and was baptized here. His mother, Mrs. A. J. Riddle, is still one of our active members.

Mrs. Oscar Scott was called upon to give the history of the church at the afternoon service. In this history we learned that our church had a very humble beginning in December of 1883, with seventeen people meeting in the schoolhouse. Brother J. A. Ridenour was their pastor. In the spring of 1884 a church building was started and dedicated on October 18, 1884. Rev. S. H. Bashore preached the dedication sermon. Just as with most small organizations, this church had its early struggles, but God has richly blessed us until we now feel we have a lively rural church.

In 1914 the church felt the need of improvement and expansion and a sizeable building program was undertaken. A basement, central heating plant, improved lighting facilities, etc., were added. It was rededicated in that year, with Rev. L. G. Wood as pastor.

In the fall of 1948 the Young Married People's Class of our Sunday School placed a resolution before the church, asking for another remodeling and improvement program. The church immediately got behind the movement. A new oil heating plant replaced the old coal-burning furnace; class rooms and a choir loft were added; redecoration was done throughout the church; new bottled gas stoves were placed in the kitchen, along with several minor changes. The floors were beautifully refinished and the pulpit and aisle carpeted to make ready for the new pews which were added last.

We are now in the midst of our revival service (at the time this was written several weeks ago) and the interest is running high, last Sunday evening bringing a full house. Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Maus are beginning their fourth year with us, and we are looking forward to another year with them.

VISUAL CO-OPERATIVE ANNOUNCES OFFERINGS OF MEMBERS

by Chester F. Zimmerman

Director Visual Education of the National Sunday School Association

THE SIMPLICITY of the visual co-operative makes it workable and worthwhile. This is the plan. If you have 35mm. filmstrips or slides you may list them with the visual co-operative and then borrow from any other member the materials he has. Several hundred dollars worth of films are now available. Listed here are the filmstrips and slides which the Rev. R. K. Higgins, R. R., Bunker Hill, Indiana has listed with the co-operative. Send your request for these materials directly to him and return them to him after using. The borrower will pay postage both ways and insurance. Simply enclose the amount of postage in the return package.

35 mm. Filmstrips

"Holy Child of Bethlehem"—Color—37 frames—with Manual.

"The First Year of Christ's Ministry"—50 frames—Color. Scripture reference and message on each frame.

"The First Galilean Ministry"—Color—50 frames. Scripture reference and message on each frame.

"Ceiling Unlimited"—Blk. & W.—52 frames.

Message on each frame—W. C. T. U. sponsored.

"Life of Joseph Series"—25 to 30 frames—Color.

"Joseph Sold into Egypt"

"From Palace to Prison"

"Joseph's Dream Come True"

"Joseph Makes Himself Known"

"The Family United"

Text is printed on each frame.

Pastor Higgins comments "These are Beautiful and Instructional."

35 M.M. slides (2 x 2)

"Creation to Abraham"—set of seven—Color.

"Abraham and Isaac"—set of seven—Color.

"Last Supper"—set of five—Color.

The Visual co-operative is sponsored by the National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio. Send your request for the application blank on which to list your materials to this office. The co-operative does not own any files. Do not order these materials from the Sunday School Association office. Request loan from pastor Higgins. He will return immediately a confirmation of your request. You need not wait until you are a member of the co-operative to request these filmstrips and slides. They are available for the present to anyone in the brotherhood.

Your only requirement for membership in the conference year of 1949-1950 is to list your filmstrips and slides with the co-operative. In each following year members will add to their material items valued at ten dollars or more as they choose.

There shall be no entry fee for membership in the co-operative until 1955 at which time an entry fee of $10.00 will be charged new members. This fee is to be instituted because of the large supply of materials which will then be available in the co-operative. There will then be hundreds of slides and slidefilms available for loan.

Any Brethren organization, church or member may become a member of the cooperative by submitting a list of materials for exchange or making a purchase of 35mm. materials through the co-operative.

There will be no regular meetings, officers, or dues. An informal meeting will be announced for the selection of purchases at National Conference time which members may attend if they wish.

In agreeing to sponsor the Visual Materials co-operative the National Sunday School Association has agreed to provide mailing tubes in reasonable quantity, announce new materials of the co-operative through the church publications, and provide forms for membership, listing of films and booking of films.

The field and usefulness of the 35mm. method of teaching is constantly growing. In the last six months a filmstrip supplement to the Filmstrip Guide lists 949 new filmstrips—sacred and secular. Many of these are usable in the various departments of the church and auxiliary organizations. Your Visual Education Director is previewing some of these materials and will recommend them to you in early issues.

The 20,000 slides in the Society for Visual Education slide library cover practically every subject in the modern church and school curriculum. They are in full color.

Make your church a better teaching church by using the eye-gate.

pastor, announces the Pennsylvania District Brethren Youth Rally to be held in the Second church on Friday, November 25th. The full program appears in this issue.

Brother Leatherman reports that nearly one hundred were present on Tuesday evening, November 1st, for the Cambria County Brethren C. E. Union meeting. He says, "We appreciated the Berlin folks and the splendid play they brought, which was written by their pastor, Rev. Percy C. Miller."

Roann, Indiana. The Roann Church observed their annual Homecoming and Rally Day on Sunday, October 9th, with services morning and afternoon. Brother J. M. Bowman, pastor of our Peru, Indiana, church, was the afternoon guest speaker. The recently installed pastor, Brother J. F. Baldwin, spoke at the morning hour.

The revival services are now in progress at the Roann church, having been begun on Sunday, November 13th and will be closing on Sunday, November 27th.

Brother and Sister Baldwin held "open house" at the parsonage on Sunday afternoon, November 6th from 1:30 to 5:00. This gave the membership an opportunity to see what recent improvements had been made, and to become better acquainted with their new pastor and family.

Masontown, Penna. We note that Brother J. J. Margush, pastor of our Sergeantsville, New Jersey, church, conducted an evangelistic campaign in the Masontown church, which began on October 24th and closed on November 6th. The church observed the Holy Communion on Monday evening, November 8th, following the close of the campaign.

Oakville, Indiana. Brother Henry Bates, pastor of the Oakville church, tells us that Brother Robert Bishof, of Ashland College and Seminary, was recently the guest preacher at the Oakville church. Brother Bishof will soon go out into the regular work of the church. At present, while attending the Seminary, he is the pastor of the Greenwich, Ohio, Congregational Church, a church which he has served since Brother D. R. Wolfe, gave it up to become pastor of the Johnstown, Penna., Third Church.

Smithville, Ohio. Brother Vernon Grisso, Smithville pastor, says, "A Boys' Brotherhood is in the stage of organization. It was inspired by the boys themselves and will be sponsored by the Laymen's organization."

He also notes that the Sunday School attendance for quite a number of Sundays has been "approximately twenty more than a year ago." Also in connection with this he says, "A new Sunday School Class has been set up with Raymond Aspinwall as the teacher. (Incidentally, read Brother Grisso's full report of the Smithville work in this issue, and you will see the significance of the name, Raymond Aspinall.)"

On November 1st the Smithville Laymen's Organization had the opportunity of hearing Harold Kropf, Attorney, Sunday School teacher and a church worker of Orrville, Ohio, speak on the subject, "Just and Durable Homes."

Warsaw, Indiana. Brother E. J. Beekley, recently installed pastor at Warsaw, says, that their Thursday evening prayer meetings are being well attended, and that interest in this service is growing.

Brother Beekley is in the midst of his evangelistic services, having begun on November 6th, and is closing on November 20th.

We are also in receipt of the Laymen's Annual Program Booklet of the Warsaw church. It covers the time from November 1949 through August 1950.

Akron, Ohio, (Firestone Park). Brother J. G. Dodds, pastor, has just closed a meeting at the Akron church. The report comes to us that the attendance and interest were fine. We, no doubt, will be favored with a full report later.

Dayton, Ohio, Hillcrest. Brother S. M. Whetstone is still talking about the growth of their youth program on Sunday evenings. He says, "The youth program continues to grow in interest. An even sixty present last Sunday evening."

Those "Family night" Wednesday evening services seem to be going over big in the Dayton church. They meet together and then study the Word together.

Cheyenne, Wyoming. A note from Brother Frank W. Garber, pastor of the Cheyenne Church, says, "The Lord continues to bless the work here. Our audiences show many new faces each Sunday, for which we give God praise. We are starting C. E. for the winter months and will have both Senior and Junior Societies this year. We expect to organize a Laymen's Group on November 2nd. Pray for the work here." We trust that by this time this Laymen's Organization is in action.

St. James, Maryland. Do you remember that Men's Bible Class dinner which we spoke of several weeks ago? Well here is the report of it: "There were plates for forty-six in the dining room of the church last Sunday (October 23) for the Men's Bible Class family dinner. A good time was had by all."

Brother Ankrum says, "Sunday October 16th was a gala day for the St. James Brethren Church. There were 177 in Sunday School, which broke a record of years, the exact number not agreed upon. The entire church was filled with communicants for the seven o'clock service."

The St. James Laymen assumed responsibility for constructing an outside entrance to the parsonage basement.

Brother Ankrum was recently guest speaker at the P. T. A. "Father's Night."

The evangelistic meetings of the St. James church will close on November 20th. Brother Ankrum is acting as his own evangelist.

Milledgeville, Ill. Brother D. C. White, pastor, says, concerning the Ashland College Emergency Offering, "Our aim was $1,000.00, and we went over the top." Dr. Clayton, College President tells us that many other churches are going over the top. How about yours?

Brother White makes a sort of resume of his three years of service at Milledgeville by saying, "The Lord has wonderfully blessed our work here for which we are grateful. Fifty-six souls have been added to the church membership, many improvements have been made in the parsonage and church. Every department of the church is working and cooperating—what more could be desired?"

Carleton, Nebraska. We note from Brother Overholtzer's bulletin that he held one week of special evening services, preceding the communion observance. This week of service was held from November 6th to 13th.

At a recently held monthly meeting of the Carleton Laymen's Organization, the following officers were elected: President—M. K. Brinegar; Vice President—H. T. Bates; Secretary-Treasurer—Ralph A. Lichty. It was an enthusiastic meeting, with all participating.

Carleton observed its Annual Homecoming and Rally Day on October 9th, with services both morning and afternoon, and a basket dinner at the noon hour.

Elkhart, Indiana. We note that a Building Committee has been selected to consider the plans for a new unit to the Elkhart Church. A drawing of the same has been on exhibition in the church.

We note that the revival services in the Elkhart Church are scheduled for some time in the month of February, with Brother Vernon D. Grisso, pastor of the Smithville, Ohio, Church as evangelist.

More reports next week. We will have several reports from our churches that, because of lack of space this week, will have to be held over for our next issue. This is because of the fact that we have had no opportunity to get them in the past two issues. But KEEP THEM COMING! They will get in eventually.

Until faith becomes restful, patient, and yielded, it has not reached the point of "full assurance of faith."

The towline of Christ's love can pull us out of the ditch of sin and set us on the solid road of righteousness.

Adversity may lead us to greater faith and dependence upon God.

LITTLE KNOWN CHARACTERS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

Scripture: II Samuel 12:1-15

For The Leader

IF YOU WERE TO TAKE the average group of church people and ask them to tell the names of ten Old Testament characters, and to tell something about five of them, most of the people would flunk the test. A woeful, yet true, charge against church people today is that they do not read their Bibles. It comes to us that the hardest goal in our Women's and Men's societies to reach is the Bible reading goal. Well, that doesn't just happen. There's a reason for it. We can find time to read every magazine, every paper each day. But there just doesn't seem to be time to read God's Word. The old devil himself, unbeknown to us, shades our interest and desire for the Bible, but brings our interest back when the other things come along. So, in this round about way we are coming around to tell you that the reason we know so little about our Old Testament characters is that we just haven't overcome the opposition to our study of them. Let us resolve to learn more about these wonderful men and women of God. Tonight is a good night to begin.

DISCUSSION

1. USED OF GOD. As we explore the pages of the Old Testament we read of many men and women who were used of God to accomplish His will. Caleb and Joshua were faithful spies, being used of God to bring back a good report on the land of Canaan. Read about them in the 13th chapter of Numbers. They were used of God because they trusted in Him. Let it be said of us that we can be used of God to do some large or small work He would have us do.

2. THEY WERE REAL PEOPLE. So much of our reading today is fictional. That is, when the characters are made up and used in the story. Pick up any story book and read of the adventures of the people therein. We know when we read the story that the people are not real. So we develop a "people made up" complex. And too sad it is, but that attitude carries over into the Bible. There is a danger that when we read about Moses, Joshua, David and the giant Goliath, that we consider them just "made-up" characters like the other stories we read. That is not so. The people in the Bible are real characters like we are. They lived and ate; they spent their years on the earth even as we are doing. Their lives, though we read their whole life in a matter of minutes, was lived a day at a time. What we read as the results of their lives was unknown to them except as they learned of it day by day. When Joseph was in prison he knew God would be his Deliverer, but he had no way of knowing to what great heights he would rise as the next to the king in Egypt.

Remember that when you read of these Old Testament people, that they were real flesh and blood people like we are. God has written their lives in brief for us even as the record of our lives, good and bad, are being written in the books of God.

3. ACCOUNTS TELL ALL. If you were writing a biography of a king of a country, would you include in the account that he fell in love with another man's wife, and had that man murdered in battle so that he, the king, could have the woman to be his own wife? That's what God did with king David. If you were writing the story of Noah, that wonderful man of God who labored for 120 years to build an ark to save the human race, would you write that after he came forth from the ark he went and got drunk? That's the account. These are written, not to play up the sinful side of man, but to show that all men are sinners, and need to rely daily upon a close walk of fellowship with God. It shows also that even the greatest of God's servants do not live a sinless life here on earth. If the Bible contained just the things about these great men of God that were right and just, how helpless we would feel today. We would read their "perfect" records, and think of our own imperfect lives, and we would become hopelessly discouraged. So God wrote all, that we might take hope and courage when we have sinned. God wrote all, to show how these men, overcome by temptation, were able to rise by the grace of God and in His strength overcome, and live victoriously. We can do the same.

4. LESSONS FROM THEIR LIVES. Young people, the more you read of these Old Testament characters, the richer your life will be for Christ. You will study their lives and gain the answers to your problems today. You will see how men like Isaiah, Elijah, Job, and many others, placed their faith in God, and trusted in Him at all times. You will see the rich blessings of God upon them because they did trust in Him. It is very important today that we read of these people and their experiences. Because, unless we read of them and seek the same source of help they did, we are going to fail miserably in life. It is our reading of the word of God that keeps us living our Christian life successfully.

5. SOME WAYS OF STUDYING OLD TESTAMENT CHARACTERS. You can get a Bible dictionary, a piece of paper and pencil. In a few minutes you can take any section of the book and jot down a dozen or so names and scripture references. These will give you the verses which tell of their lives. Or, you can make a definite reading practice of the Old Testament from Genesis to Malachi. Make a mental note or a written note of the characters as you come to them. As you continue your reading, you will find their names cropping up time after time. Thus you will have a complete picture of God's dealings with man before the days of Christ.

If you are old enough to read these words, you are old enough to start reading the Bible from beginning to end. It is a most wonderful experience. Create within yourself a yearning to know more about these people of God of ages past and you will find yourself reading page after page of the scriptures, with a desire and zeal you would have never thought possible. And, when you read, pray that God's Holy Spirit may lead and guide you into the truth as taught in the scriptures.

I READ HIS WORD

I read the Word of God; it starts a flame
Within my heart: His Word that I can claim Forever as my own, and always I Find in its glow a fire to warm me by.
I find my strength and courage in His Word,
My hope is kindled and my heart is stirred
To stronger, growing faith. I turn a page;
The path is clearly marked from Youth to Age.
One need not lose the way. A hand leads on
From rosy morning's earliest breaking dawn
Till evening, and He promises a light
For that dim hour between the day and night.
He says: "I will be with you to the end."
I read His Word, I trust my guiding Friend.
O you who falter on the road of life,
Bowed down with burdens, overcome with strife,
Open His Book and read His Word, and find
Rest for your body, peace for your heart and mind!

Hymns about the Bible

Prayer Band

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE CONVERTS of the early Christian Church were great Bible students (Acts 2:42; 17:11). The same doctrine which they studied is available for us (Acts 20:32). In the Bible are recorded God's exceeding great and precious promises for you (2 Peter 1:4). Their blessing is realized by those who read, meditate upon and obey (Rev. 1:3; John 15:7). God's Word will keep one from sin (Psa. 119:9, 11). God's Word will give guidance (Psa. 119:24, 105).

The Scriptures are given for the instruction of the church member that he may know that he has salvation (1 John 5:13; John 5:39). The Bible-reading, believing and meditating Christian will have great spiritual prosperity and fruitfulness (Psa. 1). Joshua is an example of the blessed man in the first Psalm (Joshua 1:7, 8). These great promises are conditioned upon our believing knowledge and fondness for them.

One will never be a success by reading one verse a day. To read the Bible is to read all of it. Christ believed in and used all of the Scriptures (Luke 24:27). The Bible is to be taken seriously (1 Thess. 2:13). It is to be studied (2 Tim. 2:15) with prayer (Psa. 119:18). It is to be thoroughly digested (Jer. 15:16). If one does not have the Holy Spirit as his teacher he will fail to learn (John 13:26; 15:26).

The Word of God is our own testimony (1 Peter 2:15; Matt. 10:32, 33). It is good to memorize salvation verses to be used in personal soul winning. The following are suggested: John 1:12; 3:14-18, 36; 5:24; 6:37, 40, 47.

Read the Scriptures regularly, prayerfully, studiously, consecutively, sympathetically, in faith and in the spirit of obedience. The Scriptures will then supply your every need, producing faith (Rom. 10:17); spiritual growth (2 Peter 2:2); edification (Acts 20:32); protection (Eph. 6:17). To deal honestly with the Bible is to live according to what is revealed of God's will.

PROPHETS, FALSE AND TRUE

Lesson: Jeremiah 23:16, 21-32

IF YOU HAVE NEVER TAKEN TIME to think about the matter of "false prophets" as compared to "true prophets," it will be enlightening to you just to sit down with your Bible and a good concordance and hunt up all the passages which relate to each class. If God had not seen the necessity for drawing a very sharp line between these two types, He would not have put it into the minds of the writers of both the Old and New Testaments to record the many instances concerning each of these.

To give you a good start in a study of "false prophets" we call your attention to such expressions as the following: "false prophets"; "prophecy falsely"; "lying prophets"; "prophets that steal my word"; "their prophets provoke me"; "false prophets in sheep's clothing." There are many others to be found which show us the care with which God seeks to show us the difference between the false and the true.

These "false prophets" never sought to speak the words of God, but, since they were in high places in the various kings' courts, they were ever endeavoring to reach such conclusions and speak such words that would satisfy the thinking of the ruling monarch, and they spoke words that would "tickle the pride" of the ruler. They, themselves, were ruled by the spirit of satan, and not by the Spirit of the Living God.

John says, in his first general epistle, chapter 4, verse 1, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." It never was, or ever is, a new thing to meet false prophets—false interpreters of signs and events. Sometimes these false prophets even delude themselves into thinking that they are speaking the truth. Did you ever meet a "truthful liar?" I have. I once knew a man who told untrue stories of his own activities, and had told them so many times, that he actually believed them himself, and really told them for the truth. But when he was really "pinned down" he would confess that he was sure it had happened, but whether it had happened to him or not he could not really say.

We would like to think that these false prophets were doing their best, but even that "best" was entirely false. They listened to the wrong leading—to the "false" leadership. That which is false can never be true. And it was through these false prophets that men were turned from the living God to worship idols. It was and is, even as Jude says in Jude 16, writing that they "spoke great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage . . ." or, as Peter says in 2 Peter 2:18, "For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure, through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness . . ."

Have you ever noticed the very last sentence in John's first epistle—chapter 5, verse 21? It comes as a final admonition, even as if it might have been an afterthought, or a postscript—but, however, standing out in bold relief so they might be left with this thought. Notice it now, "Little children, keep yourself from idols."

As to "true prophets" we need only say that every true prophet speaks not his own words, but those which God gives him to speak. He prays for guidance—then he stops and listens to what God has to say to him.

Paul admonishes us to "pray without ceasing" but far too many times we change it to "pray without thinking." True prophets always are "in the will of God," seeking to do as He would have them do. If we "seek" rightly we will be left in no doubt as to the "false" and the "true."

News From Our Churches

BROTHER FREEMAN ANKRUM TRAVELS ABOUT

Meeting at Kimsey's Run, W. Va.

Asked by the pastor, Rev. Guy Ludwig, in September, to hold a week of meetings for the Church on the Run, it was finally planned, owing to other commitments, to start on Sunday night, October 2nd and close on Saturday night, October 8th. This was approved by the St. James folks. Kimsey's Run is a part of the Mathias congregation and is located 12 miles away at the foot of South Branch Mountain, in a very picturesque setting. Rev. Ludwig is the versatile pastor of the group. We were far from a stranger, having been with the pastor for five meetings previous to this one—four in Mathias and one on the Run. The people had redecorated the interior of their building and were busy excavating for the installation of a furnace.

There had been four weeks of meetings in this community, held by two other churches, and there were those who felt that our meetings, coming last, would be poorly attended, but there were splendid crowds for each service. The weather was ideal—the mountains donned their most beautiful autumn colors, and the hospitality of the people of the community was of the highest.

Our home was with the pastor and wife. Nothing was left to be desired except to remind them from time to time to put less upon the table.

One week was too short to accomplish as much as desired, but there was worthwhile things accomplished. Among the visible results was one young man being baptized and received into the church, and others are considering the step. The meeting closed on Saturday night and at 9:20 we started for

St. James, Maryland—100 miles away

October 9th was a busy day, with our own service at St. James in the morning and a hurried drive of the forty-five miles to Linwood, there to share in their Annual Homecoming. The weather was ideal. Rev. Dyoll Belote, the pastor, brought, as was their custom, the morning message, with the afternoon and evening messages being brought by outside speakers. Hon. Theodore McKeldin, former mayor of Baltimore and Homecoming speaker for many years, could not be present for the night time service in which he usually took part, because of a conflict in dates, so he and the writer exchanged, he taking the afternoon service. The writer took the night service. It is no small matter to follow one of the most popular orators in Maryland, but a splendid audience was very attentive, and perhaps they realized that we were trying to do the best we could. We appreciated having been invited back for the second time as their Homecoming speaker since closing our pastorate there almost nine years ago. The Linwood folks know how to stage a successful Homecoming, and their hospitality was top notch.

Many of the activities of St. James have been reported by the Editor, Brother Vanator, as gleaned from the bulletin. The work seems to be making a healthy growth. An offering was taken on Sunday morning, October 9th, for the College Emergency Fund. This offering resulted in $545.00 being raised, without the application of pressure. It was reported in the recent quarterly business meeting that some $1,030.00 had been spent in renovating and modernizing the parsonage. A two weeks effort was made for a Rally Day in the Sunday School. There were 177 present for the school. Communion service was held that night with the house filled with communicants. Chairs were placed for those not taking part. All organizations are operating efficiently and one of them had approximately 100% attendance at the Laymen's meeting held in the Hagerstown Brethren Church. As this report is being made we are anticipating our Evangelistic Campaign, which begins on November 6th and closes November 20th, with the writer doing the preaching.

We have enjoyed the visit of a number of Masontown folk in recent weeks and appreciate their interest in one who was their pastor for nearly nine years. Naturally leaving there does not terminate our interest in them.

Freeman Ankrum, St. James Pastor.

MUNCIE, INDIANA

The youngest organization of the First Brethren Church at Muncie is the Laymen's organization headed by Arthur Maitlen. They have already attacked several problems needing attention around the church building and have completed them at this date. They have a Father and Son Banquet, a Fish Fry to which the wives were invited, and several regular meetings.

Our church choir had the Church of the Air broadcast over WLBC recently with members of the church not only singing, but taking part in varied devotional parts. The pastor, Rev. Chester F. Zimmerman spoke briefly. It can be stated as a fact that this was one of the best services of its type heard over the local station. Much preparation made this a fine service.

Our Sunday School is growing in size and efficiency under the leadership of Loren Garrett, superintendent for the past several years, and the re-elected superintendent for the year 1950. The church has called Rev. Zimmerman to be our pastor in 1950.

The trustees, Charles McNeal, Thomas Falls, and Arthur Maitlen have been instrumental in planning improvements in the church, such as shrubbery on two sides of the church, lawn seeded around the church and a large program of painting and varnishing.

We are enjoying the new building which was dedicated only last February and was built under the direction of the Rev. E. D. Burnworth.

SMITHVILLE, OHIO

We Had a Revival. Like salvation, when we are saved we know it! When we are revived, the Spirit is so definite in blessings and spiritual joy that we are sure of it!

Rev. E. J. Black came from Bryan, Ohio, to hold our two weeks meeting. I have never heard finer preaching. He was sound in his fundamentals, positive in his Faith and popular as to our interests and needs. The crowd grew as the meetings progressed, closing with a full church for the latter part of the week. We have never worked with a finer Christian gentleman. He has a true burden for service and a passion for souls.

For Once we decided to have both a preacher and a singer from outside for our meetings. This left the pastor free to act as host to all who came. The pastor spent most of his time in the vestibule, up and down the aisle, meeting people, talking to them about their souls, extending friendship, sympathy, joy and invitation. It was a rare and probable privilege for a pastor to be so free during services.

Bud Hunter of North Manchester, Indiana, came as our song leader. Bud left his temporary Missionary task of supervising the building of the new boys' dormitory at our Lost Creek, Kentucky, mission, to come over and help us. In Bud we discovered the soul of a great layman. As President of the National Brethren Laymen's Organization, he was a veritable living testimony in our midst as to how laymen can and should serve the church. People loved to hear him sing and he could make them sing for him until they forgot their troubles. The songs we shall never forget are those he sang in homes of shut-ins and beside the beds of sickness. He took sunshine and joy to them. While Bud was with us he did more than sing, he wanted to work extra hours—he found plenty to be done. One lasting memory he left to our church is a complete set of hand made, beautifully finished communion cup and bread holders for a more orderly communion. Bud can return to Smithville any time he desires.

Mrs. Marjorie Grisso presented a very popular and profitable feature each night of the meetings through the channel of Scene-O-Felt pictures, given with multi-colored lights for beautiful effects. Mrs. Black, unable to accompany her husband to the meetings, sent materials along and Mrs. Grisso supplied what proved to be a great attraction, not alone to the children, but to adults also.

We Have Never Witnessed a finer revival in interest, cooperation and spiritual feasting; we just seemed to all be ready for it. There were a number of souls under conviction during the meeting and with the fine spirit of Christian love and, with the many that were praying for them, we are confident some will be saved before long, and all in His own good time.

Life Service. Raymond Aspinall, a Junior in High School and President of our Youth group in the church, came forward saying he wanted to join the Brethren Church and start his preparation for the ministry. He was formerly a member of another denomination. We daily thank God here that we can look about us and see any number of our own people that we can surely say are giving themselves daily to life service, where they are. Living the Christian life where we work and live is the privilege of full life service for every Christian.

Let Brethren Be Brethren. The faithfulness of surrounding churches was more than gratifying. When we say faithfulness, we mean that "we do owe it to each other" to visit and support Brethren elsewhere. Twice representation was present from the Bryan Church, 170 miles away; eight times from Ashland—30 miles; once from Louisville—40 miles, and once from Fairhaven—15 miles. There were visiting ministers every night. The local Paradise Church of the Brethren, with Rev. Ed. Culler, pastor and people, were quite faithful. In our weekly prayer services the pastor is strengthened with the assistance of Rev. A. E. Whitted and Rev. Ed. Culler who alternate with him in conducting the Wednesday night prayer services.

The Families opened their homes and spread their tables bountifully for us twice daily, which proved to be equally as abundant as was their faithfulness and prayerfulness during the meetings. For those not acquainted with Smithville, the congregation is made up of members from Smithville, Creston, Madisonburg, Sterling, Rittman, Doylestown, Marshallville, Orrville and Wooster. A greater portion of our people drive from four to fourteen miles to services. One family drives regularly from Massillon, thirty miles away. They deserve being named—Mr. and Mrs. William Bowers and family. With a total membership of a little over 200, we had during the meetings at Sunday School and church services, approximately 150 (which is barely above the average) presenting the song leader and an evangelist an offering of $400.00.

Recognition. There are many that should be named. Here are a few: Brother R. Wellington Klingel, organist and pianist, was quite ill the first week, but while still ill but recovering did not miss a night at his place after he returned on the first Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shank of Wooster did not miss a night singing the opening and closing theme song for the revival. Quite a number drove from Rittman, and other places, and did not miss a night. Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Amstutz were host and hostess for Dad Hunter, while Rev. Black "put up" at the parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Whitted and Mrs. Shamp faithfully cared for the added custodian tasks.

Ahead. Mrs. Beulah Amstutz has directed our choir for almost twenty years and has been both faithful and efficient. At her request she is being relieved from directing, but will continue in the choir. We have selected Mr. James Boeringer, a student in the department of music of Wooster College, to direct our choir. We are proud of our choir, past, present and future.

The attendance for Sunday School and Church has steadily been climbing for several months. We are confident that with those who expressed a spirit of revival and new interest during the meetings, that our cooperative labors will continue to bring increase and joy. Our Sunday evening services are attended better this fall and showing more enthusiasm than we have seen in our two years of labor here. We are continuing to pray for the Brethren everywhere, and may you, in turn remember us.

Vernon D. Grisso, pastor.

QUIET DELL, PA., CAMPAIGN

For the second time, it has been my privilege to fellowship with the Quiet Dell Brethren Church and their capable and energetic pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. A. R. Baer, of Cameron, W. Va. In the fall of 1943, I was guest speaker at their Fiftieth Anniversary and Home Coming Celebration and continued with ten evenings of special services. This current campaign was from October 17th to 30th.

It has been very inspiring to renew old acquaintances and to make new contacts. Twenty-five years ago, we concluded a three-year pastorate which included the Aleppo and Quiet Dell Brethren Churches and the Sugar Grove Union Church. Then, the countryside was redolent with the memories of Elder Jacob Murray, whose home had been at Aleppo, and who, I believe was largely responsible for the founding of the Brethren work here. During that pastorate, this writer assisted with the funeral of Elder Henry Wise, whose home was in the Quiet Dell Community, who had reached the age of eighty-two years.

Quiet Dell reports a membership of fifty-six. This group has not only kept its House of Worship in good repair, but is making extensive improvements. The attendance of the local membership was good from the beginning of the series, and special music numbers were had in every service, under the leadership of Mrs. Baer and Mrs. Stanley Strait, pianist. Delegations from the Cameron Brethren Church, also shepherded by "The Baers" from Aleppo Brethren Church and from Mt. Carmel Church of God, were in evidence several nights, with special music numbers, and inspiration. The average attendance during the sixteen services was more than fifty. The tangible results will be reported by the pastor.

Besides looking over the beautiful new Cameron Brethren Church edifice, which is nearing completion, we substituted for Brother Baer in the two Sunday afternoon services, when appreciative groups attended.

We had our home with The Baers for the fortnight, and more gracious hospitality cannot be found. "Ted" and I reminisced Ashland College experiences and personalities, the while he "briefed" the writer on "post graduate vocabulary," and credited me with giving him a "refresher course in stale jokes," as he characteristically put it.

Families of the community also entertained us in their homes and contributed to the parsonage larder, home made bread and other delectable specialties. The offering, too, was generous, and we thank the Quiet Dell Church, pastor and community for a season of refreshing in the service of the Lord. Our thanks go, too, to the Gratis, Ohio Brethren Church, for releasing me, their pastor, in the midst of busy fall's program, for two weeks in order that I might assist in the special series.

There was evidence from the first service in the series that the field had been well prepared by prayer, personal work and publicity. We believe spiritual momentum has been gained by the Church, and that results will continue to be seen as the shepherd and shepherdess continue to seek the lost among these beautiful hills and vales of this section.

Linwood church one evening." The meetings closed on Sunday, November 20th.

Stockton, Calif. Brother C. E. Johnson tells us that the Stockton Church was one in four churches in Stockton selected for Union Thanksgiving services, each being held under the direction of the Ministerial Board of the city, the guest minister being chosen by this board.

He also says, "There were twenty Stockton folks at the meeting in Lathrop on Wednesday evening, November 9th. A very fine service was held."

Mexico-Loree, Indiana, Circuit. Brother Robert Higgins, pastor of the circuit, announces that Miss Janet King, of Elkhart, Indiana, who recently spent the summer in Argentina (it was winter there) will show her slides of the Brethren work in South America at the Mexico Church on Saturday evening, December 4th. Surrounding churches are invited.

Brother Higgins reminds us again of the Special Series of Bible Lectures which will be presented at the Loree church by Dr. Grover E. Swoyer of Pittsburgh, Penna., the week of December 5th to 11th. Here is an opportunity to hear a fine speaker.

And speaking of Dr. Swoyer, the editor was pleasantly surprised to have him drop into the editorial office to tell us that he "surely enjoys reading The Evangelist, and that he reads it from cover to cover." Dr. Swoyer has been a subscriber for several years. He also did us the honor of saying that "your paper is one of the best that comes to my study, and I nearly always use some of your Sunday School lesson comments as I teach." We greatly appreciate this comment. Dr. Swoyer was in Ashland speaking at the Seminary Hours of Devotion last week.

We were impressed by the copy of the letter relative to the Loree Communion service, which was sent out by the Board of Deacons and Deaconesses of the church, prior to their communion observance, a copy of which came to the editor's desk. It was more than an invitation; it was really a call to the observance of this sacred service. I shall preserve it, and if I hear no objections from the Loree Board after reading this, in the near future we will exhibit it to our readers as an example for their use.

Cameron, W. Va.—Quiet Dell, Pa., Circuit. Brother A. R. Baer, pastor of this circuit, says, "Home Coming and Rally Day proved to be all that we expected. The crowds were good, the basket dinner abundant and delicious, and the program for the day proved to be entertaining and helpful. All together it was a good starter for the revival services." This was spoken of Quiet Dell. Brother Baer says that the Quiet Dell ladies took good care of the evangelist's appetite (Brother W. S. Crick was the evangelist) and that "he went home in as good a condition as he came."

Of the Cameron work he says, "The program timer for the Tower System has finally been installed and seems to be working all right. The timer saves a lot of bother."

The Berean Class of Cameron held their annual Birthday Party on November 9th, with a setting of twelve tables corresponding to the months of the year. The guests brought a birthday offering for the Building Fund.

Oakville, Indiana. We quote from the Oakville bulletin as follows: "Thanksgiving Dinner—Here's a treat for the ladies. On Wednesday evening, November 23rd, the men of the church will sponsor a Thanksgiving Day Dinner. The men will have complete charge of the affair—with Brother Herman Kirklin serving as chairman of the committee. Everybody is invited to this dinner." Well, now, that's a new one. Guess there must be a "first" for everything. It will show whether the men can cook. Let's hear about it, Oakville.

Sunday evening, December 18th is the date selected by the Oakville Sunday School for their Christmas entertainment.

Waterloo, Iowa. We note that Waterloo had another one of those "Family nights" on November 15th. Food, fun and fellowship is the "key word" of these family nights. Movies were shown during the evening.

Brother Albert Ronk was the guest preacher on Sunday morning, November 13th, and the Sound film, "God is My Landlord," was shown at the evening hour.

Brother George T. Ronk, was the morning preacher on Sunday, November 20th, and the choir presented a program of musical numbers for the worship of the evening hour.

St. James, Maryland. Brother Freeman Ankrum, recently installed pastor at St. James, tells us that many delegations from surrounding churches helped to swell the attendance at their recent evangelistic meetings. He says, "Brother Belote and a large delegation came from the

ARE YOU OLD FASHIONED?

AT ONE OF THE services in the week of evangelism which is being conducted in the Ashland Church (as this is being written), in connection with the city-wide religious canvass and attendant after-canvass meetings in most of the churches, our choir directress, who is leading the song service each evening, chose to call for numbers from the audience. Just by chance, one of the numbers chosen was "The Old Fashioned Way," a number which seemed to be rather new to most of us. Because of that fact, we had to watch the words more closely than ordinary. This proved to be a good thing, at least to the writer, for the full impact of the theme dawned upon me as I sang.

The words of this song were written by Mrs. C. D. Martin and they were set to music by W. Stillman Martin. The first verse runs like this:

"They call me old fashioned because I believe That the Bible is God's Holy Word;
That Jesus, who lived among men long ago,
Is divine and the Christ of God."

Then follows the chorus:

"My sin is old fashioned,
My guilt is old fashioned,
God's love is old fashioned, I know;
And the way I was saved
Was the old fashioned way,

Through the blood that makes whiter than snow."

Somehow this song set me to thinking!

"Am I old fashioned?" I asked myself. "Am I old fashioned because I believe all the fundamental elements of God's Holy Word? Is this what the world calls being 'out of date' or 'old fashioned?' Well, if it is, then I'm surely old fashioned and I am glad I'm behind the times, or 'out of date.'"

Is it old fashioned to believe that "the blood of Christ cleanses from all sin," and that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin?" If so, then I'm surely old fashioned.

If it is old fashioned to believe that "Christ arose from the dead on the third day," and that "because He lives, I, too, shall live," then, there isn't a shadow of a doubt that I am old fashioned.

If it is old fashioned to believe that He commanded "men everywhere to repent," and that "there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," then assuredly, I am old fashioned.

If it is old fashioned to find assurance in the words of Jesus, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age," and that He will keep every promise He has ever made, and bless me with every blessing He has promised, if I will "do whatsoever He commands me," then, of course, I will be set with the old fashioned.

If it is old fashioned to believe that "this same Jesus who went away into heaven, will come again in like manner as ye have seen him go," and that we should be faithfully "watching" for that return—well, then, without argument, I am old fashioned.

If it is old fashioned to believe that God means every word He uttered by the words of the sacred writers, as we read them in His Book, and that there is much which I cannot fully understand, and which must be taken "by faith" until such time as I cease "knowing in part" and "shall know even as I am fully known," then without a qualm of conscience, I am old fashioned.

Yet we know that there are multiplied hundreds who do not know the "Old Fashioned Way." The real old fashioned way means unquestioned loyalty to God and to His Church; a fearing lest God be displeased with our activities; a longing for the deeper things of spiritual life; a careful introspection of self, with a view to casting out dross from the life and reclaiming the true gold thereof.

Let's not fear to be called "old fashioned" with regard to the Christian life. It is really not old fashioned, but so far ahead of the times in which we live that it is ever the newest thing to possess. Old, yet ever new; increasing in value even as each new day dawns, and not losing one iota of its preciousness as the darkness falls.

Isn't it rather worthwhile being "old fashioned" in our Christian thinking and living?

Think it over!

First-hand Reports from Leprosy Colonies

FIRST HAND REPORTS on the heroic fight being waged by Christian missionaries against leprosy around the world highlighted the 42nd annual convention of the American Mission to Lepers, Inc., held last month in Boston.

Reports made by medical missionaries and ministers from Africa, India, Siam and the United States gave delegates a graphic demonstration of Christianity's continued effort to stamp out one of the world's most dreaded diseases, which claims more than 10 million victims.

In his report on the progress being made by Christian missions in the control and treatment of Leprosy, Dr. Emory Ross, president of the agency, noted five encouraging trends which he described as growing "clearer and stronger."

These he listed as:

1. The willingness on the part of government to undertake leprosy programs in various "critical" world areas;
2. The gradual decline of superstition and social stigma associated with leprosy;
3. Increased full time support of medical missionaries and other personnel by the American Mission to Lepers;
4. The development of large building projects under co-operative Protestant sponsorship.
5. The continued success of sulfone derivatives in the treatment of leprosy.

The continued need by Christian groups to wage a vigorous educational campaign to overcome wide-spread public ignorance and misunderstanding concerning the true nature of leprosy was stressed by a number of speakers.

The Rev. Clifton E. Rash, chaplain, of the Union Protestant Church, at the U. S. Marine Hospital (Leprosarium), Carville, La., described the "stigma of leprosy" as the greatest barrier to both the elimination of the disease and the welfare of its victims.

"Sociological work among leprosy victims is hindered by this stigma," he declared. "It is very old. References to it are found in the histories of the nation of antiquity. It is shown in many forms and in almost every place in the world."

He characterized as false the popular notion that the Bible was a primary source for the stigma, although he admitted that misunderstanding of the injunction to cry "Unclean, Unclean," in Leviticus had contributed to the fear of leprosy.

In line with its policy to do everything against elimination of this stigma, the American Mission to Lepers voted at the convention to change its name to American Leprosy Missions, Inc. This was done because it is generally recognized now that those afflicted with leprosy resent being referred to as lepers.

Another speaker, Dr. E. C. Cort, M.D., retired Presbyterian missionary from Siam, in his proposal for a nationwide campaign to eliminate leprosy from Siam, also drew attention to the need for an all-out education and publicity effort in connection with the campaign.

"Any such campaign," he said, "should educate the people as to the true nature of leprosy and the steps that should be taken."

Good news for various mission projects around the world was contained in an announcement regarding the allotments being made from the Missions' Post-War Anti-Leprosy Fund.

The largest contribution the announcement revealed has been ear-marked for India, one of the most severely afflicted countries in the world. The sum of $140,000 will be available to start construction on an adult sanatorium at Vellore Medical College. This will be the base for a Lay Training Center and $45,000 will be added for staff and a research unit. The sum of $10,000 will also be available for erecting a Mary Reed Memorial Hospital at Chandag Heights, and $10,000 for repairs of a church and medical center at Manamadura, a Congregational-Christian mission project.

The second largest total grant will be made to Africa, with $23,400 allotted to the Sudan Interior Mission Colonies in Nigeria, for the construction of eight buildings: $5,000.00 to the Brethren Mission at Garkida, Nigeria, on a five year building plan, and $10,000 to the Presbyterian, U. S. A. Mission at Ndazen Cameroun on a three year building plan.

South America was given $32,692, for two projects under Mennonite sponsorship, $20,000 to start a new colony in Paraguay, and the remainder as this year's installment of a five year plan for a children's preventive home in Cachipay, Columbia.

Several speakers made special note of the progress being made by governments in the sponsoring of leprosy programs. It was pointed out that in Nigeria, the Congo, and Tanganyika Territory the governments are assigning substantial funds to leprosy colonies, while in Korea, Japan and the Philippines the governments recognize their financial responsibility for the physical care and treatment of leprosy.

At the same time, it was emphasized that owing to limited financial resources of these governments, only a fraction of the needs of leprosy victims is being met. In many areas, mission colonies are the only institution offering care and treatment.

The expansion of missions work among leprosy victims was pointed out in an address by the Rev. H. Stover Kulp, acting secretary of the Foreign Missions Commission of the Church of the Brethren, and founder of the Garkida Leprosy Colony in Nigeria, Africa.

Using the institutions he established as an illustration, he pointed out that the colony had grown from a mere handful of patients to over 1,600, while the institution's original 500 acres had increased to 3,000. He described Nigeria as having the highest incidence of leprosy in the world, with an estimated 300,000 victims, or more than one and a half per cent of the population.

A proposal to use Siam as a laboratory for an all-out campaign of anti-leprosy education was made by Dr. Cort, former supervisor of Chiengmai Leprosy Colony.

As a means of keeping down the cost of the campaign, the missionary doctor suggested the establishment of a chain of cooperative farm colonies. Under this plan, each colony would be asked to raise a specific product. Through a carefully worked out system of exchange among the colonies, the residents would be assured of a well-rounded diet, and through specialization maximum food production would be assured.

The underlying theme of the convention was the strong conviction that only through the Christian Gospel with its emphasis on compassion and personal salvation, could the ultimate solution be found to the world-wide problem of leprosy.

This view was expressed aptly by the Rev. Rash, who observed that while medical and social science dealt with improvements in this life, "religion and faith in God and Jesus Christ the Saviour contain the real answer.

"The compassion of Christ, his example and his instructions to his disciples have produced kindness, love and sacrifice for the people with leprosy."

He estimated that such a campaign could be launched for as little as $25,000, and would be aimed not only at doctors and nurses, but also at public officials and the general public.

In urging such an undertaking, Dr. Cort emphasized that Siam was one of the best protected countries in Asia against small-pox and other tropical diseases. He attributed this condition to the ability of the Siamese to learn and practice preventive medicine.

have seen the joy on their faces. Yes, all the Nazi propaganda could not destroy the belief in God of the old people."

"The Book to Live By!" When one's faith is founded on the promises of the Scriptures, nothing shakes your belief.

A pastor in the Northern part of Brazil who was visiting a new community for the first time, asked if there were any there who were "people of the Bible." He was at once directed to a certain home. There he found a group of believers and heard the story of the Bible which had been purchased many years before and discarded by its owner.

But one day the owner died, and when his books were divided among his sons, one of them saved the Bible from the rubbish heap and read its message. Soon he was reading to his family, and soon the power was being felt in their lives. When the pastor told them that he was a minister of that Gospel, tears came to the eyes of the group as they told him he was an answer to their prayers; and with that group as a nucleus, the first evangelical church in that region was organized.

The Book—powerful not only in the individual life, but so filled with dynamite that a community can be changed from the force of its teachings.

But to help, to inspire the Book must be read. Those who are statistically minded will be interested in Dr. Francis Stifler's comment: "During 1943 when the United States was deep in the war, Dr. George Gallup took a poll of Bible readers. He found that while there were 64 percent of the people who read the Bible to some extent during the year, only one in ten read it daily. Although this showed an increase over a similar poll taken the year before, the figures were alarmingly low."

Alarmingly low for a country that had been founded on the Bible. "The Bible is the rock on which our Republic rests," Andrew Jackson said. What was becoming of this sure foundation? Was America, in her complacency, creating a tense pattern of life that did not take into account the giving of time to the serious reading of the Scriptures?

Six years ago the country was torn by the anger of war. Millions of our own men were fighting, "on the land, on the sea, in the air." Chaplains had requested of the American Bible Society and received many thousands of copies of Testaments and Bibles and were distributing them among the armed forces. What better time to urge those at home to become more acquainted with the Bible?

A program of daily Bible readings was planned by the American Bible Society, which, starting on Thanksgiving led up to the half-way mark of Universal Bible Sunday, and then on till Christmas. This program, according to figures compiled by the Bible Society, has shown an increasing number of participants each year. For the habit of Bible reading is like any other habit; once formed it becomes a planned part of your daily life.

"I am glad to report that a number of people read their Bibles through for the first time, after starting with our distribution of your reading lists," wrote a pastor to the Bible Society.

"The Book to Live By"

(Universal Bible Sunday)

Rev. James V. Claypool, R.D.

Secretary for Promotion of Use, American Bible Society

"The Book to Live By" is the theme chosen by the American Bible Society for this year's observance of World-wide Bible Reading, celebrated from Thanksgiving to Christmas. This theme will also be the basis of the sermons in many thousands of churches on Universal Bible Sunday, which occurs on December 11. Universal Bible Sunday, for decades, has been the occasion for pastors to encourage wider and more understanding use of the Bible. The Bible is such a familiar book, and so easily obtained in our own country, one is apt to forget that in other parts of the world there are people hungering for the Book which feeds their spirit and enriches their lives.

"One afternoon I visited an old couple in my pastorate," wrote Pastor Werner Stamm to the American Bible Society, from Kierspe, British Zone, Germany, "who during a bombing raid lost everything. The husband is blind. They live as evacuees in a hut. I made this special visit because it was the man's birthday and I wanted to read to him from the Bible. 'Neighbors gave us this torn Bible in order that we might find comfort in it,' they told me. Then I could answer: 'I will bring to you a beautiful new Bible, a gift of the American Christian people.' You should erland Bonnell, well-known pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City. Dr. Bonnell has written from the fullness of his experience in helping people through the years to put their feet solidly on the path that leads to Christ. The Bible has been his guide book. "To it mankind must return if we are to heal the distemper of our lives and to resolve the disorder of the world," writes Dr. Bonnell. "It is 'The Book to Live By,' for the source of its light is He who came that we 'might have life and have it more abundantly.'"

Spiritual Meditations

Rev. Dyoll Belote

WHAT SORT OF NEIGHBOR AM I?

TO THE QUESTION, "Who Is My Neighbor?" someone has given the following suggestion:

1. My neighbors may be the persons we see every day—members of our own family circle. To these we must be just, generous, forgiving and Christian in all our relationships.

2. The neighbor of the Good Samaritan—the casual stranger with whom we have what seem like accidental contacts on life's highway. If we are to be of any service to this "neighbor" we must do it now, for doubtless we shall never have another opportunity.

3. Neighbors we shall never see at all in this life, maybe a war-refugee, a famine sufferer, or some other hungry, homeless, oppressed individual, of whose need we have heard. Learning of the need of such makes us neighbor to them.

4. People we do not like. Our not liking folks is no excuse for being deaf to their need. Christ did not wait until He could like us, or approve of us, before He gave Himself for us.

Too many times we are given to congratulating ourselves on our superior advantages and immunities, as though we had a special dispensation from heaven, freeing us from responsibility to others. It might be more becoming if we were to feel an obligation and an inclination to grieve over the plight of others less fortunate than we, and to pray and work for their relief. Such an attitude will bring us nearer to being the counterpart of the "Good Samaritan."

NOTICE TO NORTHERN INDIANA LAYMEN

At the last meeting of the Northern Indiana Laymen we decided to bring a report from each Church as to what each church's contribution will be, or has been, to the College Emergency Fund. This notice becomes a reminder to each church touched by the Northern Indiana Laymen to remember the above.

The meeting will be held at Elkhart on December 5th. It is the time for the election of officers.

Harold L. Hummel,
President Northern Indiana Laymen.

An Announcement Of Great Importance

Each of the members of the Brethren's Home and Benevolent Board has received notification from Brother and Sister James E. Scott, Superintendent and Matron of the Brethren's Home at Flora, Indiana, of their resignation in these capacities, same to take effect at the close of their present contract which runs until March 1, 1950.

Now in order that you may fully understand the reason for their resignation, we are publishing the text of their resignation:

Flora, Indiana, November 7, 1949

To the Board Members of the Brethren Home:

We are writing this letter so that we may all have a clear understanding of our intentions.

At the 1949 conference we asked to be relieved of our duties here in order that we might take our Judy to a climate more suited to her health. Since you were unable to find anyone before the school term opened, we decided that it would be just as well to stay on until our year was finished (March 1950) so that we would not have to take Judy out of school.

Therefore, it is our understanding that our resignation will become effective March 1, 1950. However, if we can be of any help, we will be available until the middle of May when the school term ends. We wish it were not necessary for us to do this, but we feel that for Judy's sake, we must.

We have enjoyed the work and fellowship with all of you, and thank you for all favors shown us. We remain,

Gratefully yours,

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Scott.

In consequence of the above, we are now sending out a call for applications for the positions of Superintendent and Matron, same to be effective as of March 1, 1950, or as soon as possible after that date, and in any event by May 1st. Here is a call to a duty which is as important as any that comes to the laity of the church. It is more than a position, it is a call to service fully as great as that of missionary endeavor, and should be considered as such a call.

If you are interested, or know of anyone who would be interested in this service to the work of the church, contact any member of the Executive Committee of the Board, Fred C. Vanator, President, 141 College Avenue, Ashland, Ohio; E. M. Riddle, Secretary, 305 College Avenue, Ashland, Ohio, or L. V. King, Treasurer, 1101 Middlebury Street, Elkhart, Indiana. Or you may write direct to the Home, addressing Mr. James E. Scott, Superintendent, Flora, Indiana.

This matter is of the gravest importance and should you feel the call to such a service, do not delay in notifying us of your interest, and information relative to salary, duties, etc., will be sent to you.

THE BENEVOLENT BOARD
By Fred C. Vanator, President
E. M. Riddle, Secretary.

National Sunday School Association Page

Conducted by Rev. N. V. Leatherman

(This is the promised article for this page by Brother Charles Munson, National Youth Director. He gives us some things that can be done of a practical nature by the young people and the other classes of the Sunday School.—N. V. Leatherman.)

SOME PROJECTS FOR BRETHREN YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Rev. Charles Munson

SO YOU WANT TO DO SOMETHING! Well this article is designed to help your Sunday School sponsor a project, or at least give you some ideas about what you can do. If you only have a few dollars, or if you have many dollars, you can put them to work.

AMOR

Amor is the Spanish for Love. Out of Amor for our South American Brethren we have a National Brethren Project, with a goal of $999.99 to be raised by next General Conference. You can help on this project—just decide how much you want to raise toward the total amount. Then do it! This money is to be used for a Bible Training School in South America. This school is not started yet, so we will hold the money in trust until it is begun.

Send the Money to: "Brethren Youth—Ashland, Ohio, C/o Charles Munson, and label it "Amor Project."

You can raise any amount you wish toward the total of $999.99. Your Sunday School class could do that.

Typewriter

As you know we have a Brethren Youth office, located at Ashland College. Since Brethren Youth is somewhat new in our denomination, the finances of the Youth Board are not great. We are, therefore, asking for various youth groups to sponsor projects for the purchase of office equipment. The Miami Valley Brethren Youth bought a metal filing cabinet for the office. A typewriter is also needed—so, perhaps your Sunday School class would wish to sponsor the purchase of a typewriter.

Brotherhood Bus

At the recent Conference at Ashland, the Boys' Brotherhood voted to raise funds for securing a used school bus for the Brethren Mission at Matteson, Michigan. At least $500.00 is needed for the purchase of this bus. The Mission is located in a section where there are no churches. At present the children are being hauled in cars, and it is felt that a bus would aid the work greatly.

Here is a chance for a class to work with a little or a lot of money. You will be surprised at what a project will do for your group.

Brethren Youth Objectives

These are the objectives which Brethren Youth will follow for this Conference year. These are placed with projects because it will take the co-operation of all to make them successful.

We have four objectives which are to be followed with instructions and education to be given them during the months stressed. 1. Read the Bible and pray daily—stressed for the months of September, October and November (this period has now nearly elapsed). 2. Tithe Income Sincerely—stressed during the months of December, January and February. 3. serve the Church Loyally—stressed during the months of March, April and May. 4. Witness for Christ Earnestly—stressed during the months of June, July and August.

For example: In September, October and November your Sunday School class should have been spending a few minutes each Sunday, stressing Bible reading and prayer. Your teacher should have been helping you in a few minutes of discussion each week. This should continue, of course, as the remaining months go by. Then by next conference time we will be stronger as a church.

For further information on any material concerning Brethren Youth, write to "Brethren Youth, Inc., Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio. Also consult your Brethren Youth magazine.

ATTENTION

All Welfare Chairmen of Young Men and Boys' Brotherhood

DO YOU REALIZE it is getting close to Christmas? It is time for you to be active, if you haven't been busy. Check up on the families of the church, for we should always consider them first, and see if they are needing any help in getting food. A basket given to these families for the holidays is always appreciated.

Then what about the families in the near neighborhood of the church? And we can always remember that help is needed in Kentucky. You could write to Brother George Drushal and ask him for a task. Then present these things to your Brotherhood.

What's that? You say that your Brotherhood does not have any money! Have you done anything about it? In the "Christian Herald" there is a plan that can be used very effectively by the Brotherhood without dad footing the bill. See page 119 in the November issue of that magazine.

Write and let me know some of the ways you have been working in your Welfare work. Keep looking up.

West Alexandria, Ohio, Reports

By Rev. Harold Garland, Pastor

(We are glad to present both the inside and outside views of our West Alexandria, Ohio Church. For some time we have had the promise of a full report from this part of the Lord's Vineyard, and first it was delayed by the waiting for pictures and the written report; then it was still further held up by the non-arrival of cuts. But finally we have all of it and we are presenting, what may seem a rather delayed account of the rededication and the further work of the church. But it is all "good news" and we are glad to pass it on to our readers as such.—Editor.)

• • • • •

WE ARE STILL DOING BUSINESS FOR THE LORD in this part of His vineyard, and just because you have had no definite report, is no sign that we have not been working, and working with a definite purpose.

The Lord has been, in all reality, blessing the work here. The redecoration work, which was begun about a year ago, was completed and recently paid for in full. The ladies' organizations of the church are to be commended for their cooperative spirit, and whole-hearted determination to get things done. Because of this, to them is given the greater part of the credit for the work done here. However, we also realize that the men of the church had a great part in these accomplishments, through their backing of the various projects which the ladies undertook.

We are glad to report that the work of the church, as a whole, is going forward, and it is in the best condition, materially and spiritually, that it has been for some time. The average Sunday School attendance for October was 105, with the morning worship adding up to seventy-five; evening service, with an average of forty in attendance, and the prayer meeting attendance averaging twenty.

We are making much of personal evangelism, and the Lord has blessed our effort in this field in a great way. By the time this writing gets to you, we will have been on this field just one year, the first of December, and in that time we have lost six by letter; but we have gained eight by letter; two by baptism and renewal, and sixteen by first time confession and baptism, making a total gain of twenty. For all of this we thank the Lord and continue to ask Him for many more.

The West Alexandria church is also happy to report an organized youth group, which goes by the name B. C. C. (Brethren Crusaders for Christ). This group meets on the first and third Wednesdays of each month. At their first service last month, they showed the motion picture, "King of Kings," to an audience of one hundred and fifty. We have great faith in our youth, and our prayers are with them always.

We indeed covet the prayers of the brotherhood for the West Alexandria congregation and its pastor, that both may be used in a greater way for the cause of Christ and the saving of souls.

The picture which you see above is that of the inside of the church after the work of redecoration was completed and paid for. The following work was done: All old paper was taken from the walls, plastering fixed and painted; the floors were sanded and refinished; other pews were purchased from the E. U. B. Church in Dayton, and remodeled to fit the church here. New carpet for the two side and middle aisles, and for across the front and rear of the church was purchased and laid. The outside of the church was given two coats of paint. Also, the steps which lead into the church have been repaired. This, too, adds much to the outside appearance of the church building.

I wish to give you a short history of the West Alexandria church, at this time. The following report is by no means complete, but it will afford a general idea of this church's history.

In June of 1883 several elders and laymen organized what was known as "The First Brethren Church," in Dayton, Ohio. About two years later, a small group of Brethren, among them the families of David Lowman, David Wampler and Cal Gilbert, under the leadership of Elder Edward Mason, organized a Brethren congregation north of Lexington, Ohio, in the southwest corner of what is now the Sugar Grove Cemetery. A few years later, the same group with others, purchased a lot in West Alexandria and built a frame building, where the present Brethren Church stands.

Elder Mason was followed by Elder A. A. Cober, who served as pastor for four years, while completing his studies in Lane Seminary, until 1891. Various men served the church until 1892, when Elder Martin Shively was called. During the four years here, he served as pastor of a circuit of Brethren Churches, consisting of West Alexandria, Gratis and Farmersville.

Elder Joseph Keim succeeded Elder Shively, and the congregation grew steadily until the church building was no longer adequate. In the summer of 1908, under the pastorate of Elder J. A. Garber, the building was remodeled. Unfortunately, important records of this local congregation were lost during the alterations, limiting our sources of material for this historical sketch.

Among the pastors who served this Church other than those mentioned above, have been: P. J. Brown, J. C. Mackey, C. I. Shock, H. H. Welford, G. T. Ronk, C. E. Kolb, N. A. Weimer, J. B. Lambert, Lyman Wilkins, C. E. Beekley, W. E. Ronk, W. R. Deeter, Geo. Pontius, G. W. Kinzie, A. D. Cashman, C. C. Grisso, E. J. Beekley, R. O. Byler, A. E. Whitted, and now the present pastor, H. R. Garland.

When the church was recently rededicated after the redecoration and other improvements were completed, the rededication sermon was preached by Rev. W. C. Berkshire, pastor of the New Lebanon, Ohio, Brethren Church, and the dedication proper was in charge of Rev. W. S. Crick, pastor of the Gratis, Ohio, Brethren Church.

The present Trustees of the church are William Hedrickson, William Keplinger, K. D. Looker, Lewis Davidson and Harold Spitler. The redecoration committee was composed of Mrs. Grace Paxon, Chairmen, Robert Hibbs and George Snell, while the finance committee was George Snell, Chairman, William Keplinger and Orville Tittle.

The E. L. Millers Have a 25th Anniversary Surprise

And they did it up right. On the evening of Thursday, October the twentieth, the good people of the Maurertown church gave their pastor and his good wife a real surprise. It was in celebration of the pastor's twenty-fifth anniversary in this pastorate. On October nineteenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-four the pastor preached his first sermon of the pastorate, a Communion preparatory sermon, and conducted the annual Fall Communion that evening. In the meantime many happy days and glad times were had together. The church has been improved materially and a new parsonage built. Many scores of members have been added to the membership. There have been some sad times, too, and some very loyal members have gone to their final reward. But that is not the story we want to tell this time.

On the evening mentioned a rap at the door took the pastor away from listening to Uncle Gabriel Heater to see what was on. He had visions of a wedding couple, or a call to some kind of service, but it was something different. On opening the door there was a sight to make his heart glad. As far as he could see in the evening shadows there were people headed his way. Of course it was the gentlemanly thing to invite them in and that was done. They came and came and came some more until the entire first floor of the parsonage was packed with folks. They were surely a happy looking lot. And they had packages of all sorts with them. And they were all good things for the pastor and wife. They also had five freezers of home made ice cream and six or eight dandy cakes, including an anniversary cake of three tiers and with the number 25 in silver pellets on the top.

Well, they got seated, and they could find seats for they brought a lot of folding chairs with them. Then the M. C. got a program going and in it both pastor and wife were given nice and kind words. Some songs were sung and then the M. C. called the pastor and the lady of the manse to the dining room and a large box was presented to them. It was wrapped in silver paper. The job of opening the bomb was left to the lady, since the pastor's fingers had all become thumbs. Inside that box was another box also wrapped in the silver covering. This was rather heavy for its size and the reason was soon learned. Several packages were in the box and when opened they gave up silver coins, more silver dollars than either pastor or wife had seen in one place for years. And because of the scarcity of the cart wheels, folks resorted to half dollars.

When the mistress of the parsonage made final count of the contents of the box, and several envelopes containing some of those green tinted strips of folding money, and some that came along later from several who could not get to the party, there were ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-ONE dollars of real U. S. Currency.

Well, the parson tried to say something on top of all this and for one of the very few times in his short life that he was at a loss for words, this was it. But both pastor and wife did manage to make the folks feel that they were more than grateful for the fine fellowship and spirit of appreciation that was shown them. That money and those gifts of good things to eat will pass on, but that fine spirit of love and kindness will never die. You might well understand that both parson and aide appreciated the fellowship and confidence more than any amount of money the folks could have given.

There was the treat of ice cream and cake and more singing and then after one of the most appreciated evenings of all our ministry the folks retired as quietly as they came and the pastor and partner were left with their thoughts, and they were of the nicest possible. Surely such appreciation demands, and will get, the best that pastor and wife will be able to give by way of continued service and leadership. Twenty-five years is a long time in any one's life, but they have been so full of service and looking after the folks of church and community that they have passed quite swiftly.

Now the prayer of pastor and wife is that they may be somewhat worthy of all the kind expressions made that evening and before and since that time. The work prospers here because of the loyalty of the folks to their Lord, their church and their pastor. Long may they prosper. It has been a long haul together, but it has been a most happy one. God bless and keep those dear folks who have borne with us so long in united service to the One we all love.

Brother Ed. (E. L. Miller)

Interesting Items

The W. M. S. has purchased a gas heating stove for one of the new rooms of the church.

Mt. Olive, Virginia. A card from Brother John F. Locke, pastor, written around their card announcement of Brother C. S. Fairbanks' meeting for them, says, "Now closing second great meeting with Fairbanks at the Mt. Olive church. Fine crowds and good interest—confessions. J. F. L." In time we expect to have a full report of these meetings.

Warsaw, Indiana. Brother E. J. Beekley, Warsaw pastor, has been sending the editor a card each week with the Sunday School attendance registered. The report looks good to us for three weeks ago it began by stating that the attendance was 160; the next week it was 170, and for November 13th 185. They are aiming at the 200 mark.

Gratis, Ohio. We note that the Gratis Union Thanksgiving service was held in the Church of the Brethren, with Brother Crick pastor of our church, bringing the message.

Twenty-one members and two visitors were present at the Mission Study of the Woman's Missionary Society on Friday evening, November 11th, at which time, Miss Alma Crick, daughter of Brother and Sister Crick, presented the study on the study book, "Japan Begins Again."

On November 6th the Gratis Church was within $30.00 of reaching their set goal for the Emergency Fund for Ashland College.

Brother Crick, who loves to keep statistics, has noted the names of each one that attended their Homecoming on October 16th, and the list shows that the final count was 225.

Louisville, Ohio. I just received four bulletins from John T. Byler, Louisville pastor. As I looked at the frontis of each I thought, "Well, Brother Byler wanted me to be sure to have the bulletins, so he sent two of each Sunday, for they were for November 6th and 13th only." But upon inspection I found that Louisville is doing something out of the ordinary. They have an adult bulletin, and also one for their Junior Church. We quote, first from the Adult bulletin:

The Laymen's Organization was scheduled for a meeting on November 21st, with a panel discussion by six of the members on the topic, "What is the Responsibility of the Layman to—", then follows the six phases of discussions: spiritual welfare of the church; physical upkeep; community moral problems; to the pastor; to the boys of the church and community; and the looking forward toward the church's future.

The mid-week services continue to be well attended, there being thirty in attendance as of the first week in November.

And now the Junior bulletin, and here we quote directly:

"Last Sunday (October 29th) was the biggest day we have had in Junior Church. There were 38 present and there are still a lot of boys and girls who should be coming."

"We are very happy to have the choir sing for us for the first time today (November 13). They are practicing every Saturday afternoon from 4:00 to 5:00 o'clock. Those who sing in this choir must come regularly to practice."

Brother Byler does not say who is in charge of this Junior Church, but from an announcement in the adult bulletin we suspect that Mrs. Byler has a lot to do with it.

Brother Byler has something for the children at each Sunday evening service. The children bring some object to him in an effort to "stop the preacher," for on the spur of the moment Brother Byler must immediately bring an object lesson from whatever is brought. If they "stop the preacher" they get a double-decker ice cream cone. He gets some "toughies" he says.

Ardmore, Indiana. We note that Brother C. C. Grisso has been holding an evangelistic campaign for the Ardmore church. Brother R. F. Porte is the pastor.

Elkhart, Indiana. Brother L. V. King was the recent week's speaker at the Y. M. Devotional Hour broadcast from the Elkhart station.

Brother Harry Gilbert and Rev. Ernest Minegar recently were guest speakers at the morning services at Elkhart during Brother King's absence. The evening services were taken over by the W. M. S. and the S. M. M. Public services.

Bryan, Ohio. Brother E. J. Black says, in a note to the editor, "Things are going along nicely in our revival with Brother E. L. Miller as evangelist. The average attendance has been about 100 per night, but no confessions yet." He goes on to say, "In regard to our goal for Rally Day, which we had set for 300, we went over the top at 306, with 320 for church. Our ordinary average is about 250."

"The laymen met for prayer and instruction Sunday, October 29th, at 2:00 P. M., then went out two by two to visit and invite folks to church. This is the first of a monthly visitation project by the Laymen. The Senior W. M. S. also have a similar project.

Mulvane, Kansas. Brother E. M. Riddle has just recently returned from Mulvane where he held a two weeks' period of evangelism. He reports a fine meeting.

Brother W. L. Thomas, Mulvane pastor, says that Miss Emma Aboud was the guest speaker on Sunday morning, October 30th.

Milledgeville, Ill. Brother D. C. White announced that their first Family Night Fellowship was scheduled for November 21st. A committee had a fine program prepared. It was a supper meeting—pot-luck in nature.

Dayton, Ohio. The Dayton Laymen met at the church on Monday night, November 14th, at which time Robert Colburn, an outstanding basketball referee, was the guest speaker.

Brother Whetstone says, "More than one hundred people enjoyed a mighty fine program on Wednesday evening, November 9th. It was Family Night."

Vinco, Penna. Brother Brant says, in a note to the editor, "Our evening attendance for October had an average of close to 175. On October 30th we had the Sipesville Church of the Brethren with us in a program of sacred music which was rendered by their Men's Chorus. There were 250 present; offering to Building Fund. It was my privilege to hold preaching services for the Raystown Brethren on Sunday afternoon, October 16th. There was a good attendance and a fine spirit prevailed. Twelve from our Vinco church went along and helped with the service."

DR. AND MRS. W. I. DUKER TO BE HONORED

The First Brethren Church of Milford, Indiana, wishes to announce to the many friends of Rev. and Mrs. W. I. Duker, that it will hold "open house" at the church on Sunday afternoon, December 4th, in honor of the Dukers' Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary. Special guest speaker at the morning worship service on that day will be Dr. Glenn L. Clayton, President of Ashland College.

Dorothea Groves.

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"Here about the beach I wandered, nourishing a youth sublime,
With the fairy tales of science, and the long result of time."

From Lockley Hall.

—Alfred Tennyson.

Nothing is finer than the dreams, aspirations and ambitions of youth. Nourishing these occupies about all his time, and constitutes his sole absorbing employment. How bright the world looks to such a youth and how confidently he goes forth like a new St. George to conquer all obstacles.

Youth is sublime. It is noble especially if it is nourished, as was this youth of Tennyson's on science and art and the other great things of the world. This type of youth grows into lofty and useful manhood.

Now more than ever it is well to nourish youth on the fairy tales of science because there are more of them than ever before. Here the truth discovered is more gripping than the wildest tales invented by the wildest imagination of the fiction writer.

What a thrill it is to have the moon respond to a radar beam, to land a great passenger liner in a dense fog by use of delicate instruments, to penetrate with light the densest steel and to detect the slightest flaw, to study the harmonious motions of this mysterious universe, piercing its distances even to billions of light years away and thus learn more of the secrets nature has hidden on the very fringes of existence.

Ariel, a character in Shakespear's The Tempest, tells his master that he will put a circle around the globe in forty minutes. Ariel was a spirit and it looked for centuries as if this could be done only in the mind. And for centuries it remained the most exaggerated fiction.

Today radio can do that with plenty of time to spare. In fact we have outstripped it so far that today we are aiming radar beams across the intervening space to Mars. And our fairy tales of science are not limited to radio and radar. In every field of investigation science opens our eyes to new surprises. In these fields youth can revel and graze and nourish himself sublimely.

When Tennyson wrote these prophetic lines the world was just awakening to the wonders of science. The mind of every thinking youth was alert. Science built itself out of "the long result of time." It is learned that the present condition of the earth slowly evolved through the centuries, ages, eons. Science had just become aware of this fact. It was most thrilling to the alerted mind of science that the earth developed slowly from one geologic age to another in an orderly fashion.

Today any youth has this sublime threshold from which to develop and unfold his life. His possibilities are as unlimited as the vast varieties of an abundant nature, and these are so numerous they cannot be counted. Let youth be nourished on these and it be sublime.

LITTLE KNOWN HEROES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Scripture: Philemon 1-25

For The Leader

LAST WEEK we spent our hour in discussion of little known characters of the Old Testament. In this discussion, today, we are taking up some of the New Testament heroes. The scripture deals with a runaway slave who comes under the influence of St. Paul. The resulting story is one of intense interest, calling forth the best of Christian virtues between master, slave and intercessor. There are many other heroes of the New Testament on which we could well afford to spend our time. In fact, you will find accounts of their lives and doings that will hold your interest far more than any magazine you can pick up. Learn to center your interest in these godly characters, and you will find peace for your hearts, rest for your soul, and wisdom for your daily living. As you read and study, you will be drawn closer to God, and the Christ through Whom you possess salvation.

DISCUSSION

1. THE PUBLICAN. Remember the words of Jesus, "Two men went up to the temple to pray." In these words are the life testimonies of two men. One, a Pharisee who was stuck on himself. He thought no one was as good as he was, in fact he actually believed that to be the case. So he prayed, "God I thank Thee that I am not as other men." One thing the Pharisee didn't know was that he was the only person alive who felt he was better than any one else. He should have been wise and asked a few other people. But, of course, when you think you're better than any one else, you don't ask advice from others. He certainly was no hero. But take that poor publican—poor in this world's goods and position. He prayed, "God be merciful to me a sinner!" Jesus said that the publican went away justified. This publican became a hero that day, for in his prayer he typifies every poor sinner who comes to God and seeks a pardon for his sin. The blessing placed upon the poor wretch that day by Jesus shows that the only way to salvation is through a humble and yielded heart. It may seem a hard way, but it is the way, in contrast to the Pharisee, that wins. Thus our publican friend is a hero, for if we follow his method in seeking God and forgiveness, we shall find it.

2. JOSEPH, THE HUSBAND OF MARY. It's getting close to Christmas now, and the eternal story of the arrival of the baby Jesus should occupy our time and thought. Standing out in this account, along with Mary the mother of Jesus, is her husband, Joseph. While Jesus could have brought with Him from heaven a multitude of angels and tons of provisions, yet He chose to come into the world the way He did, and spend a normal childhood in the home of a poor carpenter. Here Joseph becomes a hero. Into his home there came this special Child, visited by shepherds, and later by great kings. The life of the little Child was sought, and Joseph had to pack up his family and travel into Egypt, not knowing for how long. Later he was privileged to return to Nazareth. This man, a hero of patience, obedience and godliness has had none of his words recorded for posterity. He is shown as willingly following the leading of the angel of the Lord in all things. So, we rate him as a hero because he made an earthly home for this special Child. He worked that the Child might have enough to eat and to wear. He was a good provider, and good home maker. A hero and a challenge to every young man to make a good home for his wife and family today.

3. THE WIDOW AND HER MITE. We see now the picture of the woman standing at the offering box in the temple, with a group of Pharisees and others standing in the background with Jesus. The woman puts in her small bits of money. Such an insignificant amount draws amusement from the rich men with Jesus. How much good could you do with such a little bit of money, Then Jesus teaches a lesson which made a heroine out of this poor woman. He told those men that the woman had given far more than all of them had given, for she had given everything she had. Which brings up a severe dose of spiritual medicine, that we have not done our best for Christ until we have given all to Him. We have heard people jokingly say as they put several pennies in an offering plate, "Well, I've given my widow's mite." We even believe they expected to get the blessing from Jesus that this poor widow did. Not so. There is a "pun" to which we give support also, that the reason so many people put nickels and pennies in the offering plate is that they expect to be blessed like the widow. But let us remember what it was that made this woman a heroine. She gave her all to the Lord. Let us think soberly on this.

4. THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA. Jesus, in going through Samaria, had to stop for a drink of water. He stopped at Jacob's well, and there struck up a conversation with a Samaritan woman. Now the Jews and Samaritans were natural enemies. We would say today that there was no love lost between them. So it was something of a miracle that this Jesus and this woman could bridge the gap of hostility and have this conversation. Jesus extracted from her a confession of her sin, that of adultery. He showed her the way to eternal life. She accepted. She is a heroine today because she was willing to destroy the chasm of racial differences. But she is more of a heroine because of what she did right after she accepted Christ. Note that she went into the city and urged her companions to come and see the One who had given to her eternal life. She was enthusiastic, eager, energetic and successful in her personal work. How many of us, after accepting Christ, settle back and never take the time nor the interest to speak to another person about Christ? Thus this woman is a heroine, for her immediate response to Christ's message and her eagerness to bring others to Him. We'd better get busy.

MY BLUNDER

Of all the blunders I have made
Since learning how to pray,
The greatest, and most painful
Was quite a common way.

I called it "indignation,"
Just of a righteous kind,
God called it "self-elation,"
And grievous to His mind.

I fought for my opinion,
Determined thus to win,
Our argument was heated,
The Bible calls it "sin."

I "wrestled" 'gainst a person,
Instead of 'gainst a foe,
This was my foolish blunder,
It grieved my Lord, I know.

Lord teach me how to "wrestle,"
But not with flesh and blood,
To stand against the tempter,
As Thou Thyself withstood.

THE SINS OF THE SPIRIT

Scripture: 2 Cor. 6:14-18; 7:1

Hymns and Prayers

Seed Thought Provokers:

WE ARE TO GLORIFY GOD in the spirit as well as in the body (1 Cor. 6:20). We are to serve Him the same way (Rom. 1:9; 12:1). Note these words: "... cleanse yourselves from all filthiness of the ... spirit" (2 Cor. 7:1). We may be innocent of the gross sins of the body but not of the spirit. Note "strife and envying" in Rom. 13:13, and "busybody" in 1 Peter 4:15. Many who would never think of committing murder, theft or drunkenness do not realize that envy, strife and divisions are also the marks of carnality (1 Cor. 3:3, 4). We may be self-righteous in our bodies but double-dyed sinners in the spirit!

Many need to learn this prayer: "Cleanse thou me from secret faults" (which they cannot see) such as party spirit, "strife," "divisions," "schisms," "variance," "debates," and "contentions." In the church at Corinth the so-called Christ bunch with their criticism and self-righteousness were probably the worst defaulters. Personal sins of the spirit listed in the New Testament are "busybody, envyings, wrath, backbiting, whispering, murmuring." But the Bible says, "Love thinketh no evil."

Some go to church to be spiritually fed; others go to criticize. The whole tenth chapter of first Corinthians is taken up with this matter. Read verses 10-13. Beware of complaining (Heb. 3:7-19; Phil. 2:4).

The following is a recipe for the cleansing of ourselves from the sins of the spirit: 2 Cor. 7:1; James 4:8; Ps. 119:9, 11; 19:12; 1 John 1:9; 1 Thess. 5:13b; Heb. 12:14.

PERSONAL RELIGION

Lesson: Jeremiah 8:4-6; 31:29-34

THE PEOPLE TO WHOM Jeremiah prophesied never caught the idea of a personal religion. That is, the major portion of them could not conceive of Jehovah God as a personal God. Some of those who were touched more intimately by the hand of God began to understand His close personal touch. But in the main, the people still were under the influence of the ideas set forth in the paganistic thought of "household gods" or "tribal gods."

That is one reason that it was so difficult for the prophets to get across a message that would strike into each individual heart and life, and, after all, the impulse must come from within the person himself if there is really anything to be done about the message, when and after it has been delivered. The message is always the "urge" that sends us forth to take up the work suggested.

Let me illustrate this point with a little story I once heard. A father and his son were attending a service in which a great deal of emphasis had been laid upon the giving of the life to a definite service for the Lord. This message had had a very different effect on the father than it had had on the son. The father, not at all interested in the matter of a surrender of his life to definite service, was ill at ease, and showed by every action that he was only waiting for the service to close to get away from it all. But it was received in a far different manner by the son, a young man in his late teens. His eyes had been focused on the speaker and every muscle of his body was tense. When the speaker closed his message with a fervent appeal for life service, the father turned to his son and said, under his breath, "Well, thank goodness, that's ended." Imagine his surprise when his son turned to him and said so distinctly that those about him could easily hear, "No, father, it's not ended; it's only begun for me. I'm going to give my life in definite service for the Master."

That's the difference between personal and impersonal religion. Impersonal religion says, "Thank goodness, that does not mean me. Let the other fellow do it." While personal religion (perhaps we would better say "personal Christianity") says, "That means me!" And then answers like Isaiah of old, "Here am I, send me!"

Personal Christianity means personal attention to everything embodied in Christian life—purity of life, love of your fellowman, personal activity in the field of Christianity, doing whatsoever He "commands you" to do in simple faith and trust.

If the Israelites had learned the lesson of dependence on God for all their needs, instead of putting their faith in earthly rulers and false leaders, their lot in this world would have been far different. If they had heeded, the many times the prophets had come to them with a "thus saith the Lord," instead of depending on their own powers, they might not have entered into captivity as they did.

Let's think a little more about this "personal" part of our religious life. Do we make each service of our Church—Sunday School, worship services, mid-week meetings, in fact every service—a part of ourselves and do we become a part of these services?

A woman in one of my former congregations who was deaf, once said to me, "I'm rather glad I am deaf. I can read your lips when you speak, and I get all of the message; and, best of all, I can concentrate on the entire service. I can sing with the congregation because I catch the vibrations of the instrument against the pew. I can pray with understanding in my own heart while you offer the public prayer. You see, we are praying to the same God and our prayers intermingle. And then I can go home, feeling the joy of Christian fellowship, made full by the presence of a loving Father who knows my infirmity and my weaknesses and blesses me with His presence."

Brethren, that's personal religion!

God is always ready to meet us more than half-way. All He needs is to see us start toward Him and He is there at our side before we realize it. Remember that Paul said (and if he did not know, then there is no one who does), "For me to live is Christ." Personal Christianity is not just that which we do at any one time—one single act—but it is the sum-total of our lives throughout the years, as we spend these years, either in His service, or along the side-lines.

Is your Christianity "personal?"

The real tragedy of life is not in being limited to one talent, but in the failure to use the one talent.—E. W. Work.

Laid to Rest

ANDREWS. Frank Andrews died at his home in Mason-town, Pennsylvania, September 24, 1949, at the age of 67 years. Mr. Andrews was a native of Italy and had been a resident of Masontown for 40 years, and was one of the Founders of the Italo-American Citizens Club, Mason-town. For 27 years he had worked as a mason in the Nemacolin mine. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, September 27 in the Masontown Brethren Church by the writer. The large floral offerings and the large attendance at his funeral showed the esteem and respect of the deceased. He is survived by his widow, Lena; two daughters, Mrs. Rosetta Palone, Rices Landing; Clara Lou at home; one son John, at home and two grandchildren. Burial in the Masontown Cemetery.

News From Our Churches

REVIVAL AT JOHNSTOWN, PENNA., SECOND CHURCH

The writer had the privilege of holding a revival with Brother N. V. Leatherman and his good people at the Johnstown Second Church from October 3rd to 16th.

This was a happy occasion for me. I will long remember Brother Leatherman as the one who asked me to consider entering the ministry, an act which I have never regretted. Rev. and Mrs. Leatherman are hard, sincere workers in this field. The congregation has every reason to greatly appreciate them. During the two weeks I was privileged to be their guest. The hospitality was of the best. Many thanks! Their daughter, Mrs. Charles Cober, is a member of the Berlin Brethren Church, where the writer is now serving.

It was my privilege to teach the adult classes the first Sunday morning and the Young People's classes on the second Sunday morning. These are splendid classes and very attentive. The attendance was fairly good, with delegations from several different churches helping to swell the crowd. These several delegations included those from the Berlin Brethren, Vinco Brethren, Johnstown Third and Johnstown First, Johnstown Mennonite and the neighboring Christian Church, which came in a body on the first Sunday evening. Many thanks to these churches for their help. Many thanks to the Berlin Brethren for the two weeks release and to Rev. and Mrs. Leatherman and the Johnstown Second Church for their every act of kindness.

QUIET DELL, PENNA., REVIVAL

On October 17th we began a two weeks revival effort with Rev. W. S. Crick leading. Rev. Crick, a former pastor in this field years ago, had returned six years ago to lead in a ten days revival effort following the fiftieth anniversary celebration. He has many friends in Quiet Dell and Aleppo and most of these were present some time during the services.

Last year the meetings were postponed because of sickness and the failure to receive the new pews. This year it was decided to borrow folding chairs and go ahead with the services as planned.

The weather was ideal most of the time with the exception of one evening of fog and the last evening a heavy rain. Yet in spite of the rain, the closing night saw the largest number in attendance. Interest seemed to be increasing and climaxed on the last evening with one re-consecration and three making their confession of Christ.

The total visible results were three reconsecrations and six making their confession and asking for baptism. It seems probable that others will be coming in the near future as a direct result of these meetings.

The meetings were greatly helped by delegations from neighboring churches. Delegations came from Aleppo on several evenings; this was especially thoughtful on their part as they had been busy for two weeks with their own evangelistic effort, closing their meetings at the end of our second week. Cameron also was well represented on several evenings. Other delegations were from the Windy Gap Church of God; Mt. Carmel Church of God; and Big Run Christian church. Special numbers in song were given by the visiting delegations.

We shall never be able to measure the total good, as our own life was enriched, and the influence of these meetings continue to enrich the lives of the members and the community.

Arthur R. Baer, pastor.

SERGEANTSVILLE, NEW JERSEY

Our Annual Homecoming services were held on October 9th, with a fine attendance, morning, afternoon and evening. Services began with Bible School and a short program by the primary department.

Rev. J. J. Margush, our pastor, brought the morning message. Rev. W. S. Benshoff of Meyersdale, Penna., was guest speaker for the afternoon and brought a fine message on "The Challenge of the Church."

Rev. Benshoff conducted the Christian Endeavor service in the evening. Rev. William J. Wadsworth, Jr., of Plainfield, New Jersey, was the speaker for the evening service.

Special music was featured at all services. Rev. Benshoff favored us with piano solos; Mr. Campbell and a friend from Princeton, New Jersey, played a flute duet; Rev. and Mrs. Wadsworth sang duets and our church choir rendered several numbers.

The entire morning service was recorded and we hope to have all our "shut-ins" enjoy it in their homes.

The W. M. S. served a bountiful lunch at the dinner hour and again at supper time.

Our Fall Communion was observed on October 16th with a goodly number present and a fine spirit prevailing. We are studying Revelation at our Friday evening prayer meetings. Our pastor was away from us for two weeks following October 24th, conducting evangelistic meetings at Masontown, Penna. In Brother Margush's absence Rev. Wadsworth supplied our pulpit for the Sunday services.

Ida S. Leigh, Church Secretary.

JONES MILLS

Rally Day was planned for Sunday, October 23rd. The attendance goal was set for 75. Cards were sent out to members of the Sunday School and to friends of the church. The attendance was 78 on Rally Day and the offering was better than one dollar per person present.

Pre-communion services had been planned and they began Monday evening following Rally Day. The pastor brought some of the messages. Other messages were brought by some of the ministers of the neighboring churches. There was special music each evening. On Wednesday evening Brother and Sister Geo. Gearhart of the Brethren church at Mt. Pleasant had charge of the entire service. They sang several special numbers and Brother Gearhart brought us a timely message. Some of the Mt. Pleasant Brethren were with us on Thursday evening. Communion was observed at the Mt. Pleasant church on Sunday evening, October 23 and at Jones Mills on October 30th. A fine group was present at both communion services.

Then on Thursday prior to our Rally Day, we moved to a five room house near the church. Since July 11 we had been living in a room 12 feet square which had been our kitchen, living and dining room. We were glad to move into a large house even if it would make us extra busy at the time of the special meetings.

Brethren pray for us and the work here.

Elmer M. Keck.

WARSAW, INDIANA

The Warsaw Church joined with other churches of the city, in having only the Sunday morning service during the months of July and August. Then each Sunday night union service was held in one of the churches, with the pastors taking turns in presenting the sermon. During this period of the year many conferences are held at nearby Winona Lake, including the Bible Conference. So if one be so minded, one need never miss a service. But many take advantage of these months for vacation. So although the regular attendance was good on Sunday mornings, by September first the church realized the need of "beginning again."

Rev. W. B. Brant had closed his service here, and moved on to another field, so Mr. Woodrow Immel of New Paris, Indiana, was asked to serve as acting pastor during the month of September. Mr. and Mrs. Immel gave active service willingly, and will hold a warm spot in our hearts and our prayers that they may continue in definite Christian service.

Thursday night, September 29th, found the new pastor, Rev. E. J. Beekley present and in charge of the Bible study. This group is showing an increase in attendance and interest. Rev. Beekley has written of the red letter day, our combined, Home coming, Rally Day, Coal Offering and reception on October 2nd. In the weeks that have followed, groups of officials, such as trustees, deacons and deaconesses, Sunday School officials and teachers have held get-together meetings at the parsonage entertained by the pastor and wife, thus working out co-operative plans for the advancement of spreading the gospel anew and strengthening all opportunities for witnessing for Christ.

The Church is now in the midst of Revival Services. Rev. Beekley preaching the Word, night after night; Mrs. Beekley leading the Congregational singing, and Mr. Harry Robbins directing the choir. Attendance is good, much visiting is being done and knowing that the prayer of the righteous availeth much—we pray—and ask you to pray.

Mrs. Jennie Bennett, Corres. Sec.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

Traveling Home

Now, I'm going to surprise you for I'm not going home nor is the subject about my traveling home. The fact is that The Lady Bame and myself have not had a home for several years and therefore, we could write to so many angles of travel. Going hither and yon and to more places than we have reported, we do have a lovely place to live, across from the Library, less than two squares from the Courthouse, on the much-traveled Route 15, across from the Junior High School which offers lively entertainment a number of times daily, we have a lovely one-apartment room with many things for which to be thankful and happy.

Homes By Blood

Of course, we do have a number of homes where we seem as welcome as a returning prodigal and our greatest embarrassment is that we use proffered hospitality so frequently. Thank the good Lord and a kind friend, another was added last week. "All ye are Brethren!" some more so than blood relationships, even as this is of a relationship of "Better" blood. For in this we "who were afar off are now made nigh by the blood of Christ," brought into a holy fellowship by the "communion of the blood of Christ," Eph. 2:13; 1 Cor. 10:16, purged by that blood from sin because he was the offering "without spot," Heb. 9:14, and thus we "provoke unto love and good works," "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together" in friendly homes Heb. 10:24, 25. Now, wasn't that some diversion from "home," base?

Homecoming in Indiana

From many sources comes the conviction and declaration that Indiana is a representative American State. Its people are different; maybe that is the reason I came here to a splendid preacher's home to get my life-companion. And believe me, she is different, More than once I have been told of my good fortune in persuading her to become my wife. Of course, such men do not have to live with her! (forgive me)! But if they are different or representative, it might be traced to or blamed on their devotion to "home." Why, we have so many Homecomings among the Indiana churches that they crisscross each other and people must miss one because they can not go to two in one Sunday!

Are You Following?

Well, October 9th was the biggest day for two years at College Corner and who knows for how many more! The day was delightful (if one wore summer clothes) with a record high warmth for the time of year. Nature was dressed in all her beautiful colors with the cornfields a bit too brown for beauty. But, friends of the Brotherhood, they who have traveled over this state of variegated flora and fauna, tell me that one needs not to go to "Brown County," in this state, famous for its Fall Colors, for we have it right here in sight of College Corner. Only two miles from the famous Francis Slocum Park (a state reservation) between the two famous rivers, Wabash and Missisnewa, with rough ravines cut in the deep, rich humus, deep gullies all covered with virgin trees, dense growth of smaller trees, shrubs, flowers, and vines, there's something to travel to when we announce Homecoming at our church. And this year they came. From as far as fifty miles, in Packards, Dodges, Chryslers, Nashs, Hudsons, Buicks, Frazers, with plenty of Chevys and Fords—they came to meet, greet, eat and treat. With baskets loaded as no place can do better, sisters vieing with each other (at least seemingly) to make the prettiest or the best—well, it is no wonder they come and get sleepy for the afternoon program.

Who Comes?

Well, first, former members: for in a country church such as this, we feed into the city places. We educate our children away from us. We give them the best we can offer at home—plenty of work, play, team-work in the duties of the farm, teach them good ways of living and then when we have "finished them off," they go to the cities for professional positions, and the country church must do it all over again with the next grade. "The church in the Wildwood," "Beside of the Road," and "Of the Long Ago" all fit into this beautiful picture of "traveling Home" to a church that will forever remain "The Dearest Place of All" to many lost from Home.

People that had not been there for 20 years; former pastors: Rev. W. T. Lytle and Rev. C. C. Grisso, added to the happiness of the occasion and their testimonies, brought tears of rejoicing that the Lord had been so good to those who had ministered to holy things among them and baptized many into the body of Christ.

A splendid program without sermon or long speeches, with many and varied forms of music and other entertainment, a dinner that was a challenge to self-control for everyone, the Homecoming Day had reminded us that there is a precious "tie that binds our hearts in Christian Love," that home ties are strong enough to urge to sacrifice for renewal, and that to foster them is an effort quite worthwhile in our continued "forward march" to our eternal home where nothing shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Loree, Indiana. Brother Robert Higgins tells us that they had a very fine Fall Communion observance on Sunday evening, November 20th, with ninety in attendance.

We also note that the Clay Township Choruses will sing at the Loree Church on Sunday evening, December 11th, and that Mr. C. A. Lambert of Nappanee, Indiana, will lead the singing on that evening. This is the closing evening of the week of the special Bible Lecture series by Dr. Grover Swoyer of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Miss Janet King of Elkhart is to show her Argentine pictures at Loree on Sunday evening, December 4th.

Brother Higgins reports that their Homecoming which was held on October 23rd was a great success. There were 217 present at Sunday School, with 250 or more at the morning service and a "full house" at the afternoon program. Brother C. A. Stewart was the guest speaker. He was a former pastor of this church.

Nappanee, Indiana. We note the word of thanks that is given those who shared in the redecorating and remodeling of the parsonage, by Brother Virgil E. Meyer, who was recently installed as the Nappanee pastor.

We note also that Brother Meyer has been asked to act as the "scheduling agent" for the various meetings in the church. By consulting one person as to the availability of the church for meetings, the conflicts that sometimes arise are thus eliminated.

Waterloo, Iowa. From the Waterloo bulletin of November 20th, we learn that Brother E. M. Riddle, Missionary Board Secretary, is to be the guest speaker at the Waterloo Church on Sunday, December 4th. Brother Riddle was a former pastor of this church.

Gratis, Ohio. We learn that Brother W. S. Crick, Gratis pastor, was the one chosen to deliver the Thanksgiving message at the Union Thanksgiving service in Gratis. A Community Chorus furnished the special music for the service.

Brother Crick reports that on the first Sunday in November there were eighty-five at the Sunday School session and that sixty were present at the morning worship service.

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff, Meyersdale pastor, reports that a reorganizational plan for the re-vamping of the class and age groups is now in effect in the Sunday School. This was done to make more simple the class promotion each year. Promotion day is held on the last Sunday in September and all promotions will be made according to age. Each class regardless of age, has been asked to choose a name.

Brother Benshoff reports the following as members of the Ashland Gospel Team which held the Thanksgiving week-end services in Meyersdale: Rev. J. D. Hamel, student pastor of the Fairhaven, Ohio, Brethren Church; Mrs. Jean Hamel, wife of the above; Rev. Glenn Shank, student pastor of the Glenford, Ohio, Brethren Church; Phyllis Deeter, of New Lebanon, Ohio and Lois Coleman of Milledgeville, Illinois—both students at Ashland College.

Warsaw, Indiana. Brother E. J. Beekley, Warsaw pastor, says that a number of the boys of the Boys' Brotherhood went to Goshen on Friday, November 25th, being taken in the cars of Brother Owen Horn and Brother Beekley.

Brother Beekley sends us the mimeographed programs for both their Communion service and the dedication of their altar and appointments.

A last minute note from Brother Beekley says, "We went over our Sunday School goal of 200 already—with an attendance of 204." Congratulations, Warsaw! Keep up the good work!

Goshen, Indiana. We note that the W. M. S. held their Public Service at Goshen on Sunday evening, October 30th. The guest speaker for this service was Miss Gladys Harshberger, who "has been a teacher in the American Community School, Beirut, Lebanon; assisted in relief work in 1946 in France, and in 1947 was camp director at Istanbul, Turkey." She spoke on the subject: "Life in the Near East Today."

NOTICE TO INDIANA CHURCHES

The State Mission apportionments should be sent to Mr. Walter Lichtenberger, 1057 Evans Street, Elkhart, Indiana. If the church will kindly take note of the Secretary's address much confusion and work will be avoided. We have mission points which look to us for help to continue their work for Christ and the church. Your help is needed and thankfully received.

"... MY CUP RUNNETH OVER"

YESTERDAY WAS THANKSGIVING DAY. It was spent quietly. It seemed just like almost any other day of the week, as far as days are concerned. But should it have been? Should there not have been a special significance given it in the hearts of all men in this great country of ours? I turned on the radio—football; I turned the dial—"jazz" or "bebop." Finally there came forth, as I pushed another button, a voice and these words came out of the ether—"... my cup runneth over..." I do not know what came before, or what followed, for the phone bell rang just then. But I went back to my chair (for someone else answered the phone) and repeated to myself the words I had heard—"My cup runneth over," and

It set me to thinking!

What has been in my "cup" during the past year? Has it been full or empty? Has it reached the brim, or has it been down to the dregs? And I began to think over the many things that had been poured into my cup. Some of it was bitter; but in large measure it had been that which was good and sweet, and as I thought of it, even the bitter had been sweetened by the goodness showered upon me by the loving Father.

Then I thought of what the "cup" may have meant to others. For, after all, when the psalmist said, "My cup runneth over," he was speaking symbolically of his life, and the manner of his meeting the problems of life.

Then I thought of the words of Jesus to the two disciples who came to him desiring the high seats, one on His right hand and the other on His left. He said to them, "Can ye drink the cup which I shall drink..."? And they said, "We are able." And when He said "Ye shall drink it," little did they realize just what that "cup" would contain, and what they would suffer because of it. It was a bitter cup that Jesus drank. Paul once said, "If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him." Jesus' "cup" was a cup of suffering, yet He drank it uncomplainingly. Do we drink our cup of life thus?

Then there came to me the words which Jesus spoke to the Scribes and Pharisees, when He said, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For ye make clean the outside of the cup... but within... full of extortion and excess." Their lives were not measuring up to what appeared on the outside. Outwardly they were the final word in religious observance; but within they were "full of dead men's bones." Outwardly alive; but dead within. How illustrative of our present-day civilization.

But then my mind went to another "cup," and I remembered that Jesus had given another saying which is totally significant to the Christian. He was with His disciples just prior to His going out to be arrested, tried falsely and hung upon the cross. As He reclines at the table with these men who had followed Him these three years of His earthly ministry, He knows their lives to be facing a crisis. They will need everything possible to keep them in "remembrance of Him." So He takes the common "cup" which has been set before Him, and He changes its value from a common thing of life to one that means so much to the Christian. He says, "This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." (Mathew adds, "For the remission of sins.") Paul gives us the full significance of it in I Corinthians 11:26, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."

What a cup is this. Full of promise; full of love; full of desire not to be forgotten; full of remembrance on our part. Something for which to be thankful, not only at Thanksgiving season, but the whole year through.

But still one more "cup" came to my mind. Let us go with Jesus to the garden, and follow Him to the place of prayer. We hear Him say, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." That "cup" which He was compelled to drink, is full of suffering and sorrow. So full of sorrow was it that we are told that His great heart literally burst from grief and that He really "gave" His life for our sins.

Well, it may be that we should have thought of these things more than we all did before the coming of Thanksgiving Day. I suspect we did thanks for material things, but how about the spiritual blessings?

Think it over!

Enthusiasm -- The Church's Best Advertisement

Rev. Henry Bates

SOME MONTHS AGO there appeared in this column an article which dealt with the theme of advertising in the church. At that time stress was placed upon the fact that "It Pays to Advertise"—not only in business, but also in the work of the church of Jesus Christ; and a number of suggestions were set forth which have proven quite successful in this field. One medium or means of advertising the church, however, was not included in this previous writing and it is about that medium that the Church Methods column is written this month.

A church may utilize every available means of advertising in order to present her program to the people of the community; large sums of money may be invested in printing, illuminating, radio, and various other aspects of publicity—but all of this is of little avail if one quality of good advertising is lacking—ENTHUSIASM. From time to time folks tell us that they were attracted to a certain church because of the enthusiasm which the members of that particular church demonstrated. What constitutes an enthusiastic church? How can this spirit of enthusiasm be generated in any local congregation?

I. The church must be on fire for Jesus Christ! In the Book of Acts we read that the first century church grew by leaps and bounds—that men and women were added "daily" unto the church. Scripture also tells us that the early Christians were pointed out as the "Followers of the way." What was it that brought about this rapid growth in numbers, and this recognition by the people of the city? The answer is very simple—it is stated in that same Book of Acts—"They were filled with the Holy Spirit." In other words, they were on fire for the Lord Jesus Christ. They believed in Him as the Son of God and as the Saviour of the world; they had given their lives to Him; and in so doing they were filled with the power and the desire to tell others about Him.

Perhaps one of the greatest handicaps we face as a church today is the fact that all too frequently men and women "join the church" without fully giving their lives into His keeping and without having this fire kindled in their hearts. When the men and women who constitute the church come to realize what a blessing it is to be a child of Christ, and then desire to see others led to Him, the church will begin to make itself felt in the community.

II. Love for the church. Another means of arousing the interest of outsiders in the work of the church is the enthusiasm manifested by the members of the church in their particular program.

From time to time we hear folks remark, "What's the difference what church I attend?" There is a difference! The Brethren Church is a Bible centered church; we believe in observing the ordinances of the church as they were established according to the New Testament; we believe in a separated life for Christian believers—in all of these respects the Brethren Church is different from a number of others. As members of the Brethren Church we should be enthused about this difference—we should be anxious to tell others what our church stands for—we should be anxious to let others know that we are proud of our denomination. If I belonged to the Lions Club, the Rotary, the Kiwanas, or any other fraternal group, and showed no apparent interest or pride in my particular club folks would soon form the opinion that the club had nothing to offer. This is likewise true of the church. Men and women judge the program and the worth of the church by the enthusiasm shown by the church's constituents.

It behooves every congregation to enter into a program of indoctrination—instilling into the lives of the people an interest in, and a love for, the Brethren Church. When we are enthused about our church others will catch the spirit of enthusiasm which we generate.

III. Interest in the services of the church. Many church people never realize that there are a goodly number of men and women who are waiting for an invitation to attend a church, and who never receive that invitation. A sure way of developing enthusiasm within a given congregation is to arouse an interest in the services of the church. If you enjoy the regular services and meetings of your own church why not tell others about them? No doubt you speak to your neighbor every day about the weather, world conditions, the cost of living—but how often do you tell them about the fine program of services and meetings that your church has? How often do you invite them to go to these gatherings with you? You might be surprised at how many folks will accept a sincere invitation to worship in your church. If enough folks from a given church speak to one family, for instance, about the excellent program which that particular church has, that family will want to attend some of the services to see what there is about them that so inspires and interests the regular members.

Make it a point to speak to at least one person each day about YOUR church and her services.

IV. Denominational Interests. This writer has discovered that the congregations which are most vitally interested in the various denominational interests are usually the most enthused about the entire church program. What would you think of a man who owned a grocery store in his town and then went to the A & P store to do his shopping because it was a little closer to his home? No doubt you would say that the man is very foolish. Yet there are many people—Brethren people—who are doing just that! We have in Ashland as fine a publishing house as can be found anywhere—owned by the members of the Brethren Church! Yet many Brethren people, and even Brethren churches by-pass or overlook the publishing house when in need of books, office supplies, and so on. Similarly, in Ashland, is the only college in the United States owned and operated by the Brethren Church. A college where young men and women may go to receive a thorough academic training with definite Brethren emphasis. Still there are folks who, like the foolish grocer, send their young people to other colleges—thus depriving them of this fine heritage.

There is a noticeable relationship between the enthusiasm manifested in denominational interests, and the enthusiasm of the congregation in its own program. If a man or a woman is vitally interested in the work of his or her denomination he is usually vitally interested in the work of his particular church.

Why not start a "Get Enthused" drive in your church?

Ancient Manuscripts and Paintings to be Photographed

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS and paintings dating back to the 6th Century A. D., that are part of the collection of the Greek Orthodox Church Library in Jerusalem, will soon be photographed for the first time.

The project is a joint undertaking of the Library of Congress and the American Schools of Oriental Research, which has its headquarters at Yale. The microfilms and other negatives will be kept in the Library of Congress and copies will be made available to all libraries and scholars.

The work of photographing will be carried out under the direction of Dr. Kenneth W. Clark, of Duke University, a leading specialist in New Testament and other Biblical manuscripts. He was made available to the project by the American Schools of Oriental Research and is now acting on the staff of the Jerusalem School as annual professor and assistant director.

The photographic work will be performed by a member of the Library's Photo-duplication Service, Wallace Wade. Cameras and other equipment have already been shipped by air to Jerusalem, and the work of copying is expected to begin this month.

The photographing is being done by permission of the Patriarch Timotheos of the Greek Orthodox Church in Jerusalem, and in return the Library of Congress has agreed to supply the Patriarch with copies of important items photographed.

Carl H. Kraeling, Director of the Division of Near Eastern Languages and Literatures at Yale and President of the American Schools for Oriental Research, said that the emphasis of the project will be upon microfilming approximately 150 ancient codices in the Patriarchal Library. These are needed by an international group of scholars, headed by Ernest Cadman Colwell, President of the University of Chicago, in their work on a new critical study of the Greek New Testament.

Further importance attaches to the undertaking because the large number of hand painted miniatures in the Patriarchate collection are of considerable interest to art historians. Special provision has been made to obtain photographs of such miniatures especially for use in connection with the work now being done at Princeton University in the history of Christian iconography and at Dumbarton Oaks in the field of Byzantine art.

The Patriarchal Library contains approximately 3,000 ancient and medieval manuscripts, the oldest dating from the 7th century. Among the more important items known to be in the collection are the historical manuscript of Gregory of Nazianzen and an ancient manuscript of the Book of Job. A series of documents and books going back to the Islamic period which bears upon the history and privileges of the Patriarchal See and the Library will be photographed at the request of the Patriarch, who is interested in insuring their preservation; this historical material also will soon become available to American scholars for the first time.

Travel Flashes

Dr. Charles A. Bame

"Going Again"

"Boozehisting?"

INDEED, there are still "travel flashes" to be made. I do not know the meaning of "on again, off again, Flanagan" but I do not imagine that it has to do with getting drunk. On the water wagon and off again, is the apparent course of all who get a "taste" for liquor. I had a near relative who raised a large family of, I think, ten children. When he was good, he was very, very good but when he was dizzy with liquor, he drove his children out of the house with a pretty dangerous weapon. I knew of another, indeed a member of one of the congregations I served. He apologized again and again for his imbibing of "fire water," but "again and again and again" he went and did it again, only to be kept in fellowship with the church because he never denied and always apologized for his failing and weakness.

Going To Sing

It is the first time that I ever traveled 150 miles to sing a song; but this is the way the announcement read: "Although he will speak at the rally, Dr. Bame has been brought to Michigan to introduce a new prohibition song he has written, 'America Free.' This song . . . is a challenging appeal to make and keep America free. He has been selected also as one of the Eighteenth Anniversary, on 'What Can We Do Now?'"

113,379 Miles

Yep! That's the number on my speedometer and I have been at the wheel and Lady Bame at my side for most of them. Was it in shape to go another 350? Well, I did go to a select mechanic to make sure and he put on $13.00 worth of repairs with the same trouble recurring before I had gone fifty miles. Ah! What a Providence then happened! I went to a second preferred mechanic and it acted worse for him than for me, who had driven 65 miles to get to him, for I got it going, but he couldn't, right at the Garage door. But for his skill and patience, I wonder where I'd be now after 350 miles more. But too much like Americans are saying, it can't happen there again! But there are so many parts to an auto! Like drunkenness, it can happen anywhere.

Well, after a day, I got started and now I have returned and am telling you, I had a wonderful time. I just had to go for it had been planned two months before, but here comes a challenge.

An Operation

Not on me nor Mrs. Bame, but one of our congregation, who suddenly took ill on a trip and the morning of my going went to the operation table. But I was assured that all would end well (as it has) and that I should go on and "not worry"—a thing not too easy to do.

Alluring

One of the alluring urges of the trip was to visit Michigan cousins, some of whom I had never seen and others of whom I did not even know. Cousins, cousins everywhere and how nice it was to be among them on such a trip; for all of them were in entire agreement with me on the great subject of prohibition. One, (a teacher) I had mated to a cousin years ago and how happily they lived; others who had never seen me and most, never heard me speak. It was and is a great satisfaction to meet a woman who had held me on her knee a half century ago and hugged and kissed and teetered me as a child. Now 91, she is still able to take care of herself and the good Lord is praised by both her and myself that we chanced to meet before our translation. How we could have wept were it not for the promise—or, better—assurance that we shall meet again in a better world where there is not a "shadow that is cast by turning."

Fellowships

I may say that one of these cousins was once a Methodist. After I had introduced her and married her to my cousin and baptized her into our church, she is now so separated by distance and age that she has joined the Presbyterians so as to have a pastor, and who'd criticise? Another had a mother whom I remember as the most loquacious at prayer of any woman, anytime or anywhere. It was at the same Mourner's Bench where I offered my first public prayer that she cried out her heart for the lost and now her daughter, my cousin (whose hospitality I enjoyed) and I had not a chance for disagreement in our different approaches to God nor a doubt of each other's security before the Throne of Grace. But it was not thus then or I'd had a different mate (maybe) for a wife. That one became another minister's wife—Methodist!

"Oh, What a Change!"

My first lecture was given to a church of "The Assemblies of God"; the second to a Free Methodist; the third, an assembly of dozens of preachers from many groups; the fourth, an Evan. U. B. group, and the fifth to a "Pilgrim Holiness" group. The leader who "booked" me for these sermons (for such they were) was a Free Methodist. Did I know the difference because of these denominational "fences?" I answer, "never a one." There is a tie that "binds in Christian love" for "the fellowship of kindred minds" is the thing that unites. I think I shall never forget one home among these "sects," as they are slanderously called, for the limitless courtesies offered in the church as well as in the home.

"A Preacher Preaching Prohibition?"

Yes, that's I. I would never be a true preacher if I did not; nor, in my belief is any one. God was the first prohibitionist and never has changed. His first effort to train properly, the first pair, was with a prohibition. In Eden his first recorded words are: "Of the tree in the midst of the garden ye shall not eat, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die" (Gen. 3:3). When he gave Moses the rules for right living he gave him Ten Commandments—all prohibitions, and Jesus sanctioned each of them more than once and gave many of His own. Paul reiterated them, Peter also, and so also James.

The trouble with modern preachers (not all) is that they have forgotten the prohibitions or are afraid of their "skins" or "jobs," as men say today. All this talk about love and grace is much less than what God always required of his people. If anyone doubts, let them read: Matt. 5:20-22, 34, 39, 42, 44; Luke 6:30, 27, Matt. 5:20, 25; 7:1; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:3, 4, 5, 18-21 and so on ad infinitum.

"Is That In?"

A reporter was asking over the telephone for some of the message of the evening before in one of the cities where I was talking in this vein, and he stopped me, asking, "Is that in the Bible?" I said sure! Do you wish me to quote it? I had a Bible at hand and gave it to him from Gen. 3:3, and he gave it all with the quotation in the paper next day, omitting what he had thought to be the "news."

A man sitting in the same room with me said: "You do not believe that, do you?" I answered, "Sure I do and I have the facts to prove it." What the world needs in times like these is to have enough regard for God and His word to believe it and talk back to falsifiers and skeptics. My topic was: "Talk back and Fight it Out." Prohibition was a "howling success" with the greatest era of prosperity in our history. Get the facts and "tell 'em." Wabash, Indiana.

Dayton, Ohio. Brother Whetstone, Dayton pastor, reports that twenty-five men attended the Laymen's meeting on Monday evening, November 14th, and that the interest in the meetings is increasing.

We note that a Sunday School party is in the offing at Dayton. The date is to be announced later.

Lanark, Illinois. A Youth Fellowship meeting was held at Lanark on Friday evening, November 25th, with a Gospel Team from Ashland College furnishing the program. The Milledgeville young people were to be the guests of the evening.

Cameron—Quiet Dell Circuit. Brother A. R. Baer, pastor of the circuit, says that there were seven baptized following the prayer service on November 16th—five from Quiet Dell and two from Cameron. There were others baptized on Sunday afternoon, November 27th. These were from those who made their confessions at the recent revival meeting.

At a recent Wednesday evening prayer service at Cameron, there were forty present and three came forward for baptism and membership in the Cameron church.

Brother Baer says, "The Berean Birthday party was a great success. There were 150 present and many of them were prospects for the various classes of the Sunday School. The 16mm sound projector used on that evening is available whenever its use will promote the interest of the Church."

There was a social evening and motion pictures in the Cameron Church on Tuesday evening, November 23rd. On Sunday, December 4th the first religious film that will take the place of the evening sermon will be shown—"No Greater Power." Additional showings of motion pictures will be on Tuesday evening, December 20th and Sunday evening, December 25th. The Christmas story, "The Child of Bethlehem," will be shown following the regular Christmas program.

The order for the new hymn books for the Cameron church has been sent in and soon they will be in use. Special Christmas recordings for the tower loud speaker will soon be ordered. This special Christmas music will be sent out to the community through the tower system during the Holiday season.

Louisville, Ohio. The Junior and Senior Sisterhoods joined in celebrating the Birthday of Sisterhood on Tuesday evening, November 22nd. A banquet was served.

We note that a "Mystery Quartet" will be one of the attractions at the evening service on Sunday, December 4th. Brother Byler, Louisville pastor, says, "No one knows the quartet—including those who are singing."

Northern Indiana Laymen. While the announcement of the Northern District Indiana Laymen's meeting was made in last issue of the Evangelist as it came from Brother Hummel, the President, yet the Secretary, Brother Max Miller, asked us to make the following announcement. We are glad to do this and thus, if any missed it last week, they still have time to make arrangements to go. Here is the announcement:

"The regular quarterly meeting of the Northern Indiana Laymen's Brotherhood will be held in the church at Elkhart on Monday evening, December 5th. In addition to the usual good time, there will be the annual election of officers. A good attendance is urged. Max Miller, Sec."

Johnstown, Penna., Second Church C. E.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Second Brethren Church, Moxham, have begun a new and inspiring year. We hope to meet with much success in our endeavor to win others for "Christ and the Church."

At our recent election we elected the following officers To lead us in our work for the next year: Mrs. Florence Kline, President; Eugene Hostetler, Vice President; Jack Bischof, Secretary; Randall Hostetler, Treasurer, and Mrs. Orval Boyer, Corresponding Secretary.

We had a well planned program and a nice selection of games in which all took part, at our weiner roast held recently at the home of one of our members. The group is now looking forward to an enjoyable Christmas party.

Rev. Leatherman requested the C. E. Society to be represented some evening during our recent evangelistic services, so as a very alert and eager group, ready to do what the Lord may ask, we chose the "First Monday night" and we are glad to report we had fifteen members present.

READING LIST FOR VISUAL AIDS IN THE CHURCH

Chester F. Zimmerman, Audio-Visual Director

MANY OF THE RELIGIOUS PERIODICALS and also many of the national and state educational periodicals frequently contain articles on the use of visual aids. Have you checked at your local library to see what they have? Have you checked at your Y. M. C. A. reading room?

Most of the progressive publications will have certain suggestions which you can apply. The majority of these articles are listed in the annual index of the periodical in which they appear, and in the Readers' Guide which may be found in almost any library. Ask your librarian to help you locate the items you want on machines, films, filmstrips, sound-filmstrips, screens, slides or suggestions for use. Your librarian will be glad to help you.

In addition to current articles, certain publications should be read carefully by all those interested in beginning or continuing a worthwhile visual aids program in any church. A few selected ones are listed below:

1. Bulletins of the International Council of Religious Education, available from headquarters, 203 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago 1, Illinois.

Bulletin 930: Why and How to Use Visual Method in Weekday Religious Education (10c)

Bulletin 940: Why and How Use Visual Method in Vacation Religious Education (25c)

Bulletin 955:1: Picture Guide for Uniform Lessons (20c)

Bulletin 920: Bringing New Life Into Leadership Education—Use Visual Method (25c)

Visual Religious Education Today (40c)

Visual Method in the Church (25c)

Visual Method in the Church Curriculum (25c)

Committee on Visual Aids (Children's Work Advisory Section)

2. Visual Aids in the Church. Paul H. Vieth and William Rogers; Christian Education Press, Philadelphia.

3. Visual Aids in the Service of the Church, published by the Harmon Foundation for the Yale Divinity School.

4. Projected Visual Aids in the Church. William S. Hockman, Pilgrim Press, Boston.

5. Architects' Visual Equipment Handbook. Bell and Howell Co., Chicago.

6. The Audio-Visual Handbook. Ellsworth C. Dent. (6th Edition) Society for Visual Education, Inc., 100 E. Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Illinois.

A few hours of reading will save you many problems that can arise in the using of visual materials.

A few facts from these materials will point the way to making the visual program in your church a worth-while teaching and inspirational program.

"Know-how" is important in this field just as it is important in the baking of a cake or the preparation of a sermon.

The increasing demand for visual aids from religious leaders of all denominations is, in effect, an assuring answer to the challenge, "Shall we not educate as well for peace as for war?" The army, as you know, used hundreds of filmstrips, sound-filmstrips, silent motion pictures and sound motion pictures to train its personnel. So important is the work of the church, so immediate the need for teaching the eternal truths of religion, of making ideals live that no method which promises an increase in effectiveness should be left unused.

The opportunity of today is far greater than it was just ten years ago in the visual field. At that time even the leaders were stumbling along an unknown track looking for the right way of accomplishing their aims. You can profit from their mistakes and their progress.

For information about filmstrips, slides, screens or projectors write to: The National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church, Executive Offices, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio. Order visual materials through this office.

Time

H. A. Gossard

I am but TIME, yet I am firm as Truth.
I change things, yes, I change both age and youth.
I am resolved to give the world my days;
To serve all living things through Nature's ways;
To bless mankind with all God blesses me;
To grant no time for strife:—I'd keep MAN free!
To all that lifts MAN up I'll bow a bit
With throbs of love and hope to rythm it . . .
In every prayer for peace I pledge to play
My part in wafting it upon its way . . .
I am but TIME, still I am true as Truth.
I antedate all things,—yet, I'm a Youth . . .

Folk bless the world oft as they use me right;
And curse themselves oft as they use we wrong.
As Servant I rest neither day nor night;
As King I rule the universal throng . . .

I do my work the while I slip away . . .
I never hurry; still I'm never late . . .
I cannot rest; I'm busy night and day . . .
No one can see me:—I've no size nor weight.

MILLEDGEVILLE, ILL., C. E.

The C. E. in Milledgeville has been having very successful meetings. They have met one of their goals with a lesson on Stewardship. They have also had a planned social party. On September 9th thirty-two young people enjoyed a hay-rack ride. After the ride weiners and buns seemed to disappear in no time!

In the September "Brethren Youth" magazine a clever idea was submitted for a C. E. Meeting. Since September was school month, they had a program based on the idea of school.

When Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Benshoff were visiting in Milledgeville (where Rev. Benshoff formerly preached) the young people had a scrambled supper on the church lawn. Orville Allen, Jr., was the leader and he had a very good meeting—"This Prodigal America," taken from the C. E. worship programs.

They will try to meet another goal by having the Quiet Hour lesson and playlet. They are trying to meet twelve of the twelve goals this year. They think it will be possible if they really work!

CERRO GORDO, ILL., C. E. REPORTING

Beginning with the month of July, camp was the first thing on our list. There were six of our own young people who attended. The week after we got home from camp Mr. and Mrs. John Fulk invited the young people to their home for a hamburger fry. We had a very enjoyable time and I'm sure everyone there was blessed.

There were not any of our young people able to attend General Conference this year, as much as we would have liked to. After our pastor and his wife returned home from conference, they told us all about it. It even sounded better than we thought it would be. I am sure there will be some attend next year from our group. The last meeting in August we were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. David McDonald to have our meeting.

Two of our September meetings were held in homes. One was held in the home of Byron Derr and the other was held at the parsonage.

Our Christian Endeavor has as a project to send a copy of the "Upper Room" to the "shut-ins" of the community. We feel this will be profitable, not only to the "shut-ins" but to us also.

Since July we have made a 10% increase in our society. It is still growing and, the Lord willing, it will grow more and more. We have ten regular members. Our average attendance since July until the present time is eight. We have a wonderful help with our meetings from our pastor and wife. We also appreciate the adults who take an interest in our C. E.

CHRISTIAN LIFE

Rev. John T. Byler

(Brother Byler is furnishing the studies for the Boys' Brotherhood and the first of a series of three monthly articles is to be found below.)

* * * * *

DID YOU EVER STOP TO CONSIDER that the Christian life is never static—that it never stands still? As a Christian, you either move forward in Spiritual Growth, or you become weaker and life holds fewer blessings for you. When Christ calls people to discipleship, He calls them to action and decision; He calls them to surrender and whole-hearted service. Never is He satisfied with half-hearted following, and with part-time Christianity.

The disciples of Christ were well aware of these demands when they responded to His call. You will remember that when they first followed Him, they called Him "Rabbi," or "Teacher," and they thought of themselves as disciples or learners. They knew the importance of learning all the things of God from Him that it was possible to learn. So must we all be willing to be learners or disciples, as we come to Christ to follow Him. He must be to us, a teacher.

When we accept Christ as a Teacher, we find Him different from any other teacher in all of the world's history. He never wrote anything to leave behind Him, but depended solely upon others carrying out His instructions and fulfilling the things that He taught. Yet, as a teacher, no one has ever begun to reach the heights that He reached. His messages were so simple that a child might understand—yet, so profound that they could not be understood by the world's philosophers and wise men. Again, while He spoke of conditions of the day in which He lived, yet His messages were timeless, for they related the past to His day, and our own generation. Centuries later, still finds these messages applicable to our own needs.

One other thing needs to be noticed about Christ's teaching. His words were words of Life. As He taught, and as men responded, hearts were changed—lives were transformed—men became new creatures. Christ knew that His words were words of power and life, so He spoke with authority that no other had a right to use. While He says He came not to revoke the teachings of the "Law and the Prophets"—yet He introduced some new ideas which were foreign to these earlier teachings—and completely new and revolutionary.

And these words were such words of finality that the Christian world uses them to end controversies, even today. To the Christian, there is no higher court of appeal than the words of Jesus Christ. Christians will continue to use them until the end of time as their supreme voice of authority, for they are the words, not only of a great Teacher, but of God Himself.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE BEARS FRUIT

Scripture: Matt. 7:15-20

For The Leader

ONE WEEK FROM TODAY is Christmas! How, each year, be it boy or girl, we look forward to that great day. Parents shared with us our joys and anticipation. Then the day came and with it our presents, our disappointments or our joys. There was a dinner, relatives, visits, maybe snow. The day was so short, soon it was over, and we almost felt that the anticipation was greater than the experiences of the day. As we older grow, we learn something of the hard work, the rushing, the expense, and the complete exhaustion connected with "celebrating" Christmas. There is the ageless myth of Santa Claus to contend with. We must either bluff younger ones, subjecting ourselves to later being known as a deceiver, or telling the truth about Santa, and explaining to them what it is all about. Which brings us to our thought of the evening. We do not believe that Christ ever intended that the day of His birth should be used as it is. We urge each one to make Christmas a day of praise and adoration to our God and Savior.

DISCUSSION

1. JESUS OR SANTA CLAUS? In your home, who's getting the most attention this Christmas? Jesus or Santa Claus? If yours is the average home, Santa is. He may seem to be a jolly old man, full of kindness and provision, but he's the devil incarnated for millions of people. He is truly anti-Christ in spirit, of which the scriptures say there shall be many in these days. For Santa has replaced the true worship of Christ in many hearts. It even takes the form of blasphemy. We visited in a home at Christmas time. A large picture of Santa hung in the most prominent place in the living room where the children in the home could see it easily. Our hostess said, "You know, when you look at that picture of Santa Claus, you can almost see Christ in it. Of course, the spirit is the same—that of giving." What do you think of that? Depending on your love for God, you will have Jesus or Santa Claus in your Christmas.

2. THE SIMPLICITY OF CHRISTMAS. It is a far cry from the monstrous display of materialism and selfish desires, to the simple scene in Bethlehem. If you are fed up and sick of the strain of Christmas as we celebrate it now, and are coveting a peace and quiet, then turn back to that scene in the stable. How simple, how restful. The mother, Joseph, the baby Jesus, the cattle, the soft light of Holy radiance! The quiet visit of the shepherds. There is peace, for Christ always brings peace to our hearts. There is rest from all the excitement of the day. Do it, and you will find in Christmas a help for your soul, to be found in no other way.

3. PROPER OBSERVANCE BY CHRISTIANS. In the face of commercial conditions, it does become a problem as to how to celebrate Christmas. Surely, the day will include a devotional period in the home for all the family, in which the Christmas story from the Bible will be read, and prayer offered. The giving and receiving of gifts is an inbred practice which, incidentally grew out of the visit of the wise men, who, contrary to all popular beliefs, did not even visit Jesus on the night He was born—Matt. 2:11. (Is a stable a house? Is a new-born babe a young child?) On the night when Christ was born, the angels sang a song of praise, the shepherds praised God. That is the proper observance of Christmas for the Christian. It is to be a day of praise. To observe it in any other way is to keep from God the rightful homage due unto Him.

4. GIFTS OR NOT. As we have mentioned, gift giving is inbred in the celebration of Christmas. It will be a part of our Christmas observance. The danger is that it will supersede our worship. We can well remember the admonitions at home that even though we were giving gifts and receiving them, that it was Christ Who should receive the praise and worship of our hearts. It is His birthday. One little boy was smarter than his parents when he said, as he observed all the gift and wrapping, exclamations of pleasure and disappointment on Christmas day, "It seems funny on Jesus' birthday that everybody gets gifts but Jesus." Which opens up another point of how much we should spend for gifts for family and friends. A true Christian will never spend for Christmas gifts more than he gives to the Church for its support, for missions, benevolences, etc. How does your average tally up?

5. A PICTURE OF CHRISTMAS. I see a man standing off in the shadows cold, forlorn, forsaken. The gloominess of his condition is intensified by the bright lights off to the other side of the picture. In the bright lights we see gaily decorated homes and buildings, we see people rushing to and fro with great purchases under their arms. We see people shouting with glee as they watch an endless procession of presents under brightly lighted trees. We hear the gloat of the merchants as the ring of their cash registers becomes the chimes of Christmas. We see liquor flowing as a mighty river through the heart of the city. At the lower corner of the picture behind a building we see the Devil himself shouting with glee as he sees the children of men heaping unto themselves their selfish desires and pleasure. The only building in the midst of gaily lighted buildings, that is not lit up is the church. It stands dark, cold, uninviting. We have entitled our picture, "The Birthday of the Saviour."

6. MAKE IT A CHRISTIAN CHRISTMAS. We can hold the line, by spending our money for good substantial things as clothing and food. To buy trashy toys is just throwing money away that could better go to the Church and to missions. It is Sunday this year on Christmas Day. Thus we have a rare opportunity of making it a double day of praise. Our prediction is that, save for a treat, our Sunday Schools will have one of the poorest attendances of the year. Be a real Christian on Christmas Day. Attend your Church's services, both morning and evening. Make it primarily a ray of raptured praise for Christ.

THE MYSTERY

Though deep within my heart I feel
The blood of Christ applied;
I cannot tell you how 'tis done
Nor why for me He died.

But this I know, my heart is clean;
His Spirit doth abide.
I cannot tell you how, or why
But still, I'm satisfied!

My finite mind may never grasp
The mysteries of His grace,
Yet oft I've felt how small they'd be Could I their reason trace.

I'm glad I do not feel to probe,
Nor ask, how can this be?
For I'm content to have a faith
That makes God real to me!

THE GLORY OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

Scripture: Romans 8:7-18

Hymns: "Ye Must Be Born Again"; "Saved to the Uttermost"

Seed Thought Provokers:

THE ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCE between one who is a Christian and one who is not is the glory of the Christian life. The marvel and miracle of the Christian life the world does not understand, and neither do we fully comprehend. When God was in Christ His divine glory was veiled in flesh so that men did not recognize God in their midst (Mark 6:3; Luke 4:22). But some beheld His glory (John 1:14). And so it is with the Christian (1 John 3:2).

We became Christians by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 16:31; Mark 16:16). Without controversy we accepted the doctrine of His virgin birth, eternal existence as the Son of God and God the Son, His atoning death for sinners the only way of salvation, the power of His resurrection and His return in person (1 Tim. 3:16). This to the unregenerated man is unbelievable for it is humanly impossible. He cannot believe that Deity would submit to the virgin birth or the cross (1 Cor. 1:18). But the miracle of the Christian life begins in the saving knowledge and belief in these things. Faith in spiritual things is not of human capacity but a divine gift (Mark 9:23, 24; Luke 17:5). The Christian believes what to the natural man is unbelievable.

Christianity is supernatural and moves in the realm of miracle. The Christian begins with the new birth, rebirth (John 3:7). While it is impossible for the natural man to decide his birth, parentage and family, the Christian decides all three (John 1:12). Jesus would have us know that not all men are the spiritual children of God (John 8:44; Rom. 9:8). There are only two families on earth. In the Bible one is called "the children of the flesh," "... of the world," "... of disobedience," "... of wrath." The other is called "the children of light," "... of the kingdom," "... of the highest," "... of God." We are of the first family by nature and of the second family by choice.

The natural man may know things visible and material. He knows nothing of Deity, Heaven, Hell, eternity apart from the revelation of God in His word. He cannot comprehend the truth of God from an open Bible unless the Spirit anoints his eyes. Spiritual truth is hidden from the natural man (1 Cor. 2:14). The Christian knows things unknowable to the natural man (1 Cor. 2:9, 10).

To stand before God acceptable because of righteousness is not in the power of an unsaved man to accomplish (Heb. 12:14; Rom. 3:22, 23). Only the man Christ Jesus lived a life of unblemished holiness. Hence, the wisdom of the cross (2 Cor. 5:21).

Only the Christian can see and possess the invisible (2 Cor. 4:18; Heb. 11:10, 27, 13-16).

United Prayers.

GOD AVAILABLE TO ALL MEN

Lesson: Jeremiah 29:1, 4-14; 31:3

WE SAW IN MANY CATALOGS which were put out during the late World War, any number of things advertised and which had these words struck through the description of the articles—"Sorry, Not Available." Of course we knew it would do no good to order any of these numbers, regardless of how much we needed or desired them.

Then came the end of the war and at least a semblance of a return to normalcy. Catalogs began to arrive with the words above stricken out. At least one catalog that came to our home had a number of articles listed under the caption, "These formerly scarce articles are now available. First come—first served." Even then, when some of these articles marked "available" were ordered, only disappointment was the order of the day, for back would come the money with the terse statement, "Sorry—out of stock. May have later. Order again."

Today we study about One who under every circumstance, is available, not to just a favored few who have been in touch with the catalog before it fell into our hands and who were able to get in on the "ground floor," but to "everyone" who desires Him and seeks after Him.

The key to our entire lesson is found in the Golden Text, Jeremiah 24:13—"And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your hearts." The two words that stand out in our study are "seek" and "available." The latter word is bound up in the words above, "Ye shall . . . find me."

We find great comfort in reading such expressions as the following from God's Word—"If they cry, I will surely hear . . ."—Deut. 22:23; "Then will I hear from heaven"—Psalm 20:6; "I am their God and will hear them"—Zech. 6:10, and a multitude of others. (See how many you can find.) God has so arranged it that His children can have access to Him at any time. But we should remember that while He was seeking us, we likewise were seeking Him. Thus the scripture which is found in James 4:8, takes on new value to us as Christians, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."

"But," you say, "that is not availability to everyone. That is limiting it to those who have already accepted Him." Yes, that would be true if we were to limit the idea of "availability." But the availability of God has never been limited to just a few; it was the "acceptance" of that availability by the few that drew the line. The difference lies in the word, "acceptance."

Seeking must always include a desire to "find." There must also be included the idea that there is something worth finding, and that it is there to be found. The mere mention of a "gold find" will immediately be the presaging of a "gold rush." Witness what happened just a few weeks ago, even on a false rumor of a new gold strike. Men rushed to the scene by the hundreds, only to find "nothing there." But the availability of God to everyone who will search "diligently" is no false rumor.

That God is available to ALL who seek Him is surely definitely sure in the words of Jesus, "I came to seek and to save ALL that are lost." And Paul, who surely knew what he was writing about, says, "ALL have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The prophet Jeremiah knew that God was available to all men; Paul knew it; and we know it. Then, what are we doing to show All men that He is available? Isn't there where our task lies? And should this not be the burden of our teaching today?

Laid to Rest

ENGLAR. Seward S. Englar passed away in the confines of the Linwood, Maryland, congregation on August 17, 1949, aged 58 years, 4 months and 1 day. Death was due to heart trouble. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Adelaide Englar and a number of other near relatives. The widow has been for a good many years the faithful organist of the Linwood church. Funeral services were conducted by Elder E. M. Riddle, of Ashland, Ohio, a former pastor and close friend of the family, at the home on August 21st.

Dyoll Belote, pastor.

KRILL. Mrs. Flora Holston Krill, a charter member of the Ardmore Brethren Church, departed from this life at her home in Ardmore Heights, Indiana, Saturday morning, October 15, 1949. Sister Krill was in her 89th year of her life journey. She was one of those faithful Christians who lived to give her service to Christ and the church. She faithfully attended her church until her health did not permit. Memorial services were held at the church on Monday afternoon, October 17, and her body was placed in Riverview Cemetery in South Bend. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Stella Lee, who devotedly waited on her during her illness; one son, Harry Krill, one granddaughter, Mrs. Leona Hoekstra and two great grandsons. Services conducted by her pastor, the undersigned.

News From Our Churches

REVIVAL AT VANDERGRIFF, PENNA.

It was a joy for me to work with Rev. Paul Naff in a three weeks evangelistic meeting at Vandergrift, Penna., from September 26 to October 16. Brother Naff is well liked by the members of the church and he is winning his way into the homes of the outsiders also. These steps are good in any community for any pastor. Brother Naff is much concerned about the welfare of his church, both numerically and spiritually. The members, in turn, think him to be the best pastor.

The Vandergrift brethren are very devoted to God, to their pastor and to the church. To me, they were the finest among brethren. The youth, the women and the men were all ready to "Go and Do" for their Lord what they saw needed to be done to promote His church; this they began to do trying to get some of the former members back into the field of labor for the Lord. Thanks be unto God, for some of them came back and stated it to be a joy to meet with their former teachers and workers in the church. There are still some others out of the fold, whose names are on the church roll, but not as yet returned in person. My prayer is that they also may be brought back by the faithful pastor and members.

The Vandergrift brethren bought two nice lots in a good neighborhood and are planning to build a nice church for worship. You may ask what is wrong with the house they now have; and I may say that it is not so much the house as it is the location of the church. The reason? A few years ago the Negro Baptist Church converted a storehouse into a house of worship just twelve feet from our church and when they become jubilant in the summer, while the windows of both churches are open, then, what will we have?

The coal and steel strikes were going on, and we saw the people congregating on the street corners and especially in front of the drinking places. The strike benefitted some of the members in that they could attend each service the last two weeks. This I enjoyed much, for there were strong men of prayer among them, and such are helpers in evangelism.

Visitations continued nearly every day, yet there were some of the members we failed to contact during the time there.

The Sunday School at Vandergrift is working hard to get and to keep the banner of the highest attendance. Teachers and pupils alike seem to enjoy the work, and take hold, together with their young superintendent, Brother Charles Lawmaster, for the purpose of building a bigger and better school for the church.

The orchestra, consisting of two violins, three guitars and two saws, with the piano, gave us good music, and may I say that these musicians were present nearly every night. The Choir was present each night and with choice selections for the revival. We had quartets, duets and solos, one or more each service for the last ten days. I did appreciate the favors of these folks very much.

The janitor and the decorating committee had the church looking very nice for each service, and the beautiful flowers of various kinds were pleasing to the eyes and restful to the mind.

The entertainment committee had their plans made and without a "kink" in them. However I wished that there had been some kinks in them so that I could have slipped away from at least one meal a day. These ladies were real Pennsylvania cooks, and we had much of it. It was prepared in such a way that I found it difficult to push away from the table in time to remain comfortable.

I had my home with Brother and Sister B. F. Buzard and it was one of the best. Their home was as my own in every way—everything for my comfort. I am grateful for this hospitality. The visible results of this meeting were three first time confessions and one reconsecration.

May God bless the Vandergrift Brethren, their pastor and the work as a whole.

S. E. Christiansen, Georgetown, Delaware.

BROTHER J. G. DODDS REPORTS

Akron, Ohio

Many worthy and interesting events have transpired since our last report. I shall try to give you some of the high spots in these events.

Guest speakers who have been with us are—Rev. E. M. Riddle, General Secretary of the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church and Secretary-Treasurer of the Ohio District Mission Board, spoke in behalf of the Ashland College on Educational Day; Rev. Charles Munson, National Youth Director; Rev. E. H. Reid, pastor of the Akron Hebrew Mission; and Mr. Steiner, of the Gideons, delivered the address at the Laymen's public service.

Steps from the street up to the church have been installed; drive opened into the parking lot, and the cable laid for the installation of an outside bulletin board. The parsonage and garage have been dressed up with a new coat of paint, and paint has been ordered for another coat on the church building.

Because Sunday School classes are getting too large for efficient work, two new classes were organized on October 1st, and others will need to be established in the near future. Finding space in our little building is now beginning to be a problem. One class which has grown to an enrollment of 18 is crowded into a room about 12x15. At a recent meeting of our Brethren Youth Organization, thirty young people were present. The pastor has set a goal of fifty to be reached during the year 1950.

Flora, Indiana Revival Meeting

In response to a call from the Flora Brethren Church, the writer spent the first two weeks of October assisting their pastor, Rev. J. Edgar Berkshire in a Revival Campaign. We were grateful for this privilege of laboring with this good pastor and the good people of the Flora church. It was a joy to see the members of the church coming to the parsonage to discuss various problems with their pastor, and to see them departing with new hope and new courage. Of course we dined out and I am convinced that Indiana chickens are just as good, if not better, than Ohio chickens.

Thursday of the second week, one of the District W. M. S. Rallies was held in the Flora church. The W. M. S. representative attendance was larger than it was at a similar rally twelve years ago. This was a privilege that I had not anticipated—former acquaintances from Mexico, Denver, Peru and Twelve Mile were there by the car load. Ministers—Hanna, Swihart, Gable, and Higgins brought delegations to the services. Also local ministers from other churches in the community attended frequently—one night nine preachers were present including pastor and evangelist. Flora is the home of Brother W. T. Lytle and Brother J. W. Brower—these Elders were back of the pastor and the meetings 100% and in there working all the time. Their interest and support was inspiring and encouraging. The pastor is reporting visible results.

Toward the end of the second week it was a great privilege to have a new experience. The pastor brought in a wire recording machine, and then at the parsonage after the evening service I heard two of my sermons preached back at me.

Akron, Ohio, Again

I was in my own pulpit Sunday, October 23rd, and then began a BIBLE STUDY REVIVAL MEETING in our own church Sunday, October 31. Sixteen services were held, closing Sunday, November 13th, with Communion service on Monday night, following a baptism service. Seven were received into the membership of the Firestone Park Brethren Church—two by baptism and five by statement of faith, having previously been baptized by trine immersion.

The average attendance for the two weeks was 53; there being 110 different people, besides children, who attended during the two weeks; and 17 people who attended every service. We think the attendance would have been better if the city had not had our street blocked off in construction of a water-main project. One night Rev. John Byler brought a delegation from Louisville church—thank you! Our own chorister, Oliver M. Parker conducted the services, Mrs. Mamie Smith was the pianist, and the pastor preached the sermon, while the membership prayed and did personal work.

The Communion Service was a rich experience. The attendance was the largest of any Communion Service since the church was organized, and there were sixteen people who observed the Communion in the Firestone Park Brethren Church for the first time.

Plans for the future are for bigger and better achievements: The second term of leadership training class will begin shortly, looking to having a corps of teachers holding diplomas; a Christmas program; Watch-night service; programs by the choir; every member striving to attain definite goals; and new converts becoming members of the church week to week. And the erection of the main Church Building, to face Archwood Street, just as soon as possible—the FUND is already started. Gifts from individuals, organizations and other churches will be greatly appreciated. We covet your prayers.

The Mission Board has helped us materially in the purchase of a parsonage, the building of the first church unit, and in its continuous assistance in carrying on the work in Akron. This is a great field, opportunities are beyond measure, and the work should go forward with ever increasing impetus to occupy the field. Brethren who may have cause to be in Akron over any week-end are requested to worship with us in the little church at the corner of East Archwood and Virginia.

J. G. Dodds.

UDELL, IOWA

To all our friends out there in the U. S. A.—Greetings:

After a very busy summer and fall season, in which we observed all the special days and their offerings, along with their teachings and usefulness, we climaxed with a two weeks revival, in charge of Rev. Clayton Berkshire of New Lebanon, Ohio.

The Berkshires came on October 14th and stayed until the 31st. Our people soon learned to love the whole family, and were thrilled to listen to the three children sing little choruses. Mrs. Berkshire played her violin along with the regular singing. Rev. Berkshire proved himself a splendid song leader and a firm preacher of the Gospel. Our local people equipped an empty house in which they made their home. The Lord sent the means by which they were well cared for in every way, and we praise Him for it all.

The "lift" by these Gospel services were very manifest throughout, and we praise the Lord for His goodness. People came from far and near.

Our Annual Homecoming service was held on November 6th, with good attendance and fellowship. Rev. George T. Ronk was our guest speaker for the sixth consecutive year. The offerings for the Lord were almost sufficient to make needed repairs at the Manse and also to add an oil heating plant to keep the inmates warm in cold weather. The "Acre for the Lord" idea is still in vogue and some of our people are happy to follow in its train.

September 30th we closed our sixth year on this very worthy field. We are happy at some of the victories won and some prospects which are ahead. Of course we have had disappointments, but they shall not deter our aims. One more big goal we have in mind is an Annex to the church property some day. Some of our new additions of workers have been very helpful and we hope we can enlist others soon.

The laity had charge of a morning service recently and a guest speaker came in the evening, while the minister and his wife made a tour of Nebraska—he preaching one night at Carleton, a former parish, and spending a night in Omaha, Waymore, and Topeka, Kansas.

Another goal we have reached is the Lord sent us enough funds from far and near to purchase 100 new hymn books. Isn't it wonderful HOW the Lord provides?

We were pleased to have Rev. and Mrs. C. Y. Gilmer and E. W. Hendrix and wife, with us one night. Brother Gilmer preached for us to a good sized group. They were touring the west.

Our people surprised us one evening in honor of our sixty-ninth birthday, and thirty-one people made quite an event of fellowship, along with a generous cash gift, which helped us some in purchasing a new Dodge. We like it.

Our general health is improved somewhat, and we can praise the Lord for His keeping.

W. R. Deeter.

WARSAW, INDIANA

The Pastor Reports

The Three-fold Communion service November 20, brought to a close our two weeks revival services here in Warsaw. Since the corresponding secretary is to give a report on the meeting I will give just some of the statistics of what has been said by all to have been a very profitable meeting for all—especially due to the renewed interest of many old members who started to come again and thus helped us go over our attendance goal. There were 12 who were in attendance every night and many who missed only one service. Several neighboring churches visited us and we enjoyed their fellowship. Our total attendance was 1,478.

On Wednesday of the second week Mr. Harold Kelly, on his second time to the meetings came forward. The next night, from the Boys' Brotherhood, led by Mr. Neil Bennett and Mr. Owen Horn, there were five boys who came forward. The next night twins, boy and girl, came forward and then on Sunday morning Mrs. Florence Roberts and her son came forward. These eleven were then baptised at the close of the morning service.

We appreciated the generosity of those people who brought in all kinds of food to the parsonage and helped in many ways plus a generous offering. Mrs. Beekley led the congregational singing and taught choruses and Harry Robbins led the choir and arranged the special music. During these meetings too, assisted by Dr. W. I. Duker, we anointed Beverly Summy, who is a patient in Elkhart General Hospital, a victim of polio. We ask your prayers on behalf of this fine girl who cheerfully but slowly is on the road to recovery.

Another service that was held was the dedication of our new altar table with the candle holders, being dedicated in memory of Mrs. Cleo Copeland, who had been a faithful worker in the church, Sunday School and W. M. S.

We now feel very much at home here in the Northern District of Indiana and look forward to further work and progress in the Warsaw Brethren Church. When you travel route 30, you are welcome an stop and visit at the parsonage, or at the church if you pass this way on Sunday.

E. J. Beekley, pastor.

The Corresponding Secretary Reports

Perhaps the Warsaw Church does not deserve space again, so soon—but "when your heart is filled with praise, you can't keep back the song." The past two weeks have been full of revealing, uplifting fellowship and we are bubbling over and ready to share it with those of like faith and all those who are interested in the progress of the church.

The weather in Northern Indiana has remained favorable, so from November 6th to 20th inclusive, our pastor, Rev. E. J. Beekley has "rightly divided the word of truth" to attentive audiences, which increased from night to night, until on Sunday the crowd reached and over stepped the number for which the intercessory prayer group were definitely praying. Much visiting has been done by Rev. Beekley since his arrival here, also by lay members. Many came to the services who had been drifting more or less away from regular church attendance, to renew their hold "on that which is good." New folk were attracted by the Biblical preaching of Rev. Beekley, the fine hymns, choruses, and point talks of Mrs. Beekley, and the choir music and specials directed by Mr. Harry Robbins.

Sunday, November 20th was a gloriously full day. Included in the morning service was a dedication of a new altar table and appointments. These were given by different groups. In particular the handle holders were given by the Friendship Class in memory of a beloved faithful worker, Mrs. Cleo Copeland. Words cannot actually describe the beauty and uplift of this symbol dedication as prepared and presented by pastor and people. Rev. Beekley then brought the message on the sermon subject, "Marks of a Living Church." This was evangelistic in every way, a message to be understood both by children and adults—pointing the way to Christ. Again the work of the Holy Spirit was evident in the response to the invitation to accept Christ. The results—at 11:15 A. M. the pastor, Rev. Beekley, administered the rites of baptism to eleven applicants. These are the visible results, but who can say how far reaching the glory of this awakening and renewal of fellowship may shine?

Holy Communion was observed at 7:00 P. M. with a large attendance. As "they sang a song and went out" hearts were lifted with praise and thanks to a most gracious God for His loving kindness and His continued Guidance. Special Thanksgiving Services will be held in this church Sunday, November 27th.

HARVEST HOME SERVICE AT OAKVILLE, INDIANA

Early this year, when the Committee on Special Days in the Church met to set the dates and to name committees for the various special services of the church year, it was decided to add to the list of special programs a Harvest Home Day—this service to be held on November 18th. It is with a great deal of joy that we submit this brief report concerning this new service in the Oakville program.

The church auditorium was appropriately decorated with corn-shocks, autumn flowers and leaves, and ears of corn. As the folks came to the church they brought with them contributions of foodstuffs—canned and fresh, as a thank-offering to the Heavenly Father for the bountiful harvests which He provided this year. As these contributions poured in they were placed at the front of the church where all could see them.

The speaker of the morning was a new-comer to the brethren here, but he was not long a stranger. Brother Harold Burnett, a graduate of Riverside School at Lost Creek, Kentucky, and now a pre-ministerial student at Ashland College, was with us for the occasion. At the morning hour Harold brought a most interesting and most inspiring message—dealing especially with the work at Lost Creek; and he also won his way into the hearts of the Oakville brethren with his singing.

We had a two-fold purpose in inviting Brother Harold to this service. In the first place the folks here were interested in hearing some first-hand information about the work at Lost Creek, and secondly, we felt that this would be a real incentive to the Thanksgiving Home Missions Offering to be lifted November 20th. On both counts Harold more than filled the bill. We would recommend this young man to all of our churches desiring a message and a speaker different from the everyday. A fine group of Oakville folks turned out to participate in this service.

On Tuesday, November 15th, the pastor and our two co-superintendents, Charlie Kern and Charles Holsinger, left Oakville to deliver all of the goods brought to the Harvest Home Service to the Drushals at Lost Creek, Kentucky. We were very warmly received by the workers at Riverside, and spent a most enjoyable afternoon, evening, and following morning at that place. The writer was privileged to speak to the students at the chapel service on Wednesday morning. Brother Drushal was a fine guide and a most courteous host.

Harvest Home Day presents a wonderful opportunity for Christian people—and especially rural folks—to show their appreciation and their love to the One who is the Giver of every good gift. We hope that it will become a permanent feature in this church's program.

Henry Bates, pastor.

AT BRYAN, OHIO

In our more than forty years of service in the church, as pastor and evangelist, we have never had finer treatment and a more appreciative group of folks to address than at Bryan during the first two weeks of November. They are surely tops when it comes to doing and saying nice things to a worker on the field. Their hospitality was most excellent and their THANK YOU gift at the close of the meetings was such as to show their appreciation in a material way.

For the two weeks we held forth each evening except Saturday and also spoke at other times and places. On the first Tuesday evening the Laymen held a special service after the evening meeting and the evangelist was asked beforehand to speak to them. This was done and again appreciation of the effort was demonstrated. On the First Thursday afternoon the W. M. S. had the evangelist to bring them a message. On both Sunday mornings we spoke over the radio at the regular Bryan Brethren Church hour. It was also our privilege to teach a Sunday School class one Sunday morning and the second Sunday to bring an illustrated talk to the Primary-Junior group of the Sunday School. Also at one C. E. meeting a short talk was given at the request of the leader. All in all, we had a busy time in speaking to all and sundry. But our desire had always been to be used to the full when on such services.

The evangelist had his home at the parsonage and he was told right off the reel to make himself at home, and he did just that. Brother and Sister Black are busy folks in the work of the Master and that pleased the writer. They have a very nice church both as to house and congregation. And they have a great lot of musical talent which was used during the meetings in many ways. Their chorister, Brother Ronald Scott, is a loyal brother indeed. We enjoyed his fine cooperation in the meetings and found him on hand on time all the time. Every one seemed to want to do his or her level best to make the meetings go across well, and they did. It takes more than just an evangelist to bring a successful meeting. As Rudyard Kipling would put it, it takes the everlasting team work of every loyal soul. The "LOYAL" is mine, it sounds better than the word used by Kipling.

The evangelist and pastor and wife were entertained in the homes of the good folks of the church and what entertainment it was. We could easily have overeaten, for it was there. And sometimes I am inclined to believe that Brother Black did indulge rather well. Far be it from the writer to do such. We must say again that in every way the evangelist was treated in the finest kind of way and he surely enjoyed the fellowship and opportunity to serve them. Our prayer is that they may continue to enjoy the efforts of the speaker and that the revival which we believe did come in a big way will continue throughout their lives.

Thanks again to Brother and Sister Black for their kindness and open house hospitality and also to every one who in any way helped make the meeting the pleasant time together that it was. Brother Black will very likely give you a word about how it appeared from the viewpoint of the pastor and church. So until we meet again, may God's richest blessings come to those dear Bryan folks and their pastor and his helpmate.

E. L. Miller, Pastor-Evangelist.

ASHLAND, OHIO

Sunday, November 20th, saw the closing of a week's service which came as a climax of the city-wide National Christian Teaching Mission, with its attendant religious census and the holding of such meetings like as ours in the individual churches of the city. Our church felt that since Brother Charles Munson was so closely identified with the youth movement in our denomination, and especially at the college, that he would be the proper one to conduct this special week of services. We were in no way disappointed in our choice. He drew fine audiences, the best we have had at special services of this nature for many years. Nor was his preaching in vain, for there were six first time confessions during the course of the week of service. Brother Munson's messages were straight to the point, delivered in his own inimitable manner. The church has been profited by the week thus spent, we all feel sure.

The "Mission" is to be continued under a committee composed of a representative from each organization of the church, whose duty it will be to see that contacts are made with those who are found to be prospects for church and Sunday School attendance and membership.

At the close of the last service on Sunday evening, Brother H. H. Rowsey, Ashland pastor, had the unique privilege of receiving the evangelist, Brother Munson and his wife, into membership of the Ashland Church, by letter from the Second Brethren Church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Huntington, Indiana. With the return of Brother and Sister Gilmer from their recent trip, we are again getting the Huntington bulletins and again will be able to include the "items" from that church. Here are some of them:

"The Gilmers returned Thursday (November 3) at 1:00 P. M., having traveled 8,600 miles in 31 days. They spent four days in California, four in Texas and seven in Florida. In all they were in 19 different states and in Mexico." We will recall that the Gilmers made the trip with Brother and Sister Wright Hendrix of Burlington, Indiana. We are glad for their safe return.

We note that Brother Gilmer and James Maxton recently were instrumental in the organization of a Boys' Brotherhood at Huntington, with six charter members. The following officers were elected: President—Larry Minniear; Vice President—Mauri Steward; Secretary-Treasurer—James Stahl. Several of the boys attended the Boys' Brotherhood convention at Goshen recently.

The Huntington Laymen recently elected officers at their annual meeting as follows: President—Walter G. Nolan; Vice President—A. J. Trainer; Secretary-Treasurer—Arthur Stahl. The Laymen had a fish fry on December 6th.

A new furnace has been installed in the Huntington parsonage.

New Lebanon, Ohio. On Sunday evening, November 13th, a service of ordination was held for the following as deacons and deaconesses: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bisset, Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Musselman and Mrs. Harvey Dafler. Assisting Brother W. C. Berkshire, the pastor, was Brother S. M. Whetstone, Dayton pastor, and Brother Floyd Sibbert, Pleasant Hill pastor, the latter bringing the ordination message.

The Sisterhoods of the New Lebanon Church recently conducted the morning worship hour, having as their guest speaker, Miss Janet King, of Elkhart.

Brother W. C. Berkshire was a recent speaker at the Montgomery County C. E. Convention, which was held at the Drexel E. U. B. Church.

The Miami Valley Brethren Youth Rally is scheduled for the New Lebanon Church on Sunday, December 11th.

The New Lebanon W. M. S. met with the West Alexandria W. M. S. at the latter church for their Mission Study.

Pittsburgh, Penna. We note that Mrs. Elmer Keck was the guest speaker for the W. M. S. Public Service on Sunday, December 4th. Also that Brother E. M. Riddle was a recent guest speaker at a morning hour. Brother Alvin Grumbling, recently installed pastor, says that the work is getting off to a good start.

Ten young people from the Pittsburgh church attended the Youth Rally at the Johnstown Second Church recently.

Meyersdale, Penna. Brother W. S. Benshoff, Meyersdale pastor, reports a fine time with the Gospel team from Ashland College over the Thanksgiving week end. He says, "They made their home at the parsonage." We are sure that the entertainment they received at the hands of the Benshoffs was of the best.

Brother Benshoff reports the Educational offering from the Meyersdale church to have been $125.70.

Stockton, Calif. The annual Thanksgiving services of the city, divided into four districts, found one of these at our Stockton Church. Rev. Homer H. Miller was the speaker. The service was in charge of Brother Charles E. Johnson.

Thanks, Brother Johnson, for the bulletin which contained a poem (?) which was written by the Editor. We had forgotten that we wrote it.

Flora, Indiana. The Southern Indiana District Youth Rally was held at the Flora Church on November 25th. Dale and Norma Roesch were the principal speakers. The ladies of the W. M. S. served the meals. They evidently measured the folks as they came in and charged them one cent per inch of their height. Forty-six were present for the evening banquet.

November 20th marked the beginning of the third year of service for the Berkshires at the Flora Church.

A fellowship supper was held on Sunday evening, December 4th, the occasion being the welcoming of the new members of the church. A brief devotional program was rendered, followed by a religious motion picture.

Brother Berkshire says that ten men from the Flora Laymen's Organization attended the Laymen's meeting at Burlington recently and that in all there were 122 in attendance.

SUCCESS

BY CHANCE I picked up an old note book in one of my desk drawers and as I turned its pages I came across a notation which I had made of a motto that I had seen somewhere in my travels and had jotted down. It ran like this:

“Coming together is a Beginning;
Keeping together is Progress;
Working together is Success.”

And beneath the above words was another sentence, evidently noted at the same time and place. It read:

“He who is too busy to go to church is busier than God wants him to be.”

It was quite evident that I thought the two tied together, for I had so marked them.

As usual these words set me to thinking!

Everything must have a beginning. The only exception to this is that of the Eternal Triune God—The Father, Son and Holy Spirit. We read that “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” We call the first book of the Bible “The Book of Beginnings.” There are a lot of “firsts” to be found in the Bible, such as the first human beings; the first children; the first sin of humanity; the first case of envy which led to the first murder—and so we might go on and on.

New ideas translated into new activities have their first time of usefulness to the human race—or vice versa. Those of us who have been privileged to live in the latter part of the past century and thus far in the present century, have had untold experiences in “firsts”—electric appliances, telephones, automobiles, air planes, radio, television, advance in the active control of diseases, and many other things too numerous to mention. All of these came into being because of a “coming together” of minds and physical forces before unknown, although always possible if approached rightly.

But in each instance, if progress was to be made, it was necessary to “keep together” in the advancement of the particular purpose in view. Greater advancements have been made in science because men and women have thought together along the same line. Our greatest advancements have been made, sad to say, when war was in progress and the nations were a unit in working on problems which would advance or progress toward a given objective. Problems arose because new avenues of unexplored scientific endeavor were constantly being opened, thus necessitating the exploration of other neglected areas in the same field. The results—progress in this field hitherto unknown.

All of which made it vitally essential that every one work together to bring about success.

But the “fly in the ointment” has been that the most vital part of life, that of the religious and spiritual, has been woefully neglected. If the same emphasis and view to importance had been placed on the spiritual possibilities that has been placed upon the material, what a different world this would be today. The trouble is that the church does not realize that it is in a warfare even more serious in its repercussions than was either found in World War I or World War II, or, in fact, any war that yet might arise.

The almost trite saying that “Success cannot be spelled without ‘U,’” must be applied to the church in a renewed manner in these days. If we would remember that God is eternally alive, and always ready to help us with the problems of life—that each day there must “begin” in us a new effort to do His bidding; that it is in Him that the “Guiding power” is to be found, and not in frail human plans and purposes; that genuine “success” is not to be evaluated in the plaudits of human hands, but in the “well done thou good and faithful servant,” and that the real “blue ribbon” of the prize winner is not to be found in gold and silver, but in the gracious command of “enter thou into the joy of thy Lord,” then and then only, will we find that we will never be too busy to attend to the matters that pertain to Christ and His Church. And we will never be “too busy” to go to church.

Think it over!

News of Interest from Here and There

Rejoicing In Hope

I UNDER THE ABOVE TITLE Dr. Robert J. McMullen writes concerning the Christian Colleges in China. What he writes does not leave a very pretty picture, but at the same time it does express the faith and the confidence of the Christian workers in this land of unrest. Dr. McMullen writes as follows in the little magazine, "China Colleges":

"All but one of the Christian Colleges in China are now under a Communist regime, and this one may become so by Christmas. Why rejoice? What hope? The reports from the Colleges are presented in various publications. These reports describe the work as continuing much as before, with very largely the same staffs and curricula, with almost normal enrollment, and with no interference with religious worship and activities. Why shouldn't there be rejoicing? So hopeful have some Christians become that they are more than optimistic; they are enthusiastic. They rejoice in hope.

"But the experiences of the past months give evidence that all is not well. Applying their doctrine of religious freedom as a guarantee in their new constitution, the Communists demand that students and faculty be free to accept or reject, to advocate or denounce, Christianity. They require that along with courses in the Christian religion, for which credit can be given, there must also be presented the Marxist ideology of atheism and dialectical materialism. Together with traditional courses, which are still allowed, must be taught Communist thinking in the social sciences.

"Although so far there has been very little interference with the selection of staff, student discipline, financial control, and other important aspects of college administration, there is no certainty that present favorable conditions will continue. The fundamental difference is in ideology. The conflict is between God and mammon; between Christ and Caesar. At any time this may precipitate a crisis or even a reign of terror, though it may be that their age-long training in social adjustments will enable the Chinese to avoid such a catastrophe. Should it come, it would place these Chinese Christians in the category of the persecuted Roman Church to which Paul wrote when he significantly linked his injunction to 'rejoice in hope' with one to be 'patient in tribulation.' As we join our colleagues in China in their rejoicing, we must be prepared to share their tribulations with real patience.

"After all, this is real hope—based not on the favor of any political group, but on God Himself—that, as Paul so strikingly declares, 'in everything, God is working for good with those who love Him' to 'overcome evil with good'—even in Communist China. Unless we are convinced of this, we have joined the Communists in their atheism and in their materialistic interpretation of history. Four hundred and seventy-five million people are still in China. Their need remains, and God's love for them is still 'unspeakable.' To join Him in meeting this need is our calling.

"Lest this program should seem to everyday people theoretical and impractical, Paul enjoins the Roman Christians to 'contribute to the needs of the saints.' Of the early Church it is recorded that 'there was not a needy person among them, for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them and brought the proceeds of what was sold and laid it at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made to each as any had need.' This was not Communism, but Christianity being practiced. Our world is terribly in need of this spirit at work. The Christian Colleges in China provide a God-given opportunity to: 'Rejoice in hope—be patient in tribulation, be constant in prayer, contribute to the necessity of the saints.' Romans 12:12 and 13 (R.S.V.)."

We see by the above that the usual tactics employed by the Communists is taking form—a form of practically enforced education in the Communist ideas and ideology—that form which is antichrist in its every aspect. They say, in words, "Here is your opportunity to choose the courses you desire, but be sure that your choices agree with our choice for you." It is equivalent to saying that "Here is good life-building food, but if you know what is good for you you will not choose it, but rather you will do well to choose that food we have provided—food that will in the end starve your body and soul and in the end lead you away from the Great Physician who knows the cure and soul-building fare that can save your souls for eternity." Of course they do not complete the sentence as we have, but end their charge with the word "provided" above.

Keep poor torn China on your prayer list.

NOW NOTE A DIFFERENT ASPECT

From the "Good News Broadcaster" we quote several paragraphs. The first of these is titled: "Ethiopians Build New Evangelical Church."

"Aided by a $30,000.00 gift from Emperor Haile Selassie, the Ethiopian Evangelical Society is erecting a new church in the heart of Addis Ababa, Ethiopia's capital city.

"The new church, which is expected to cost about $65,000.00 has been named Mekane Iyesus, or 'House of Jesus.' When completed it will have places for 800 persons.

"Begun about fifty years ago, evangelical work in Ethiopia is reported to be growing steadily. Several evangelical congregations are active in the country at the present time."

Here "freedom of worship" means exactly that. There are no rules set down as to choosing between God and mammon; no coercive measure set forth to compel any one to make such a choice. What a difference!

Joy that isn't shared with someone else dies young.

AN OPEN LETTER ON SOMETHING NEW IN THE VISUAL EDUCATION FIELD

(The following letter was sent to the Hallmark Production Company of Wilmington, Ohio, by Brother C. F. Zimmerman, Audio-Visual Director for The National Sunday School Association. He passes it on to you as a personal comment on the picture.)

* * *

Muncie, Indiana November 2, 1949

Hallmark Productions, Inc.
Wilmington, Ohio.

The following is an official, accurate, and complete report on the screening of your Religious Picture, "THE LAWTON STORY," at a private showing. Comments:

"I am going to unreservedly recommend this picture to the Brethren denomination—even to those who have scruples about religious motion pictures."

This was my comment on the Lawton Story of "The Prince of Peace" the screen's first great passion play depicting entirely in beautiful color the story and life of Jesus.

W. O. Bowman, a deacon in the First Brethren Church, and myself went to preview this film expecting to see just another religious picture. But, instead, we found a heart warming and emotion touching portrayal of life. Both of us recommend that you see this passion play.

But first let's go back a quarter century to the home of a minister who has been told that he has just one year to live because of a bad heart. He has a very small church and little interest is shown by the congregation. One Easter Sunday morning the thirteen people in the Easter drama decided to put it on out-of-doors. Passersby stop and watch. Year after year it grows until the size of the audience makes it necessary to take it to the mountains outside of the Oklahoma town. This was in 1930. In 1934 the U. S. government became interested in this outstanding project and built a replica of parts of Jerusalem for them to use. The attendance has been growing ever since until the last attendance was over one half million.

The Little Rock Church in Lawton, Oklahoma is still sponsoring this drama. Now it has been brought to life in the film so that people all over the world may see it. There are no professional actors in the cast. Some of the amateurs in the cast have been in every one of the twenty-four performances that have been given and they portray the parts beautifully. Protestants, Jews and Catholics from 32 southwestern United States towns co-operated in making the cast of thousands possible.

It is filmed in beautiful natural color and I predict that you will love it and recommend that others see it. The King of Kings in 1927 was the last outstanding religious feature. This picture will be shown in our theatres on the large screen and will be controlled so that people will not be coming in or going out during the devotional scenes.

The Rev. Mark Wallett, pastor and originator of the passion play, played the part of Jesus in every one but the last presentation. His dream was to see it filmed. He lived to see this dream completed and then passed away in December. The film will be an outstanding tribute to a man who with little future—according to the doctors—did an outstanding work of creative achievement for the Christian Church.

Children will like the story because of little six-year-old Ginger Prince, a modern little girl, in a modern setting. And I feel certain that you, too, will like little Miss Prince.

I'd like to recommend that you read the words of Jesus and his life as it appears in the gospels before you go to see this great religious drama. It will make it live for you.

This is unquestionably the best religious film I have ever seen.

Yours truly,

Chester F. Zimmerman

Audio-visual director, National S. S. Association.

Years ago in London there was a large gathering of noted people, and among the invited guests was a famous preacher of his day, Caesar Milan. A young lady played and sang charmingly and everyone was thrilled. Very graciously, tactful and yet boldly the preacher went up to her after the music had ceased and said, "I thought as I listened to you tonight how tremendously the cause of Christ would be benefited if your talents were dedicated in His cause. You know, young lady, you are as much sinner in the sight of God as a drunkard in the ditch or a harlot on Scarlet Street, but I am glad to tell you that the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son can cleanse from all sin." The young lady snapped out a rebuke for his presumption. He said, "Lady, I mean no offense. I pray God's spirit will convict you." They all returned to their homes. The young woman retired but could not sleep. The face of the preacher appeared before her and his words rang through her mind. At two o'clock in the morning she sprang from her bed, took a pencil and paper and with tears dripping from her face Charlotte Elliott wrote that famous poem:

"Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
Lamb of God, I come, I come!"

—Billy Graham, in "Great Gospel Sermons" (Revell).

Our White Gifts He Gave - Will You?

Delbert B. Flora, Director of Education

LET US COMBINE two verses, John 3:16 and 1:12, in this manner: "... God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life ... as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

We emphasize he gave to make the thought stand out. God gave His Son to and for men in the fullest sense of the word. He gave in order that He could then give again. He gave Christ as our Redeemer and then through that redemption He gave to us sonship and eternal life.

This is real giving. Man has nothing to present before his Maker which is acceptable in itself. But God gave to man a Redeemer, and through Him Redemption, and now the redeemed can yield through the Redeemer a life and service to his heavenly Father. But we have reason to believe that when we present our lives as living sacrifices, "holy, acceptable unto God," we perform a reasonable and spiritual service (Romans 12:1).

Your National Sunday School Association is also dependent upon you for your gifts. It has nothing of itself. And in the degree in which you give to its work you, the Brethren Church and your young people will benefit from the services of the Association.

The Association has served in the past in more ways than many people realize. For example, the printing of a book by Rev. John F. Locke, "Christian Education and the Alcohol Problem." And another, containing the writings of Alexander Mack, founder of Tunkerism, was edited by Professor M. A. Stuckey, when he was Director of Education, and printed under the sponsorship of the Association. There are other booklets on Bible study and Brethren doctrines which were printed by the Association. All these materials are in stock in our Ashland office and available to the Brethren Church.

The supervision and grading and accrediting of Teacher Training courses continues throughout the year. A number of Sunday School Institutes were conducted last year, of which you may read elsewhere. The Association has for years contributed to the financial support of Religious Education at Ashland College.

Another service has been extended for years, that of supplying ministerial students with books for their libraries, which they will use later in their pastorates, at wholesale cost. It is to be noted that this is valuable service. For example, last year our office was able to sell a set of books, which retails at $35.00 for $23.00. Ten Seminary students availed themselves of the opportunity.

A new project is being sponsored this current year, of which you have read several times in The Evangelist, that of Visual Aids. We are in position to get such supplies at a large saving for Brethren churches and Sunday Schools. Please, note that there is no profit in these services for the Association. Only a small charge is made in addition to wholesale prices to cover expenses of the office.

What has been done in the past will be continued in the future. In addition, there is another project which has been dreamed by the Sunday School Board for a good while. Many of you will remember that back about 1925 or 1926 Professor Stuckey travelled as the field representative for the Association. The work and influence immediately increased and doubled. We are hoping that again it may be made possible to do similar work. Certainly the field of religious education among the Brethren churches is in need of a full time field man from this Association. At least we can dream!

NOW WILL YOU GIVE IN ORDER THAT WE MAY GIVE? The White Gift Offering will be your gift to the work described above.
—Ashland, Ohio.

For The King

Our 1949 Camps

Spencer Gentle, Office Secretary and Camp Worker

IN THE SUMMER OF 1949, there were twelve camps held with a total of 725 campers, an average of 60 campers per camp. The camps held were as follows: one camp in California, two camps in Pennsylvania, one camp in Ohio, one camp in Illinois, one camp in the Southeastern District, and five camps at Shipshewana. In each of these camps there was present a representative of the National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church. Dr. L. E. Lindower was the representative in the Ohio Camp. Rev. Charles Munson was present in the two Pennsylvania Camps. Rev. C. F. Zimmerman and Spencer Gentle were the representatives in the Shipshewana Camps. Spencer Gentle was also in the California, the Illinois, the Southeast, and the Kansas camps.

All of this camp work takes money. The Association helps each camp financially in its administration, along with the traveling expenses of its Camp Manager.

If you could see the enthusiasm of the campers as they learn of God and His wonderful love, then you would realize that your gift to the White Gift offering has been well given. It is in camp that your young people learn the great lessons of the Bible. It is in camps that many find their way to God, and come to know Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour. It is in camp where many young people dedicate their lives for full-time service for God. As we know the pre-sem and the Seminary students enrolled in Ashland College and Seminary, we learn that very few of them have not made their decision for full-time service in camp. Almost every student enrolled is an old camper.

Camp work is very important to our young people. Remember that your White Gifts help in this great work.

During the past year, there have been several Sunday School Institutes held. One in Stockton, California; one in Fort Scott, Kansas; one in Falls City, Nebr.; a few in Indiana; and several in Ohio. The purpose of these Institutes is to bring before the Sunday School workers materials which are available for Sunday Schools. These institutes have been very successful.

One desire of the National Sunday School Association is to have a full-time representative on the field the year around. Perhaps this can be realized in the very near future. In so doing the Sunday School work in the Denomination will advance as well as the camp work.

Please pray much about your gift this year and give whatever the Lord has laid on your heart to give.

The following is the list of things set apart in the rededication service:

1. The redecorated churchhouse interior, including both first and second floors and balcony, pews and woodwork. The cost—$1,840.00.
2. New maroon carpet in aisles, front and rear of pews and on platform. Cost—$950.00.
3. Cleaning and re-oiling of floors.
4. Calking of exterior stucco wall seams. Cost—$50.00.
5. Painting of outdoor Bulletin Board; a new set of letters for same. Work donated by Warren Williams; cash by members of Men's Bible Class.
6. The gift of two matching flags, the gift of W. E. Andrews family as a memorial to their son, Cpl. Clayton P. Andrews, who made the supreme sacrifice in Germany in World War II on April 5, 1945.
7. Two matching upholstered antique chairs, a gift of Mrs. Vergie Gregg, in memory of Clarence E. Gregg.
8. A tall walnut pedestal and a porcelain jardeniere and matching pedestal, gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Chrismer of Los Angeles, California, in memory of Mrs. Estella Zimmerman.
9. A Pulpit Bible, the gift of the "Crusaders" Young Married Folks Sunday School Class.
10. A reconditioned electric vacuum sweeper, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. John Turpin.
11. The Woman's "Truth Seekers" Sunday School Class has as a project the purchasing of new Pulpit Furniture.
12. Some group is planning the purchase of a Pulpit Scarf and a piano scarf.

The funds had been made available so that all the improvements were paid for at the time of rededication.

Following the decision to do the work which was completed in this program, a committee was appointed to act as a "clearing house" for the projects. The committee was Therefore a campaign of money raising was begun and with fine cooperation the sum of almost $3,000.00 was made available for the work. This was a fine start, and the culmination of the whole was realized in the final rededication program, at which time the entire debt was liquidated.

Interesting Historical Facts

We are told that Elder Ed Mason was the first Shepherd of the little flock in 1883. Before their own building was erected, meetings were held in the Methodist Church, a U. B. Church and the Reformed Church (the latter building now belongs to the Church of the Brethren).

The Gratis building was erected in 1886-1887. An addition was built on the west and dedicated on January 15, 1905. The parsonage was built about 1900. A victorious revival, with an evangelist by the name of Malott, was held in 1884-1885, when sixty were baptized. There were other outstanding revivals held.

The disastrous fire of 1915 destroyed the church building. The present edifice was built at once. On the building committee were C. C. Lane, Ira Flory, Clayton Andrews, Amos Focht and David Gilbert. John Snyder of Cameron was contractor. The cost was $11,500.00. Much labor was donated.

The following is the list of pastors as far as records show: Rev. Edward Mason—1883 . . . ; Rev. Thompson—time of service unknown; Rev. J. M. Tombaugh—1889-1890; Rev. Cober—1890-1892; Rev. Martin Shively—1893-1896; Rev. Josiah Keim—1896-1900; Rev. J. C. Mackey—1900-1901; Rev. J. L. Kimmel—1901 . . . ; Rev. John Knepper—time of service unknown; Rev. George H. Jones—1910-1917; Rev. Beekley—1917-1920; Rev. Roy Brumbaugh—1921-1923; Rev. J. A. McInturff—1923-1926; Rev. O. C. Starn—1926-1930; Rev. W. H. Beachler—1930-1934; Rev. Freeman Ankrum—1934-1937; Rev. A. E. Whitted—1937-1941; Rev. V. E. Meyer—1941-1944; Rev. J. E. Berkshire—1944-1947; Rev. W. S. Crick—1948 . . . (present pastor).

"Home Coming"

The following poem was written by Bertha Street for the Homecoming and Rededication program and was printed on the frontis of the bulletin for that day.

One evening as I watched the beautiful sunset,
And thought of other days that have passed away;
I thought of our Home Comings of long, long ago,
And how different they are today.

For many who worshipped here long years ago
Have passed to the Great Beyond;
And others will soon join the white-robed throng
But their memories will still linger on.

Many new faces we see every year,
While other ones have gone away;
We shall not pass this way but once
Has been proven in many ways.

Over sixty-five years ago this little church was started
But few are left now to tell the story;
And when a few more years roll around
They, too, will be in glory.

What a great home coming that will be
When our loved ones we shall see;
We shall clasp glad hands, and shout and sing
That old refrain: "I'm a child of the King."

When we all get to heaven
What a great gathering that will be;
We shall rejoice to see our Pilot face to face,
And tell Him the old Story—We are saved by grace!

FOR A SEASON

"... to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Heb. 11:25b.

AS WE BOWL ALONG in our cars over the fine roads, it is easy to forget that we are going to have to pay for our ride some way, some time. So smoothly, so swiftly, so easily we speed along, on and on, oblivious of the fact that every added mile heaps up the cost. And most of us lose sight of the cost until we come to buy gasoline, or a new tire, or some other part of the wonderful machine which has given out. But the thing that jars us out of our complacency is trying to sell the old "jalopy" and find how little they will allow us for the "antique."

Perhaps driving a car is not sinful, but it offers some lessons for life. It is much like sin. We bowl along in the devil's automobile swiftly and pleasantly, entirely unaware of anything but that we are having a glorious time. But all the time we are piling up an expense account, and some time the bill has to be paid. And the car is headed for an eventual end on the junk-heap.

There is nothing everlasting or permanent on this earth. All things, all experiences, all enterprises are "for a season." But somehow Satan seems to be able to convince men that they can go on sinning and never get caught. They forget that the Word assures men that their sins will find them out. The pleasures of sin last but for a season, but the results and the retribution are eternal.

Thank God, though, that God has also set a time for men to accept salvation. "Behold NOW is the acceptable time, now is the day of salvation." The "season" of opportunity for making peace with God is a constant one, for it is always "NOW." And God causes the opportunity for making peace to endure as long as life lasts. "As long as the light holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return." Opportunity for salvation continues so long as man will listen to God's loving invitation. God's love is everlasting, and the pleasures of sin are but "for a season"—and how short the season!

THE BABE OF BETHLEHEM

Because a Babe was born in Bethlehem
One blessed day, long centuries ago,
The light of truth—which glimmered pale and dim
Before He came—now shines with perfect glow,
And wise men still their willing tributes pay
To Him who in a lowly manger lay!

Because a Babe was born in Bethlehem
A greater glory crowns each mother's brow;
And children, hearing how God honored them
Draw near to Him with eager spirits now!
And who can find—where'er his steps may roam—
A sweeter haven than the Christian home?

Because a Babe was born in Bethlehem
Sad hearts have learned again the joy of song,
While slaves who pined in dungeons dark and grim
Have come to march with liberty along;
And coward souls—made fearless through His Word—
Have braved derision, exile, fire, and sword.

Because a Babe was born in Bethlehem
A multitude, from every age and clime,
Shall see God's face, and with His seraphim
Sing praises to Emmanuel's name sublime.
O ransomed throng! ye well may magnify
The Lamb who died that ye might live on High!

—Robert Crumly.

THE BABE OF BETHLEHEM

Scripture: Matthew 1:18-25

MATTHEW 1:21 is the grandest announcement ever made (Isa. 7:14; Matt. 1:23). This was done that man might behold the glory of God (John 1:14, 18), and know the interpretation of God's love (John 3:16). That He was "made sin for us" (2 Cor. 5:21) was no afterthought of God (Jer. 31:3; Rev. 13:8; 1 Peter 1:18-20). This provision of pre-existent love the angels desired to look into (1 Peter 1:12), and the prophets inquired and searched diligently (1 Peter 1:10). Calvary was the working out of God's love-plan (Rom. 5:8). This was the meaning of all Old Testament types, ceremonies, and prophecies (Heb. 9:9-15). The Lamb of God was to be slain for our offenses and raised again for our justification (Rom. 4:25).

The first promise of a Redeemer is found in Gen. 3:15. The bloody rites and ceremonies of the law showed the deep-rooted sinfulness and depravity of the human heart. A substitutional sacrifice, not of an animal but of God in the person of His Son, could bridge and gulf (Gal. 4:4; 2 Cor. 5:19; Rom. 5:8-10). If we accept His love and its provision (Christ sacrificed) we are given eternal life (John 3:36). To reject this love is a most appalling sin which means to spurn the gift (John 5:40; Heb. 10:27, 31).

To accept the person of Christ as our Substitute is the only answer to man's greatest problems, which are: Comfort in the hour of sorrow (John 14:1-3); Peace with God in the forgiveness of sin (Isa. 1:18; Heb. 10:17; and Peace in the hour of death. This great salvation gives power over sin for the present (Matt. 1:21), and shall save us from the very presence of sin (1 John 3:1-3).

GOD'S MESSIAH

Lesson: Isaiah 9:2-7; 11:1-5

TODAY IS CHRISTMAS. What does it mean to you? How much time have you spent in meditation, with God's supreme Gift to the world in your thoughts? Have you sought to make this day one that is different from the remaining days of the year?

Each Sunday, as we lay aside the work of the week before and seek to look into the days of the week before us, we are, in reality, commemorating a significant event in the life of our Lord—that of the resurrection from the dead—the rising of the "First Born out from among the dead." Because we celebrate this great event each week, we are constantly being brought face to face with it and remember it with joy. But only one day in each year is set aside to remind us of His birth. Consequently we are prone to forget its real meaning. Let us see if we can make it take on a new meaning today.

Let us begin by asking ourselves a simple question—Why did He come into the world at all? What was there that made Him do it? We might put it this way: why did He come; How did He come; and, what was the result of His coming? We will approach it from six angles.

First of all, let us note that He came to fulfill the Father's purpose. We learn from our reading of God's Word that God, knowing that man would not be able to overcome evil by his own efforts, foreordained that His Son should be the "Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world." Therefore He must be born into the world before He could pay the supreme sacrifice, and we read that He (Jesus) emptied himself of his glory . . . and was made in the likeness of sinful flesh . . . —that is, was born into the world.

The second thing we note is that He came of His own free will. While He came to fulfill the Father's purpose, and at His command, He also came willingly. We find the truth of this in the words, "He gave Himself." A gift is not a gift, if it is given by compulsion.

Then in the third place we note that He "came" into a cruel world. It was a world that treated Him with all the cruelty that evil minded men could heap upon Him. Isaiah's prophecy said that "He was despised and rejected of men"; that he was a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief."

Our fourth thought deals with His reception by those to whom He was sent. He came to his own, and His own received Him not. God, with tender compassion for His chosen race, sent their Messiah—the Babe of Bethlehem—to them, that He might lead them out of bondage into freedom, and out of darkness into light. But they disregarded the prophecies which were fulfilled at His coming, and rejected His loving acts and tender mercies toward them.

In the fifth place we note that He came to seek and to save that which was lost. When the Angel announced His birth to Mary, he said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save the people from their sins." And Simeon, when he beheld Him said, "Now let thy servant depart in peace . . . for I have beheld Thy salvation"—thus knowing and acknowledging Jesus as the longed-for Messiah.

And sixth, but not at all the least thing we must remember is that He came that we might have life, and have it in greater abundance. We would not be enjoying all the blessings of today were it not for the fact that Jesus came into the world to lead us into the way of salvation. His birth would have little or no meaning otherwise. We have been led into that "more abundant life because God, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to send His Son, His only begotten Son, as a Babe born in human form, that he might grow up through all the various stages of humanity—that He might be able to understand us and help us in all our problems and difficulties.

Has He been remembered by our gifts?

CERRO GORDO, ILLINOIS, C. E.

The Young People of the Cerro Gordo Brethren Church had charge of the program on Sunday night, November 13th. After a short program, a religious film was shown, the title of which was "Choosing Rather." In this film were some folks that gave their testimony for the Lord Jesus Christ. They could have become very popular if they had chosen the way of the world. Instead they chose God's way and the way of Jesus. They found that this was the most profitable and the only way.

It was enjoyed by all who attended. We hope to have another public service in the near future, with William Boyer of Lost Creek, Kentucky, as our guest speaker.

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE ASHLAND JUNIOR C. E.

At the beginning of the school year the Junior C. E. of Ashland, Ohio, elected the following officers: President—Anne Lindower; Vice President—Deborah Newcomb; Secretary—Judy Lersch; Treasurer—Barbara Patton. Later the advisors appointed a Goals Committee. Every month the officers meet to plan the meetings and party for the coming month, and the committees meet when there is need.

At each meeting the children have a chance to put money in the "Doing Without Box." If they have done without something during the week, they put that money in the box. Later on this money will be used for local benevolent or missionary work.

In order to meet the goal on stewardship instruction, the society asked Mrs. Carl Mohler to present three different studies on the subject. She divided the topic into three things we owe to God: our money, our time, and ourselves. The children certainly do understand stewardship better than they did.

CAROL JOYFULLY

Scripture: Luke 2:1-14; Psalm 96

For The Leader

THIS DAY we are celebrating the Birthday of our Lord. It is to be hoped that He was given the chiefest place in our activities. To do anything else is to cause Him grief and heartache. He came into this world to purchase us from sin, and thus it is the least we can do to dedicate this day to a real worship of Him. The thought of His coming to purchase eternal redemption for us should also encourage us to sing the joyful carols unto Him. In fact, we shouldn't even need to be reminded to sing the carols. Such wonderful love for us should cause us to break forth spontaneously in carol singing for Him. Pity the poor heart whose redemption means so little to him that he cannot bring a day of praise to the One Whose birthday it is.

DISCUSSION

1. WHAT IS A "CAROL?" About the only time we hear of the word "carol" is around Christmas. Then we sing, play and hear "Christmas carols." Yet they are patterned after our regular hymns of the Church. Then why not call them Christmas hymns? What is there about these wonderful songs at this season of the year that merits for them this special name? In searching through the dictionary, you will discover that a carol is a hymn of religious joy. Which, we feel properly defines the word. Surely there is joy at Christmas. At least there should be joy. Pity the heart that cannot sing for joy on Christmas Day. But far too many people cannot.

2. HOW TO HAVE JOY ON CHRISTMAS DAY. What causes lack of Joy on Christmas Day? Regrets, remorse, sin, discontent, lack of faith, guilt and hidden sins. These can break the fellowship with God. What to do about them? Get on your knees before God and make things right with Him. God has promised always to hear the penitent heart as it pours out its sin and guilt. In Isaiah 55:7 it says, "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." So, for a full enjoyment on Christmas day, we must be sure that our heart is right before God. Any thought of sin, or desire for entangling alliances with the world, must be revoked. We must possess that simple, sincere faith in Christ as our Savior, realizing anew that we are His to serve and adore.

3. OUR REAL JOY IS IN HOPE. What does it mean to you when you sing the Christmas carols? Double the thrill by thinking of what all Christ has promised you, if you will walk with Him through life. He has promised happiness and joy. He has promised to care and keep. He has also promised that when this life is done, and we have walked in His way, that we shall enter into the perfect life above. That is a thought which many people miss, yet one which is extremely valuable to us today. For such a promise lends hope, assurance and joy for all who believe therein. But, young people, far too many people will never attain that perfect life because they have left sin creep into their lives; sin which has destroyed an otherwise happy fellowship and communion with God. More than that, we know when we have sinned. If we have truly been born again, and have walked in His way, we know when we have broken that fellowship. We know when sin enters in and we separate ourselves from God. That's why, to have joy on Christmas, we must forsake our sin, regardless of the cost. If we have wronged others through our sin, we must let them know we are sorry. Then real joy will enter in.

4. LIFTING THE BURDEN OF HEAVY HEARTS. One might ask why this type of topic for Christmas. Well, we know that on this day when so much joy should be had, that so little of it is really experienced. On this day of joy, more murders, suicides, crimes, and drunkenness take place than on any other day of the year. All a result of sin. Too, perhaps you won't commit murder, take your own life, or go out and get drunk, but perhaps there's a gnawing sin that keeps you from having full joy on this day. What to do about it? Go back to the place where that sin entered in. Note the first loss of joy. Then on your knees ask God to truly forgive you of that sin, for which you must also be sorry. In a matter of moments, peace, joy and happiness will enter in. Christ is the burden bearer. He said, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

5. BETWEEN US AND JOY. So many, many people today are not experiencing joy in their Christian lives, nor joy in serving Him because of the things in their lives which are against His will. Christ wants that perfect fellowship which comes from knowing that all sin has been confessed unto Him, and that you are living the true, unwavering Christian life. Then He can fill our lives with blessings of which we could not even dream. So, on this day of burdens, on this day when men's hearts are weighted under sin and guilt, let us free ourselves, let us sing a song of victory over besetting sins. Then we can truly carol joyfully. Your life, in turn will be a blessing unto others. You can then go out and touch the wounded soul that struggles in sin, and through the mercy of God, free him in the name of Jesus Christ. Then, when we are completely free from sinfulness as a master in our life, then we can have that perfect fellowship in Christ as our Master. There will be joy in serving Jesus, the days will be filled with joyful carolling, and morning, noon, and night, our hearts shall be filled with praise. Then we can say with St. Paul, "Wherefore we labour, that, whether present or absent (from the body) we may be accepted of Him." Shun the things of evil, get your heart aright with God, and sing the songs of praise on this great day. Let your friends know you are happy in Christ and share your salvation with others, as you wish one another a VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Study your mistakes.

Allow God to carry out His plans for you without anxiety or interference.

IN THE BEGINNING GOD

Scripture: Genesis 1:1-3; John 1:1-5

For The Leader

THIS IS TRULY A DAY of beginning again. The first day of the New Year. It is also the first Sunday of a New Year. It is also the first day of the second half of the twentieth century. It is January 1, 1950. There is much to fear on the horizon. Atomic warfare seems a constant threat to our civilization. There is uncertainty in our home economies and dangers of inward revolt. In brief we have endeavored to paint a picture of the present age. But the picture is now just half done. Along with that we can paint the everlasting presence of God. His love, His justice, and His mercy. This is a very fitting topic for tonight, as we shall learn that God is the beginning of all matter and life. That He is also the sustainer of our lives, and the One to which we are held accountable for all things. So, let us look at the New Year in the light of God's program for our lives. Let us be sure our lives are centered in His will, that we might fulfill our destiny.

DISCUSSION

1. GOD IS BACK OF IT ALL. Recently we read an article in which the author appeared to give additional light on the Creation story. He traced the story back to a small package of radiant light and energy that simply burst one day and filled space with worlds, stars and planets. Then he explained the process of creation through the "nebular theory" which is commonly accepted by both Bible students and science. But in going back to his small package of radiant light and energy, he was stumped for an answer as to where it came from. Do you know? Our subject tonight answers that question, "In the beginning God." That's the answer. God, the eternal Person, powerful, observant, and perfect, created life, the universe, and all energy. God is back of the universe in power. He is back of our lives in blessing or judgment.

2. GOD AND THE UNIVERSE. Mankind has not yet begun to come to the end of God's great universe with his puny telescopes. Beyond even his greatest efforts, lies more and more of God's creation. God has so arranged the elements, the law of operation that this great creation works as it should. God controls it so that we can live on the earth. A few degrees too warm or too cold, and we are very uncomfortable. He keeps it at the right temperature. A little too much oxygen or not, enough, and we could not live long on the earth. These things did not just happen. It is God's world. The materials we use, that we call food and wealth and possessions, are His. We own nothing. All that we have we have received from God, to be left behind when our spirit takes its flight. Even the fleshly body we leave behind.

3. GOD AND THE INDIVIDUAL. When God made man, He made him in the spiritual image of Himself. That is, He made man a spiritual being, eternal as God Himself. God placed that man in a human body which is to be the temple of the Spirit of God. But man sinned, condemning both his body and soul to eternal hell. Christ came and paid the redemption price with His life's blood. Thus we who believe in Christ, and follow Him, have a hope of eternal life. God has placed the beauties of nature, the wealth of the land, our talents, and everything here, that we might enjoy it and thus bring praises to His Holy Name.

4. GOD SEES ALL. "Thou God seest me" are the words spoken in Genesis. If true then, how true they must be today. God knows everything we do. Every thought, every deed and every desire. Sinners may escape punishment now, and continue in their secret lives of sin, but a day of reckoning is coming, in which the sins of men shall be openly exposed before a just and righteous God. On the other hand, knowing that God sees all should be of assurance of us as we face life's pathway of duty. To know that Christ is with us in good times and bad, is to walk with confidence. Only our own selfish sin can separate us from the love and fellowship.

5. FACING THE NEW ERA. We call this topic a new era instead of a new year. For we believe that we are facing a great challenge which shall continue as long as this age shall last. It is a challenge to each Christian to put their best foot forward in living true Christian lives of service. We do not know how long the Lord will tarry. He speaks in His word that in a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, He will come in the air and snatch the true believers from the earth. Only those who are walking the true Christian walk shall be taken. Thus it behooves each of us to walk as we should, in word, in thought, in deed. That could take place at any moment. After that, it will be too late to get into heaven, to forsake our sin, or to try to do right. The door will be closed. Or, if the Rapture is not for our life-time, it must still be remembered that there comes a time when the death angel will knock and require of us our soul. We know not when that will be, but it will take place; and that without any chance to repent of sin, or make things right with God.

6. THE BEST THING TO DO. On this New Year's night as we ponder on God and His great work in creation, redemption and eternal life, we may wonder what is the best thing to do as we face a new year. First of all, be sure within ourselves that our soul is right with God. That is the basic, fundamental truth. Then be sure that prayer and Bible Study are constant with us. Next, walk a true Christian life. Then serve your church and God with all your talents and substance. Lastly, remember we are pilgrims on a journey of life, the end of which is God, in blessing or judgment. The Devil devises many cunning tricks to ruin our testimony, our soul's salvation and our hope of heaven. Through prayer and watchfulness, overcome the Devil. Make of your life a blessing to God and your fellowmen. Then you will truly have a HAPPY NEW YEAR.

If a hundred members of a church each gave a postage stamp a day they could support a missionary.

Tearless hearts can never be heralds of the passion. We must pity if we would redeem.

What an opportunity is before us to "sing praises unto the Lord."

Heated individual competition went on in the form of a contest, stressing Bible memory work and increase in membership. The contest ended with the last Sunday in October.

A systematic Bible reading was planned for November. The children read a portion of the Bible every day, using a guide sheet made up by the advisors. This helped them to read the Bible systematically.

A public program presented the work of the organization at a service before the local congregation on October 9th.

Every week the Vice President makes a poster telling of the meeting for that Sunday. This keeps the children interested.

SHINN. Walter Shinn of the Loree community was called very suddenly from the scenes of earth to his eternal home on November 2nd at the age of seventy-one years. Brother Shinn had been a very loyal faithful member of the Loree Brethren church since young manhood. He served in the office of deacon for many years and was Superintendent of the Bible School for thirty-five years. He served his county as auditor for a period of eight years. At the time of his going he was Vice-President of the Southern District Laymen's Organization. He also served for a period of eleven years as president of the Miami County Council of Religious Education. It is thus evident that a great and good man has been taken from the church and the community. The world needs just such men as was Walter Shinn. May others be raised up who will find their place in the various activities of the church that were so precious to his heart and to his entire life. His life will live on in the lives of all who have made an acquaintance with him.

In 1906 he was united in marriage to Velma Jackson, who with a son Beveridge, survive. Their home was beautiful and lovely home where Christ was the Head and where was every evidence that He was pleased to dwell. May a kind loving Heavenly Father care for, and comfort every heart until in the morning of a new and better day they shall share with him in all the glory that awaits the faithful.

The last rites were conducted in the Loree Brethren church on Lord's Day, November 6th, in keeping with his his own arrangements. The great throng of people present was a testimony of the esteem in which he was held in the church and the community. The undersigned, a long time close friend of Brother Shinn, brought the message from the theme, "To depart—is far Better," being assisted in the service by Brother Robert Higgins, pastor of the church.

News From Our Churches

FALLS CITY, NEBRASKA

Greetings to our Brethren in the other Brethren communities. Our Homecoming was held on September 18th, with Rev. Franz, field man for McPherson College, as our guest speaker. Many greetings were read from former pastors and members.

Promotion exercises were held on September 28th, with an appropriate program.

Five from the Falls City church attended the Mid-West District Conference at Cheyenne, Wyoming, which began on October 2nd.

On October 16th our fall revival opened with our pastor, Rev. H. E. Eppley, as the evangelist. He brought us some true gospel messages on the way of salvation, emphasizing our Brethren beliefs. One Junior girl and a young man from the Intermediate department of our Sunday School answered the invitation and were baptized before prayer meeting on November 2nd.

Our communion was held on Sunday evening, November 6th. Even with the children participating, it was a very quiet, reverent service.

The Woman's Missionary Society are planning their Public Service program for Sunday evening, December 4th.

REVIVAL AT MANSFIELD, OHIO

Cities come to life and take on personality when one learns to know people in them. I have passed through Mansfield more than any other city, but always it was just another city, a milestone on my journey, until October when I was called to the Mansfield Brethren for a meeting. Now it is a city come to life. Now as I pass through the city, even though I cannot stop, a long list of names and eager faces will bob up before me. These friends, stalwart soldiers of the faith, stood shoulder to shoulder with me night after night as, together, we endeavored to pull brands from the burning. Yes, and we shall never forget the shining faces of some who heard the call of the Spirit and answered. Now they enjoy the life eternal. It was most inspiring to see folks who were at the altar one night, present at the pre-prayer service the next evening, praying earnestly and audibly to the Lord who saved them.

It has been a long time since I had the privilege of being backed up by the prayers of so large a prayer group night after night. They were on the job every night and everybody prayed. They were indeed a power band. Best of all it was not a new experience for them. They continue in prayer.

What a thrill it was to hear the Mansfield folks sing night after night. Having fellowshiped with them in prayer and inspirational gospel singing it would have been next to impossible not to endeavor to give one's best from the pulpit. Especially did I note and appreciate the young people who filled the choir loft. Their very presence was witness to the fact that they had turned down many other calls for their presence and service in the city. We thank God that they had the courage to put their Lord first. Mrs. Carrithers did a most efficient piece of work in leading the song service and furnishing special music for every service. No one could ask for better support than was given in this field of evangelism.

Mrs. Carrithers is also a most efficient and consecrated minister of the gospel. The Mansfield church is fortunate to have two ordained ministers.

This was our first opportunity to work with brother Elmer Carrithers. He was a real partner in evangelism. His deep devotion and compassionate ministering to the people of his parish was a challenge and inspiration for any minister. He loves his Bible and lives and preaches it without apology. Besides the work of his pastorate he commutes to Pittsburgh, Pa., where, in the seminary, he is working for his Master's degree.

It was my privilege to help to initiate the nice new parsonage which the Mansfield Brethren have recently acquired. The pastor and people are to be congratulated for this milestone of progress. My stay in this new home was most pleasant. Every minute of my stay with the parsonage family was enjoyed immensely. It was a distinctly Christian home with doors open to the people of the parish. They dropped in, especially the young folks, at most any time. I am afraid that their hospitality has almost spoiled me. It made the two weeks labor in their midst much easier.

The fellowship in the Brethren homes opened to us at the noon and evening hour will not soon be forgotten. They took care of us in splendid fashion. For all this and their generous love gift we are deeply grateful. I am sure that the Mansfield church will continue to be a faithful gospel center, a burning light in the darkness of apostasy. May the Lord bless them.

“FLORA MEETINGS”

After a long, drawnout envoy from Akron, Ohio to Flora, Brother J. G. Dodds finally arrived at Flora, Indiana, for a brief stay among the Brethren here. To have heard him relate of his journeying and to realize the distance of only approximately 300 miles, we are led to feel that it was rather an unusual journey. With but only two trains now daily, Flora is on the map yet seemingly off the beaten path of convenient transportation facilities for those would-be travelers, other than by auto to this spot.

Brother Dodds came to us for the two weeks, not a stranger. Being pastor at Mexico, Indiana, he almost came back home. Of course knowing of the work of this one on past occasions, we knew that we were in for a treat in the messages from the Word.

More pleasant weather for the duration of our work together in the interest of salvation of men could not have been had. Our people as a whole took advantage of this fact and gave of their time and interest during these two weeks. Others of the townspeople also manifest their interest as well by attending. It was not at all uncommon to have several ministers in our audience. On one occasion we were blessed with the presence of nine—including the evangelist and the pastor. The presence of Brother Jonas Brower, and Brother W. T. Lytle meant so much to the evangelistic party. May I testify here that it is grand to have two well experienced veterans in one's membership. Such experience can be a detriment or it can be most helpful to a young pastor. In this instance I can assure that the latter is highly prevalent in my experience.

The prophetic slides which Brother Dodds presented at each service were much appreciated by all. They presented to us the fact that, just as God's Word was certain via fulfillment, so will be the completeness of His yet-to-be proclamations. This series of meetings we can report upon the testimony of the Brethren, was the best-spirited of any for the past years. We are certain that this may not be attributed to the efforts of any one person, but those who were willing to take our Lord at His word. “Ask and ye shall receive.”

With the Spirit prevailing and the preaching of the Word, at the conclusion of the two weeks thirteen were ready for Christian baptism and in addition two others came for reconsecration and church membership. This period of baptism took place prior to the Lord's Supper on Monday evening, which also brought a thrill at seeing all these newly-borns participating in this feast. A fifty percent membership participation was had in this Communion service, which again was the largest for some seasons. Therefore, we praise our Lord for His handiwork among us here at Flora and with the Victory over sin granted our flock.

ARDMORE HEIGHTS, SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

On Sunday morning, October 30, Brother C. C. Grisso came to our church to begin a revival series lasting until November 13. A number of faithful Christians had been earnestly interceding with God for an outpouring of His Spirit upon the church and community. I have never experienced a more definite answer to prayer than that this church had during these two weeks of meetings. Brother Grisso rested confidently in the power of God and God's Word and preached simply and effectively the doctrines which bring heart-searching and conviction. The meetings grew in numbers and interest from the first, ending in five people stepping out for Christ and the church.

On Sunday, November 20, I had the privilege of baptizing five people and after confirmation received them into the church. We also had one of our best attended communion services in a long time. God certainly visited us here by the Holy Spirit. Our church feels that God has put the sign of His blessing on the Christian work here and honored the efforts of Brother Grisso again after many successful meetings he has held throughout the Brotherhood. The effectiveness of Brother Grisso's faithful preaching of God's Word in a clear simple manner is manifested in this last meeting and many others in our Brethren Churches throughout the years. We pray that God may be pleased to spare Brother Grisso for more years of effective evangelistic preaching.

R. F. Porte, pastor.

The Brethren Evangelist

They Worshipped -- The Savior

"For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord . . . They saw the young child with Mary, his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him; . . . they presented gifts. . ."

The famed British statesman, W. E. Gladstone, voices his sentiment—"The wondrous birth at Bethlehem brought righteousness out of the religion of cold abstractions, clothed it in flesh and blood, opened for it the shortest way to all our sympathies, gave it the firmest command over the springs of human action and, by incorporating it in a person, made it lovable—All I think, all I write, all I am, is based on the divinity of Jesus Christ, the central hope of our poor wayward race."

Christmas is first of all, the call to worship God. He could come no nearer than to become one of us. The angels worshipped, so did the shepherds, also the wise-men and Mary. Likewise should we, of every generation worship this Jesus of Bethlehem. Worship, extol and magnify Him, not merely as a good man, or a great Teacher, a Healer or Preacher from Nazareth, but may we worship Him as Our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Pray—let the spirit of the Christ-child of Bethlehem, as it knocks today at the doors of the hearts of men, enter my life and bless it. May duty become touched with loyalty, and justice be forgotten in love. Let our hearts feel the love of the unlovely. Let my gifts today be not a sacrifice but a privilege, and let me accept kindness with humility.

When we worship "in giving"—reflect upon the report of Matthew, the divine narrator—who definitely named the gifts which the Wise-men offered when they came to worship Him; gold, frankincense and myrrh. Born in a barn—yet such extravagant gifts! Later when a woman bestowed her costly gift when she anointed Him with expensive ointment, a disciple argued about that. What memorable treasures these were! Surely they denote the "extra" expression of fond hearts.

Hence, they became great souls because they did not fail to properly evaluate the Saviour before the world.

In His "birth" and Person, He was unique. He came from God in the sense that He was with God from eternity. The Gospels leave us no doubt that His birth was unlike every other birth, in that it was supernatural—(Matt. 1:18-20; Luke 1:35).

He declares that He left a state that was holy, heavenly, glorious, to become incarnate, and to live in this world of sin and sorrow and suffering.

Jesus is the world's "only" Saviour and no salvation is to be found in any other name, in any other gospel, than that which is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth"—Rom. 1:16.

So in every age, wherever the gospel has been preached, souls have been gathered to Christ. And now, the heralds of mercy have gone forth into all accessible lands of our world, expressly to gather men to Christ, the Saviour.

that so few, if any, unconverted people will attend the services of a church; even some will not permit children to attend. What a blight upon the rising generation! We are living in the very midst of one of the greatest missionary fields of the world. This is a great challenge for more missionary money to be used for Home Missions.

After three days in the office, I went to Pittsburgh for the sessions of the National Stewardship Council. At the Roosevelt Hotel more than a hundred church leaders spent three days in the study and planning for a great stewardship program among the churches. Some of the most devotional and inspiring stewardship messages that I have ever heard, were presented there. There was just one huge conflict, that being the Penn State and Pitt football game. About 200 of the downstate rooters stopped for two nights at our hotel. Well, to say it calmly, (after two weeks) there was no sleep for anyone. Before leaving the city I preached for our Pittsburgh Church. Mr. & Mrs. Alvin Grumbling were there in their first month, to serve this church. A beautiful service was carried out.

The last Sunday of the month I spoke in Fremont, Ohio, where pastor George S. Hagenbuch is the shepherd. He had taken his wife and boys to her folks in Delaware for a short Thanksgiving vacation. Work and sacrifice, with praying and courage, is bringing this work to a more encouraging outlook. They have recently installed gas units for heating in both the parsonage and church, besides re-decorating most of their church.

My commercial this month is short—Recall—that our goal for Home Missionary Offering is $30,000. We need all of it. Our gifts for the new Wheeler Building should be over and apart from the Thanksgiving offering. Sizeable gifts are needed to finish paying for the Wheeler Home for boys at Lost Creek.

Closing with this fact—"If every Christian were a tither, the world would have been evangelized long ago!"

The

Field Secretary

Travels

November 1st, the secretary opened a special series of meetings at Mulvane, Kansas, which was already well reported by the pastor, W. L. Thomas. These were happy and fruitful days. No man ever preached to more appreciative audiences. The church, in the country for many years, was moved to the town about four years ago. A fine growth has been realized by so doing. Without exception, I do not know of another church that is doing more for its children. I didn't realize that any group could know and sing so many songs. Everyone is already a Christian, except one or two under five years of age.

The pastor and his church are deeply concerned about opening a new work in Wichita, one of the most thriving, beautiful cities of the middle-west. While at Mulvane we toured the city above named to discover a possible location. They expect to make a survey of some section of the city and locate a place where a Sunday school could be opened.

The Mulvane Church loves the Word and they live close to it. They hew close to the line. Surely these are days when every Christian ought to be living "the separated life." One can't help but see and shudder at the thought of the careless, indifferent, unbelieving attitude of so many in this ungodly country. It is the cry everywhere

My interest is in the Future because I am going to spend the rest of my life there.—Chas. F. Kettering.

The Joy Of The Angelic Message

Dr. C. A. Bame

For four thousand years, the believers had looked and longed for a deliverer from sin, oppression and slavery. Humanly speaking, it had become an obsession with the Men of God of the Chosen Peoples. For seven hundred years they had a right to know that he would be born of a virgin and in the "City of David," but the theologians of the years had been legalizing the revelation of the Most High and had seemingly neglected completely, the greatest of all promises—the coming of the Deliverer, just as too many of the same pattern in the ministry and in our seminaries are doing today. He no more, came the first time, than He will come again and "the second time," (Heb. 9:28), not to "all" as in this case, but to "them that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4:8, Titus 2:13.)

To "shepherds abiding in the field" fell the message from the lips of an angel saying: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace to men of good will." Not to the sour, critical, debating, arguing, procrastinating doubters but to believers. Not to the theologians and atheists and infidels, careless of the truth of the revelations he came to offer, but to men of good will; not to the lazy and indifferent, but to men of good will.

"And suddenly there was with that first angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, 'The dawn of peace has come to men who are willing to embrace it and enjoy it.' (Luke 2:8-16) The world is not here that they sang as we so unanimously say it; but I do not doubt one minute that they did, and that it was indeed and in truth, "sweetest carol ever sung."

Have you ever paused to ask, "What if they had not gone to Bethlehem?" If, like the Wise Men from the East, they had turned away from the text of the anthem and had gone to Jerusalem, what then? Of course, we know what would have happened; they would have missed the greatest of all discoveries and joys.

But they must have been of the Brethren type of mind; they "made haste" to go to the "City of David"—Bethlehem—and made haste to follow instructions even as real Brethren have always done, even to the sacrifice of popularity, prestige, property or profession. It paid then and it always will. Violation, neglect or delay is always expensive as to reward, happiness or assurance.

"They made haste" and found him where shepherds would be glad to find a lamb or a babe. Have we forgotten that Jesus meets people where they are and takes them where he wants them to be? That it is the whole purpose of the "way of salvation" to go to any and all places, to carry the blessed message of the angels to lost men in lowly and wasted places and raise them to the bosom of the Master. This was all in the pattern of the life that was to be born in a manger, that He might lift them into the arms of a faithful Shepherd, who would "supply every need—according to HIS riches by glory in Christ Jesus." Phil. 4:19; Eph. 1:7.

And, in the words of another of long ago, too rich to be lost: "His birth was mean below, but celebrated by hallelujahs of the heavenly host above; he had a poor lodging, but a star lighted the path of those who sought him, he had not magnificent equipage as other kinds, but healed and comforted. He did not walk on tapestry, but his greatness was evidenced by the crowds he fed, taught, he could walk on the sea and have it hold him up; he had no treasury, but when he needed, he proved his teaching as was supplied from a fishes' mouth; he had no barns nor cornfields, but when occasion offered, he fed thousands with five small loaves and two fishes; he had perhaps few in his funeral procession, but the earth mourned as darkness covered the earth for three hours—clad it in black for the occasion." "They parted his garments, and cast lots for his vesture and few parted their own as was the custom, but the rocks were rent instead as the earthquake bursted them; he had no grave of his own, but was buried 'with the rich in his death.' (Isa. 53:9) and there was achieved the glory of God as he emerged on the first day of the week conqueror of death, hell and the grave, not for himself only, but for all who believe on him." (Not quoted verbatim)

He came to his own and his own received him not, but to them that did receive him he gave power to become the Sons of God and to "bring many unto the glory that he had before the world was," if they, like the shepherds make haste to obey the angelic message.

"He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Did he not prove it? Who else ever did it so well and so completely? Shall we not make haste to come to the City of David and see "wondrous things out of thy law?" Join in the "glory to God" of the angels and joy will engulf your heart as sure as night follows the day. Amen.

—Wabash, Indiana.

An Anticipation

by Chester F. Zimmerman

Peace on earth? What a marvelous possibility! Let's suppose we go to sleep tonight and wake up tomorrow morning to a world that is completely at peace. The whole peaceful world lies before us now. Let's explore for just a little.

Entering the church we find Harry and George—who haven't been speaking to each other for over 20 years—talking about the glorious zest for living they now have.

Traveling here and there—pausing momentarily at one home after another we hear these words—"Gee, Joe, I'm too happy to stand still"—"Hello, Ralph, you're looking younger and a dozen times as happy."—"What have you done to yourself, you old bluffer, you look like you've got the world by the tail." . . . "Greetings, pal, it's good medicine for me to see you looking that way."

Across the ocean we go to the torn lands of our recent world conflict. We look for the black marketer, the chiseler, the gambler, the sneaky politicians, the saloonkeepers, and the host of yesterday's ever present host of parasites. But they are gone—where, no man can say—for some miracle has made them unrecognizable since the miraculous night of our dream.

Back again to the good old U. S. A. we come. Entering the doors of the divorce mill at Reno we find them strangely quiet and deserted. Prophetically speaking is a hand lettered sign on the judge's "bench"—"Out to play golf. Won't be back ever."

Our magic carpet whisks us to the deep south. The music hall is crowded to capacity, the doors having been thrown open for one and all to revel in the artistry of the soul satisfying strains of the great symphony orchestra.

The teeming metropolis areas of our country find "Abey," "Isaac," and "Izzy" around the festive board with Harry, Joe, Frank and Paul. "Abey" says, "I didn't know you very well, Joe, guess I was just more than a little dense. You're a pretty good guy. I'm really honored to be here with you." And sheepishly Joe retorts, "If I had any sense I'd have known long ago that you were the kind of fellow I'd have liked for my son-in-law."

The newspaper headlines for the day vary in phraseology but in unison shout out the glad news of peace in the heart of man. Hear how they read—"Police report no business"—"Doctors rejoicing, Patients Healthy and Happy"—"Peace! It's Wonderful!"

A whirlwind visit to the home of each minister finds each in the seventh heaven because "Peace on earth—good will to man" has become the reality fervently longed for and labored for so earnestly. One humble brother was quietly heard to say, "Mine eyes have seen thy works, O Lord, let now thy servant depart unto thee!"

TEN YEARS MORE FOR MISSIONS IN AFRICA

CHICAGO—"Missionaries may have less than ten years left in which to bring the gospel of Christ to Africa and other areas," declared Dr. Raymond B. Buker, foreign secretary of the Conservative Baptist Foreign Mission Society, on his recent return from a three month trip to the society's stations in Africa, Europe and South America.

Government officials revealed to Buker that they believed the white man has less than ten years to remain in Africa. "The rising tide of nationalism and communism may soon drive out all foreigners," Buker declared, "and since missionaries are associated with foreign ruling powers, they probably will be forced out in the general exodus."

Buker found the same situation to exist all over Africa, varying only in degree. This means the time necessary to consummate the movement will probably differ in various sectors, but the general direction is the same everywhere.

"Of course, God can overrule in the matter," Buker insists, "and keep the doors open. At the same time, we should be prepared for the natural trends and plan accordingly."

In the light of the circumstances, Buker believes that every effort should be given toward reaching as many individuals as possible with the gospel while there is yet time, and also to train Christian leadership from among the people so that if and when missionaries must leave, local Christians will be prepared to carry on the work.

Buker, for fourteen years a missionary in Burma and China, is responsible for field administration in the eleven countries in which the Conservative Baptist Society has its 184 Missionaries.—Evangelical Action.

"How Shall The American Student Best Prepare Himself To Help Christianize Our Country?"

by Richard Wolfe

I am well aware of the fact that a great deal has been written along the lines of this subject; some of it good, some not so good. This article is not an attempt to rehash the time-honored problems and vehement conclusions of other writers. This paper is to have a positive approach to a vital problem: The relation of the Christian student to the Christian Faith.

Quite frequently it has been suggested that higher education and the Christian faith stand opposed to one another. And, not so long ago, it was supposed that anyone who entered one of the large universities would emerge with a degree at the expense of his faith. How much precious time and vital energies were expended along this line, seeking to create a situation in which "faith and reason" were set over against one another. Instead of trying to create a problem we ought to face the real problem; that of "faith and life."

There is a vital connection between life and faith; so vital, in fact, that everything else is of secondary importance. Never before in our world has there been so much life with so little faith. I realize that there is a semblance of faith in all life, but it is so passive that it is fairly impotent. It is not the faith that gives meaning to life or enables its owner to see his world in terms of the Eternal. It is, in short, an inflationary faith that feeds on the egotism of Man, and such a faith can be nothing but an accommodation for the night. A faith worthy of the name is strongest when the opposition is the greatest. When the resources of life are taxed to the uttermost, then faith becomes a dynamic force in the life of men, of the Church and of the World. Faith is not something detached from life, it is a part of life, and without it life has no real meaning.

This then, suggests an apparent fallacy in other considerations of the problem, in which there has been the attempt to define "faith" as the product of belief. They are not the same. Belief, and even right belief, does not produce faith. Belief is passive, while faith is active; an activity, if you please. I do not wish to mix my metaphors, but I do wish to distinguish between Belief and Faith. There are problems of belief and there are problems of faith. And, while they are both important, and may even be similar, they are in no way identical.

The problem of belief is a real concern in the life of everyone, and more particularly in the life of the student. There are so many beliefs vying for men's minds, and it certainly makes all the difference in the world what we believe, and what we reject. Dorothy Sayers in her little book "Creed or Chaos?" remarks that "Unless (a man) believes rightly, there is not the faintest reason why he should believe at all." (1.) The problem is not whether I should believe or not, but "what shall I believe?" which brings me to my first suggestion as to what the student can do of a positive nature to help Christianize our country.

I trust I am not archaic in suggesting those familiar words of Paul as he wrote to young Timothy with this admonition: "Study to show yourself approved, being a workman with nothing to be ashamed of, and able to know how to use the word of truth to the best advantage." (2.) This is the first responsibility of students who have set themselves upon the task of acquiring an education. Never before has so much truth been available to so many people. Today, the janitor's son can secure an education comparable to that of the President's heir. The opportunities are almost identical, the responsibilities the same. Thus, Truth must be assimilated and applied to the various situations of life as they present themselves on every level of living. Our God is a God of Truth. Hence, in a very real way all truth is God's word spoken to mankind that it may "be free indeed." It is every Christian's responsibility to know the Truth and to act in accordance with the Truth. Therefore, Paul's instructions to "study" meant not only the scriptures, but also the other available guides to the Truth. By constant and diligent study we may come to a full and sure knowledge of the Truth, that we may become aright.

The problem of belief, then, is what to believe. What we believe must be true, it must be consistent and it must be vital. This is what Dr. Elton Trublood calls the "Alternative to Futility." (3) Right belief is part of that "alternative" but so is "right faith." And again I wish to emphasize the difference; that belief and faith are not the same thing. For example, practically everyone believes in God in some form or another, but how many of these same people have that deep abiding faith so essential to a true Christian experience? No, they are not the same. Faith goes beyond the limits set by belief. Faith is belief put to work; it's the spirit and soul of man in action. It is faith that moves mountains, heals broken souls, that changes the "course of history" and the destiny of mankind.

Note carefully: we are talking about a very particular kind of faith, Christian Faith and this means Christ-like actions. Turning again to the Phillips' translation, we find these poignant words closing the 12th chapter of Paul's letter to Rome: "Don't allow yourselves to be overpowered by evil. Take the offensive—overpower evil by good." Just imagine: Faith on the offensive!! What that could do to our world! That, also, is our "alternative to futility." It doesn't sound like march, but it really is. If it were taken seriously by those of us who profess belief in Jesus Christ we could literally "turn the world upside down." Faith in action has always been a curious entity in every age, and so, both its adherents and opponents have used the strongest language at their command to describe it. Faith, wherever it is real is in action. Why wait until we are put on the defensive to demonstrate our faith? Let's go on record as being on the offensive, for, herein lies the great strength of the Christian Faith. The grace to recompense evil with goodness and love is the strongest factor in any civilization. Paul really knew what he was talking about.

Now, I would like to make some very positive suggestions to those who are Christian students and what they personally can do to help Christianize our world. The foregoing has been suggestive of the scope of the problems confronting the modern student. Now, how to apply it.

1. The Christian student must set himself apart, as a Christian and as a Student bent upon a thorough pursuit of the Truth. Truth, not only as it has been preconceived, but as it really is. Sometimes this may mean the painful abandonment of some beliefs, but remember, beliefs that matter must be true, consistent and vital. Why be tied to anything less?

2. The Christian student must demonstrate his faith in action. Unless Christianity is worth demonstrating in a positive way it is not worthy of the name of Christ. If our world could only see Christianity in action again as it was once on fire with the Word of God our task of Christianizing would be much easier. Christians must take the offensive or stand a good chance of losing the fight.

3. Last, but, far from least, Christian students must prepare themselves for positions of responsibility and leadership tomorrow. There is a vital place in our world for the professional man who, unflinchingly demonstrates his Christian faith.

Now, the responsibility is yours. I dare you to go out as Christian students, join hands with the forces of right, take the offensive, and with goodness and love in action, help to Christianize our country.

THE STORY OF A BIBLE

Away in a little town in the far south of Argentina one day a soldier, attracted by the sound of singing, entered a little mission hall and heard the Gospel preached. He stayed behind and spoke to the missionary, who asked him if he were a Christian.

"Yes, I am," he replied.

"Where did you hear the Gospel?"

"From my mother."

"Where does she live?"

"She is a long way off, but will you come and see her? She has never heard a preacher, and she will be glad to see you."

The missionary went, and found away on a distant farm, where no missionary had ever been, an old Christian woman. She told him that years before a colporteur, passing that way, had left a copy of the Word of God. She had read it, her eyes had been opened, and she had come to know Jesus Christ as her Saviour. She had had no teacher but the Spirit of God. That old woman was the mother of fourteen children. At the time the missionary visited her the youngest was twelve years old, and she had led every one of those children to Christ through the reading of the Scriptures left by an unknown colporteur.

The missionary had the joy of baptizing the whole family, and that evening, as they sat down round the Word of God, he said he had never heard the Scriptures so wonderfully opened up as when the Spirit-taught saint brought out of her treasure things new and old. Truly, "The entrance of Thy Word giveth light."—The Lighted Pathway.

WEST OF THE ROCKIES

From Idaho came Indians in 1831 to St. Louis asking, "Where is the white man's Book of Heaven?" There they were befriended, entertained, feasted. Their disappointment is voiced in a farewell address by their Chief.

"I came to you over the trail of many moons from the setting sun. You were the friends of my fathers, who have all gone the long way. I came with an eye partly open for my people who sit in darkness. I go back with both eyes closed. How can I go back blind to my blind people? I made my way to you with strong arms through many enemies and strange lands that I might carry back much to them. I go back with both arms broken and empty! Two fathers came with us; they were braves of many snows and wars. We leave them asleep here by your great water and tepees. They were tired in many moons, and their moccasins wore out. My people sent me to get the white man's Book of Heaven. You took me to where you allow your women to dance, as we do not ours; and the Book was not there! You showed me images of the Great Spirit and pictures of the Good Land beyond, but the Book was not among them to tell me the way.

I am going back the long trail to my people in the dark land. You make my feet heavy with gifts, and my moccasins will grow old carrying them, and yet the Book is not among them! When I tell my poor, blind people after one more snow, in the big council, that I did not bring the Book, no word will be spoken by our old men or our young braves. One by one, they will rise up and go out in silence. My people will die in darkness, and they will go on a long path to other hunting grounds. No white man will go with them, and no white man's Book to make the way plain. I have no other words."

The publication of this story brought about the establishment of the first Protestant mission west of the Rockies, among the Nez Percés Indians.—Israel's Watchman.

Beginning At Jerusalem

by C. C. Grisso

"And He said unto them--that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things." These are the marching orders of our Lord to His church. The early church's activities had their beginnings in that great revival at Pentecost, but they didn't stop there when the revival was over but continued their ministry to other fields.

To our own beloved church, our own United States is our Jerusalem. It is our land of Opportunity, which necessarily makes it our Responsibility. But we dare not stop here. The most marvelous thing about our Gospel and the promises of God is, that they are to be shared by all men alike. "The Lord is not willing that any should perish." This is the marvel of the ages, CHRIST PREACHED AMONG ALL NATIONS AS THE HOPE OF GLORY. The promise of Abraham was, "In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed; for the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." "He shall have dominion from sea to sea," declares the psalmist, and Habakkuk affirms that "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Yes, and Malachi adds further testimony that, "From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my Name shall be great among the Gentiles." Thank God, "there shall be given unto Him Glory and Honor and Dominion and a Kingdom, and all nations and languages shall serve Him, and His dominion shall be everlasting, even one which shall never pass away." "Every valley shall be filled and every mountain shall be brought low, and the crooked places shall be made straight--and all flesh shall see the glory of the Lord." And, "I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto Me." With us we have no choice, for what is written must come to pass. This Good-news must be sent to all the world.

The Jews were his chosen people. "To them pertained the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises." But they had no monopoly on truth. For truth is the birthright of every soul. "Christ is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." And the great purpose of Grace and Glory and Redemption cannot be consummated until the whole-wide-world is evangelized.

Regardless of all this evidence presented with clearness and power by these holy men of old, moved by the spirit of God to make known His plans and His program for the ages, the work of missions, and of world evangelism have never been given their proper place in our teaching and in our preaching. Even the apostles did not understand it in the beginning. On the day of Pentecost Peter quoted the words of Joel, "It shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved," but when he was asked to preach to the household of Cornelius he hesitated, and God had to show him in that wonderful Joppa vision that "In every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him." That was ten years after Pentecost but it was Peter to world-wide missions and evangelism. Read again, in the persecution of Stephen, "those that were scattered traveled as far as Phenice and Cyprus and Antioch, preaching to JEWS ONLY." No, they didn't understand, but by line upon line they came to see that there is no distinction between Jew and Gentile "for the same Lord is Lord of all."

Also, too many the sending of the gospel beyond Jerusalem is the height of folly. They say we have too many still unsaved at our doors. We speak with all reverence, our Lord never converted a whole city. In fact the very places where He did his mightiest works were those who heeded His message the least. St. Paul never converted a whole city into a church, but the great mass of his hearers formed themselves into a mob that sought out His life or gave him due warning never again to preach in their city. Why should the church of Jesus Christ consume all her time and effort upon an unappreciative people to the neglect of those who have never heard? Our Lord has not so commanded, but rather, "If they refuse to hear thee, shake off the dust from your feet as a testimony against them." If they perish their blood must be upon their own head.

Now, permit me to suggest a few things that are imperative if our Lord's last command will be carried out.

1. The church must have a missionary conscience. We have a conscience on other things. We have a temperance conscience. We have a doctrinal conscience, that is, we believe that certain doctrines must be preached and practiced. Even so, let us see to it that as Christians we develop a missionary conscience.

2. We need to understand the true mission of the church. This is to be found of course in the commission, "To disciple the nations," "to gather out of the nations a people for His Name." When this is done the church shall have completed her task on earth. Israel was chosen for this task, but having failed in it our Lord turned to another--the CHURCH. And what is that task? To convert the world? No, never. If that were true and the Lord would not come until it were accomplished, then according to the present rate of advance, He would never come, for today there are five hundred million more heathen than there were one hundred and fifty years ago. Does it mean then that the church has failed? Not at all, for she is going straight ahead accomplishing her God appointed task. It looks as though this dispensation is hurrying on to certain failure, but only for the world, but never for the church.

The day of her victory is assured. It is when she has completed her task of world evangelization and world-wide endeavor. Our Lord never commanded us to be SUCCESSFUL, but to be FAITHFUL.

3. Our next apparent need is more workers. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." If this preacher was to live his life over again I am certain it would be in the ministry of the gospel. I am not just so certain that it would be spent oftentimes among an ungrateful and unappreciative people when there are great wide harvest fields at home and abroad untouched and waiting for the song of the reaper. I should like to catch the ear of every young man and woman who are anxious that their life bring rich returns for time and eternity, and counsel them to lay their whole lives upon God's altar for definite missionary service.

In what appears to be a somewhat discouraging situation somehow I see a faint ray of hope and optimism. It is the great Youth for Christ movement that seems to be sweeping the land. Can it be that Joel's prophecy is being fulfilled again before our eyes? "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit—and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." Again, it seems that the Lord is stirring the hearts of His people and all about us revival fires seem to be rekindling themselves anew.

4. The fourth and last thing that I want to suggest here is very commonplace, yet it needs to be said again—we need to give more. For the most part the church is rich. There seems to be no shortage of money for anything in these days. Worldly organizations, worldly pleasures, the best and costliest of everything, all claim their share. And it all causes us to wonder whether perhaps a little more plain, simple sacrificial living on the part of us all, would not better become disciples of "Him who had not where to lay His head?" But they tell us, that there are so many calls. That is true, the calls are many, but what if there were none? No calls for trained workers, no calls for missionaries, no calls to help, no place to share, then what? We ought to thank God for the opportunity that comes, and every call that is being sounded forth in our day for that is a sure sign that the work of the Lord is prospering.

Yes, we need to give more. More of everything we have for the carrying forward of the great program of the church. A number of years ago a hurricane destroyed a little church on the coast of England. The church folks found themselves unable to replace it and made provision to worship elsewhere. One day a representative came to ask if they were planning to rebuild, to which they replied that in their present condition they could not. Then said the government agent, "If you do not build the church, we will, for that spire is on all our charts and maps, it is the landmark by which the ships of the seven seas steer their courses." And, so it is true. It is the church that points us to the eternal. By it we must chart our course in life. We have started well and made commendable progress until now, but the task is not yet finished. The great plan of Redemption born in the very heart of God received its finishing touch on Calvary. It was for every one of us and shall not every one alike respond with hearts and hands and substance to gladden His heart and spread His kingdom from pole to pole. Christmas again is near with its message of Hope, of Cheer, of Goodwill among men. But millions have never heard of it. Millions living a Christless life, dying a Christless death, thrust into a Christless eternity, doomed, lost. How tragic that these millions must pass without having an opportunity to know Him.

"Waft, waft ye winds the story
And you ye waters roll
Till like a sea of glory,
It spreads from pole to pole
Till o'er our ransomed nature
The Lamb for sinners slain
Redeemer, King, Creator
In bliss returns to reign."

ARGENTINA ITEMS

Our superintendent, Adolfo Zeche, who is a very busy man, has asked me to report our annual conference in Rosario, which I will gladly do.

This conference is of special interest because it is the first since we were organized under a constitution and by-laws as required by the government. We have not yet received our charter, but it is one year on the way with nothing to indicate that it may eventually fail to be granted. Meanwhile we can go ahead with our work with no serious impediment.

The conference was held in Rosario, where we have a beautiful church building with facilities for caring for both delegates and meetings. The pastor, Brother Zeche, and his family, had the church beautifully adorned with flowers and meals were served on the grounds. If I counted right, there were forty-eight present at the communion service. All were enthusiastic and a good spirit prevailed throughout. The first session was devoted to youth work, the second to women's work, then the Sunday school and finally the church.

The executive committee had a preliminary consultation, but will have its regular annual meeting in Buenos Aires. It has many more duties than the preparation of the annual conference program, as it represents the conference throughout the entire year.

Church extension through personal evangelism and branch Sunday schools and missions was the prevailing note of the conference. Everyone of our missions with pastors has from one to three branches which are being cared for by the pastors and their helpers. We hope to send pictures of these helpers, some twenty of them, before a great while.

Some are attending seminaries or Bible institutes in Rosario and Buenos Aires, but we are working hard to be ready to have a school of our own in Cordoba. The school year opens in March.

In Cordoba we have had four baptisms since last report and yesterday celebrated our monthly love feast with thirty-eight participating.

Sincerely,

C. F. Yoder.

News From Gerli, Argentina

Reverend E. M. Riddle
Norte America

Dear brother in the Lord,

It has been a long time since I have been wishing to write to you about our work here in Argentina, especially about the work in Gerli, Varela and Quilmes.

Seven years ago we established a testimony for the Lord here in Gerli. At the beginning, we had many difficulties in the work of evangelization, because we were completely unknown, and because the Roman Catholics were against us. We always had the inconvenience of moving from one place to another; in seven years, we have moved six times.

Last winter they asked us to leave the house we were living in. Since the first of January of this year, we don't have a place to hold our meeting. We had to look for a lot where we could build a wooden house to live in, so we wouldn't have to be in the streets. Here in Buenos Aires and its suburbs, it is almost impossible to find a house to rent or a place to hold the meetings. This is why we built a little wooden house. It is not very comfortable, naturally, but it will help us till we can build in Gerli.

In Forencio Varea, where we are living, even when there isn't enough space, we are holding our meetings. People have to travel quite a distance to come here, because there are thirty kilometers from Gerli to Varela. When many of them come, some have to remain outside because the place is too small for all of them. As you can appreciate, we have many inconveniences. We also have opened another branch in Quilmes. A Christian family there lends us a small hall where we can have about thirty persons. Although we have just begun to hold meetings at their home, we have had from twenty to thirty persons already.

Gerli is a suburb in the city of Avellaneda, and this is a suburb of the great capital of Buenos Aires. The capital has 3,000,000 inhabitants, and Avellaneda has 289,000 inhabitants. In this district is located most of the factories. In Gerli and vicinity there are more than two hundred factories, and some of them have about 10,000 workers, and they are building new ones.

Our mission here in Buenos Aires hasn't progressed much during the first years of work, but it has progressed in the last two years. There are now forty-eight persons I have baptized, and even though some of them have moved to other places, we still have forty-two persons who come to the meetings and about thirty children who belong to the members. We had meetings with an attendance of a hundred twenty persons but this happened when we had a bigger place, but even then we had to hold them outside in the patio of the house.

Since seven months ago, we haven't had a place for our meetings, but the members are still keeping themselves together, and they have faith in God, thinking that pretty soon we will be able to have a "place of our own."

We thank our Brethren from the North for what they have been doing in favor of the work here, in Argentina, and we hope that they can still help us in this emergency, to build a place for our meetings and also a home for the pastor. Our prayers to God are asking Him to bless you in a great way, so you can help us in this great necessity.

I also want to tell you that as President of the Association of the Brethren Churches in Argentina, I had the privilege of visiting other places where we have our work, such as Rosario, Villa Constitución, Chalon, etc., and I am glad to say that, thanks to our Lord, this work continues with enthusiasm and success, and we are planning to open new missions with God's help. We have here several towns with thousands of inhabitants, where there isn't any missionary work. Some of these towns, such as Victoria, Nogoya, Villaguy, etc., have more than twenty thousand inhabitants, and no missionary work of any denomination has been opened yet. We hope to reach these people if God provides us with the means to do it.

The Argentinian people need the Message, and they receive it with pleasure, but what is necessary are bigger, better and more comfortable places to receive the people.

There are also some young girls and boys who wish to work for the mission and are anxious to get the preparation for the ministry. There are others who had their instructions already, and are ready to give their time to the work of our Lord. Great things will come in the future. The possibilities are many, and we could do many and great things if we had the means to do them.

As president of our churches in Argentina, I am much interested in the progress of our Missionary Work, but I have to confess that the most important and urgent need has been and is, Gerli. That is to say, we need an adequate place for this church.

We ask our Mighty God to grant you assistance for the evangelization of our dear country.

With the love of Christ, I salute you to Our Father and Him.

Jose Anton.

REVIVAL AT MULVANE BRETHREN CHURCH

Again we have closed a successful series of revival services and feel that we should let other Brethren know about it. The weather was fine throughout the two weeks, except for a light rain one evening. Our evangelist was Reverend E. M. Riddle, General Secretary of the Missionary Board, Ashland, Ohio.

The meetings were started in prayer several weeks ago and the preaching services started Tuesday night, Nov. 1st, and continued nightly through the 13th. The people of the community responded in a fair way to the invitation to attend these services, with an average of 60 for the thirteen services.

The messages were all very timely and Christ-centered, giving no one who attended the opportunity to say they could not understand what was preached. The members were all edified, uplifted and inspired.

There were many contacts made that will, with the help of the Lord, result in some finding Christ as their Saviour later on. Two Christians came forward and united with the church by letter. There were several others thinking strongly of doing the same thing.

We have enjoyed very much having Brother Riddle with us and have been helped a great deal through the privilege of working with him and hope that he will be able to come to us again in the future, if the Lord delays His Coming.

On Saturday night, Nov. 12th, Brother Riddle conducted our Communion service. Everyone there was drawn closer to their Lord and rejoiced in the privilege of again taking part in the Love-feast and Communion in remembrance of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

The Brethren here ask for your prayers that we might go forward with Christ.

—Wilbur L. Thomas, Pastor.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD - The Evangelist

George Whitefield was born in Gloucester, England on December 27, 1714. His father was a wine merchant, but at the birth of George, he was an inn-keeper. He died two years after the birth of young George. His mother still kept the inn, but times were very hard for her. George started to school at the age of 12. He entered the school of St. Mary de Crypt at Gloucester. He distinguished himself among the boys at the public school by his progress in Latin, and by his speeches and dramatic performances at public examinations. Later, however, due to financial difficulties which his mother was having in making a living, young George left school and served as "drawer of liquor" at his mother's inn. From his childhood he had a desire to a clergyman, therefore these thoughts were prominent in his life and mind. Finally, the situation of the family increased to the extent that once more George could re-enter school. At the age of 18 he entered Pembroke College, Oxford to continue his studies. At first he associated with bad company, but his conscience was alarmed and he broke away from this influence. Due to his experience as a "server" in the inn, he was able to serve as servitor to many of the rich students of College and his income was nearly or quite equal to his wants and needs.

During all this time, Young Whitefield was trying to find someone to help him in his religious desires. Finally, he heard of the "Holy Club" on campus which had been organized by the Wesleys. George joined this club immediately and observed the rules rigorously, but being first of the Oxford Methodist to profess conversion. After much study of theology and his Greek New Testament, George received his B.A. degree in the year of 1736. It was also in this year that he was ordained as deacon.

At Oxford, young Whitefield aided the prisoners and preached in London many times. Because of his preaching and his pulpit manners, he soon rose to prominence as a pulpit orator.

During this time, the Wesleys were in America doing evangelistic work in Georgia. They invited Whitefield to come to Georgia and assist them in their work. In 1738, he sailed for America. After working here for several months, he returned to England and was ordained as priest.

During the time he was in England, most of the churches refused him to preach in their pulpits because they tagged him as being "erratic and emotional." He then began to work among the Moravians, and to preach in open air. He soon induced Wesley to take such a step, and thus "open air preaching" became very popular because it was here that the working class of people could hear the Word of Jesus Christ.

On his visit to Kingswood, near Bristol, he laid foundations for the Kingswood School which became very important to Methodism. Soon after this, Whitefield began his career as itinerant evangelist. He visited Wales, Scotland and traveled through England. His preaching against clergy faults closed many churches to him and that report preceded him in his next visit to America, therefore many churches here closed their doors to him. This did not stop him, however, for he paid seven visits to America, the results of his evangelistic work being shared by Congregationalists, Presbyterians and Baptists from Massachusetts to Georgia.

George Whitefield, early in his career, became Calvinistic in his views, and because of this, his friendship with the Wesleys became impaired, but a reconciliation was soon made which deepened friendship, making it lasting. He was nominally head of the Calvinistic Methodists, but he left to others the work of organization.

Whitefield's time was spent between America and England preaching in all denominations. He continued active in service for God until his death which occurred on September 30, 1770, at Newburyport, Massachusetts. The day before his death, he preached for two hours at Exeter, Mass. His custom was to preach every day of the week, often three or four times per day. He preached his sermons over and over again. He possessed a dramatic delivery, and was very easy to listen to.

This was, indeed, an illustrious career as a Christian Evangelist.

Recognition

Honor To Whom Honor—

Praise and thanks in this recognition is due to Brother "Bud" Hunter of North Manchester, Indiana. The Missionary Board is most grateful to Mr. Hunter for leaving his home and work to superintend the buying, hiring of help, keeping records and time, besides working full time, while constructing the new Wheeler Home in Kentucky. Hunter said in a correspondence recently, "The building is almost completed. There is some delay installing the heat, as no radiators have arrived." He says further, "This is a good building, one that I believe the whole church will be proud."

Hunter will return to Lost Creek to hang the outside doors in place of the temporary ones after heat has been in the building for a reasonable time.

He has kept a detailed record of time for labor, expenditures for supplies, etc.

Letters of appreciation also have been sent to Mr. Ted Harp of Sidney, Indiana, who loaned a cement mixer for the Kentucky work and also to Mr. Harry Mishler of North Manchester, Indiana, for his bench saw. These were valuable help in this construction work.

Gentlemen, again we thank you!

NEWS

From the Christian World

There are fifteen times as many churches in the United States as there are motion picture houses. There is one church building for every 550 persons. The churches contain 55,000,000 seats, whereas the movie theaters contain only 10,500,000; yet the total attendance of the movies is far greater than the churches.—Gospel Herald.

A veteran cafe owner, Joseph Colucci, of New York City says that "Women's capacity for liquor has increased by leaps and bounds since the war." According to the news report: "As a matter of fact," he added, "the average woman began to outdrink the average man in about 1947."

Colucci said his 51st street establishment has become a veritable oasis for women drinkers and so he has much opportunity to study their capacities.

"Seventy-five per cent of my bar patrons are women," he said. "Most of them come from Radio City, just across the street. They include actresses, white collar girls from the RCA and RKO buildings and Radio City's hard-drinking women advertising executives."

Colucci, who has been doing business at the same stand for 14 years, said women drinkers began to change their ways and their brands during the war.

"Before the war, there were comparatively few women who visited bars unescorted," he said. "When they did come in, they sat at tables."

"Nowadays we have almost three times as many women drinkers. They all like to sit at the bar and few, if any, go to the tables."

"Women at a bar are always 'hamming' it up," he said. "They all love to appear mysterious and cherish the picture of themselves as 'the unhappy woman drowning her sorrows.'"—The Ohio Messenger.

Gypsy Smith was born under a horn-beam tree in Epping Forest (east of London) and died on the liner Queen Mary, en route to America in 1947. Now a memorial has been erected to him; an inscribed tablet on a granite boulder set up on the spot where he was born. It recounts how he preached the Gospel on five continents for seventy years! The closing hymn of the dedication was:

This, this is the God we adore,
Our faithful, unchangeable Friend;
Whose love is as great as His power,
And neither knows measure nor end.

'Tis Jesus, the First and the Last,
Whose Spirit shall guide us safe Home;
We'll praise Him for all that is past,
And trust Him for all that's to come.

The Federal Council's outstanding characteristic has been uselessness. Its most important defender, the Christian Century, illustrates this by berating it for not taking position in behalf of the public schools as against the maneuverings of the Roman Catholic Church. It charges it with "not acting on a great public issue until the battle is over, and of disdaining to sully its dignity with the stains of real conflict." The enemies of the Federal Council, and they are legion, have never said anything more stinging.

Repercussions of this statement are appearing. In the Watchman-Examiner, a pastor writes: "Those of us who have justified our relationship with the Federal Council because of its ability to speak for Protestantism in the legislative halls, where a united voice counts, have our last reason for supporting this group taken from us . . . it has failed in American Protestantism . . . The sooner we sever this questionable alliance by removing it from the budget, the better it will be for the Northern Baptist Convention."—S. S. Times.

"Missionary"—that word was the title of a news item in a daily paper of last July. "Miss———, former secretary to the Rev. ——, left Boston yesterday as an Episcopal missionary, to be resident manager of a handicraft shop in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico."

Contrast that with another item from the West Indies. The Baptist Church at Colon, Cuba, has only ninety-six members, yet twenty-two are workers in the Sunday schools and Daily Vacation Bible School. They gather five hundred children in eleven Sunday schools held in homes and missions, besides that in the church. What a record! Mr. and Mrs. Pina are the leaders.—S. S. Times.

The first Bibles to be printed in the Russian zone of Germany since the war are about to come off the press, the Berlin Bible Society reports. However, the needs of German refugees have not been met as yet. The printing of several more editions of the Bible in various parts of the country are being planned.

Jefferson Military College in Mississippi has turned down an endowment of $50,000,000 offered the institution by George Armstrong, Sr. Tied to the endowment was the provision that the college admit only white students and teach white supremacy.

Over one thousand persons write to the United Nations each month. These letters come in twenty different languages. From reading these letters delegates can know what the people are thinking about. The impression given by the letters is that the people feel the United Nations belongs to them, that it is something close.

Christianity Conquers Communism

Would you conquer godless Communism? "A most excellent way shew I unto you." Three months ago the press of the world reported a Communist uprising in the port city of Yosu, Korea. Communists there proved themselves to be what Communists are everywhere: they took possession of the town, burned a large portion of it, slaughtered many people and marched against the larger neighboring city of Soonchun. Arrived in Soonchun, they were joined by Communist students who had infiltrated into the student body of a Southern Presbyterian Mission School. These swelled the uprising and denounced many of their fellow students, especially the outstanding Christians among them.

One of these latter; a youth of eighteen and a Christian leader who was preparing to study medicine in order to devote his life to ministering to the lepers of Korea, of whom there are many, urged his Communist captors to accept Christ.

He was told that in Communist eyes it was a crime to be a Christian, and was shot; murdered in cold blood, by one of the Communist former students. Thereupon, this Christian boy's older brother, notwithstanding his brother's murder, confessed himself also to be a Christian, and was likewise shot to death by the same Communist youth who had killed his younger brother.

Then miracles of grace began to happen, miracles that point the way to the Christian conquest of Communism, perhaps the only way. First the lepers of a nearby leper colony (which has long been called Heaven by the poor maimed creatures who have there found a Christian refuge), knowing of this Christian boy's purpose of devoting his life to them, came to the Communists and boldly asked to be allowed to take this boy's body. Strangely their request was granted. They took the body and gave their young friend a Christian funeral.

Even Communists were impressed by that.

But that was only the beginning. Eventually armed forces of the Southern Korean Republic retook the city of Soonchun, captured many of the Communists, and brought seventy-six of them to trial by court-martial. Among these seventy-six was the murderer of these two Christian boys. He was unaware of it, but he was due soon to learn something more of the Christianity, and Christianity, which he hated.

While the court-martial was in progress the father of the two murdered Christian boys presented himself to the court and made a plea for the life of the Communist student who shot to death his two sons.

This father was a Christian, a Presbyterian minister who in his own body bore the marks of the Lord Jesus (for while many fellow Christians, even ministers, were betraying Christ by doing obsequies at Japanese State Shinto shrines, this man had declined to do so, and as a result had been incarcerated and had suffered much for the Lord. He told the court that the only reason the Communist student had murdered his sons was because he knew nothing of Christ, and that if he were executed an eternity of suffering awaited him.

"My sons cannot be brought back," said he, "but they are now with Christ, saved for ever. But if this boy is executed, only an eternity in Hell awaits him."

"If you will release him in my custody, I will adopt him in the place of my sons, will try to lead him to Christ, and will endeavor to make a man of him."

Imagine the military court listening to such a plea! At first it refused and promptly: the boy had murdered many and must die. But the Christian father pleaded so earnestly, with tears streaming down his face, that eventually the court was moved; it granted his petition and released this young Communist murderer into the father's custody.

The sequel? The immediate trial judge was so impressed he became a Christian! The young Communist murderer likewise surrendered his heart to Christ, having found Someone and something stranger than he had ever known existed.

The heathen members of his own family and many others in that city became Christians.

How to conquer Communism, with all its godlessness? We submit this Christian Korean pastor has shown the way.

It was of a church made up of Christians such as he that Jesus Christ said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Prophetic News & Israel's Watchman.

WHY TITHE

1. It is scriptural; Jesus endorsed it also.
2. It has stood the test of time—4,000 years.
3. It places our giving on a business-like basis and eliminates haphazard and careless methods.
4. The practice yields great personal joys and satisfaction.
5. Our 9/10 goes farther ("with God") than 10/10 ("without God").
6. It is fair to all.
7. It eliminates emotional "civil war" when we face appeals for funds.
8. It is a safeguard against covetousness.
9. It is a tangible evidence of our love for God and the church; our giving backs up our words.
10. It helps us give "as the Lord has prospered us."
11. It is little enough to share when our Christ gave His all.
12. It helps us keep a proper perspective.
13. It helps my church to render a more effective ministry at home and abroad; denominations emphasizing tithing were among those making greatest membership gain.
14. The practice increases our interest in the church and spiritual things.
15. It helps to raise our children in the way they should go.
16. The practice gives us a better credit rating; ask the banker.
17. It is a vital step in helping fulfill the first and great commandment.
18. It helps us to put God first in our lives.

I BELIEVE IN GOD

Scripture: Matt. 5:16; 6:8, 9; John 14:10-11

For The Leader

TONIGHT we begin a series of three topics on the subject of the Trinity of God. There are many things we shall be able to learn; there are yet many more that the best theological minds have not fathomed because of the greatness of God. But, if we are really in earnest about our study of God, He will, as we are able to absorb and digest the facts about Him, tell us more about Himself. This comes through prayer, Bible study, and meditation. We must believe in God, young people. Many people claim they do not. Others have no knowledge of the true God. Many others refuse to have anything to do with Him. But Christian young people will love Him, believe in Him, and will honor Him with their lives. The study of God is a wonderful pursuit. It will be to our spiritual advantage to devote much time in learning more about God. Tonight, we wish to take up the subject of God, the Father.

DISCUSSION

1. THE GLORY OF THE GOD-HEAD. We Christians are true believers in the one true God. Out of all the gods of the universe, so called, there is just one true God, Jehovah. Pagans and civilized people alike, have manufactured gods to their own liking. They have created gods to their own liking. They have created gods which they can easily please and which will not demand very much from them. But all such gods are idols, and man is cursed before God for his idolatry. Bear in mind that not all such gods are of wood or stone. Anything that comes between us and our fellowship and walk with God is an idol. Be it a person, a job, or a pleasure. When it destroys our love for God, it is a sin and an idol. Witness the glory of the God-head as our own beloved God. God, the Father, as a loving heavenly Father, provider of all things for us, yet a stern, just and righteous judge for those who disobey Him; Christ the Son, our Saviour; and the Holy Spirit, the Power of our Christian lives. Three in One and One in Three.

2. HOW CAN THERE BE THREE? Somewhat of a mystery has always been connected with the idea of God as being only one God, and yet there being the three personalities. How can one be three, or how can three be one? Perhaps the theologians will gain a few grey hairs in our explanation of it, but it is not as difficult as it may seem. The God-head is complete, perfect, united, in being, purpose and act. That makes God one God. Within this perfect unit are the three distinct personalities, each with His own particular work or office. The Father the Head and absolute rule, The Son the Savior and Redeemer, the Spirit, the Power. Each united in the purpose and will of all three. When Jesus said in the garden, "not my will but thine be done," He was adhering to that will which kept the God-head what it is. Had He exerted His own will, then the God-head would have been disrupted, because of the breakdown of the bond of perfect union. For a human example, we can take a husband and wife. The scriptures acknowledge that the two become one in marriage. Thus, with the husband and wife as one, there are the two distinct personalities, yet united in one purpose and being. The will of one is the will of the other, with the husband as the head of the house. It is perfect will, perfect love, perfect fellowship and perfect purpose that gives to us one God, the eternal Jehovah.

3. FURTHER EXPLANATION. From the above, we can explain how that when Christ was upon the cross, that the Father could turn His back upon His Son, and how that the Son of God could die his physical death, with a broken heart, and still have God in power. E'en though God was in Heaven, and the Son on earth, as separate personalities, yet in the bond of united purpose, will and love, the God-head was in perfect union. God, the Spirit and Christ were united in the one thought that Christ, the Son must lay down His life as a sacrifice for sinful man. So, the God-head was united in that purpose. The Father, giving His Son, the Son coming willingly, and the spirit ministering and witnessing. Can you begin to feel the wonderful cooperation and love as felt in heaven as this plan was made and caused to come to pass? Can you realize that it was for you that Jesus came and died; that you through His grace might be privileged to ascend to heaven at death and enjoy the eternal ages in His glory? If so, be sure your life is in perfect accord with His will in act, thought and purpose.

4. GOD IS REAL. So many young people think God as something unreal, or mystic, or far away. What do you think? God is a Spirit, and with Him our spirits commune through Jesus Christ. It is also to include the worship with our bodies and of our substance and talents. God can think, He can create, destroy, change the course of men, prolong life, shorten life. He is everywhere at all times. He knows everything, He sees everything, even those things done in secret. In other words, young people, we cannot escape the ear or the eye of God. We can commune with Him, pray to Him and He will talk with us, He will direct our paths, even when the future seems dark or lonely. What we need is a complete faith in His ability to direct our paths, and then be willing to follow in that will, keeping ourselves pure and unspotted from the world. See? Thus if our wills are given to Him and He is supreme in our lives, we will be a part of God's holy family through Jesus Christ, and we shall reap the blessings and joys of a perfect-willed life here, and a perfect life after our days of service here are over.

5. INTO THE HIGHWAYS AND BYWAYS. As each Person of the God-head has a distinct purpose, so each of us has a purpose which God has for us. It is to go into the lives of men and witness for Christ; to help the poor, hungry souls, lost on the sea of life, to find their eternal Savior. As the Shepherd went seeking the little lost sheep, so must we go out and seek those who are lost. In doing this we shall be blessed of God, the eternal God of heaven and earth, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Yes, the God of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This year, how many young people are you going to try to lead to a knowledge of Jesus Christ?

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS GIFT

The first great Christmas gift to man
Was hung upon a Tree.
It was not by a fireside,
Where only those could see
Who near of kin or friendship were,
And gifts exchanged would be;
But out upon a mountain side
For all the world to see.

He gave His all, His life, His blood,
That men redeemed might be.
Then what can man give in exchange
For love so boundless, free?
The debt of sin, He paid it all,
Nought in ourselves have we.
Nothing to bring unto our KING, MAKER, REDEEMER, HE.

Men of every race and clime
Have come, and looked and lived
And cried out for forgiveness
And had their souls made free.
This glorious Christmas peace
That floods one's life with joy,
'Tis God's greatest gift to man,
And was hung for you and me.

THE FIRST GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

Scripture: Luke 2:8-11

TO A COMMERCIAL WORLD Christmas means profits, but to the believer it means the gift of a Saviour (1 Peter 2:7). The root of man's trouble is his unbelief in Jesus Christ for what He claimed to be. He was intended for "all people" (1 John 4:14). He satisfied certain Samaritans (John 4:12). "Jesus exactly suits us sinners" (Matt. 9:13). God specified His special ministry through an angel before His birth (Matt. 1:21). He is the Saviour of the lost (Luke 19:10). "No one can help like Jesus."

He is the Saviour of them that believe (1 Cor. 1:21; 1 Tim. 4:10; Acts 16:31). We must believe in the risen Saviour (Acts 5:30, 31). First, He humbled Himself to pay the price of the world's redemption (Phil. 2:7, 8). Then came His great exaltation (Phil. 2:9-11; Psalms 24:7, 8; Hebrews 1:3).

Christ is our only hope (Isa. 43:11). A worldly-wise person once contended, "There is so much good in all religions." To this one retorted, "There is so much good in rat poison, too, for 98% of it is cornmeal, yet the two per cent of poison is enough to kill." Acts 4:12 settles the value of "these other religions."

God has never given in to the Devil (1 John 3:8). He is bound to restore this world from the ravages of sin (Phil.

3:20). Christ-rejecting men will never achieve peace (Isa. 57:21). Anyone can have real peace now and share in His peaceful reign when He comes to earth again.

THE CONTINUING BAND OF DISCIPLES

Lesson: Acts 1:1-14

WE TURN during this new quarter to a continuation of the Gospel Story from where it ended at the close of the second quarter of 1949. A broad view is taken of the church and its expansion, as recorded in The Acts and several portions of the New Testament.

On this first Sunday of the New Year we are to think of the first work of the disciples. When we realize that the true meaning of the word "disciple" is "a learner," we can catch more fully the significance of our lesson. As a band of "learners" they hunger after more knowledge and they are in a mood to open their minds to further instruction and leading. Fortified with the absolute knowledge of the truth of the resurrection, and with the last words of Jesus ringing in their ears (verses 7 and 8), and the reassuring words of the two men in white apparel (verses 10 and 11)—is it any wonder that "these all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication . . ." that they might be led on to further truth?

We will do well to study the words of Jesus in connection with the teachings He gave while on earth with reference to planning and praying.

When we catch the vision of the requirements for church advancement, we must of necessity learn the lesson of accord in "prayer and supplication." If we do this, then results are sure to come.

There must be a constant continuation of effort on the part of God's people if any advancement can be expected. It is not always the rapid pace that makes the winner in the race, and it is not always the most rapid growth that spells the kind of growth that makes a church that is worth while in its efforts for the cause of Christ. It is true that when "prayer and supplication" are taken seriously by any congregation that the results are always evident. Sometimes these results are not so apparent at the time of the labor, yet in the over-all picture of the years of work and sacrifice, we will find that the Lord is blessing the efforts of those who are seriously about His business.

It was the "tarrying in meditation and prayer" that brought the coming of the Holy Spirit to these people. It was the earnestness of the delivery of the message that brought about the conversion of the great number of souls who became "added to the church" in the early days of the disciples' labor. Can it be done today? Why don't we all try it and see?

Seven Points Hath The Christmas Star

Christmas is first of all a call to WORSHIP God. He who was born of the Virgin is God. He came to earth that He might be with us. God is not far off . . . He could come no nearer than to become one of us. "You cannot separate Jesus from God." Let us worship as did the angels, the shepherds, the wise men, and Mary.

There is HOPE in the inner meaning of Christmas. The hope that men shall know God. Men had sought for God in many ways. But in Christ's coming to earth God came seeking men and found them.

The SONG of Christmas is a song of peace and good will. Men who have not found God will never keep peace among themselves. Good will proceeds from God. A right relationship to Him is necessary to peace.

The WONDER of Christmas is that God so loved the world that He gave His only Begotten Son. This is the wonder of wonders that He should care about us.

The MOTIVE of Christmas is redemption. The incarnation took place that He might seek and save the lost. No one can be so lost that he cannot or will not be saved.

The SADNESS of Christmas is that still there is no room for Him in many lives and many areas of human thought and relationships. Hate, the secularization of life, crowding out the spiritual, says "no room" for Christ . . . that though light is come, darkness and debauchery are preferred.

The RADIANCE of Christmas cannot be dimmed. The song of the angels, the wonder of the worshipping shepherds and wise men, the glad eyed children, special acts of kindness and goodwill . . . these all declare that Christmas does something to the heart. Which is not surprising when you remember that Christmas means The Savior is Born . . . God with us!

INTERESTING ITEMS

Berlin, Penna. Brother Percy Miller reports that there were 212 in attendance at the Community Thanksgiving services this year. He also reports that the Sunday school and morning church services are being very well attended. Loyalty Sunday was observed on December 11th.

Oakville, Indiana. Brother Henry Bates writes that on a recent trip to Lost Creek, Kentucky, a number of pictures were taken and were shown to the congregation by posting them on the bulletin board in the church vestibule.

Washington, D. C. The Washington church observed their first anniversary celebration of their entrance into their new church, on December 12th. A pot-luck supper was served and a program especially arranged for the occasion was rendered.

Brother Fairbanks informs us that their Youth Choir rendered fine service on Sunday morning, November 20th and that they are to sing once each month in the regular services.

Vinco, Penna. Brother W. B. Brant, Vinco pastor, writes, "On December 5th, had the joy of baptizing twelve, with several more coming. Also received six by letter. We had a good revival. Will write more concerning the work here later."

Waterloo, Iowa. Evidently the date of January 15th holds something special for the Waterloo folk, for we read in their bulletin the following: "Hold the date of the evening of January 15th . . . ? ? ?" We'll be waiting to see what happens.

Brother Charles Munson is to be with the Waterloo church on Sunday, January 8th.

Lanark, Illinois. Brother McCartneysmith reports that "Beautiful leather-bound Testaments were presented to seven members of the Junior Church on Sunday, November 6th, for six weeks of perfect attendance. Previous to this, on October 23rd, seven others had also been similarly rewarded."

The Senior Choir Christmas program will be rendered on Christmas evening, and on the first Sunday in the New Year, which comes this year on January 1st, the Youth Fellowship will have charge of the program at the evening hour. The Youth Church had charge of the evening service on Sunday, December 18th.

A Gospel Team from Ashland College and Seminary rendered fine service at the Lanark Church over the Thanksgiving week-end. This team was entertained in a special manner by the Lanark Brethren Youth Fellowship on Friday evening. The Milledgeville Brethren youth were also guests at this time.

Elkhart, Indiana. Brother L. V. King, Elkhart pastor, reports that he received an additional member by baptism recently, and that he had the joy of baptizing ten people for the new mission work at Sherwood, Michigan. Several confessions were received at the same time.

We glean the following from the Elkhart bulletin of November 27th: "That a special business meeting was called to consider the following resolution unanimously passed by the Official Board—"That the Building Committee be authorized to secure blue prints of proposed new unit, secure bids, and arrange for finance for same."

Johnstown, Penna., Second. Through the grapevine route we learn that Brother Leatherman has been ill, but evidently, according to the bulletin of December 4th, he is back on the job. He expresses appreciation for thoughtfulness of the church and friends in their prayers and cards and the carrying on of the program of the church.

Smithville, Ohio. We note that Dr. Lisle W. Roose was a recent speaker for the Smithville Laymen. He spoke upon, "Our Gifts of Body, Mind and Soul."

The All Church Christmas party was held on Thursday evening, December 22nd, with the Children's and Youths' departments in charge. A play, "A Stranger in Bethlehem," was given as a part of the program.

The Loree-Mexico, Indiana, Circuit. Brother Higgins, who pastors these the churches, says that the Loree Sunday school attendance has been running from 152 to 171. On the last Sunday evening of Dr. Grover Swoyer's week of Bible Lectures there was a "packed house."

The Loree repair fund offering for new pump and plumbing at the church was taken on Sunday, December 4th. The cost was approximately $250.00.

Miss Janet King, of Elkhart, spoke at both the Mexico and the Loree Churches recently in behalf of the South American mission work, showing her colored slides. At Mexico the offering was $21.79 and at Loree the offering was $42.79.

Nappanee, Indiana. A "Family Night" Christmas party was held at the church on Thursday evening, December 22nd. A Christmas Candle Lighting Service was held on Sunday evening, December 18th. At this latter service the children presented their program.

Christmas Day, December 25th, has been designated as the Quarterly "Cash Day" in the Nappanee Church.

THE GREATEST OF ALL THINGS

IN THE CURRENT ISSUE of "Coronet" is a pictorial account of the emotions brought forth in humanity through that greatest of all things in life—love. Here we see pictured scenes from life which run the whole gamut of human emotions, from the simple attraction of childhood to the quiet joy of mature assurance and deep-seated devotion of age. We find it exemplified in the shyness of the child, the hope of the mother, the tears of the father, the joy of the returned soldier, the bliss of the youthful and the contentment of the aged.

The explanatory paragraph reads, "This is the story about the most powerful emotion of all. It is ours on the day we are born, and its aura lingers long after we have crossed the portals of the unknown. It leads us through the bewildering years of childhood, and lends a sparkle to the days of youth. It brings inner meaning to our tenderest moments, and sustains us in whatever difficulties we may encounter. For love is the greatest miracle we know—an endless source of faith and understanding."

I looked at these pictures; I turned back and looked a second time and I was set to thinking!

Does this series of pictures set forth the real meaning of love? Or does it only deal with it as a human emotion? Is love, as set forth in these scenes, the sum-total of that "greatest thing in the world?" Is there not one phase of this "love" left out of the picture? Of course we realize that if love, as shown in these pictures, was to become the moving motive of this world, the over-all picture of our relations one to another, both in the matter of individuals and of nations, would be far different than it is today.

The best definition of love is not found in an emotion, but in a Person. That Person? God! John, the beloved disciple, says, "God is love." And, since God cannot be limited by a mere term, we must realize that that "love" is without bounds; that it is a limitless thing that cannot be kept within the borders of human relationships.

Again we read, "Love is of God." That is, He is the source of all love. We know that God "upholdeth the universe by the power of His love." In other words, He loves us so much that He will never permit anything to go wrong with His universe that will harm His creation, for He is a God of order and not of chaos.

Paul, in seeking to list the greatest things in the Christian's life, as he writes to the Corinthians, says, in the last verse of that wonderful 13th chapter of I Corinthians, "Now abideth faith, hope, love—but the greatest of these is love." (R. V.) While faith is abiding, it eventually gives place to sight; while hope remains constant, yet it is made perfect in reality. But love? If it be true love, it abideth forever. For love, real, genuine, God-given love never changes.

And John, who wrote that ever-abiding "love verse" in John 3:16, reminds us that this love of God was and is so great that He gave His greatest possession—His only begotten Son—to show to the world just what love really is. How much is bound up in the two words—"so loved!"

During this Christmas time there ought to be borne in upon us the reality of the deepest meaning of love, and, in the celebration of this day and all the succeeding days, we should seek to exemplify the love that our Father in heaven has shown us through His "unspeakable Gift."

Office Gleanings

PRESS AND EQUIPMENT FUND

Recently we received the sum of $10.00 from Mae Johnson of New Lebanon, Ohio, as the final payment on her three-year pledge to this fund. It may be that there are others who have made pledges which they have not completed. Now would be a good time to get them out of the back of the drawer or file and send in the amount to complete the pledge. We still need what ever you have pledged, since the entire sum of $15,000.00 was not received. Did you pay your pledge in full?

No Evangelist Next Week

Since the Evangelist is only published fifty times each year, we come to the second number we leave out—that of the last week in December. Our next issue will be that of January 7th.

The True Glory of Christmas

MUCH ATTENTION is always given to Christmas and its meaning as we approach and continue on through the Holiday season. But far too often the real meaning of the day is overlooked in the preparation for, and in the consequent celebration of, the set date of December 25th. This should not be, but rather the entire year should give evidence of our belief in all that the occasion entails. For the whole matter of the Virgin Birth; all the events which follow in the life of the Babe of Bethlehem, and which culminate in the Resurrection of our Lord must find their basis in this great fact—the birth of Jesus in the manger at “Bethlehem Judea.”

We go to the existing authorities and seek to recount the events as they are stated. Let us meditate on this account as it is recorded.

Zacharias was a Jewish priest, and both himself and his wife, Elizabeth, were very religious, “walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.” They had no child and were both far along in life. In his time the priests executed their office in a certain regular course, or order, and entering into the temple they burned incense while the congregation remained without engaged in prayer. Among the orthodox Jews the method is not materially changed.

We are informed that when this priest was in the sacred place and the people were waiting without, “an angel of the Lord appeared before him, standing on the right side of the altar of incense.” Zacharias was naturally appalled at the sight. But the angel dispelled his fears and informed him concerning the coming of a son. He prescribed the name to be given to him, described his character and affirmed that he should be great in the sight of the Lord. These are the words: “And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, and to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.”

Zacharias doubted the possibility of that which was predicted, and asked how he could know it to be true. To which, according to the authorities, the angel answered: “I am Gabriel that stand in the presence of God, and am sent to speak unto thee and to show thee these glad tidings.”

He then told him that he would be dumb for a time; in fact that he would not be able to speak until the day that these things should be performed. We are told that this was a species of punishment because he did not believe the angel; but it was destined to confirm the vision.

Instantly, according to the account Zacharias lost the power of speech; so that when he returned to the people he could only beckon to them and remain speechless. The narrative states that the prediction began to be fulfilled and that the wife, Elizabeth, after the custom, retreated from society and awaited the result.

(This, if true, is certainly a great miracle. If it is not true, either the people who wrote it were deceived or were hypocrites.)

In the sixth month Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, to Mary, a virgin espoused to a man named Joseph. The salutation of the angel to her was most extraordinary: “Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee: blessed are thou among women.” Mary was terrified at the vision.

A terrified person is in no position to reason or to act.

In full harmony with human nature the story proceeds: “The angel said, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favor with God, and behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, shalt bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.”

The terror of Mary was transformed into astonishment, and she asked how this thing could be. And the angel replied: “The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also the holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.”

(If this account be true, it was the most astonishing event that had been since the origin of the human race. If it is not true, the persons who vouched for it were deceived or hypocrites.)

To satisfy her of the truth of the statement, he told her of what was to befall her cousin Elizabeth; whereupon Mary acquiesced, responding: “Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word.”

The history includes a remarkable interview between Mary and Elizabeth which took place a short time afterward. At that time, Elizabeth, knowing nothing of the vision of Mary, was filled with the Holy Ghost and cried: “Blessed art thou among women, and blessed be the fruit of thy womb. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?”

Mary, also, being under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, burst forth into a solemn anthem of praise to God, beginning: "My soul doth magnify the Lord; my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour."

(This narrative is true, or the people who produced it were deceived or hypocrites.)

In due course the son of Zacharias was born; and according to the custom when friends and neighbors assembled, they proposed to call the boy Zacharias, after his father. But his mother said, "Not so, but he shall be called John." Objection was made that none of the family had that name, and they made signs to Zacharias, who had not been able to speak since the interview with the angel, to ascertain what he would have him called. To their astonishment, after having called for a writing tablet, he wrote, "His name is John." Instantly the mouth of Zacharias was opened, and by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit he prophesied the character and career of his son, who should be called John the Baptist, saying, "And thou, child, shall be called the prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways."

(Either this is true, or he who wrote it was deceived or a hypocrite.)

A few months afterward the emperor of Rome decreed that the whole Roman Empire should be enrolled; and that it might be done accurately, every person was required to repair to his own city. Joseph had believed in the vision of Mary, confirmed as it was by the other events named, and, having accepted her as his wife, was obliged to go to the city of David, known as Bethlehem. And the account says that there was such a vast concourse there that Joseph and his family could not be given lodgings at the inn. It is stated that a place was found for them in a stable, and that there the prophesied child was born.

Two unparalleled events are introduced into the history. The first is the vision of the Shepherds. The language, so employed in the narrative, is inimitable in its simplicity and grandeur.

"And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock.

"And an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people:

"For there is born to you this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord.

"And this is the sign unto you: Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased."

The second event was the Visit of the Wise Men to Herod, men who believed themselves guided by a star which went before them and came and stood over the place where the young child lay.

In due time the child Jesus was taken into the temple, in order to conform to the traditions of the Jews, and there he came in contact with Simeon. This devout man was waiting for the consolation of Israel, and he was inspired by the Holy Spirit. It was revealed unto him that he would see the Lord's Christ before he died. He was prompted by the Spirit to go into the temple, and there, seeing the child, he took Him in his arms and blessed God. At that very instant, Anna, the prophetess, a widow of eighty-four years, came in, and gave thanks to God, and spake of Christ to all that looked for redemption in Him.

(Either these accounts are true, or those responsible for them were deceived or intentional deceivers.)

In all these stupendous events the union of the divine and the human nature of Christ is revealed. There are two lines of thought parallel and converging in the one being: the mission of Gabriel; the miraculous birth of John; the inspiration of Elizabeth to call Mary the mother of the Lord; the inspiration of Zacharias to call John the Prophet of the Highest, because he should go before the face of the Lord; the declaration of the angel to Mary concerning the birth of the Son of God; the vision of the shepherds; the Star guiding the wise men; the worship which they rendered unto the apparently unconscious child; the revelation of Simeon; the inspiration of Anna; the declaration, and the fulfillment of prophecy, all show the divinity of Christ beyond controversy; unless the whole be declared to be merely worthy of being bound up with ancient legends as an amusing myth.

The natural circumstances of His birth show Him to be a human being: human, yet divine in the greatest sense of the word. And while all is unparalleled and inscrutable, the physical facts harmonize with the announcement to the shepherds and with the character assumed by Christ and later portrayed by the apostles and evangelists. For, as Gabriel affirmed to the wondering Mary, "WITH GOD NOTHING SHALL BE IMPOSSIBLE."

These who set down the facts were neither deceived, nor were they hypocrites. All is true, and as we worship this glad Christmas Day, it is a Living Saviour that we adore—One who came down from God, and who was and is and always will be THE ETERNAL SON OF GOD.

"What? Nothing to Give!"

ONE DAY YEARS AGO a couple of men, Peter and John, were on their way to the place of prayer. Along the way and near the gate called Beautiful, there was a lone, lame man asking and longing for help. This unfortunate man, with his eyes centered upon these two disciples, and with trembling voice, asked an alms. Peter replied, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."

How often today we are met with a similar situation and we think we have nothing to give because we are without money. Yet with Peter, we have at our command more to give than is asked. If we ask God we always receive more than we ask. Here was healing for this man, a gift worth far more than either silver or gold. We are the recipients of the riches of His grace. Because of this we should be able to express sympathy and give a word of encouragement. We have health, friendship, love, rich experience and nothing to give. We must not say that, but rather, "Such as I have give I unto thee."

One of the worst perils that threatens this land of ours today is the lost art of courage and willingness to try. We are never defeated until we have allowed it to be so. There is no disgrace in falling down; the disgrace comes when we are willing to lie still and not get up. There used to be a printed motto which said, "It is no disgrace to fall down; only the worm is satisfied and content to remain on the ground." Have you ever thought what a difference it would have made if Jesus, at the side of The Father, had refused to come down to earth in the form of a babe—to be born in human form—or, if He had submitted to the humility of such a birth and then would have said, "Well, if I go down to earth, I just will let the course of nature come to pass and I will die in a natural way," and then proceeded to do just that! Do you think that the angels would have announced His birth to the shepherds? Do you think that the Wise Men from the East would have journeyed long distances to come and worship Him and to "present unto Him gifts?" Do you even think that there would have been any star for them to follow to the manger?

Yes, what a difference it would have made in Christianity if Jesus would have refused to have gotten up and pressed forward the first time He fell beneath the weight of the cross? Someone has said that it was His courage in trying to get up that induced another man to carry the cross for Him.

But back to Peter. He did not say to this man, "Stay right there until you are sure you are healed and then see if you can walk." What he did say was, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, get up and walk. I will lend you a little assistance. Here is my hand; now get up!" Note that the Bible says, "And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up; and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength."

What was the result? This man who was lame gave credit to the One to whom it belonged, for, as he entered the Temple, he was leaping and "praising God" with a heart that overflowed with love.

Probably the most favored verse in God's Word is found in the Gospel according to John, Chapter 3, verse 16. That verse is the expression of God's love to mankind. That verse has an anniversary once each year. For Christmas should spell to each and every one of us the things that stand for God's Wonderful Gift to the World. How much of that love do we reflect in our observances of the Christmas season? How many times do we turn our thoughts Godward? How many times do we give in the name of Him who came to earth for us?

In many cities people are vieing with each other to see which home, which business house, which factory, will have the most beautifully decorated and lighted place. Prizes are given for such efforts. Much time and energy is expended to "light up" the city. But how often is the same energy and expenditure of money used for the alleviation of suffering, and the holdong out of the helping hand to those who are in need? Just suppose Peter had said, "Just look what a wonderful place the temple is; how it shines; see the gold and beautiful tapestries. Are they not wonderful to look at?" Would the lame man have praised God for that? No, he would have still been the lame beggar sitting at the gate Beautiful.

"What? Have we nothing to GIVE?"—Adapted.

We are sure that they will be both interesting and instructive.—Editor.

The Antietam, Maryland, Dunker Church

EIGHTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO the seventeenth of last September, was a day never to be forgotten when, in 1862, a little brick church was enshrined upon the rolls of fame in America. Nine years before Samuel Mumma and wife had deeded a spot of ground a mile north of Sharpsburg for the erection of a place of worship. The seven Deacons to receive the deed were: Joseph Wolfe, John S. Rowland, Samuel Fahrney, Jacob Reichard, Sam-

Brethren Church History

Rev. Freeman Ankrum

(The author of the articles which are to appear in The Evangelist under the general title of "Brethren Church History," comes of a line of descent direct from the organizer of the Church, Alexander Mack, and is the seventh generation. His mother, who lives at Gratiot, Ohio, was, before her marriage, Lucinda Mack. Brother Ankrum is a graduate of Ashland College, class of 1914, and has held pastorates in various churches of the Brotherhood, and at the present time is located at St. James, Maryland, where the pastorate of that church was begun in August of 1949.

He is the author of two widely distributed books, "Alexander Mack, The Tunker and Descendants," which was published in 1943, and "Maryland and Pennsylvania Historical Sketches," published in 1947.

The articles from the pen of Brother Ankrum will be both congregational and biographical. Some of them will be illustrated. They will not be in chronological order. The intent of the series is not so much history by dates, as by personalities. We present the first article in this issue.

uel Emmert, John W. Stoufer and Valentine Reichard, of the German Baptist Brethren Church. Here upon this spot of ground, surrounded by forests primeval, the church was erected within sight of the home of the donors of the ground.

The last service in the church before the terrible battle was held on Sunday morning, September 14, 1862. Elder Davis Long was in charge of the service that beautiful September day. Those days were filled with frightful uncertainty. The smoke of battle could be seen to the east on South Mountain and from time to time there came the cannons roar. As the day came slowly to a close soldiers could be seen from time to time taking up their stations along Antietam creek, eastward of the church building.

The Church was erected upon what was known as the Hagerstown Pike. Around it the tide of battle ebbed and flowed. The Church was within the Confederate lines. Mumma's house was a half mile across the field where many of the members had congregated the Sunday before the battle. It was burned to the ground with its contents, practically all being destroyed, leaving not a change of clothing for the inhabitants. The ground between the Church and house was dotted by hundreds of bodies of the Blue and the Gray.

There are various accounts of eyewitnesses as to the condition of the building and its surroundings. The following account seems to be of general interest. "Over this graveyard of the unburied dead we reached a woods, every tree pierced with shot or cut with bullets, and came to the little brick Dunker church on the turnpike. This must have been a focal point in the battle for a hundred round shot have pierced its walls, while bullets by the thousands have scarred and battered it. A little crowd of soldiers was standing about it, and within a few severely wounded rebels stretched on the benches, one of whom was raving in agony. Surgical aid and proper attendance had already been furnished and we did not join the curious within. Out in the grove behind the little church the dead had been collected in groups waiting for burial, and some of them wearing our uniforms, but the majority dressed in gray."

The writer interviewed some years ago the late George Schamel of St. James, Maryland, who, as a boy, had been taken by his father to the scene of battle the day following its conclusion. He stated that only one cannon ball had gone through the building. The church, as were many of the churches of that day, was being used as a hospital. He stated that the building was filled with men from both armies who were seated around its walls. They were laughing and singing for to them the war was over and they were enemies no longer.

A later historian wrote, "The little Dunkard Church which was so shattered that people could ride on horse back through the breaches of its walls, had been repaired and painted so that all the marks of the injuries it received had been obliterated. A few oaks surround it, these are scarred by marks of bullets and for thirty years people have searched for minnie balls under them and were seldom disappointed of finding what they sought."

A sunken road intersected the Hagerstown Pike a short distance south of the church building, coming in from the east. This was the scene of the bloodiest fighting of the battle, and in fact the Civil war. The road may be seen today. It was known as "Bloody Lane," and was not at all misnamed. The Sunday following the battle the church was in no shape for services. Around it were strewn the lifeless bodies of horses and men, a sickening sight.

The Pulpit Bible belonging to the church, the gift of Daniel Miller, one of the pioneer members, was carried away soon after the battle and nothing was heard of its whereabouts for forty years. It had been taken by Sergeant Nathan F. Dykman, Co. H. 107 N. Y. S. V., which had participated at Antietam. At his death his sister presented the Bible to the Company, and their desire was to send it back to its home in the Dunkard Church at Antietam, if it were still in existence. John T. Lewis, an esteemed colored man of Elmira, New York, who came to the North from Maryland, and was a member of the Meadow Branch Dunker Church outside of Westminster, Maryland, was instrumental in its being restored to the church.

At the right of the east door of the church a bronze tablet was placed by the Government, with the following inscription: "The Dunkard Church was erected A.D. 1853, by the German Baptist Brethren. During the battle the wounded of both armies sought and found sanctuary within its walls. The church was seriously injured by the fire of the Union batteries September 17, 1862. The building was repaired and divine worship was resumed during the summer of 1864."

Services were held in the building until May 23, 1921, when a tornado wrecked the structure hurling it to the ground. There has remained a desire among many for a restoration of the building by the Federal Government. Thus far nothing has been done. The wrecked building was purchased by Mr. E. G. Boyer, a Merchant of Sharpsburg. He has many of the brick, the benches, door frames and locks for the doors. The site of the building is now owned by Charles Turner and a frame structure stands on part of the original foundation. The dimensions of the church were thirty-five by forty feet. The brick were painted white. One of the limestone steps over which the worshippers trod as they entered the building, remains for passers by to observe. Many shell holes and bullet holes were to be seen in the rafters of the church. Some of the rafters were so badly splintered that they had to be reinforced in the restoration following the battle. A new house stands where the Mumma house stood across the field from the site of the church. Samuel Mumma, who, with his wife, were the donors of the land for the buildings and who worshipped there, passed away December 7, 1876, at the age of 75 years and 29 days, and lies buried in the stone walled cemetery of some size a few hundred feet northwest of the home where he lived. Others of his kin, along with early Maryland pioneers, are also interred in the same cemetery.

While markers tell of the former location of the church by the side of the heavy traveled highway, it is likely that many go speedily on their way unconscious of the place that the "Little Dunker Church" played in this part of our Nation's history.

Joseyph R. Shultz Ordained In an Impressive Ceremony

A VERY BEAUTIFUL and impressive service was held in the Berlin, Pennsylvania, Brethren Church, on the evening of November 20th, at seven-thirty o'clock, at which time Joseph R. Shultz was ordained to the full Gospel Ministry.

The pastor of the Berlin Church, Rev. Percy C. Miller, presided. Following the prelude and invocation, the congregation joined in the singing of "Anywhere With Jesus." The presiding pastor followed this with prayer.

The words of St. Paul to Timothy as found in II Timothy 4:1-5, were read by Dr. L. E. Lindower of Ashland Theological Seminary. Following the reading of the scripture, the ordination sermon was delivered by Dr. Lindower.

In the ordination ceremony Rev. Miller read Titus 1:7-9 and gave the charge to Brother Shultz. The Laying on of Hands was by both officiating ministers, with Rev. Miller setting Brother Shultz apart as an Elder, as he knelt before them.

Rev. Miller then extended the right hand and gave declaration of authority as an Elder to Brother Shultz, and thus asked him to assume the duties and office of an Elder in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

The ushers for the service were Joe Glessner, a roommate of Brother Shultz, Robert Coleman, and Harry Meyers. Mrs. Ernest Suder was the organist. The service was well attended, the large crowd nearly filling the seating capacity of the church.

Brother Shultz is one of our fine boys from Berlin who heard the call of the Master to the larger service of the ministry. Brother Shultz is a credit to any church, and we of the Berlin Brethren Church, have every reason to be proud of him. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shultz of Berlin. He will finish his College work at Ashland this year, and then enter the Seminary.

His home church, his many friends and his pastor desire for him a happy and fruitful ministry. He is at present serving the Williamstown, Ohio, Brethren Church as pastor.

Percy C. Miller, Berlin pastor.

"Christmastide" Is Here

THIS IS TO BE the happiest time of this year, now almost gone into the vast graveyard of the centuries. More gifts will be given and more wishes made during the next 21 days than at any other period of the 354 already passed. What a wonderful ocean of happiness the Wise Men started when they visited the "child in the manger!" And what a common mistake they made when they presumed that Jesus had come to the "high hats" instead of the lowly and needy; and how much like them are we all, giving our gifts to so many where the problem is, what do they not already have, and what can we get these children of the prosperous, while too many will cry for enough candy to satisfy their starved appetites? What a travesty we do make of this greatest event of the year, measuring our gifts by the status of the receivers rather than the reverse order—I mean giving the best to the poorest and most humble.

Think of It!

Is it possible that this woman, Mary, this woman "highly favored among women," who had found favor with God, who, disregarding all the slanders that were to be heaped on her among her own people and throughout all generations, should have replied: "I am the Lord's servant; may it be unto me according to thy words?" Luke 1:38. What condescension was Mary's!

And how could she be reconciled to the manger-cradle when the angel Gabriel had told her that, "you will bear a Son; and you are to call his name JESUS. He will be great and he will be called the Son of the Most High. And the Lord will give unto him the throne of his forefather David; and He will be King over the House of Jacob forever, and of His reign there shall be no end." Luke 1:30-34 (Weymouth). What travesties there are in this wicked world!

And at Christmastide!

I visit a home of luxury and plenty. There is a disagreement between two who had promised to "love, cherish" and favor each other; they are folk of high standing in the community and a quarrel between them, perhaps, unimaginable; but an unchristmas like remark is made by one and the other uses a profane word to "emphasize" the gravity of the offense—at Christmastide! Aye, aye! Too bad!

Scarred and Beaten

An old man is brought into the office of a doctor to be bandaged and sterilized of wounds. He, a man who had lived alone, not poor save in the Christmas spirit; no money was taken, no other damage was done to his property. Three men (he said) one masked, had entered his house, grabbed him, beat him, threw him to the floor, kicked him and left him wounded and bound with his money safe in his pocket. Why? But why did the Son of the Highest receive even worse treatment than the old grouchy neighbor for doing nothing but good? Why did

He need to go to the cross and suffer the most degrading punishment; endure the most excruciating pain; be deserted by the men he had taught; defended and fed for three long years? Why are humans like that? Just one mean, ugly, repulsive word: sin. No Christmas Spirit.

Filial Greed

I had to look in the dictionary to be sure that there was such a sin. But if there is filial love there must be filial hate and, if that, then filial greed. Not too many miles away a pretty woman lies in prison awaiting the edict of the law as to her guilt in the death of a number of her relations whose property she would have inherited. Guilty or not, she'll not have a happy Christmas. Nor, can one believe that she has been living a righteous life, else she would never have been suspected, criticised nor arrested and accused of murder. Why would a pretty woman do a thing like that? Sin! Self!

Ice Cream and a Haystack!

What a combination! But they are connected this Christmastide and one man, 34, father of two children (as I remember) has been convicted, while three others await a sentence too small—whatever it is—for the betrayal of teen-age girls from good (?) families into a life-time disgrace, shame and remorse. But were they from good homes? Are parents who thus neglect their young daughters while they themselves, doubtless play their lives away, good parents? Was their dwelling place a home at all? Why this neglect? Sin!

"Merrie Christmas"

The way merry is spelled indicates what I have in mind, at least to me. Spelled that way, it means too surely, what I have indicated in the former paragraphs. It means a Christmas that carries with it a jolly, good (?) time without regard to how Christmas came to be; forgetting that there never had been a Christmas, jolly or otherwise, had it not been for the birth of a Savior who is Christ the Lord. Forgetting the fact that had Jesus been born any other place or in any other way, it would never have been at all.

Christmas now has become an event, not a day. Before Thanksgiving Time had come, commercialists had begun to show off their gaudy trinkets and worthless gadgets, guns, Indian Suits, playing cards (Devil's Variety) and now, liquors, in a country that once was temperate enough to prevent many of the crimes and much of the auto-killings, divorces, murders, betrayals and circumventions that spell everything but the spirit of the First Christmas. How can Jesus (our final Judge and Rewarder) bless us in this frustrated orgy of sin?

Did Paul Know?

To the Galatians (much like modern America) he wrote "be guided by the Spirit and you will not fulfill the cravings of your lower nature." The Spirit and the lower nature are antagonistic to each other, so that you cannot do as you wish. Then he names the lusts of the "lower nature: licentiousness, impurity, indecency, idol-worship, magic, animosity, strife, jealousy, ill temper, intrigues, dissensions, factions, envy, drunkenness, carousing and the like; I foreward you . . . that they who practice such things will not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5:16-24. (Weymouth).

Now, in Jesus' precious name and for His sake, may I wish you all a merry—not a "merrie" Christmas. One that will get peace, joy and calmness to your soul and leave you with a feeling that Christ has been honored for it, and you, your family and friends enriched in the things of God. Amen!

BURNING TRUTH

By Charles Emory Byers

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings."

From Julius Caesar—Shakespeare.

Getting on is in the blood. Fate does not decree that a man shall be a success or a failure. He himself does. The stars have nothing whatever to do with it. A man pulls himself up by his own bootstraps or he is not pulled up at all. When he expects to be carried to victory on the coattail of another he deludes himself.

It is foolish to blame the stars for our lack of success. It has only one advantage: they do not talk back to deny it. All men are underlings who lack the ambition to be anything else. It is persistence and perspiration by which we climb upward. The person who is not willing to use these two important tools stays an underling.

It is true, he often complains about his hard and monotonous fate, that he was born under an unlucky star, the cards were stacked against him, he never had a chance.

All these are mere excuses and an evasion of the real reason. He has not learned that everything gives way to real effort. The stars know nothing of his hard luck or his poor success.

Booker T. Washington sleeping as a boy under the side-walks had every reason to say he had no chance. Was it chance or the states that led him to Tuskegee? Helen Keller, blind and deaf, would have easily been excused if she would have remained inactive and unvocal, and spent her life in silence and in darkness. If the stars would have had anything to do with it, that would have been her fate. In her case as in all others her fate was in herself not in her stars. Bravely recognizing this she proceeded to become master of so many accomplishments that she astounded the world. She succeeded so significantly that she has put to shame by her example those underlings with no handicaps except lack of will power and ambition.

It is well for any individual to put his trust in himself if he wishes to succeed. Those stars are a delusion on the one hand and false security on the other. Casius knew well where the fault lay. If one remains an underling it is foolish to blame the stars.

We are not fit for the work of God while our own personal comfort is our chief concern.

Half hearted service never does the kingdom of Satan much damage.

"I Can't Get to Bible School Today"

JUST WHAT IS THE Superintendent to do when a teacher sends the message that forms our title, on Sunday morning? Here is the story. It is from the pen of Blossom Bennett and was published in "The Lookout" a few years ago.

It was nine o'clock Sunday morning when the telephone rang sharply. Mrs. Jameson, superintendent of the Junior Department, drew a deep breath of apprehension as she tied Marilyn's hair ribbon and hurried to the kitchen to see that the fires were turned off and the preliminary preparations for dinner were completed.

"It's for you," Mr. Jameson called, and added with mock cheerfulness, "I think it's Mrs. Roberts."

"I can't get to Bible school this morning," Mrs. Roberts said amiably. "I just learned that I am going to have company for dinner and there's nothing done . . . No, I didn't call Miss Crouse. She's had a cold all week, so I thought I'd better let you know. I'm sure you won't have any trouble getting some one. They're such sweet children."

Mrs. Jameson managed to say, "Thank you for calling me," and hung up with a feeling of dismay. She called Miss Crouse, who could barely speak above a whisper and really was not able to teach. She called two other substitutes and learned that one was out of town and the other already had promised to teach a class that morning. Hastily she put on her hat, got her materials, and rushed out to the car, hoping that she would be able to find an impromptu teacher at the church.

Mrs. Carter arrived just as she did.

"Will you help me out and teach a class this morning?" Mrs. Jameson asked urgently.

Mrs. Carter was good-natured, but hesitant. "Of course, I wasn't thinking of being asked to teach," she explained.

"But even though you aren't prepared," pursued Mrs. Jameson, "you are more capable than almost any one to face the emergency. You can follow the suggestions in the text or perhaps tell a story relating to the material. Please!"

"At least I can keep them quiet so they won't disturb the whole department," grinned Mrs. Carter. "Lead me to them."

Mrs. Jameson got her textbook, introduced her to the girls who were already assembled, and breathed a sigh of relief because she had found a "teacher" so easily. She turned to the routine work which should have had her attention; and as she arranged pictures and flowers (with which children could have helped if she had been earlier) she made a sincere effort to relax and regain the mental attitude which would enable her to lead an effective and happy service of fellowship and worship.

Presumably, this incident occurred thirty or forty years ago or more. In the present era of well organized church schools, trained leaders, and high standards of efficiency in the teaching profession, one might assume that such a thing could not happen. And yet it does happen all too frequently in some places.

As long as teachers are human beings, subject to physical frailties and the demands of a complex social order, there will continue to be absentees among them. Since they render voluntary service, without material pay, and since in many places adults of the church do not realize that it is a real privilege to teach in the Bible school, it is difficult to secure enough teachers who are willing to give their time and talent, and it is almost impossible to demand that they be absolutely prompt and regular in their attendance. The individual teacher's sense of responsibility and loyalty to an obligation determines his attitude toward his duty.

Certainly some absences and tardiness are really unavoidable. Doubtless there are cases, however, when teachers may be absent unnecessarily because they simply have not considered just what effect this has, not only on the particular class, but on the superintendent of the department, other teachers and the department or school as a whole. It is with such preventable situations that we are concerned.

Teachers who absent themselves when it is not absolutely necessary usually give little thought to the results of their absence. The incident related above was handled with comparative ease because Mrs. Jameson was fortunate in finding a willing, although unprepared, alternate.

But the solution is not always so simple, and is infinitely more difficult if the teacher fails to notify the superintendent at all. Thinking the teacher may be coming a little late, the superintendent probably waits at least a few minutes before putting some one else in her place. If the pupils are children and she is ingenious and has materials available, she may set them to work at some project so that their time of waiting may not seem wasted; but even so, without supervision, they do not derive the most good from this "busy work," and may, unintentionally, become noisy enough to disturb other classes.

If no regular substitute is available, the superintendent's prospective helpers are probably the members of an adult class. But the adults sometimes conscientiously feel their inability to serve. Since they are unprepared, and many of them without any experience, they can scarcely be criticized for not wanting to attempt what may appear to the uninitiated a gigantic undertaking.

If the superintendent does not conscript a teacher for the day there are at least two things she may do. First, she may ask another teacher to let the teacherless class visit with her own group. If the classes are not too large, if the pupils are the same age, and if they have the same lesson, this arrangement is sometimes satisfactory. That is not always the case, of course; and even where the lesson for the day is the same, the teacher may have planned a method of presentation or prepared materials for her own class which can not well be utilized in the larger group.

The superintendent's other choice is to teach the class herself. This she does sometimes in preference to disturbing another class. She should be sufficiently familiar with all lesson material used by the department and have enough ingenuity to fill in anywhere when an emergency arises. She should not, however, be expected to accomplish as much as a teacher whose responsibility it is to teach the class. Besides, she may be forced to teach at the loss of efficiency in her own specific work. Perhaps she has planned to use this time to prepare special materials for the assembly or to put the words of a new song on the blackboard. Perhaps the secretary needed to see her about literature or the general superintendent wanted to tell her of a change in plans affecting the whole school. Such things are neglected or attended to hurriedly and the superintendent approaches the period of fellowship and worship tired and rushed and with her attention so divided that it is difficult to guide in a real worship experience.

Even when a substitute has prepared for the session in advance, something is lost. There can not be quite the same continuity of thought and learning which is possible under the leadership of one person. The regular teacher loses an opportunity for personal contact with the members of her class and for close co-ordination with the plans and activities of the department. If the teacher is absent too frequently, it is almost inevitable that the class will suffer both in attendance and in interest. This is not true in adult classes only. Children are often a little inclined to resent being shifted about and having to adjust themselves to a different teacher or situation.

The teacher who stays at home because she does not feel quite well, probably has not thought that the superintendent of the department and other teachers may not be any stronger than she. Yet her yielding to the desire to take things easier only serves to increase the work of others. Many a Sunday morning indisposition could be avoided if teachers were willing to sacrifice certain Saturday-night pleasures. Since a refreshing night's sleep may be such an important part of one's preparation for teaching a class, some teachers accept as a part of their obligation, the need of refusing Saturday-night invitations and spending a quiet evening at home.

Those who are absent because of inclement weather should remember that it is almost a certainty that some pupils will be present; and such a time may present an unusual opportunity for the teacher. Snow or rain afford their own special approach to an appreciation of the love and care and power of God. Besides, when a very few are present, the teacher may develop an intimacy with some member of the class and touch his life in a way that would never have been possible in the presence of the larger group.

The whole problem is largely one of the teachers' attitude toward their work. Those who give their service grudgingly or halfheartedly are likely to seek excuses to shirk responsibility whenever possible. Those who are lacking in loyalty or dependability are often prone to be present and on time only when it is convenient. All of these need to catch a new vision of the privilege and opportunity that is theirs in sharing the leadership in the Christian education of boys and girls, or men and women. The attitude of the superintendent and other workers may help in creating a greater sense of value of a teacher's work and a stronger incentive to give one's best to the building of Christ's kingdom through one's own class and department and church. An expression of sincere appreciation for work that has been done and co-operative planning for the tasks ahead may help assure sustained effort on the part of the teacher.

At best, the time allotted for a Sunday morning session is extremely brief. The teacher who is deeply interested in the members of her class, and who is personally consecrated to Christ and His service, will be jealous of every moment that is available. There should be a substitute to take the teacher's place in times of emergency, of course; but a real teacher will never relinquish a single precious hour unless it is absolutely necessary.

Only people who do things get criticised.

I BELIEVE IN JESUS CHRIST

Scripture: Matt. 1:21; Mark 1:9-11; Acts 16:23-31;

I Tim 1:15

WHO IS JESUS CHRIST? Mankind, since the days of Bethlehem, have been trying to get for themselves an answer to that question. They have tried every possible avenue of approach to a solution but the one which will reveal Christ for what He is. Men will try to answer the question by picturing Christ as a "better than average" teacher, or one whose ideals were a "little too far advanced for His day." They picture Jesus as dying as a martyr to His ideals. They will deny the Virgin Birth, and thus cast the shadow of the unknown upon the parentage of Jesus. All this, and more, they do because they do not search the scriptures which tell the truth about this Jesus Christ. So, to answer the question, "Who is Jesus Christ," let us turn to the Book which God has written about Him. Then we shall know. Further, it is important that we know what we believe about Jesus Christ, for our eternal salvation depends upon whether or not we believe the right thing or not about Him.

DISCUSSION

1. WHAT ABOUT THE "VIRGIN BIRTH?" In Isaiah 7:14, we read, "Behold, a Virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel." Matt. 1:23 adds the words, "Immanuel which being interpreted is, God with us." That is exactly the case. We read also in the first chapter of Matthew that when Joseph was married to Mary she was discovered to be with Child. The angel of the Lord came to Joseph in a dream and told him that all was all right, for Mary's child was conceived of the Holy Ghost. He also said that this Child would be a boy, and that His name would be Jesus, for He would save his people from their sins. When the Boy was born, He was called Jesus. When the angel had appeared previously to Mary in the Annunciation as written in Luke 1:34, 35, we read that the angel told Mary she was highly favored of God. He also told Mary that the holy thing to be born of her "shall be called the Son of God." How much further proof do we need? We need no more. Plainly in the scriptures it tells us that Mary conceived of the Holy Ghost, and brought forth her first born Son; called His name Jesus, for He is the Son of God.

2. THE SAVIOUR OF THE WORLD. At the baptism of Jesus, a voice from heaven spoke and said, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear ye Him." Over in Acts, when Paul was in prison, he told the jailor to "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Jesus said, "I am come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly." He also said, "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Christ cried forth from the cross, "It is finished." What did He mean? Simply that redemption's work was finished. It means that He had laid down His life as a ransom for many. It meant that all who accepted

Him as their Savior and followed Him through life, would have the hope of heaven when they died.

3. WHY JESUS CAME. Here again opinions vary. But there is only one real reason why Jesus came. Any other ideas are misconceptions which are not founded by a careful reading of God's Holy Word. Jesus came to pay man's price for sin. He left the courts of heaven and the Ivory Palaces, assumed the form of human flesh (John 1:14) as a babe in Bethlehem, lived among men, showed them how to love one another. Then He suffered the voluntary humiliation of a mock trial, and walked willingly to the cross and permitted Himself to be slain, as He, himself laid down His life. He said upon one occasion that He had power to lay down His life and to take it again. He also said that no man taketh His life from Him, but that He laid it down willingly. Jesus later rose from the grave, walked with His followers, ascended into Heaven, and has promised to come again for those who love Him and serve Him. Jesus came so that you and I could share with Him the glories of God's eternal paradise.

4. JESUS, THE PERFECT FULFILLMENT OF THE PERFECT PLAN. The Complete plan of salvation was arranged before Christ came to earth. The sin of man condemned Him to eternal separation from God in Hell. That is the proper justice of God. Nothing that any man could do would fit him for eternal paradise. (Many are trying to "work" their way into heaven today, but they aren't going to get very far.) So, before Jesus left heaven to be born as the baby Jesus, He knew what lay before Him. It was the only way. If man was to be redeemed, a covering of blood must be applied to that sinful heart. Either man must pay for his sin with his own blood and thus suffer eternal death, or another sinless, perfect life must be laid down. That life was Jesus. The death of Jesus was fore-ordained before He left heaven. (The Lamb slain from the foundations of the world.) It did not just dawn upon the mind of Jesus as he walked among men that He would have to go to the cross. That is why He came. He became the perfect fulfillment of God's perfect plan of salvation.

5. ITS GUARANTEE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST. In such a few short words we could not hope to expound on all the ins and outs of Jesus' work and atoning death. We could not even begin to answer all of the arguments of short-sighted critics. But there is one thing of which we can be sure. The way of Christ's death on the cross, is the way to God's heavenly paradise. There is no other way. Either we believe in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, accepting Him as our personal Saviour, and live obediently in His way, and go to heaven, or we are eternally lost. Let us renew our covenant of faith, take stock of where we stand in the profession and belief of our faith. Then let us walk as He wants us to walk. There's only one thing that can separate us from the love of God. That one thing is our own will. If we willingly sin, or harbor sinful thoughts or sinful ideas in our minds, when we know they are wrong morally and spiritually, we are surely separating ourselves from God, for, the soul that sinneth, it shall surely die. Our assurance of heaven demands of us in addition to faith and acceptance of Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour, a close daily walk and service in communion with Him. So, don't take chances with your eternal hope. Walk and live and think as a true Christian should.

THE CAMEL'S NOSE

Once in his shop a workman wrought,
With languid head and listless thought,
When through the open window's space,
Behold, a camel thrust his face!
"My nose is cold," he meekly cried;
"Oh let me warm it by thy side."

Since no denial word was said,
In came the nose, in came the head.
As sure as sermon follows text,
The long and scraggly neck came next;
And then, as falls the threatening storm,
In leaped the whole ungainly form.

Aghast, the owner gazed around,
And on the rude invader frowned,
Convinced as closer still he pressed,
There was no room for such a guest;
Yet more astonished, heard him say,
"If thou art troubled, go away,
For in this place I choose to stay."

O youthful hearts to gladness born,
Treat not this Arab lore with scorn!
To evil habit's earliest wile
Lend neither ear, nor glance, nor smile.
Choke the dark fountain ere it flows,
Nor e'en admit the camel's nose.

"THE SIN WHICH DOTHSO EASILY BESET US"

Scripture: James 2:10; Hebrews 12:1, 2

Hymns: "All That I Need"; "Yield Not to Temptation"

Prayers:

Seed Thought Provokers:

WE ARE NOT to sit in judgment on God's commandments, choosing some for convenience and despising others. The law is a unit; to break one commandment is to break the code (Jas. 2:11).

To miss the kingdom one need only to lack one thing (Mark 10:21). Satan cares not how many commandments we keep just so we omit one. Out of the Philistine hosts perhaps one giant Goliath challenges us. Out of a dozen sins in one's life one predominates. A prevailing sin makes room for more sins. Either we triumph over sin or sin triumphs over us. All sins are in us potentially, but our danger lies in the "easily besetting sin." This once "just a little sin" becomes a hungry giant (James 1:14, 15). The spared sin is the camel's nose in the tent of life.

With some the great struggle is with intoxicating drink (Prov. 20:1); with others it is impurity in sex matters (Prov. 7:24-27; 1 Tim. 5:22; 1 John 3:2, 3); and others, dishonesty (Prov. 11:1; 20:23; 2 Cor. 8:21); others, falsehood (Prov. 6:16-19; 12:22; Eph. 4:25; Col. 3:9; John 8:44); profanity (Exodus 20:7; James 3:2-10); evil thinking (Psalm 94:11; Phil. 4:8; 2 Cor. 10:5); unbelief (Psalm 14:1; 53:1). The besetting sin is the key to our character, and not an inventory of sins we do not commit. A clock five minutes off is more misleading than one five hours wrong. Only one little worm will spoil a flower.

All our undoing is from ourselves; "salvation is of the Lord" (Rom. 8:1-4; Acts 3:6, 16; 10:43).

THE POWER OF THE CHURCH'S TASK

Lesson: Acts 2:1-4, 14-17, 37-41

OUR THEME as we note it, presupposes that the Church was established with a task before it and that it has behind it as an urge to complete that task, a power not its own.

Let us first of all recall something about the early church, which was in the mind of Christ as He walked about on this earth. Turn again to the scene surrounding the disciples as they sat with Jesus at the time He asked them the great question, "Whom do ye say that I am?" As the answer came from Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," we hear Jesus say, "... on this rock (this confession of Himself as Christ) I will build my Church, and the gates of hell (the stronghold and strength of the powers of evil) shall not prevail against it." In this very inception of the Church in the mind of Christ, even before it became the vehicle for the propagation of His Gospel, He saw and felt that the hidden forces of evil would do all they could to ruin it.

Consequently He then and there gave the disciples to understand that it was, first of all, His Church, for He said He would build, not "their" church, but "My Church"; and then that it would be empowered to fulfill its mission.

As we advance in our thoughts we will recall that when He had arisen from the dead and was about to ascend to The Father, that He gave them the injunction to "tarry till they were endued with power from on high," then they were to become witnesses (literally martyrs) far and wide through the whole world.

The task of the Church is the spread of the Gospel; the power of the Church comes from enduement of the Holy Spirit.

In our lesson of today we see the birth of the church, or it might be better if we would call it the definite call to the church to go into action. For that little band of disciples who gathered together in that upper room to tarry and pray and hope, were in reality the tap root of the early church. From them was borne forth the impulse through the coming of the Holy Spirit, to speak out the words that caused men to say, "What meaneth this? We do hear them speak the wonderful works of God."

It was through these, with Peter as spokesman as usual, that the message came that caused those listening to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" For they were "pricked in their hearts"—they were convicted of their sin, and they found here in this "Spirit-filled" message the remedy for their sin, in the person of the crucified and risen Jesus.

So we read, "Then they that gladly received his (Peter's) word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." From 120 to 3000. It was done then; it can be done today. That which was the Power for the church's task in that day, is the Power which must be used to impel and compel the church today.

Perhaps we have forgotten to "tarry" in prayer; mayhap we have failed to "assemble ourselves together"; or perchance we have not given the "Power" an opportunity to function in our lives.

Just remember that the disciples on the day of Pentecost were "filled" and "indwelt" by the Spirit, and then went out under His guidance to do the task of the church—to spread the Gospel of the Living Christ. That same "Power" is still available. Do we use it?

News From Our Churches

CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND

Greetings from the Cumberland, Maryland Brethren. First of all we want to say "Thank you" to our Home Mission Board, as well as our District Mission Board, for the generous support you have both given, (and are continuing to give us) during the past seven years. We covet an interest in your prayers also.

The Lord is blessing us under the leadership of Brother Bruce Shanholtz. We have given him a call for another year.

We had three additions to our church by baptism this last summer, so as the early church, we too are receiving from time to time such as are receiving Christ as their personal Savior. This has been a bit unusual for us, since the man and his wife are in their fifties, and the other lady seventy-three years old; but we thank God for the unusual such as this.

We had a Daily Vacation Bible School, with forty-four attending and an appropriate program the last night.

We also had a group of Gospel singers (five in number) from Bryan University. This is the fourth time some of these young folks were in our midst and we always enjoy them.

We put on a redecoration program during the summer (which is still not completed) and followed by a rededication service. The following program was rendered:

The guest speaker in the morning service was Rev. Vernon D. Grisso, of Smithville, Ohio, who represented the Home Mission Board. Brother James Ault of Hagerstown, Maryland, who spoke in the afternoon, and Brother Ed Miller of Maurertown, Virginia, who represented the District Mission Board, spoke in the evening. A duet was rendered by the Garland sisters. A summary of our work, with cost, was given by Brother John Berry, Treasurer of the local church. The offering was quite liberal.

About two months ago Brother Fred Brant, with a group from Berlin, Penna., came and reorganized our Brotherhood, with five boys present. They now boast a membership of fifteen. They had their first public program on November 20th.

Our church entertained the Youth of our District in the form of a rally, with a banquet in the evening, on November 19th. They expressed themselves as having a good time, for which we are grateful. Let us back these fine young people by our prayers.

Mrs. F. J. Beachley, Cor. Sec.

MANTECA, CALIFORNIA

We don't write very often about our work here at Manteca, California. We are glad and thankful that God continues to bless us. There is increased interest in and attendance at our various services. We notice especially that the mid-week prayer meeting and Bible study has shown marked increase. The Sunday school is also showing larger attendance, and increased interest on the part of the workers.

We always are persuaded of God's pleasure when souls confess our Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour from sin. This was our lot on Monday, November 21st, when a man seventy-six years of age and his wife, made that greatest of all confessions of faith in Jesus Christ, and were buried in Christian baptism, according to Matthew 28:19-20. We do praise God for these decisions. These folks are very definitely interested in the salvation of the rest of their family. We rejoice with all who are pointing and leading souls to the Lamb of God. We are working and praying daily that the Lord of the Harvest may send forth reapers into His harvest field.

I am deeply grateful to God that after four and a half years of enforced absence from all service, that Mrs. Platt is again attending services. We thank God for His boundless mercy and grace toward us.

We wish for all the Brethren everywhere a Christmas such as He would have us all enter into.

J. Wesley Platt, pastor.

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

The work of the Lord in this section moves on in spite of difficulties. The Lord has been permitting some of the severest testings we have yet had. We had a severe teacher shortage, and financial testings. But we are now happy to report that all teachers needed for this year are now here, and doing good work. While the Lord is not subject to strikes and the like, yet this year of strikes has somehow made things financially harder for the work. But with strikes out of the way, it is hoped that better conditions will prevail. The income through the school provides about half the money needed to operate the work. The other part comes through free will offerings and gifts.

The spiritual state of the work seems good. Attendance at Sunday services is good at most places, and ten have recently been baptized at Riverside. The new baptistry is proving to be a great blessing.

We are now conducting services twice a week at Rowdy, the Thursday night prayer meeting service and the Sunday morning services which consists of Sunday School with preaching following. The attendance there is holding up well. Brother Snyder goes to and preaches at Watts each Sunday morning, and also on Wednesday nights at Haddix. Brother Hall goes to Toms Branch in the afternoon, and the Misses Trivette and Sirkel go to upper Leatherwood or McIntosh each Sunday afternoon, and Brother Truxton to Big Branch.

Our roster of workers for this year includes the following: Rev. Elvin V. Snyder and wife, from Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Truxton of Los Angeles, California; Miss Ruth Agean of Lebanon, Penna.; Miss Christine Trivette of Richmond, Virginia; William Boyer of North Manchester, Indiana; and Maurice Hall of Lagrange, Indiana. The above teach in the high school. Mrs. Louetta Landrum and Miss Nellie Sirkel teach the grades. Mrs. Drushal teaches two Bible classes; Ada acts as matron at the girls' dorm; Gordon on maintenance, and the writer teaches some classes in the high school, preaches and does different things. Mr. Truxton does Bible memory work in the public schools in the forenoon. Mr. Hall acts as secretary and bookkeeper for the work. Mr. Boyer, Miss Trivette and Miss Agean do full time high school work.

The attendance at school is good, considering that we have no gymnasium floor for the boys, and girls too. We were hoping to get that building started this fall, but it now seems impossible. The mountain boys like basketball, and if we do not have a floor for them to play on, not many of the larger boys will come this way. They will go where they can find such accommodations.

The Wheeler Home now nears completion. If the radiators were here now, it seems we could begin using it by the 23rd. But here comes in the strikes again, steel being now very hard to get. The plumbing for the building is about done now. All we lack now is the radiators. May we also add here that it is a very good building, by far the best that is here now, and one hard to excel anywhere. Folks looking it over speak very highly of it. It is just about as near fireproof as a building can be, with a good basement and two stories above it. The first two stories of twelve inch concrete blocks, the third story of eight inch blocks. The inside finish is good, with every convenience needed. The living quarters for the matron are especially good, as well as the rooms for the boys. It is earnestly hoped that the Thanksgiving offerings will enable the Mission Board to come clear in the financial end of it.

H. D. "Bud" Hunter of North Manchester, Indiana, has had charge of its construction, and has done a very good job of it, too. Then, too, besides looking after that building, he has helped in some repair work about the place that helped very much. His help will be missed when he leaves now in a few days.

We are also most happy to report that the Lanark Brethren Church has gotten a potato peeler for us here at Lost Creek. We had never seen such a machine before, and now with its few days of operation here, (just installed last week) it is proving to be a great help and blessing in the saving of time and food. The profound gratitude of the kitchen folks goes to the Lanark Brethren Church for what they have done. A job that took around sixty minutes and two or three girls at it, is now done in a few minutes, and so much better done. Thus you can see why it is so much appreciated.

We get letters from the Brethren that you are praying for the work. It is that that sustains the work, we believe.

Without that prayer help we doubt if the work could keep going. But with that help, there is no doubt about it. Pray much for us that we may have His wisdom and strength for what He has for us to do.

G. E. Drushal.

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

I think it is time that I write about the work of the Pittsburgh Church. As you know by this time, we are quite well settled down in our new home. We like Pittsburgh very much and the people here are wonderful.

On November 6th I was installed as pastor and preached my first sermon. We had a group of about sixty that morning. Then on November 10th they held a reception for us, at which time the church and Sunday school presented us with a gift of two lounge chairs, a walnut stand, and a large supply of food. It was a very pleasant surprise because we had not expected anything in just arriving. There were around one hundred present that night, including seven ministers and friends from the Church of the Brethren.

On November 20th Rev. E. M. Riddle was here and preached at the morning service. We all enjoyed his challenging words and his fellowship. We hope he can be with us again in the near future.

On Friday, November 25th we took ten of our young people with us to Johnstown for the Pennsylvania District Youth Rally.

On November 27th we began to hold regular Sunday evening services. This first evening program included a sound film, "The Rich Young Ruler."

On December 4th, Mrs. Elmer Keck was with us to speak at the W. M. S. Public Service.

With such wonderful people and the spirit to work that has been shown, we will surely go ahead in our work for the Lord. However, we covet your prayers for us and our church.

Alvin H. Grumbling, pastor.

THE SMITHVILLE REVIVAL

After receiving a very gracious call from Rev. Vernon Grisso and his fine people at Smithville, Ohio, to come to them for two weeks of revival meetings, I seriously questioned myself if I could spare the time to go. However, after the first meeting on October 31st, I was firmly convinced that I would have made a grave mistake in refusing to go.

The Brethren came in very encouraging numbers, especially the last week. Since this is a rural area, many folk had to drive several miles to get there, coming from Massillon, Rittman, Orrville, Wooster and other places. Since the corn harvest was at its height, I was amazed to see so many farmers in attendance every night. Quite a large number did not miss a service, and many only one or two. I could not ask for better attention than they gave to the whole service, listening and participating in every part of the meeting.

I am quite sure that if I should try to describe the wonderful meals we enjoyed while there, that our good Brother Grisso would be deluged with applications from evangelists who would be glad to serve for their board and lodging. The culinary art seems to have reached a high degree of perfection in that part of the country, as many of our preachers can testify who have served there. My heartfelt thanks and appreciation to all these who entertained us so royally in their homes.

It was my good fortune to stay in the home of Rev. and Mrs. Grisso and their two lovely children, "Kathie" and "Tommie." I have known the Grissos for several years, but not as well as some of the other preachers and their wives. But two weeks in their home, enjoying all the privileges of a member of the family, made me to feel that I had known them a long time. I can sincerely say without any question in my mind at all, that this was one of the most enjoyable experiences in my ministry. I will carry the memory of it with me a long, long time.

The music and singing was under the direction of our very capable leader, "Bud" Hunter, National President of the Laymen's Organization. It has been my happy privilege to serve with "Bud" in two other revival services, and in each instance he rendered a splendid service. As usual, our fellowship in the services and visitation work was one that was a blessing and benediction to me. I can heartily recommend this fine Christian layman to any church desiring an experienced and zealous song leader.

Mrs. Grisso gallantly came to the rescue when a call was given for someone to present the Scene-O-Felt stories at each meeting. With a natural ability to speak fluently before large groups of people, plus her training in public speech, made it possible for her to hold the attention of a very appreciative audience for the entire story period. The one entitled "Bud" and "Squeakie" was especially appreciated.

The tangible results were not at all discouraging, considering the fact that this is a well church area, and that through the diligent ministry of the Grissos and the faithful workers in the church, there is a continual glean- ing of souls. One young man came forward to dedicate himself for lifetime service as a Brethren Minister. Brother Grisso had been dealing with him before the services and must receive full credit for being the instrument used of God to bring this lad to a place of decision. Many who had not attended regularly for years, renewed their pledge of fidelity to their church. Their love gifts were beyond anything we felt worthy of, and as we concluded the services their expressions of gratitude were such that the memory of them still brings a lump in our throat. May God bless them much, for all they did and said during our stay in Smithville.

I cannot close without a word about the work being done here in this quiet little corner of Ohio by the Grissos. As an outsider I listened to all the expressions of Christian affection and appreciation of the congregation, and believe they have endeared themselves to the whole church by their untiring zeal for souls. Many improvements have been made to the interior of the church, and a steady growth in members and attendance has marked their ministry of two years.

My heartfelt thanks also go to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shank who sang the lovely theme song every night for two weeks at the opening and again at the close of each service. The Lord's richest blessings on all who helped in any way to make our stay the very pleasant one it was.
